New York, Nov. 18. (CP)—Let's face it chums: there does not seem to be anybody around capable of putting up a good show against Joe Louis for the world's heavyweight boxing crown. . . . Jersey Joe Walcott and Elmer Ray, a couple of negro belters, met in a virtual elimination contest at Madison Square Garden Friday night . . The only thing they did was eliminate each other as serious contenders. . . .

The Destructive Years

Walcott, who owns up to 33 years but who probably is 37 or more, is an old man wistically. . . .Althought strong and a good puncher, his aging legs probably wouldn't carry him through a 15-round title fight. . . .Ray, who can hit fairly hard with both hands, hasn't got enough all-round class to meet th Bomber. . . Some of the local sports writers were suggesting that Joe could lick them both in the same night . . .

How About that, Mr. Jacobs?

The only solution in sight to prove just who is fitted to meet the champ would seem to be a match between Tami Mauriello of the Bronx and either Walcott or Ray. . . Mauriello was knocked out in short order by Louis but he is the best there is around and his undoubted punching power would separate the men from the boys . . .Incidentally, Tami showed up at the Garden the other night looking more like a fugitive from a lard plant than ever. . . He has a harder job keeping in shape than Lou Novikoff, the baseball player. .

Could be

Frank (N.Y. Journal-American Graham suggests that the remedy for Ted Williams' woeful World Series showing could have been standing back six inches more from the plate. . . "It would have kept the pitchers from pouring the ball across his fists end (would have) enabled him not only to get more wood on the ball but also to hit it solidly to left field once in awhile," Frank says. . .

38,000 MINERS QUIT WORK IN 7 STATES

Russ Concessions Speed Progress On Trieste Control

Outlook Not So Favorable On Veto Issue Prospects

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Nov. 19 —(AP)— Spurred by Russian concessions, the great power foreign ministers scored major progress today in breaking their long peace-treaty deadlock on control of Trieste.

But they evidently were headed for trouble over proposals to restrict voluntarily the use of the veto in the United Nations Security Council.

A series of swift moving developments yesterday and last night brought the brightest prospects yet for early and final agreement on the Italian and other former German satellite peace treaties, but simultaneously dimmed the outlook for any substantial agreements by Russia on the veto issue.

The main developments were these:

"1. In a Big Four meeting last night (Britain, the United States, Russia and France) Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia finally yielded to American-British insistence that the proposed free territory of Trieste should be under a United Nations governor armed with strong powers to protect its independence.

2. In an earlier Big Five meeting (the Big Four plus China) Mr. Molotov, after some objection, agreed to consider proposals for voluntarily restricting use of the veto and to discuss them in future Big Five meetings.

3. At Lake Success, L.I., a committee of the U. N. Assembly indirectly approved this procedure by voting 38-6 to sidetrack its own veto debate until the foreign ministers had time to act. However, a Soviet spokesman told the committee his government was flatly opposed to any changes in the veto system and objected to all Assembly proposals aimed at modifying it.

Molotov Wants Action

Diplomatic authorities interpreted this as meaning that Mr. Molotov might go with some British, American and Chinese recommendations aimed not so much at the veto as at speeding up the work of the Security Council.

The next meeting of the Big Four on the Italian peace treaty and Trieste is scheduled for tomorrow. They have an agreement to begin talks on Germany about Nov. 20.

Russia's stand in favor of unmotified retention of the veto system in the Security Council constituted no new Russian policy but coming so soon after Molotov had agreed to discuss the question with the other foreign ministers, it aroused unusual interest.

The new element in Russian policy came in the long argument over Trieste.

Mr. Molotov finally agreed last night that the governor should have power to hire and fire the director of security—or police chief—in Trieste and that the director in turn would have complete authority over the police force.

The Soviet minister also agreed that the governor would have authority to suspend decisions of the council of government and to take emergency measures to preserve Trieste's independence.

On possibility of major difficulty remained outstanding. Mr. Molotov was still insisting that a deadline should be fixed for withdrawal of British and American troops from the Trieste territory. He proposed four months from the time the area is formally internationalized.

WELLAND HOUSE SOLD

St. Catharines, Nov. 19—(CP)—Once headquarters for mineral springs baths which attracted international attention, the 80-room Welland House has been sold to Leslie W. Burt and Robert J. Samson of Toronto, it was announced today. The hotel's activities as a health centre ceased several years ago.

Algonquin Indians discovered the curative powers of the mineral springs long before white men settled in the Niagara Peninsula. Sir John Simcoe, first Governor of Upper Canada, brought the springs to world notice and the waters were first used for mineral baths in 1826.

The Welland House, built about 1850, has been enlarged and renovated several times.

Will Investigate Canada-U.S. Border Leaks

Detroit, Nov. 19 — (CP)—John Lesinski, chairman of a House of Representatives sub-committee, said yesterday at an investigation into Canadian-American border leaks that has been informed "around 1,500 young Canadians entered the United States illegally in the Detroit-Windsor area and enlisted in the United States Army."

Mr. Lesinski, Michigan Democrat, added that several thousand other Canadians were granted immigration visas without ever establishing residence in the United States and commute daily from homes in Windsor, Ont., to places of employment in Detroit.

As the four-man sub-committee of the House Committee on immigration and naturalization studied immigration problems, Mr. Lesinski maintained that this situation exists while nationals "of eastern European countries" seek in vain to enter the United States.

Mr. Lesinski said Canadian-American border leaks have allowed "known Communists" to enter the United States illegally.

He declared State Department officials and immigration authorities will be among witnesses called before the hearing closes Wednesday.

Information obtained by the sub-committee will be submitted next year to the new Congress the chairman added, "with a view to remedying of undesirable situations."

Airliner Lands Safely at N.Y.

New York, Nov. 19 — (AP) — A four-engined American overseas airlines plane, carrying 34 passengers and a crew of five, landed at La Guardia Field from Gander, Nfld., today with one engine dead and another "rough," the control tower at the field reported.

An official at the tower said the landing was made without difficulty and that no one aboard the liner was injured. The plane landed at 6:54 a.m. one minute before its scheduled arrival. Emergency equipment had been alerted at the field for any possible mishap.

The flight originated in Amsterdam.

Prospecting Party Makes Rich Gold Strike in Western Australia

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 19 (CP) —A prospecting camp of 11 Italians and the Australian hotelkeeper who financed them, have struck it rich after five years' work near the former gold-mining town of Daydawn, Western Australia.

Newspaper reports tell that the group already has dug more than $300,000 worth of gold from a single shaft and are taking turns standing guard over their pile of valuable ore and workings in which gold is visible in lumps.

While making arrangements for crushing the 1,000 tons of ore mined in the last year, they are guarding it in the strong room of abandoned mine buildings behind 12 padlocks.

The ghost town of Daydawn 300 miles north of Perth had 7,000 inhabitants in 1918 when it was booming. It now has 20.

The story told of the men who made the Daydawn strike is that they paid $16,000 five years ago for a lease on some abandoned property that was part of a mine once called "The Great Fingall".

They started to work ground on which two previous operators had failed and which was described as "not worth two bob".

The Italians were refinanced by Jack Green, hotel keeper and grazier, who now is their partner.

For the last three years the samples have been getting better and better and now the miners are down to 350 feet and the one is still holding out. The Great Fingall operators, while their mine functioned, are said to have dug ore down to 1,800 feet.

The last crushing of Daydawn ore is reported to have yielded 4,000 ounces of gold from about 1,000 tons of ore and one of the group told newspapermen, "We think that there is plenty more gold down there."

LABOR "REBELS,' NOT DISMAYED BY HOUSE DEFEAT

Will Continue Pressure For a Revised And Independent British Foreign Policy

London, Nov. 19 (CP)—Official lists disclosed today that 160 Labor members of parliament failed to take part in last night's 353-to-0 vote of confidence in their government's foreign policy.

Fraser Wighton, Reuters News Agency political correspondent, reports that Prime Minister Attlee and his cabinet were "understood to be disturbed" at the results of the confidence vote. Wighton said the next step is likely to come with a forthcoming meeting of the parliamentary Labor party, consisting of reinstituting the party discipline system suspended some time ago.

Allowing for those who were ill or otherwise unable to be in the House of Commons—despite the urgent summons issued by the government to all its supporters—considerably more than 100 M.P.'s must have abstained when Foreign Secretary Bevin's policies were put to a vote.

"This is a disturbingly high proportion for the government," said the Press Association, noting that 230 Laborites voted for the government along with 104 Conservatives, seven Liberals, six Liberal National party members and six Independents.

Split Far From Healed

While government supporters said the 353-to-0 vote was a striking demonstration to the world that Britain backs her foreign secretary, critics pointed to the abstentions as evidence that the Labor party split is far from healed.

"One danger which it is impossible for the government to overlook," said the Press Association, "is that this revolt may recur. There never has been anything to justify predictions that it was all fizzling out."

Commenting on yesterday's debate as well as the vote, The Evening News said:

"American sentiment has been exasperated by a series of embittered attacks on American policy and motives, A lever has been handed to all those who want to split and destroy British National unity."

R. H. S. Crossman, youthful editor-legislator who touched off yesterday's heated debate in the House of Commons, resulting in a 353-to-0 vote of confidence for the Labor government, said the so-called "rebel" group in the Commons still will use every "constitutional" method to strive for the foreign policy it feels Britain should adopt.

Mr. Crossman was one of 57 Labor members who signed an amendment to the reply to the Speech from the Throne asking that Foreign Secretary Bevin's foreign policy be changed to what the rebels termed a Socialist alternative to the "inevitable conflict" between United States capitalism and Soviet Communism.

Attlee Defends Policy

Following the three-hour debate, in which Prime Minister Attlee vigorously defended Britain's foreign policy and deplored attacks on Mr. Bevin by "persons whose services to the cause of

Death of Member Leaves Liberals With 4-Vote Majority

Ottawa, Nov. 19 (CP).— The death of William Chisholm Macdonald, Liberal member of parliament for Halifax, leaves the Liberal party with 124 seats in the Commons compared to 119 held by the combined opposition.

A by-election is scheduled for Dec. 23 to fill the one other vacancy, in Richelieu-Vercheres. The vacancy was caused Oct. 20 by the death of Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Independent member for that riding.

The present standings give the Liberals a four-vote majority in the Commons, since the speaker, Gaspard Fauteux, a Liberal, does not vote. The standings:

Liberals, 124; Progressive Conservatives, 67; C.C.F., 28; Social Credit, 13; Independent, four; Bloc Populaire, two; Independent Liberal, one; Independent Progressive Conservative, one; Independent C.C.F., one; Union Des Electeurs de Quebec, one; Labor-Progressive, one; vacant, two. Total, 245.

While the listing shows Union des Electeurs separately, the member, Real Caouette, recently elected in the Pontiac by-election, has said he will generally support the Social Credit party. The lone Labor-Progressive member is Fred Rose of Montreal-Cartier, who retains his seat pending hearing of his appeal of a six-year sentence in connection with espionage charges.

ROMANIANS HAVE NEW PARLIAMENT OF COMMUNISTS

Premier Petru Groza in Power Since 1945 Survives First Popular Test

Bucharest, Nov. 19 (AP)—In balloting which both Britain and the United States criticized in advance as neither free nor unfettered, nearly 8,000,000 Romanians chose a new parliament today, giving the Communist-dominated government of Premier Petru Groza its first popular test.

While Groza's six-party government bloc, in power since March 6, 1945, and the opposition parties differ sharply on their attitude toward neighboring Russia, the government pinned its hopes of victory on the historical fact that no Romanian government ever lost an election.

Internal issues dominated months of campaigning, with the opposition groups concentraing on the struggle to establish a middle-class capitalistic regime and the government plumping for a more cordial relations with Russia, and thus for a Communist society.

British and American charges that supporters of the present regime were responsible for breaking up opposition meetings and hindering the major opposition parties' campaign drew government reports questioning the right of the western powers to tell Romania how to run her elections.

The government bloc is made up of the Communists, Social Democrats, Independent Socialists, Ploughman's Front (Groza's own party), National Popular party and Peasant and Liberal dissidents. The main opposition parties are the National Liberals headed by Constantin Bratianu, and the National Peasants, headed by Iuliu Manui, often called the "Giant of Romanion politics."

Coal Shipment Order Modified

Washington, Nov. 19 —(AP)— The Solid Fuels Administration yesterday modified its coal freeze order to let shipments on the Great Lakes, and to commercial docks on tidewater, go ahead as scheduled.

Those, along with other coal traffic, had been stopped by Saturday's order so that S.F.A. could redirect them to points where they would be most needed in case of a mine stoppage.

Interior Secretary Krug, S.F.A. administrator, pointed out that lake receivers usually must obtain their entire winter supply of coal before the close of navigation around the first of the year, and said some coastwise movement is similarly restricted by weather.

The coal still will be under distribution control after it reaches the receivers.

The same rules apply to Canadian consumers as to Americans.

Supports Stand Against Ban on Leno Covering

St. Catharines, Nov. 19—(CP)—The stand taken by the Lincoln county council against the ban of the leno cover for peaches has met with sympathy from N. J. Lockhart, member of parliament for Lincoln and Hon. Charles Daley, Ontario Labor Minister. Letters from both were read at today's council session. Mr. Daley felt discrimination was being shown against fruit growers of Niagara district in the matter of the leno cover.

MOUNTAIN REBELS GAINING CONTROL WEST MACEDONIA

Extend "Free Zone" in Grevena Area Where They Control 100 Villages

Athens, Nov. 19 (Reuters). — While Greek regular forces are fighting armed bands on the Greco-Yugoslav frontier, other mountain rebels are gaining control of Western Macedonia, it was reported here today.

The rebels have extended their "free zone" in the Grevena area where they now control 100 out of 104 villages, it was learned.

The rebel bands in this area are reported led by two former school masters whose names are given as Ipsilantis and Lassanis.

"Free Zone" headquarters in the village of Anthrakia and Melissa. The rebels, according to reports from Thessaly, are issuing their own newspaper.

Lassanis is reported to have set up an "rebel court" which sentenced to death 18 peasants charged with "having supported army detachments during last clashes in the area."

Meanwhile the chief of the Greek general staff, a Gen. Spiliotopulos, and Maj.-Gen S. B. Rawlings, head of the British military mission in Greece, left Athens by air today for London.

Gen. Spiliotopulos has been invited by the British War Office to visit British military training colleges.

Big Milk Distributors Getting Bigger Says Commission Counsel

Toronto, Nov. 19 (CP).—Opening its week-long session in Toronto, the Royal Commission investigating Ontario's milk industry was shown figures yesterday which tended to show that Ontario's "bigger milk distributors are getting bigger."

This was the observation of Beverley Matthews, commission counsel, after Charles M. Meek, chairman of the Ontario Milk Control Board produced statistics to show the total number of smaller milk distributors dropped from 861 to 346 in 12 years. Mr. Meek said the larger distributors remained at 635 while milk manufacturers—makers of condensed milk and the like—jumped from 28 to 48.

The commission, headed by Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, opened its hearing in Toronto yesterday and will adjourn for one week at the close of the Toronto sitting. Hearings will resume later in principal Ontario centres. All phases of the industry are to be probed.

Mr. Meek said Ontario farmers in 1945 received $119,000,000 from milk which was produced on 16,000 farms. More than 6,600 farms were producing their milk for concentrated milk plants. About 8,500 farms sent their milk to cheese factories.

The number of licences issued to distributors, producer-distributors, peddlers, transporters and manufacturers was 1,335 in 1934, Mr. Meek told the commission. That figure was up to 1,371 in 1946, but the number of milk peddlers, who buy from dairies and distribute milk, dropped from 150 to 83 in the last 12 years.

Whether this number would increase depended entirely on the policy of the Milk Board. Mr. Meek said, the Milk Control Act of 1934 was the result of producers' demands for better conditions since the market was one of "demoralized prices".

JAMES J. WALKER, FORMER MAYOR OF NEW YORK, DIES

Most Spectacular And Best-Liked Mayor Succumbs to Blood Clot on Brain

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 19 —(CP)— James J. Walker, popular playboy mayor of New York City during the gaudy, glittering era of the late '20s, died last night, and today millions in the city he loved mourned his passing.

A blood clot on the brain caused his death at 65 in Doctor's Hospital in Manhattan, most fabulous borough of the city over whose affairs he presided for seven turbulent years.

Mr. Walker, one of New York's most spectacular and best-liked mayors, entered the hospital early Sunday and remained in a coma until his death some 34 hours later. The last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered Sunday.

Versatile, dapper Jimmy Walker kept the city in the limelight while he was mayor in the waning years of the prohibition period, from 1926 until 1932. Then he resigned his office in the midst of an inquiry into the conduct of his administration.

Headed Music Concern.

At the time of his death he headed Majestic Records, Inc., a music concern.

At the bedside when the end came were a sister, Mrs. Nan Walter Burke; her two sons, Luke and Paul; another nephew, William Walker, Jr., and his personal physician, Dr. S. Sym Newman.

Mr. Walker dabbled in song writing before he embarked on a legal career and went on into politics. During his Tin Pan Alley days, he wrote the popular hit, "Will You Love Me in December As You Do in May?"

He left New York under a cloud in 1932 while a judicial investigation into his regime at city hall was under way. But three years later he returned. Receptions he received at public affairs showed the city had taken him back to its heart.

Suave and debonair, with a keen and flashing wit, Mr. Walker was proverbially late for appointments. But he once declared: "I've never been late for a meal or a good time."

Churchill Praises Roosevelt "Greatest American" Friend of U. K.

London, Nov. 19 (CP).—Winston Churchill last night praised Franklin D. Roosevelt as the "greatest American friend that Britain ever had and the most powerful champion of freedom who ever brought help and comfort from the new world." Broadcasting an appeal for funds to erect a statue of the late American President, Mr. Churchill said the Roosevelt-inspired lend lease "will stand forth as the most unselfish financial act of any country."

Hitler Had Invasion Blueprint But Never Got Around to Using It

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 19 — (CP Cable) —An ambitious Hitler ordered an invasion blueprint for Britain in July, 1940, but the cross-channel drive by a projected attacking force of 25 divisions never was attempted because Germany's air might failed to ground the R.A.F.

The full story of Hitler's "Operation Sea Lion" an invasion plan widely rumored in Britain to have been attempted in September, 1940, was told officially for the first time in the House of Commons Monday as Prime Minister Attlee said there is "no evidence" that German forces "ever left harbor as a fleet to invade this country."

Mr. Attlee's statement, in the form of a written parliamentary reply, acknowledged it was "widely believed" in Britain that an invasion took place because 36 German bodies were washed up on England's south coast and because an "invasion imminent" signal was flashed to certain commands Sept. 7, 1940.

The statement, which said Hitler had so little faith in the proposed invasion that he postponed it five times between Aug. 1, 1940 and the spring of 1942, confirmed a report by Ross Munro, a war correspondent for The Canadian Press.

(In a Berlin dispatch, Sept. 25, 1945, Munro outlined "Sea Lion" plans to strike Britain in 1940 at an area held by the joint British-Canadian 7th Corps, then commanded by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

("An attack in that area would have involved Canadian troops there within a day or so of landing," said Munro.)

Mr. Attlee said Hitler planned to land two armies between Folkestone and Worthing, with the initial bridgehead to be formed by 10 divisions within four days.

A vital preliminary to "Sea Lion" was to have been an all-out air offensive by the luftwaffe. Destruction of the R.A.F. in the air and on the ground and demolition of ports, communications, food storage depots and aircraft production were planned.

The Battle of Britain squelched that hope. The R.A.F. spoiled the stage-setting and the operation was postponed, then cancelled.

Lewis Still Silent As Time Draws Near for Decision

Govt. Orders 25 P.C. Cut In Passenger Train Service

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, Nov. 19 —(AP)— With fewer than 48 hours to go, John L. Lewis played a silent hand today on the question of obeying a United States court order against another strike heralded to begin at midnight Wednesday.

Disobedience could land the United Mine Workers' chief in jail — indefinitely — for contempt of court.

Already, more than 38,000 soft-coal diggers have laid down their tools in seven states, and predictions of widespread industrial paralysis were heard on all sides.

It was learned that President Truman specifically instructed Interior Secretary J. A. Krug to obtain yesterday's court order restraining Lewis until Nov. 27 from "coercing, instigating, inducing or encouraging" the miners to strike — either directly or indirectly — or otherwise to breach his contract with the government.

The court order in effect calls upon Lewis and his 400,000 miners to keep the pits operating for at least eight more days. Then, a week from tomorrow, a hearing will be held to determine whether an injuction shall be issued outlawing any strike as long as the government operates the mines.

It is a question, however, whether Lewis could be held in contempt if the miners just quit without any word or counsel for him.

Latest Developments.

Keyed with the swift-moving controversy were these developments:

1. George T. Christopher, president of Packard Motor Co., said in Atlanta that a coal strike would force almost immediate shutdown of the automobile industry — inevitably affecting tens of thousands of workers.

2. The government, to conserve dwindling coal supplies, ordered a 25-per-cent cut in passenger service provided by coal-burning locomotives, effective Sunday night. Freight restrictions also are under consideration.

3. The office of defence transportation disclosed that United States railroads now have only a 30-day supply of coal on hand. Some have as little as a 10-day supply.

4. In Richmond, Governor William H. Tuck of Virginia pledged full police protection to any coal miners wishing to continue work under the government.

Labors lawyers not connected with the case said they expected Lewis to go into court today or tomorrow at the latest.

By ELAINE KAHN

Pittsburgh, Nov. 19 (AP). — Tension rolled through the United States soft coal fields today as 400,000 miners pondered their 27-year loyalty to John L. Lewis, United Mine Worker president.

Already more than 38,000 miners had "jumped the gun" by quitting work and some American Federation of Labor Union leaders predicted a complete shutdown by the Wednesday midnight strike deadline.

Even as Lewis faced a possible jail sentence if he disobeys a court order designed to prevent a walk-out, it appeared the miners would follow their time-honored maxim, "no contract—no work".

Illinois was hardest hit by the unscheduled walkouts with 15,000 miners idle; Pennsylvania, the No. 2 coal producing state had 8,500 men out, Alabama 3,000, Indiana 650, and West Virginia, Kentucky and Virginia, 11,200.

James Caspar, a track layer at the Westland, Pa., mine summed up the miners' reaction to the strike injunction with:

"They can't do anything to a man for not coming to work when he doesn't want to. Not in this country, they can't."

A spokesman for the big 1,300-member Robena mine local in Greene County, Pa., declared:

"We are coming out at midnight Wednesday, strike or no strike, unless a contract is signed before then." He added darkly, "and we don't expect a contract to be signed before then."

Lewis' grip on the coal diggers was illustrated at the Westland Mine Monday when 600 miners reported as usual. But as the men drew their lamps, the query rippled through the crowd:

"Are you or aren't you for Lewis?"

The men turned in their lamps, poured the water from their pails and went home.

Turns 105 Acre-Farm Into One Big Field

Stratford, Nov. 19 — (CP) — Roy Russell, farmer of nearby Blanshard township, solved the problem of fence corner weeds by getting rid of the fence corners.

He threw his 105 acres into one big field this year and now cultivates his land out to the edge of the township road. At present he has no stock on the property but he plans to re-stock his farm with cattle and control pasturing with an electric fence. This, he says, will eliminate cross-fences which would reduce the useful area of his fields.

"It's fun to use an implement now," said Mr. Russell as he completed his fall plowing with a 4-furrow tractor outfit. "You can travel a long furrow before you have to turn."

"CAP" W. H. BOTTUM AND BROTHER "AB" GET THEIR DEER

It may be that the usually wily bucks of the northwoods felt that the red-hatted elderly gentlemen hiding along a runway 60 miles north of Bobcaygeon the other day were not so clear-eyed as they were forty years ago.

However, that was the bucks' mistake. For what they didn't know was that one of the silver-thatched hunters was none other than Captain W. H. Bottum, 81, of this city, and the other his brother Albert (Ab.)Bottum, 86, of Bobcaygeon.

"Cap," as he is familiarly known, raised his rifle. A shot rang out in the morning air and the big buck toppled over. Later his brother, clear eyes lined on his sights, brought down his deer.

They were members of a hunting party of 16 nimrods who stayed in the north woods for two weeks. Both veteran hunters, the Bottum brothers have been hunting deer for many years, "a lot longer than I care to remember," smiled the "Cap."

GEO. WARDLE GIVEN CUSTOMS PROMOTION

Former customs excise clerk at the Belleville Customs Office, Mr. George Wardle, has been promoted to cashier and computing clerk, it has been announced by the Civil Service Commission at Ottawa. Mr. Wardle has been with the local department for the past eighteen years. His appointment is retroactive to July 1, 1946.

Instruction School To Be Held Here For Municipal Men

The first school of instruction in Eastern Ontario for municipal officials of this part of the province will be held in the City Hall here on December 10 and 11, Mayor Frank Follwell was advised by A. J. G. Gray, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, Toronto, today.

The decision to hold the first school here is the aftermath of a promise given Belleville officials a few weeks ago by the Hon. Geo. H. Dunbar, Minister of Municipal Affairs on invitation extended by the mayor of the city.

The school will be devoted to instruction of reeves, councillors, clerks and treasurers of municipalities throughout the eastern part of the province and will be under the supervision of the department. Lectures on municipal government, the Municipal Act, and other matters pertaining to civic supervision are contained in the agenda of the school.

Arrangements for provision of the City Council chambers for the school have been completed.

Madoc Business Stops as Fire Victims Buried

Stores are closed and business at a halt in Madoc today and farmer Ephraim Ray was in tears as he prepared to attend the mid-afternoon funeral of his wife and six children, victims of a fire which destroyed his home here early yesterday.

"I wish I were dead," he said as he arose from a sleepless night. "Everything I worked and lived for is gone. What have I to live for now? I am alone and I'd rather be dead."

One casket contained the burned, mutilated bodies of the six children—ranging in age from 13 years to one—and in another lay his 30-year-old wife, Thelma.

Meanwhile Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan of Belleville, 26 miles south, announced an inquest would be held Thursday night into the death of the seven who perished in a fire, exact cause of which has not yet been determined.

Heavy Sentences For Young Thugs

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Nov. 19 (CP). — Two youthful highway terrorists were ordered to the penitentiary for 15 years today. In addition, each will receive 10 strokes of the lash.

Maurice Gosselin, 18, and Gilles Lemieux, 20, thumbed a ride from Emile Lapierre, 40, in the outskirts of Montreal eight days ago. Once out on the highway the youths pulled a gun, beat Lapierre till he was unconscious, then stuffed him in the trunk of the car.

They locked the trunk and abandoned the car. Mr. Lapierre, using a screwdriver in the darkness, after several hours broke through the rear seat of the car and summoned help. He is in hospital with a broken back.

Provincial police cordoned the area and before nightfall had the youths in custody. The sentence today was passed by Judge Victor Chabot.

"Morrie" Stork Named Assistant Postmaster

Member of the local post office staff for the past forty years, Mr. Charles M. "Morrie" Stork, has been named assistant postmaster, according to a recent announcement made by the postal department at Ottawa. The appointment dates back to October 7th.

A native of Windsor, Ontario, Mr. Stork moved to Belleville with his parents in infancy and attended the local public and high school before entering the postal service. He has worked in all branches of the local office and has had charge of the money order office exclusively since 1930.

An ardent sportsman, Mr. Stork takes keen interest in hunting and in fishing, being a member of the Belleville Fish and Game Association. He is at present on vacation and has just returned from a deer hunting expedition in the northern woods where his party was fairly successful in getting its quota of deer. Mr. Stork also is actively associated with the Bay of Quinte Beaches Association.

Arthur Cruji New President Kinsmen Club

Arthur Cruji, Victoria Ave., of Belle Cleaners, was named president of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville for 1947 at the club's annual meeting and election of officers held in conjunction with their regular bi-weekly dinner meeting at the Hotel Quinte Monday evening.

The new Kinsmen president succeeds Newton Wilbur who for the past year has acted in that capacity.

A member of the club only for the past three years Arthur Cruji was named on the club executive during his first year as member and has proved himself an untiring worker on the many projects sponsored by the club.

Eight executive members also were named, including Wally Berry, Ernie Colebourne, Arthur Cruji, William Dennis, Harry Gourley, Frank Lang, Ernie Smith and Don Thomas.

All eight of the directors were eligible for choice as president of the club but Berry, Gourley, Smith and Thomas withdrew their names from the presidential ballot.

Frank Lang was re-named as the club treasurer, having already served two terms in this capacity, while Wally Berry was named as secretary, succeeding Harry Knott. No past president of the club was eligible for appointment to the executive.

Past President Harry Rollins presided over the meeting in the absence of President Newton Wilbur.

Louis J. Alber Will be Special Speaker at Club

Members of the local Women's Canadian Club and the general public will be privileged to hear Louis J. Alber of Cleveland, well-known world traveller and feature writer when he appears at the Collegiate Auditorium on Thursday evening to give his personal impression of conditions in Russia.

Topic of Mr. Alber's address will be "Behind the Iron Curtain."

Former newspaperman with wide experience in many parts of the world, Mr. Alber has visited Europe many times since 1913 and has interviewed the leaders in many countries over this period who studied the rise of Fascism following the First World War, who saw World War II in the making and who spent more than four months during the past summer and early autumn in that shattered continent.

Mr. Alber will answer questions on Russian Communism and will tell what the Russian Communist party really is and who actually rules Russia. He will tell why Russia is acting as she is and will explain what it is the nation wants.

Following his address Mr. Alber will welcome questions from the audience which he will answer with frankness and forthrightness. In this he is not concerned with pleasing people. In this he is a companion with his friend Winston Churchill whose American tours he managed.

Last June Mr. Alber toured the British Isles and addressed clubs in Dublin, Belfast, Glasgow, Liverpool, Leeds, Manchester and London, speaking on the subject "An American Looks at Winston Churchill." The enthusiasm of his audiences was even greater than on this side of the Atlantic where he has spoken of Churchill to more than one thousand audiences.

Huge Potatoes In Maritimes Plague Growers

Ottawa, Nov. 19—(CP)—The trouble with the Maritime potato this year is that there's just too much of it.

The unusual grief that has come to the attention of Department of Agriculture is that Nature — particularly in the Maritimes — has bestowed an over-abundance of huge spuds in the fields of growers.

Though as good as their smaller companions, they are tough to dispose of. Housewives suspect they have a big hole in the middle, and they're too big to qualify as high-priced certified seed, which limits weight to 12 ounces.

Prince Edward Island is hit particularly. "It's a freak year for potatoes," an Agriculture Department official explained, "and we've had numerous reports of spuds weighing more than two pounds apiece."

However, the outsize tubers aren't a total loss. From potato chip manufacturers, starch factories and dehydration plants, they produce as good a return as smaller potatoes, though not as high a one as table stock and seed spuds.

Junior Trade Board to Conduct 'Get Out and Vote Campaign'

The Junior Board of Trade will at the coming municipal elections conduct a "Get Out and Vote Campaign." Considerable advertising will be done through the local press and under the chairmanships of various committees different organizations will be contacted to have every eligible voter go to the polls to register his or her franchise.

Bill Edwards is general chairman of the committee with Eddie Schnieder in charge of publicity, Don Thomas in charge of industries, Bill Stovin charge of radio appears, Orliff (Boiler) Lloyd for service and church organizations, Jerry Hyde in charge of theatre trailers, Charles Cawker in charge of transportation, Joe Miles in charge of distributing advertising matter, Bruce Lattimer in charge of sound truck and Gardner Duff to contact all the churches.

"The Junior Board of Trade states there were 7,700 eligible voters on the list for the 1946 elections and only 3,442 registered their franchise or a percentage of 44.8 per cent. As one official stated today "less than half of the people of Belleville who had the privilege of voicing their opinion through the ballot were interested enough in doing so. The coming year will mean everything in the progress, welfare and industrial expansion in the city and we must nominate and elect the men we feel will do this for Belleville. In the past men in civic positions have been criticized and probably the majority of that criticism came from persons who were not sufficiently interested at election time to walk to the poll to cast their ballot."

The organizations is urging that all citizens make it a point to be at the nomination meeting at the city hall on Friday and express an opinion by nominating persons whom they think will act in the best interest of the citizens at large.

V.O.N. Supervisor Addresses Members on Order's Work

Miss Elizabeth Reed, national office supervisor of the Victorian Order of Nurses, Ottawa, was a guest at the regular monthly meeting of the local Board held Monday evening in the Kiwanis Centre. Miss Reed has recently resumed duties with the V.O.N. after serving in England, France and Belgium as Assistant to the Matron-in-Chief of the Overseas Nursing Services of the Canadian Army. In her address to the members of the Belleville committee last evening, Miss Reed gave an interesting interpretation of Victorian Order work as viewed from a national aspect.

Mr. N. E. Edwards, president, who was in the chair welcomed Miss Reed, who brought greetings from the national office, and from Miss Smellie, Chief Superintendent, who has just completed 25 years in V.O.N. work, for 23 of which she has been Chief Superintendent.

V.O.N. Expands

The work of the Victorian Order is increasing with two new branches opened, and others organized but unable to function because of the lack of nurses. Many branches are also extending their borders to service more people and others would do this but again there is not sufficient personnel. The shortage of trained personnel is as acute as ever, one reason for which is that married women on the staff, whose husbands have been overseas, are now resigning and establishing their homes. Because of the lack of nurses it has been deemed advisable for the V.O.N. to emphasize the basic services for which it was organized—bedside nursing service, materinal and pre-natal care, and visiting the newborn. Unless other services can be added without needing extra nurses it is not planned to assume them at this time.

Greater Maternity Service

Miss Reed compared the work of Belleville branch with the picture of the work in Canada as a whole last year. In 1945 100,118 cases were cared for and 756,984 visits were made. Of these 39 per cent were to maternity cases, 51 per cent general nursing and 10 per cent health supervision. In Belleville in the period of 1946 to date 57.1 per cent of the total visits were made for materinal services, 38 per cent general nursing and 4.7 health supervision. Regarding fees the same percentage, 50, relates to free cases as throughout Canada. This is consistent with the V.O.N. program of health supervision as instructional visits are all free of charge.

The plan of allowances for nurses' uniforms was discussed by Miss Reed, who concluded her talk with a tribute to the nurses of the Belleville staff for the excellent work they are doing.

Appreciation of the members for Miss Reed's interesting address was expressed by the president.

During the business of the meeting a letter was read from the Hon. Russell T. Kelley, Minister of Health for Ontario, accepting an invitation to be guest speaker at the annual meeting in February. The treasurer's report compiled by Mr. E. S. James was read. Miss V. Adair, nurse in charge, in her report of nursing activities for the past month, said that 50 new cases had been admitted and 421 visits made to all patients. Fourteen new babies were given care.

Assist at Immunizations

A good deal of time has been directed towards immunization. The nurses assisted Mrs. Watt, school nurse, two mornings and also gave assistance to Dr. G. S. Cronk at St. Michael's Academy where over 300 children received their first dose of toxoid or booster dose. Last week the nurses helped at Queen Alexandra School where 275 children were given booster doses. At the V.O.N. clinic Oct. 24th eighty infants and pre-school age children were inoculated and twenty-six were seen by Dr. Marshall, the dentist. Dr. Phair the Deputy Minister of Health advised Dr. Cronk that all children who have not had toxoid in the past three years should be given booster doses. The next clinic will be held Nov. 21st at 4 p.m., and the dental clinic at 3 p.m.

The attendance at the Child Health conference has been slightly lower due to inclement weather on Friday afternoons. However, ninety-one attended during the month. On October 30th Miss Adair addressed the Wallbridge Women's Institute on Victorian Order work. A generous donation of $25.00 from the W.A. of Bridge Street United Church was acknowledged with gratitude.

At the present time, Dr. Empson M.O.H. of Thurlow township is inoculating children of that district and one of the nurses is assisting at the Cannifton School centre.

There are fewer war brides arriving in the district and the nurses have visited all to date. Miss Dorothy Connor attended a tea for them which is held bi-monthly in the Y.M.C.A. Miss Connor said they plied her with questions concerning their children and seemed so genuinely interested in all she told them.

At the conclusion of the meeting tea was served and a social hour enjoyed by the members.

POLICE BLOTTER

Complaints of youths using air rifles inside the city limits have been lodged quite frequently at the police station during the past few weeks with the latest report being of damage at the Queen Victoria school where glass doors were damaged by lead pellets.

Damage to the doors was reported by the school principal who stated the glass had been broken over the weekend. Police reported that it was apparently the work of youths armed with air rifles.

A hydro pole adjacent to the city hall came to grief on Monday when James Pigden, R.R. No. 7 while parking his truck inadvertently struck the pole breaking it. He reported the incident to the police.

City pound keeper Thomas Thorne reports having in his custody a female English Setter wearing a new collar but no tag. The dog was brought to the police station over the weekend.

MUFTI IN CAIRO

Photographed for the first time since his escape from France to Egypt, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin El Husseini, head of the Arab Nationalist movement, is pictured in an excellent close-up study. Husseini was interned after Hitler's fall in a villa near Paris. He fled to King Farouk who refused to hand him over to the British.

Christmas Seals Will be on Sale On November 25

Residents of Belleville and district will have the opportunity of assisting in the fight against tuberculosis when, starting on November 25 they will be invited to contribute toward the annual Christmas Seals Campaign for $7,500 in this district.

The campaign is being staged under the direction of the Hastings Tuberculosis Preventative Association and is sponsored by the Belleville Shrine Club. D. L. Storey is chairman of the above association with Mayor Frank S. Follwell, Dr. G. G. Brearley, Dr. R. W. Tennent, Dr. Russell Scott, George Stokes, M.P., and Mark J. Vanner as directors.

Members of the above executive met late last week and made final arrangements for mailing out the thousands of Christmas Seals to Belleville and district residents and box-holders. In turn they will be invited to contribute toward the campaign. Mass-X-ray of county residents as a check against the spread of tuberculosis is one of the objectives of the campaign.

Contrary to the procedure in other years, school children this year will not be asked to sell seals, it was stated by Mr. Storey. The seals will go out by mail only.

600 DEER TAKEN IN SHOOT

Peterborough, Ont., Nov. 19—(CP)—With the deer hunting season closing this evening in the counties of Peterborough and Haliburton it is estimated there have been more than 600 deer taken out during the 14-day shoot. The largest deer reported was shot by Jack Dawson of Peterborough. It was a 10-point buck dressing 248 pounds, bagged at Crooked Lake in Haliburton.

Permission Given To Open Laneway By Armouries

Acting on the suggestion of a number of interested citizens in regard to the re-opening of the laneway running parallel east and south of the Bridge Street Armouries from Pinnacle Street to Church Street, and which has been closed for some time, Mr. George H. Stokes, M.P., Hastings South, took up the matter with the Hon Douglas C. Abbott, Minister of National Defence.

As a result of his efforts, Mr. Stokes has received a letter from the Minister granting permission for the laneway to be used again by the public. The letter from the minister which follows outlines the action taken by his Department:—

"Dear Mr. Stokes,—

I have your letter of November 11 with further reference to our previous correspondence concerning the use of the footwalk on the south side of the Armouries at Belleville.

I have now been informed that this matter has been approved and an agreement will be forwarded to the city solicitor for execution in the course of a few days."

Yours very truly,
D. C. Abbott,
Minister of National Defence,
Ottawa.

Truckers Ready To Rush Supplies To Hungry Alaskans

Edmonton, Nov. 19 —(CP)— About 200 truck drivers from Dawson Creek in northern British Columbia to Fairbanks Alaska, were available today to rush urgently needed food supplies northward as the federal government released Canadian flour for Alaska residents.

E. S. Patton of Fairbanks said 14,000 pounds of flour was "ready to roll" at Dawson Creek immediately final clearance permits could be obtained.

Last night federal authorities at Ottawa said the permit to move flour to Alaska was issued yesterday. The amount released was not made known.

An additional supply of flour is expected to be moved by rail from Edmonton to Dawson Creek, some 470 miles to the northwest. Then 1,719 miles by truck over the Alaska Highway to Fairbanks. Yesterday Mayor A. H. Nordale of Fairbanks said 100 tons of flour and the same amount of meat was needed. He said the flour supply in the north was expected to run out within three days.

Mr. Patton estimated it would require about one week to move the flour to Alaska and distribute it to residents facing a food shortage as a result of an American maritime tie-up.

It is believed that fewer than 50 trucks would be required to freight foodstuff to Alaska. Truckers generally prefer to travel in groups of two or three trucks — especially when the highway is covered with snow.

Edmonton packing plants are understood to have informed Mr. Patton that they can supply him with large quantities of meat immediately arrangements are made to overcome rationing difficulties.

FOURSOME ON WAY

Baltimore, Nov. 19 —(AP)— Charles Henn, Jr., and his British wife have a problem—finding a new home for a family expecting quadruplets.

"We haven't had a chance to figure out what we'll do," said Henn, 28, after his wife told him of her doctor's forecast of quads, expected in February. X-rays have shown the foursome to be on its way.

Court Questions Justice of Long Interrogation

Toronto, Nov. 19 —(CP)— The Ontario Court of Appeal hearing an appeal against conviction of Ronald George Sears, sentenced to be hanged Dec. 3 for the slasher-slaying of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price in August, 1945, questioned the justice of the seven-hour interrogation by two detectives to which the youth was subjected.

"That does not have the appearance of justice," Mr. Justice R. E. Laidlaw commented, referring to the arrest of the youth by five officers, his questioning and the subsequent taking of his statements. The hearing which opened yesterday, is continuing today.

Chief Justice Robert Robertson said there were "several things that disturb me."

There was the "formidable force which went to arrest the boy at his home, the handcuffs used, his condition of collapse," the Chief Justice said.

G. A. Martin, counsel for Sears, told the court the statement which the youth allegedly made was not a voluntary one. Mr. Martin bases his appeal on the contention the Sears' statements were made "by improper influence and pressure."

Five statements which police said Sears signed were introduced at his trial. They referred to stabbings in which two men died and three others were wounded.

Chief Justice Robertson said it seemed extraordinary to him that a boy of 18 could go around stabbing people yet still lead a normal life and not arouse suspicion among his family and friends.

Eire News Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Dublin, Nov. 19—(CP)—Irish industrialists, anxious to wipe out foreign competition in the home market and perhaps to compete abroad, find themselves hampered by the same shortages which plague businessmen everywhere.

"If it were not for the difficulties of obtaining plant equipment at the present time, we would be witnessing here an expansion of industry greater than we have ever known," Sean Lemass, Minister of Industry and Commerce, said in an address.

The government believed that by assisting private enterprise it could promote activities which would absorb those now unemployed and available for work. There was an insatiable demand, not only in Eire, but in the export market for all the goods that could be produced.

Speedup: Aer Lingus — Eire's air line — plans to buy new and faster aircraft, increase its services to London and expand its continental services.

An announcement by the company said an initial order has been placed for two 58-seater Constellations which will be used on the Dublin-London route. Later, when Vickers Viking are available, they will be switched to the continental runs.

Ships: Traffic at Dublin port is almost back to pre-war level, with some 95 ships a week calling. Cargoes are arriving from all over the world, including shipments of timber from Canada.

The day when Irish ships will be carrying a larger share of this traffic was brought nearer when contracts were signed for three freighters to be built by William Gray and Company at West Hartlepool, England.

They will be operated by Irish Shipping Limited, which also has two 7,500-ton ships under construction at South Shields, and is negotiating for purchase of two ships built during the war in the United States.

60 RUPEES

Mrs. Blair has been talking for months about buying a real Indian shawl. But wouldn't she be surprised if she found it priced in rupees! That it isn't, is due in large measure to the services rendered by your bank.

When you buy imported goods in Canadian stores, you pay in Canadian dollars—but the people who made them were paid in Indian rupees, British pounds, French francs . . .

It is the same in reverse with exports. You may be one of the three out of every eight Canadians who make their living through goods sold abroad. If so, you receive your wages in dollars, but your products are sold in all sorts of foreign currencies.

Arranging the complicated exchange and transfer of foreign funds in such transactions is but one of your bank's many services enabling Canadians to buy and sell abroad.

Madoc Fire Tragedy

Wherever the news of the Madoc fire tragedy was heard men and women must have been shocked by the horror of the loss of life of a mother and six children as their home was destroyed. The fire is perhaps unequalled in the grim toll it took of life in one family. There have been fires in which the loss of life in a family has been heavy but this tragedy's heavy toll of a family is perhaps the greatest in history for a great section of the continent. None in recent times in this part of Canada at least can equal this terrible holocaust.

Mrs. Ephraim Ray and all of the six children lost their lives in the fire early Monday morning in Madoc village. Mr. Ray had risen and gone out to do chores in the barn prior to the day's work. Hearing the sound of breaking of glass while at the chores he discovered the house was afire and then found himself in that tragic position, that of helplessness to be able to do anything for the members of the family for it was impossible to enter the house to save what he treasured most in the world, his wife and young family.

The profoundest sympathy is felt for the distressed man. His grief no one can fathom for the burden of sorrow he has been called upon to bear and the shock which he has experienced, rarely has man had to endure. The unfortunate mother and her large family were apparently smothered in their sleep by the fumes from the burning house and so had no opportunity of trying to escape or of being rescued, so quickly had the dwelling become an inferno of flame and smoke.

People everywhere feel the sense of shock at so tragic an event. With a natural instinct they feel sorrow for the helpless mother and children and for the bereft husband and father who sees the desolation of all his hopes.

Fire can be one of man's worst enemies. So terrible a holocaust cannot but make people everywhere think of their loved ones and their safety. They see the disaster of fire if by some accident or other it should get beyond control. Clean chimneys and pipes, pipes that are substantially wired to prevent falling and so many other matters as the inspection of the heating apparatus to keep it in the best condition are advised. For there seem many things that might happen and so eternal vigilance is exerted to guard in every way possible against such possible danger.

Autumn and winter bring many fires and of recent winter seasons there has been a number of fatal fires. It is to be hoped this winter will be free of other disasters.

Roosevelt Memorial

How highly British people regarded the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, former U. S. President, will be shown in the memorial to be erected in his memory in Grosvenor Square, London, with funds subscribed by the people of Britain, and with subscriptions limited to five shillings per person so that the memorial may be a truly national tribute of Britons to the man who in the days before and during the Second World War was one of the greatest champions of liberty the world has known and a true friend of the people of the British Isles. The Britons know what his help and United States aid and co-operation meant in the trying years, especially the early period of the war when Britain practically stood alone with the British Commonwealth nations against the aggression of Hitlerite Germany. His advice, his spoken words, and American aid can never be forgotten by this grateful people.

The late Franklin D. Roosevelt did not live to take part in the victory, which was within reach when he passed from this earthly scene, but his labors bore their fruition in the overthrow of the enemy.

Great leaders like F. D. Roosevelt have an uplifting power that leaves its mark upon the course of history and with him like great men of all times, the man behind the work was greater than the task, great and important as that is and will continue to be reflected in the years to come.

The memorial in Britain will be deeply appreciated by the people of the United States because so many of the men in the armed forces of the great Republic lived in Britain for a considerable period, that is in the days of preparation for the invasion of the Continent. To these Americans Britain cannot but mean more than it otherwise would by reason of the close relationship with the British people as hosts of the U. S. forces and Allies and of the relations existing between Mr. Roosevelt and the wartime Prime Minister of Britain, Mr. Churchill and other British leaders.

Seasons And Hours

November of last year was the month with the second highest accident rate on roads and highways in Ontario, 1749 accidents or 11.6 per cent of the total for the year. December was the highest month with 1749 crashes. February and April, 1945, were the months with the lowest total, 750 for the former and 744 for the latter.

In the last quarter last year the accident total was not only greater than for 1944 but over the five-year average. The quarter accounted for 35.5 per cent of all accidents last year while the first quarter's percentage was 17.1 per cent, the second quarter's 20 per cent and the third's 27.4 per cent.

Hours of accidents throw an interesting light on the volume of traffic. Last year's records show that the fewest accidents were between the hours of five and six in the morning. Out of the 13,458 accidents reported there were 72 only in this early morning hour. The hour from four to five was the next in fewest accidents. The time from 3 to 4 o'clock and from 6 to 7 had the same number each, the third lowest, namely 143. More accidents take place during an hour in the afternoon than in the forenoon. Noon hour was the time of occurrence of 560 accidents and the total steps up progressively until the evening or dinner hour 5 to 6. Then there is a drop between 6 and 7 and the rate of accidents falls steadily until 10 to 11 o'clock when the incidence rises considerably. The rate drops after midnight and declines naturally with the lessening of traffic until five in the morning.

There were more fatal accidents between 5 and 6 p.m. during 1945 than at any hour and more accidents of this nature (42.8 per cent of all fatal accidents) occurred during the six-hour period, 5 to 11 p.m. than during any other corresponding period during the day.

Germany's Manpower

Sir William Beveridge, writing in the London Observer, has pointed out that Germany's manpower losses of the war have been less than the losses to the European Allies. He suggests that in that manner Germany may be said to have emerged from the war better off than some of her neighbors who were among the victors. Counting the repatriated civilians and the released prisoners of war, Germany will have an immediate postwar population of perhaps 74,000,000, said Sir William, as against a prewar population of 67,000,000. The real strength of the population will depend, however, upon its capacity to produce. The famous German energy and ingenuity will work some wonders, no doubt, from the standpoint of results, but to crowd the added population into a smaller geographic area means that an already industrial civilization must become more so in order to be self-supporting. In the immediate future the millions who are being returned to Germany are more likely to be a burden than a help.

BEST OF PARTIES

Bridge is not a party game.
Dancing? Ah, I'm much too old.
Prizes I've no wish to claim;
I have all my shelf can hold.
What I think is best of all—
Anyhow the choice is mine—
Is the gathering—always small—
At one table called to dine.

I'm not fond of club affairs.
Home's the place to entertain.
Just enough to fill the chairs.
With too many, speech is vain.
Host and hostess glad you're there.
Children down "good night" to say.
Laughter everyone can share.
Games that everyone can play.

On the donkey pin the tail.
On the carpet spin the plate.
These are games that never fail;
Old, but ever up-to-date.
Songs that everyone can sing;
Time, glad memories to recall.
Just a friendly gathering!
That's the party best of all.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who has been the youngest U. S. Senator?

The Constitution says "no person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty," yet, if the generally accepted dates of their births are correct, several men have served in that body when they were under thirty.

So far as known the first under-age Senator was Armistead Thomson Mason, son of Senator Stevens Mason and great-grandson of George Mason of Gunston Hall. He was born August 4, 1787, and began his service in the Senate January 22, 1816, when he was 28 years, five months and 19 days old, having been chosen by the Virginia legislature to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of William B. Giles.

John Hery Eaton, the first biographer of Andrew Jackson and the second husband of the famous Peggy O'Neill, appears to have been the youngest person ever to serve in the Senate. In August, 1818, he was appointed by the Governor of Tennessee to fill an unexpired vacancy caused by the resignation of George W. Campbell and began to serve the following November 16. If we can accept as authentic the date on his tombstone in the Oak Hill Cemetery in Washington he was born June 18, 1790, and therefore was only 28 years, four months and 21 days old when he was sworn in as a Senator.

In 1806 Henry Clay was chosen by the Kentucky legislature to fill the unexpired term of General John Adair and he took the oath as Senator on December 29 of the same year. According to all available records, Clay was born April 12, 1777. The Constitution provides that "each house shall be the judge of the . . . qualifications of its own members," but apparently the question of the ages of Mason, Eaton and Clay was not raised at the time they took their seats. There is a tradition that a Senator arose and questioned Clay's right to a seat in the Senate on the ground that he was not qualified in respect to age, but if the question was actually raised it was not pressed. It is not known whether Clay himself was conscious of the fact he was below the required age.

The youngest person known to have been elected to the Senate by popular vote has been Rush Dew Holt, of West Virginia, who was born June 19, 1905. He was chosen in the November election of 1934 for a six-year term beginning January 3, 1935, when he was more than five months under thirty. Since Holt proclaimed the fact that he was under-age, the Senate adopted the precedent set by the House in the Brown case in 1860 and refused to permit him to take the oath or to draw his salary as a Senator until after his 30th birthday on June 19, 1935, more than five months after the beginning of the term for which he was elected.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Seeks Information On Municipal Matters

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

May I ask the following questions to the Mayor and Aldermen who are seeking the electors for their votes for another term?

1. We have an industrial commission and what industries has the commission been able to bring to Belleville and what amount of money has the commission cost the tax payer during the year 1946?

2. The city has a town planning commission. What has that cost the tax payer and what have they done?

3. We have had an increase in our assessment, approximately $250,000 and also an increase in our taxes. Will the candidate seeking election give a reason why there is an increase in assessment and also an increase in taxes?

4. To date it has cost the city of Belleville for attending conventions, etc., $2,278. It is an excess of any amount ever spent by any previous council. Can we have an explanation for this expenditure?

5. To the Public Utility Commission: Why have we not had a reduction in our hydro rates?

Food Production Big Job in India

New Delhi, Nov. 18 (CP) — An indication that India may have turned the corner in respect to her food crisis was given by Dr. Rajendra Prassad, opening a debate in the Central Assembly.

We have just begun to see streaks of light and I am hoping that we shall be able to pass through the darkness of this crisis and emerge into full sunshine very soon," he said. "But we cannot ignore the perennial problem of food shortage in this country, and the only way to meet it is to increase our own production."

He revealed that, of a total of 4,000,000 tons of grains requested from the International Food Emergency Commission, India had received only 1,732,000 tons. He also stated that 150,000,000 persons in the country were now affected by the government's stringent rationing measures. He added that the people are used to suffering and know how to face such difficulties because they have done it in the past.

Dr. Prasad revealed that there had been a 'fair' monsoon and "we now have a crop in sight." But, he continued, "we cannot depend upon imports from foreign countries to meet our requirements. The objective we have set before ourselves is twofold — we must produce enough to meet the present emergency and, secondly, we must also improve the standard of living of our people."

The target of the government's short-term program is to produce 4,000,000 tons of additional food by 1952, enough to meet urgent requirements. The government has decided to aid agriculturists in various ways, for example, by erecting more irrigation works, by the supply of manure and also the distribution of seed of improved variety.

PART OF CHINESE LOAN

Vancouver, Nov. 19 — (CP) — The Canadian steamship Lake Atlin which sailed last night for Shaighai is carrying a United States shipment of gold bullion valued at $3,000,000 in a specially-constructed strong box in her hold.

Largest such shipment ever to pass through this port, the bullion is said to be part of a United States loan to China. It arrived from San Francisco by air and under guard of F.B.I. agents who turned it over to Royal Canadian Mounted Police for transfer to the steamship.

I STILL SAY IT IS STUPID

In any case of long standing or periodically recurring "piles" in persons of mature age there is always a possibility that the condition may be actually cancer — and this possibility alone is ample reason why an intelligent person so afflicted will without fail have the benefit of proper medical examination—and have it NOW.

Proper medical examination means nothing less than visual ispection of the lesion or affected area by means of speculum and internal illumination. No honest doctor can give a competent opinion or diagnosis of the nature of the rectal trouble without such examination.

If I were the patient I'd select a physician who is skilled in the ambulant, office, injection treatment of internal piles and associated troubles, and ask him to prepare to give the first injection at once if the examination shows the trouble is actually piles.

I have had protests from readers who seem to be offended by my intimation that it is stupid to suffer from piles. It certainly is stupid to accept such a handicap when a few painless injections by a physician skilled in ambulant treatment will cure the trouble.

There are still a good many old timers in practice and some of them even have the temerity to tell their unenlightened patients that this ambulant or injection treatment is "no good" or "dangerous" and that only the crude operation will cure piles. You pays your money and takes your choice. I'm telling you. I can't do any more about it.

Formerly I tried to maintain lists of doctors who are skilled in the modern methods, but ours is a large country and the task became too great and it was a thankless task at best, so I am sorry I can no longer recommend individual physicians.

But I'll tell you what—if you ask for it in writing—do not use a clipping, please—and inclose a stamped self addressed envelope —I'll send you a pamphlet titled "It Is Stupid to Suffer from Piles." which tells what you ought to know about the nature, causes, home remedies and curative treatment of piles or hemorrhoids, internal and external.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Quaint Heroics

Can you suggest anything for a person with a heart attack, other than calling the doctor or the fire department? So often it seems that by the time the doctor or the fire department arrives the person is dead. (F.)

Answer—For one thing I suggest leaving the fire department to take care of fires. All you can do before the doctor arrives is (a) try to keep the patient warm — apply warmth to feet and to sides of body; (b) keep mouth and throat clear of obstruction to breathing—for example draw out the tongue if it falls back and obstructs breathing, and turn the patient off from back; (c) if the patient is unconscious the only emergency stimulant you can administer is ammonia—wet hand or handkerchief with aromatic spirits of ammonia and hold it near but not in contact with nose and mouth so the ammonia will be breathed in; (d) if the patient is partly conscious, the best emergency stimulant is a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia given in half an inch of water in glass, and the next best is hot strong coffee.

Not a Delicate Condition

Would it be safe for a woman pregnant three months to travel from coast to coast by Pullman? (Mrs. J. F. L.)

Answer—Yes, or by bus, truck, trailer, motorcycle, day coach, freight car or plane—as safe as it is for any one else. Don't coddle the girl that way, Mom. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "Preparing for Maternity," which, I hope, will give you and your daughter a happier outlook upon the coming miracle.

Fear of Dentist

Information on how to be free from fear of the denists. (Mrs. M. P.)

Answer—You fear possible pain not the dentist. The dentist today can use local anethetics which make any and every operation painless—and I mean painless. Your physician or your dentist can prescribe medicine for you to take in advance of your visit to the dentist, which will make you as indifferent to the "ordeal" as you would be to a permanent wave.

Castor Oil Treatment

Following the castor oil treatment of chronic headaches (neuralgic) as described in your pamphlet. Would it interfere in assimilation of vitamin B complex? (J. M. C.)

Answer—I do not think so. It is mineral oil that interferes with assimilation of vitamins. Glad to send any reader who supplies stamped envelope bearing his address, the pamphlet "Why Have Headache"?

Alberta Willing To Sign Temporary Special Tax Pact

Calgary, Nov. 19 — (CP)—Alberta is willing to enter into a special tax agreement with the Dominion government but only as a temporary measure to provide time for re-writing the constitution and making a more permanent and more satisfactory settlement, Municipal Affairs Minister C. E. Gerhart said yesterday in an address to the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts Annual Convention.

The Dominion government had signed away some of its autonomy to an international authority and had invaded the autonomy of the provinces at the same time.

"It has just about ruined the independence of the provinces but its usurpation of provincial tax fields," Mr. Gerhart said.

IT'S TEAMWORK THAT DOES IT

BEFORE YOU reach the cottons counter, your retailer has anticipated your needs to the limit of his ability to procure supplies.

The greatest of these requirements is quality. This is an all-inclusive term which covers—among other things—appearance, texture and durability. These are the result of expert knowledge and teamwork all the way from the raw cotton to the finished product. In Dominion Textile mills, the first consideration is the maintenance of established high standards of quality.

Mother, Six Children Die as Helpless Father Watches Flames Devour Madoc Home

All that remains of the burned home of Ephraim Ray is shown in this close-up of the scene. Volunteer firemen and neighbors had to struggle with the distraught father who tried to dash into the blazing building where his wife and six children, Douglas, 13; Doreen, 10; Allan, 9; Ella, 5; Dianne, 3, and baby Emerson, 1, perished early Monday morning.

Body of Mrs. Ray was found charred beyond recognition in basement of house.

All four children in this family picture with Mr. and Mrs. Ray died in the fire.

Mute evidence of the fire which took the lives of a mother and six children at Madoc while the father stood helplessly outside is this twisted tricycle held by a neighbor.

Ephraim Ray is under a doctor's care after watching the fire destroy his family.

WHY MUST YOU FIND A JOB, MOM?

WHEN a bereaved family is left without income, someone must find the means of paying for food, clothing and shelter. Often this responsibility falls on shoulders quite unfitted to carry it.

Life Insurance is a sure answer to the problem of providing a continuance of income. It enables a breadwinner to provide out of his current earnings for a guaranteed monthly income to replace those earnings in case of need. If he lives long, the same Life Insurance will provide an income for his retiring years.

There is no substitute for Life Insurance for the man who wants security for his loved ones and for himself.

more telephones than in all Montreal

Since 1939 we have added over 365,000 telephones to our system. That is more than there are in the whole city of Montreal.

All this time, while we could not get new switchboards, we managed to make do with what we had, and still keep up a high standard of service.

This year we started to spend $100,000,000 so that we shall be ahead of your telephone needs—as we were before the war.

Our two-year $100,000,000 programme will
bring service to waiting applicants
...
add more and more Long Distance lines
...
provide new buildings and improved switchboards to give faster service than ever before.

Miss Arlie Gilbert Heads Half-Way Club for Year

At six-thirty p.m. Monday, the Half-Way Club met in the Y.M.C.A. for a supper meeting, following which the officers for the 1947 Executive Committee were elected as follows:

President—Miss Arlie Gilbert.
Vice-Pres.—Miss Jean Gladney.
Secretary—Miss Gwen Kitchen.
Treasurer—Miss Ann Clare.
Convener of Entertainment Committee—Miss Marilyn Donovan.
Convener of Publicity Committee—Miss Ada Moore.
Convener of Membership Committee—Miss Anita Cavanagh.

After the election of officers was completed, the secretary Miss Gwen Kitchen, on behalf of the members of the club, expressed appreciation to Miss Jean Vickers for her valued services as president during the year 1946, and presented her with a silver locket as a token of the esteem in which she is held by her associates.

At the close of the meeting members of the executives for the years 1946 and 1947 met jointly and appointed Miss Muriel Jobson as assistant vice-president.

Farewell Party For Mrs. W. Rose

A delightful party was held Monday evening at the home of Mrs. William Parry, Bleecker Ave., when a number of friends gathered to bid farewell to Mrs. Walter Rose, who is leaving the city shortly to reside in Kingston.

The evening was spent in games of euchre prizes for which were won by Mrs. Welsh, Mrs. Symons, Mrs. Rowbotham, with the consolation prize being won by Mrs. Hopkins.

Refreshments were served after which Mrs. Parry, on behalf of the ladies of St. George's Parish Guild, presented Mrs. Rose with a lovely gift, as a token of their appreciation for her activities in connection with that organization.

Mrs. Rose voiced her gratitude and the guests departed, after thanking their hostess for a very enjoyable party.

SURPRISE PARTY

On Tuesday evening about fifty Ameliasburg friends and relatives met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lont, and Miss Marie Lont, as a gesture of good fellowship before they leave the community for their new home.

A short address was read by Mrs. G. Titus while Mrs. E. Wood and Mrs. O. Sills made a presentation of a beautiful Tri-light floor lamp.

Mr. and Mrs. Lont expressed appreciation and gratitude; after which music and a social time filled the remaining evening hours; the ladies later serving delicious refreshments.

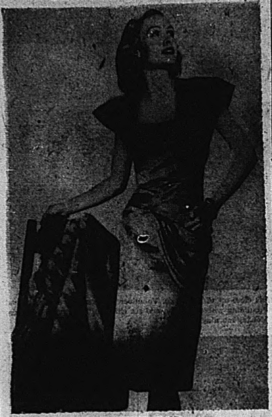
Silk Brocade Frock



By PRUNELLA WOOD

It has been a long time since anyone has seen a frock made of silk brocade, the real, not-synthetic fabric . . . and for once it is in a dress for many occasions, not a special entrance, robe de style.

The model above, we are speaking of . . . a hammered pure silk brocade afternoon or dinner frock, of soft gray with brocaded design vaguely rose and old gold. There is a deft highlighting with tiny gilt beads here and there, and a chic, straight, narrow skirt given softness by a puffed drapery at one hip.

WEDDINGS

ASHLEY—HAIGHT

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haight, Second Concession of Thurlow, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, November Ninth, at 1.30 p.m. when their daughter, Lorena Marjorie, became the bride of George Vernon Ashley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Ashley, West Huntingdon.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. A. Perkins of Holloway Street United Church, beneath an evergreen arch which was centred by a large white bell.

Wedding music was played by Miss Bernice Robinson, who wore a floor length gown with pink satin bodice ending in points over a net skirt. She wore a tiny hat of pink and blue feathers, with corsage of sweetheart roses.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown fashioned of ivory satin and net, with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves, and fastened in the back with a row of tiny button. Her finger tip length veil of embroidered tulle was attached to a Mary Queen of Scots headdress edged with pleated net. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of red roses and bouvardia.

Miss Mary Chambers, Stirling, cousin of the bride, as maid-of-honor, was lovely in a floor length gown of Heavenly blue with silk jersey top, and double net skirt.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marjorie Wright, West Huntingdon, also the bride's cousin, wore a pink gown made similarly to that worn by the maid of honor. Both girls wore matching Mary Queen of Scots headdresses with shoulder length veils and carried nosegays of pink roses with pink and blue mums.

The groom's cousin, Mr. Donald Bateman, Tweed, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held for sixty guests. The rooms were decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells. The dining room table, covered with a lace cloth was centred with the wedding cake flanked by silver colored candles in silver holders and bowls of pink roses.

The bride's mother received her guests wearing a dress of orchid faconne crepe with black accessories and a corsage of carnations. She was assisted by the groom's mother wearing a dress of green crepe with black accessories and corsage of carnations.

Tea was poured by Miss Zada Cummings and Mrs. Fred Gould of Toronto, cousins of the bride. Those who assisted in serving were Misses Mona Robinson, Helen Kennedy, Doris Farrell, Doris Boldrick, Edith Sprackett and Bernice Robinson.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Ashley left for a trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. For travelling the bride wore a dark red gabardine dressmaker suit with black accessories and corsage of sweetheart roses.

On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at West Huntingdon.

Guests were present from Toronto, Orillia, London, Ivanhoe, Madoc, Moira, Unionville, West Huntingdon and Carmel.

CLARKE—MacLAREN

At four o'clock on the afternoon of Nov. 6th, Christ Church was the scene of a pretty wedding when Helen Jean, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. MacLaren, became the bride of Donald Robert, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clarke, with Rev. J. Grant Sparling officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a pale blue suit with black accessories and a corsage of American Beauty roses. Mrs. D. Lazier, aunt of the bride, as matron-of-honor wore a pale yellow wool dress, brown accessories and a corsage of 'mums. The bridesmaid was Miss Lois Kellaway, wearing a beige suit, black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

The groom's brother Mr. Albert Clarke performed the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents, where the rooms were beautifully decorated for the occasion with pink and white streamers and bouquets of 'mums and snapdragons.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a fuchsia crepe dress with black accessories. She was assisted by the groom's mother wearing black crepe with wine accessories. Both wore corsages of Talisman roses.

Mrs. W. J. Martin, aunt of the bride, presided at a tea table made attractive with a lace cloth centred with a beautifully decorated three-tier wedding cake.

During the tea hour the groom responded to a toast to the bride proposed by Mr. Barney Sheffield.

Following a journey to Toronto and points west, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke will take up residence in Belleville.

Fashion Flashes

THE BADGE of the season's color parade is black with gold, or vice versa. So cheers for a collection of small hats of gold braid sewn into charming head-hugging little affairs and spiked with pompoms or aigrettes of clipped or glycerined ostrich.

THE UNION of smartness and practical comfort is always a welcome one. So we like the suit of woodland-green woolen, the coat a softly flared topper in three-quarter length, nicely lined, collared and cuffed in nutria. Nice over brown, beige or black dresses, suits, or skirts and blouses.

WON'T BE LONG until you find women wearing winter hats with a spring flavor, such as the cloche with undulating brim of white felt with clusters of navy blue violets posed under and above the brim. Streamers of navy grosgrain ribbon.

VERY NEW is the old-fashioned look, but that is just the paradox of fashion! A new dinner suit has a full-length, quite full skirt of black slipper satin with, for smart contrast, a very fitted jacket of black velvet scrolled with soutache braid and jet.

NO END to fashion tricks. We have been admiring a bag of green snakeskin with a buckled handle that extends around the bag. This is detachable, and can be worn as a belt. When handle is removed, a strap from the back of the bag pulls out to form a pannier handle.

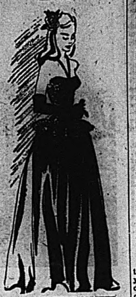
GOOD IDEA, that of fur trim on gloves—to wear with matching furs or to give a luxury touch to an unfurred suit. Suede, in black or brown, is used for a nice glove, the cuff trimmed with two big buttons, either of Persian lamb or mink. Buttons have gilt metal centers.

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

BETHANY W.M.S.

The November meeting of Bethany W.M.S. was held on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Clarence Embury with a good attendance. The worship service was in charge of the president, Mrs. F. Easton, and was opened with the singing of a hymn. Mrs. George Sills was elected president for 1947 and Mrs. Vernon Hamilton, vice-president. The treasurer elected was Mrs. G. Kerr. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. G. Hamilton. Mrs. Easton closed this part of the meeting with prayer. The remaining part of the program was in charge of Mrs. C. Embury. A reading, "On the Silver Screen," was given by Mrs. P. Osland. A splendid report on Mrs. Graham's address given at the Cavalcade held in Bridge Street Church was given by Mrs. H. Casey. The meeting closed with everyone repeating the Watchword.

Bewitching Black



By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Alluring lace lends charm to any type of evening frock be it for the dowager or the debutante. Lace is an integral part of the design of this attractive evening frock, which although it is all black, is still a good style for the youthful wearer. Black lace is used to mold the bodice and form the tiny peplum which fastens in back with a slide fastener. The full skirt is of black taffeta and the same material is used for the string-tied halter.

Blithe Young Beauty

By ALICE ALDEN

NOT all is strapless decolletage this season. There are some youthful and charming dinner dresses and evening frocks that convey a blithe air of freshness. Of this ilk is an evening frock that is satisfied with a pretty off-shoulder line, which is marked by ruffling edged by white lace. The dress, which is of black faille, has a snug, wide midriff which is pointed at the centre into the graceful skirt, soft with gently controlled fullness.

Rev. H.H. Bingham Preacher At Special Services

Special services of rededication and life commitment were held in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday when large congregations heard challenging messages delivered by Rev. H. H. Bingham D.D., General Secretary of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec.

Speaking at the morning service on the subject "The Path of Power" Dr. Bingham stated: — "that if we are to be really Christian we must know something of that power and take the requisite steps to cling to it.

"If religion is anything it is experience, not philosophy," pointed out the speaker. "Our Lord always called for a decision which was unskimped and uncompromising. He made it perfectly plain that if we would follow close we would have to take up the cross and follow Him. We have been ready to accept forgiveness from sin but we are not so ready to say no to self and take up our cross and follow Christ.

"There are a great number of people who are nominal Christians. They go by the name but they have lost the reality. You see them with the unsaved, enjoying the same world's pleasures and Jesus might well say "what do ye more than others?" In the realm of science the genius is the man who goes one step farther in real work, giving himself utterly to his task. It is one thing to have a little power. It is another thing to have reserve power.

"The first step taken by Jesus in the path of power was the step of solitude. He was alone with God. We are afraid to get away alone. He would rather do something to escape it. Men sin in solitude, largely, and they also repent in solitude. But you will come to know your inner self best when you are alone with God.

"The second step is that of secret prayer. When Jesus was alone He prayed. It would have been wonderful to hear Jesus preach, but it would have been more wonderful to hear Him pray. How we need to pray, yet I am afraid we have lost the ability to pray. In prayer we tap the resources of God. I am afraid we use prayer to God like the motorist uses a spare tire. When people are going along smoothly, without any trouble and everything is fine they think they do not need to pray. But when things go flat they start to think of prayer. The Bible tells us that men ought always to pray and not to faint. We should pray daily for our daily bread, even though we might have ten thousand dollars in the bank.

"The third step is that of sacrifice. Though Jesus prayed in the Garden of Gethsemane 'Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me'. He was not afraid of physical death. He went unto the death of deaths for you and me. He took life the hard way. Do we ever love anybody like that? Do we ever give up any convenience to bring anyone to Christ? Shame on us if we are not willing to give things up.

"In the fourth place Jesus said 'Father, not My will but Thine be done'. Jesus always brought His will in tune with the Father's will. He brought His life in harmony with the will of God the Father. That is the hardest step in the world for you and me. Many people consider the will of God is something to be tolerated. The motto "Thy Will Be Done" is seen on tombstones more than anywhere else. But that motto should be in your home and your office. The time is gone when you are dead. It is too late then to do the will of God."

Dr. Bingham pointed out that the resurrection life could not be accomplished without going all the way to Gethsemane. "Let Jesus not find us asleep, afar off, like the early disciples but let us go with Him a little farther. Let us reconsecrate our lives and follow these four steps to the path of power, that we may lead others to the saving knowledge of Jesus Christ."

The choir, under the capable direction of Miss Phyllis May, rendered very effective anthems during the day. In the evening Miss Verna Fox was heard in a beautiful solo, "I Walked One Day Where Jesus Walked". Mr. Dorland Houston, organist, presided at the console. The services were in charge of the pastor, Rev. H. O. Eastman.

Harold H. Leather, M.B.E., Hamilton, recently appointed chairman of the National Blood Donor Committee in connection with the new Blood Transfusion Service being organized by the Canadian Red Cross from coast to coast throughout Canada to provide hospitals with all necessary blood for transfusion purposes, free of any charge whatsoever to either hospitals or patients.

Ford Reports Operating Loss

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 19 —(CP) —The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, has lost $1,700,000 in the first nine months of 1946 and expects to lose $2,000,000 during the year, the company said in a letter sent to shareholders.

Douglas B. Greig, president, said in a letter the loss was suffered despite the fact Ford made 60,545 cars and trucks during the nine months — 50 per cent of the total of cars and trucks made in Canada. He added that increases in wages at Ford will add another $3,000,000 in labor costs during 1947.

The letter said the principal reason for the loss was "stop-and-go production." While average daily production increased steadily, only 12 days could be worked in September because of shortage of sheet metal obtained from both Canadian and United States sources . . . sheet steel will be in short supply for many months."

BROCKVILLE'S POPULATION

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 18 (CP). —The city's population has jumped to 11,618—an all-time high. The figure represents an increase of 551 more than last year.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Nov. 19—(CP)—Revised estimates of Canada's 1946 wheat crop have reduced the amount of wheat which it had been hoped the Dominion would be able to sell to foreign customers.

In September, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimated the 1946 harvest would total 440,000,000 bushels of wheat and observers saw in this a comfortable margin which would leave enough for export to foreign lands after Canada had taken care of her domestic requirements and commitments to Britain.

Now, £923; 34, the Bureau in its second estimate placed the crop at 418,000,000 bushels, a decline of 22,000,000 bushels. This drop will make a considerable cut into the quantity of grain which will be available for export.

Observers had estimated that the Dominion would have some 100,000,000 bushels available for export to countries other than Britain but the expectation now was that the figure might be closer to 75,000,000 bushels and perhaps even less.

Canada is committed to send Britain 600,000,000 bushels over a four-year period, shipping 160,000,000 bushels in each of the first two years and 140,000,000 in each of the second two years.

The price Britain will pay for that wheat is on a sliding scale. For the first two years the rate will be $1.55 a bushel, which up to now has been Canada's fixed export price, while the third year it will be not less than $1.25 and the fourth year not less than $1.

In determining the price for the last two years, Britain will take into consideration Canada's action in selling the wheat at below world prices in the first two years. The prevailing world price at present is over the $2-a-bushel mark.

To customers other than Britain, Canada plans to sell her wheat at the best price over the $1.55 rate at which the United Kingdom gets it under the four-year contract. It had been hoped that a substantial crop this year and next would provide a substantial margin for these foreign sales and help Canadian wheat growers to profit by the abnormal world price.

Rationing Chat: Government officials charged with handling Canada's rationing problems are believed to be looking towards next summer for a possible date for the end of meat rationing.

It was recalled that Prime Minister Mackenzie King, shortly after he announced the resumption of rationing last year, estimated that it would continue through the 1946-47 winter season before meat could return to normal distribution.

The latest word is that the tight overseas food situation is clearing up, although not as rapidly as had been hoped. There is an expectation now that it will have eased sufficiently by next summer to make meat rationing unnecessary.

The individual meat ration is approximately two pounds of bone in meat per person per week. The controls are aimed at limiting per capita consumption to 135 pounds a year.

Trade Talks: The International Trade Conference, scheduled to be held next spring to deal with the question of removing barriers to world trade, likely will be held in Geneva.

The conference will be preceded by British Empire trade talks, which probably will be held in London.

The question of removing barriers to world trade now is under discussion at the International Trade Organization meeting in London, but only the broad principles are being touched upon.

Nothing will be done about lowering tariffs or Empire preferences until after the meeting next spring.

It was learned that Canadian experts returning from the London meetings have informed the government that there appears to be a general willingness among nations to remove restrictions to world trade and to campaign against restrictive trade practices.

4th Thurlow

4th Thurlow.—Mrs. Frank Garrison has returned home to Montreal, after spending some time with Mrs. Fred Garrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Ritz and children attended anniversary services at White's Church on Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jeffrey, at Bayside.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ritz and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ritz were Sunday evening callers of Mr. and Mrs. George Denike and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Denike, 3rd Sidney.

MOTHER WAITS IN GRAVE ANXIETY

Vancouver, Nov. 19 — An anxious mother, Mrs. Harry Russell of North Vancouver, waited word Monday of her son as police searched for flaxen-haired, 18-year-old Donald Russell sought following the slaying of Robert F. Tepoorten, shot to death Thursday near his Deep Cove home. "Now that this has happened, if the choice could be made, I wonder if it would be better if Donald is not found alive," said Mrs. Russell. "He may be driven by fear to commit other crime." No motive is known for the shooting.

GREEK STUDENTS FED

The Athens University canteen operated with funds from International Student Service, serves daily meals to 1,700 students while 3,000 remain on the waiting list.

Mrs. A. McDonald, 163 Walton Street, Port Hope, says: "It certainly was a big day for me when I took to using all those husky EXTRA SUDS from Super Suds. I never dreamed I'd get dirt out with so little rubbing. EXTRA-SUDSY Super Suds sure proved to me that the more suds you have the less work you have to do to get things clean."

Thank you, Mrs. McDonald, for your swell letter. You see, Ladies, Super Suds is Concentrated. Super Suds actually gives you far more washing-power . . . livelier, richer suds, without hard rubbing. And Super Suds costs no more than ordinary washday soap.

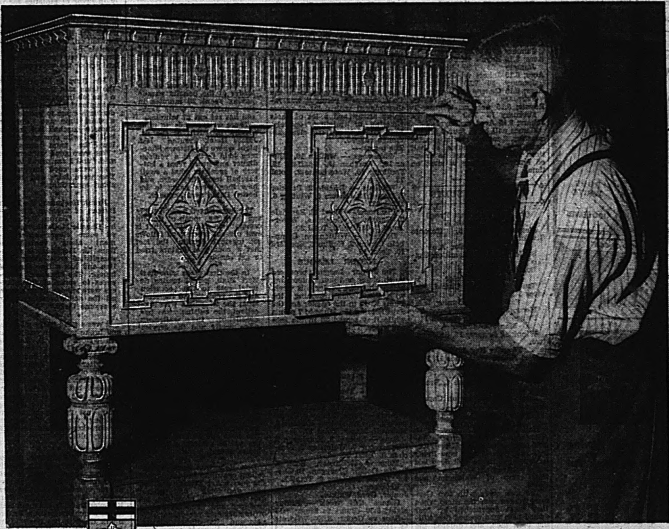
"Thanks to you, Grandpa Kruschen . . .

My Headaches Are Practically Gone"

From a letter written by a Mrs. Dunn we quote:—

"I would like everyone who suffers from headaches to try Kruschen. Before taking Kruschen, I had headaches almost every day. But since I have been taking it faithfully I have hardly had a headache, for which I am very thankful, as headaches can make one feel quite ill. For as long as I felt it was necessary, I have taken Kruschen each morning in a glass of warm water, before breakfast; and I feel so well." —Mrs. A. E. Dunn.

The reason Kruschen often gives relief from common or bilious headache, is because this saline treatment helps your system rid itself of underlying causes. Kruschen aids elimination and supplies the body with minerals which may be deficient in the diet. Take Kruschen faithfully for a month. Give this well-known saline treatment a chance to help relieve constipation and biliousness and see what it does to the headache that usually goes with these complaints. Kruschen is 25c. and 75c. at all drug stores.



THE PROVINCE OF PROMISE...

Southwestern ONTARIO accommodates nearly half of Canada's furniture manufacturing establishments, and the industry may well be said to centre there. As with other industries, an impressive share of the province's furniture-making facilities were turned from their normal task during the war, but the woodworking plant is one of the most readily convertible and its future one of the most assured . . . with the greatest demand in history, both for the new homes of Canada's prosperity and the immeasurable replacements required abroad. In Ontario, woodworking is moving steadily to the fine old lumber and ship-building towns such as Collingwood . . . inspirational localities where the cabinet-maker craftsman finds himself in the midst of Ontario's forest resources—as well as health and quiet.

FURNITURE CENTRE

In 1944, of the 472 Canadian factories engaged in the manufacture of wooden furniture of all kinds, 208 were located in Ontario. In the same year the gross value of the manufactured products was nearly $30,000,000. Nearly 8,000 people were engaged in the industry and more than $11,000,000 were paid in salaries and wages. Sawn lumber was the principal material used and, while much of the hardwoods used came from the United States, the soft woods were the product of Canadian sawmills.

Primo Will Have $50,000 to Take Home to Italy

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—Hulking Prime Carnera says he will make $50,000 as a wrestler before his artist's visa expires in March and he returns to his home in Italy.

"That may not be as much money as I made while boxing," said the 265-pound Carnera, in Chicago for his 73rd grunt and groan show since opening his new campaign in the United States and Canada last August.

"But I know this much," he added, "I have more money to take home to my wife and two children in Italy than I had when I boxed."

It is estimated his total earnings as a boxer before his last fight in this country in 1936 were approximately $3,000,000.

SUGGESTION NOT ACCEPTED

London, Nov. 18 (CP). — The House of Commons today heard and dismissed with laughter a suggestion that the $4,000,000,000 American Loan be used to support illegitimate children left in Great Britain by United States servicemen.

The number of children involved was not mentioned.

TWO GERMANS SLAIN

Haifa, Palestine, Nov. 18 — (Reuters)— Two Germans, Rudolf Mueller and Max Mitzel, former prisoners of war now living in Jerusalem, were shot dead last night between the German detention camp of Waldheim and Haira.

The men were with two German women near the camp when they were approached by four armed men who opened fire, killing both men, and ordered the women to return to Waldheim.

VARSITY STADIUM WILL BE SITE OF SEMI-FINAL

Argos Want Permission to Use Doty, Myers and Waldon on Saturday

Toronto, Nov. 19 — (CP) — With the venue of next Saturday's Eastern Canada football final decided, a telegraph vote was being conducted by the Canadian Rugby Union to decide another contentious issue.

C. R. U. executive members have been asked to rule whether three Toronto Argonaut backfielders who finished the grid season with University of Toronto will be eligible to play for the Argos in their game against Toronto Balmy Beaches next Saturday.

The first bone of contention was raised Sunday regarding site of the game. Despite dissenting mutterings from Balmy Beach, Varsity Stadium was confirmed last night as the game site.

Yesterday, the Argos asked a C.R.U. ruling on three of their players — Fred Doty, Billy Myers and Tommy Waldon. All played with the Big Four champions at the start of the season and moved to the university team when the college season opened.

Results of the vote are expected today.

Percy Robinson, secretary of the C.R.U. made no comment on the Argo request. Doty and Myers, both quarterbacks, were members of last year's Grey Cup winning team.

"Y" Basketball

SENIOR LEAGUE

Two games were played in the "Y" Senior House Basketball League with the Whizbangs taking the Wildcats 73-33, in the opener to go into the lead in the League with a 2 wins and no losses, and in the second game the Phantoms took the Dodgers by 30-18, to put the Dodgers in the cellar with 0 wins and 2 losses. The other two teams have broken even in two games.

The first game produced the best basketball, both from point of play and interest. Actually the game was much closer than the score indicates, the Whizbangs being much better around the basket, and the Wildcats missing the clincher at the end of their plays frequently. It was a case of better shooting and nicer passing plays. In the second game neither team had its best players on the floor, and as a result it was rather ragged with a lot of passes going astray and a lot of shots rimming or missing entirely. Both games were fairly clean, although rugged.

The teams:—

Whizbangs — Watkin 10, Miller 16, Vaughan 12, Spafford 15, Faulkner 18, Waterhouse 2. Total 73.

Wildcats — Ritchie 2, Bankier 7, Mason 12, Ostrom 6, Whiting 6. Total 33.

Phantoms — Wood 12, Ragsdale 2, Garrow 4, Goodman, Waterhouse 3, Miller 10. Total 30.

Dodgers — Williamson, Campbell, Rapino 2, Rollins 6, Spafford 10. Total 18.

JUNIOR LEAGUE

The Junior League produced much closer and more interesting games than the Senior this week, with the Goons trimming the Bums 30-17 in the opener and the Saps holding the Mugs to 7 points while they scored 20 in the second game. This makes the league all tied up with one win and one loss for each team. These young fellows play for keeps all the way, and take their game seriously, and are developing some fair players as a result.

The teams—

Goons — Faulkner 10, Muirhead 4, Lazenby 2, Jeffrey 3, Shaw, Galbraith 11. Total 30.

Bums — Rose, Dudley 9, Trumpour 2, Taylor, Button 4, Stairs 2, Maxwell, Mazer. Total 17.

Saps — Spiegel 6, Ketcheson 2, Scrymgeour 7, Walmsley 2, Strachan 3. Total 20.

Mugs — McBurney, Scott 3, Leslie, Dolan, Creeggan, Batchelor, Davis, Williams 2. Total 7.

Referees — Senior, Ed. Shortt; Junior, Gord Watkin.

Games this week — Friday night: 6:30—Bums vs Mugs; 7:15—Saps vs Goons; 8:00—Wildcats vs Dodgers; 9:00—Phantoms vs Whizbangs.

Toronto Maple Leafs are in first place in the National Hockey League with 17 points after 12 games or exactly one-fifth of the 1946-47 season has been completed. Montreal Canadiens are in the second spot with 15 points, two more than the 3rd-place Boston Bruins who have 13 points. All teams have not played the same number of games, however.

In the red-hot race for individual scoring honors Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens advanced two points closer to league-leading Billy Taylor of Detroit during the past week. Taylor is still in the top position with 18 points while Richard is second with 14 points. Last week Taylor had 16 and Richard had 12. Another Detroit Red Wing player, Roy Conacher, is the third highest scorer with 14 points.

Richard and Taylor lead the league in the highest number of goals scored and the most number of assists respectively. Richard has scored 10 goals to date and Taylor has racked up 12 assists.

Alex. Kaleta, Chicago Black Hawks' speedy forward collected five scoring points in the Hawks' 6-2 victory over the Rangers on November 16th. Kaleta scored three goals for the "hat trick" and had two assists in recording the highest number of points made by any one player in a game this season. Two other players performed the "hat trick" during the past week. Joe Carveth of Boston sniped three of his team's five goals as Bruins defeated Detroit 5-2 on November 13th and Toe Blake of Montreal Canadiens scored three of his club's four counters as the Canadiens downed Boston 4-1 on November 17th.

Turk Broda, Toronto Maple Leafs' goalkeeper turned in his first shutout of the season on November 16th when he barred the door to Montreal Canadiens as his mates went on to win 3-0. Broda is the leading goalkeeper at the present time having allowed 26 goals in 11 games.

Kenny Reardon of Montreal Canadiens has passed Detroit's Hal Jackson as the leader of the penalty parade having spent 29 minutes in the penalty box while Jackson has sat out 27 minutes.

There were sounds of mild revelry by night at the St. James Hotel, Trenton last night where the Batawa Shoemen held forth at a venison dinner and heard from a battery of speakers what a swell baseball team they were, and how they were going to be better Batas next summer.

The boys staged a swell party and there was much of the old camaraderie and gayety that is ever present when good fellows get together despite the fact that a couple of orators tried to get serious.

In the first place mine host Bert High, genial maitre de hotel rose to the occasion and the venison had the right tang; the trimmin's were excellent, the cuisine was par excellence; the waitresses were pretty and the service was fine.

In short it was an excellent evening with the speeches not too long; the stories had just enough color except one tossed by the inimitable Johnny Aquino whose face turned a slightly darker hue when he discovered a couple of the gals had indulged in a spot of evesdropping. But that didn't bother Johnny any. The next one he told was of the parlor variety, with the ladies absent.

Don Robertson made an excellent chairman and introduced the guests. Art Duncan shuttled back and forth and general greeter, vocalist, raconteur, introducer and general liaison officer between pre-dinner shyness and after-dinner hilarity. Mr. Karol Hurz of the Bata Shoe Company was there and gave the lads a generous slap on the back, verbally of course.

braith of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, Unit 201 Belleville, donors of hte Kelle-

Belleville, donors of the Kelle- which by the way graced the head table and later was presented to "Smoky" Smith by Hizzoner Mayor Frank Follwell, were there as was Jack Devine of CBJQ who corroborated what this column said a few days ago about the importance of fostering and sponsoring sports for the youth of the country. Devine also announced later that the radio station was donating a trophy for minor sport along some athletic channel to be announced.

Belleville's chief magistrate was the guest speaker and paid tribute to the Bata baseball squad and its officials. He also hung a few slaps on the back of press and radio representatives along with others. Satorially elegant in a blazing "Dagwood" bow tie, Hizzoner merged his wit with some serious thoughts. The Bata squad he said, was a Belleville team inasmuch as its prowess on the field of baseball battle had brought much publicity to this city.

He had heard, he said, that the Shoemen were sponsoring a hockey squad this winter, and he hoped to see them play on Belleville ice. Installation of an artificial ice plant in the Belleville Arena was now assured and work would start on December 1st with complete installation completed by March 1 according to contract.

Thanks to the kindness of S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, Hizzoner said, the City of Belleville had been able to acquire the Hume Arena for $40,000. Another $40,000 would be spent on the Fair Grounds the coming year for lights and equipment for a Memorial Recreational Park. The city had already spent $10,000 on new buildings for agricultural purposes.

The mayor said he was strongly in favor of athletics for the youth of the country. He felt confident that boys who indulge in clean wholesome sport never get into trouble. Sport, he went on, is one of the fundamentals by which people are taught clean competition in business or the vocations.

Mr. Hurz in his tribute to the team said they had done a fine job in not only winning championships but in introducing a game to people who a short time ago did not know a baseball bat from a ball but who now would follow the team anywhere. "You were good winners" he said, "and I am proud to say, you were good losers, too. You were fair and honest about everything."

Frank Hockaday, the Edgar Bergen of Trenton Air Station and "Baron McGuire," his Charlie McCarthy provided some clever entertainment along ventriloquist lines. Mr. Hockaday is an accomplished artist along this line and has a fine sense of humor. The "Baron's" references to some of the players were side-splitting and in all the act was enjoyed by everyone there."

It was a good party all round and broke up at an early hour. Ten o'clock that is. Reminiscences flew thick and fast around the festive board and the after-dinner camaraderie was one of the party's outstanding features. A few secrets were unfolded but outside of a few more or less scarlet visages no damage was done. We left the party just as the boys were deciding whether their new windbreakers should be royal or navy blue.

Dashing Vic Christie, one of the glamor boys of the wrestling ring, and one who is well acquainted with his pachydermic vegetables, will be seen against the villainous Karl Krippler Davis in the main bout at the Hume Arena come Friday night. Christie has been kicking up high jinks around the circuit for some time now and he is fit for a bout with the type of foeman like the "Krippler". The handsome Sharpe Brothers, Mike and Ben will also be sen in action with Olaf Olsen and Henry Piers.

Glace Bay, N.S., Nov. 19—(CP) —A runaway horse galloped madly down the street headed for certain mishap when a pint-sized youngster jumped out from the curb and with unusual dexterity succeeded in bringing the frenzied animal to a stop.

That was 25 years ago in Montreal. The 13-year-old boy was now-famed Jockey Nick Wall, and the courageous act touched off one of the brightest racing careers of all time.

For a stable owner named Ollie Tugle saw what happened.

"Are you a jockey?" he asked.

Nick said he wasn't.

"Would you like to be?"

Nick was all for the idea, permission was obtained from his father and he set out for South America to serve his track apprenticeship.

Three years later he returned to Canada a full-fledged jockey and rode for the Seagram Stables for several years before leaving for California.

Since then he has been continually on the move from one side of the Continent to the other; his fame enhanced by such startling track efforts as the day he coaxed Stagehand to a slim lead over Sea Biscuit in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap in 1938. And the time he rode to victory aboard Menow, just nosing out the immortal War Admiral.

All this was related by Nick's brother Walter, whose home is here in Glace Bay.

The great little jockey was born neither in Boston nor Glace Bay, but in Newfoundland at a tiny fishing village called Kelligrews, a short distance from St. Johns's on Conception Bay.

That was 38 years ago. Several years later, when their mother died, the family moved to Glace Bay. Here, Nick did not, as has been suggested, work in the coal mines although his father did and many of the old timers still remember Pat Wall.

But it was here that Nick first learned to love the nags. He used to ride the coal mine ponies around the Black Diamond track. But, to correct another fallacy, Nick took part in no races here; he just rode for the fun of it.

Today Nick lies in hospital at San Mateo, Calif., recovering from injuries suffered in a fall during a race several weeks ago.

The accident that set the tough little horseman on his back occurred when a Vancouver horse suddenly veered, causing Wall's mount to stumble and fall.

But the same fighting heart that made him one of the best in his dangerous business has not failed him in his battle against severe internal injuries.

ARNIE JARRELL, KINGSTON, TOPS HURLERS IN LOOP

Pitcher Has Best Earned Run Average and Scores 21 Victories

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Nov. 19 — (AP) — Southpaw Arnie Jarrell of the Kingston, (Ont.) Ponies topped all 1946 Border League baseball pitchers in earned run averages and victories, league secretary Richard C. Kopke announced yesterday.

Jarrell chalked up 21 victories against eight losses for the third place Ponies and averaged 2:30 earned runs a nine-inning game in the 120-game league season.

Manager James Scott of the Watertown (N.Y.) club led the pitchers in winning percentage by scoring 15 victories against four losses for a mark of .790. Only those on the mound for at least 10 complete games were counted. Scott pulled up second in earned run averages with 2.50.

Pete Karput, who handled outfield and infield spots for Kingston when not on the mound, was the third-ranking hurler in the earned run column, with 2.604.

The Class C League was comprised last year of Ogdensburg, Auburn, N.Y., Watertown, Kingston, Granby, Que., and Sherbrooke, Que., clubs, but a new lineup is under consideration. Applications for franchises include one from Ottawa.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

It is easy to look like a sap in a bridge game. The simplest of plays may be overlooked while concentrating on brilliant maneuvers. Even so among the most expert players.

In playing a hand, you may have the most sensible plan. By all the laws of averages, it is the safest to try. And it may turn out to be the one time when only a dangerous method would have worked.

You may be expecting certain routine leads from your opponents. Just when you have settled yourself to get them, you get a surprise. Instead of a standard lead, you get an odd one that helps you.

The Bridge World is a magazine for better players. It tells about the deal you see here:

The declarer in the south at three diamonds was Mrs. A. H. Sobel, a national champion. Despite her four losers, opponents let her take 12 tricks. It is told how.

West led a spade and east played the ten. Excuse by east was that he did not have a good return lead. So, he did not care whether he won the first trick. Good alibis are sometimes scarce.

South won the first trick with spade jack. Dummy won a trick in hearts. A club was returned from dummy and east ducked. So, south won this trick with the queen.

Dummy won another heart and led club king. East covered with the ace and south trumped. Dummy got in again with a heart and led jack of clubs. On this south sliffed the spade.

Then south trumped a dummy spade and led a trump. Opponents took the trump king, their only trick. They could have taken four; A K of spades, club ace, and trump king.

Funny how easy it is to see the mistakes of others. Nor is it bad for us. Usually it makes a lasting impression.

The memorial, built from the pennies of the school children, was dedicated Nov. 11.

TO HEAD FRENCH?

Edouard Herriot, 74, who has been in French politics since 1912, and for many years the leader of the radical Socialists, may become the next president of France, according to informed observers in Paris. Since the Communists emerged from the recent elections as the strongest party, Herriot appears as the most acceptable candidate to head up a coalition government.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking to school with Shorty Judge talking about different subjects such as why you cant start the day feeling glad you're up instead of sorry you're not still in bed, and Shorty said, Gosh shang the luck, I got a splinter in my hand batting stones with a darn stick. Heck, I might of knew I couldn't trust that stick. Now that darn splinter will be in my hand on my mind the rest of the day, he said.

Aw, cheer up, werse than that could of happened, I said. Suppose you had fell off a roof and didn't even have the sattisfaction of knowing how many floors you fell before you landed because you hit your head against a window ledge on your way down and knocked yourself unconscious before you hardly started. That would of been werse than a splinter, wouldn't it? I said, and Shorty said, Well, I guess so.

Sure it would, I said. Or suppose a dog had been chasing you through the woods with all its teeth showing, and you didn't want to take any chances on it being a mad dog, so you kept on running, and you ran right into a bull with its horns pointed at you, and you dodged just in time to step into a alligater's mouth and the alligater closed it before you had time to step out again. You cant deny that would be werse than a splinter, can you? I said and Shorty said, Well, maybe not, but just a same I wish you were the one that had the splinter and I was the one cheering you up.

Well good night you can have everything, you better be sattisfied with the splinter, I said.

Which just then we got to school, being bad news for us both.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 19 (CP)—The cry of "tallyho" with red-jacketed horsemen chasing a pack of hounds hot on the tail of a fox, is ringing across the fields these days. And a return to this invigorating country sport is over the bodies of 10,000 hounds—destroyed during the war because there wasn't enough food to go around.

A well-known-known follower of the hounds in pre-war days said society people haven't enough dogs to maintain the fashionable packs and it is "extremely difficult" to get either grooms or horses, even if they could afford both.

"The truth is," he confided, "we are seeing a return to the really great days of hunting in England, with friends riding over each other's land for the sheer enjoyment of the sport.

"That is the true hunting spirit of England. The fashionable packs of pre-war days were not in the least representative of fox-hunting, which for centuries was a feature of rural England."

But the story has a sad tinge to it.

Many bemoan the passing of the "picturesque side of hunting," when country folk followed hounds on foot, on cycle or on any old nag. Those days will never return, they say.

It's too bad the girls don't go to football games in this country. The Swedish football champions, the Norkopping club, have the cutest uniforms.

Shortly after arrival in England on an exhibition tour, they worked out at The Valley, Charlton Athletic's football ground, clad in warm, sky-blue woollen track suits.

Athletic's players, thinking of their football shorts and the not-too-warm weather, voiced admiration for the uniforms. As a gesture, the Swedes will present them to Charlton players, coupon-free, at the end of their visit.

Ronald Geddes, 25-year-old assistant professional at Moor Allerton Gold Club in Leeds have advanced the date of his wedding—to get a job.

Geddes received an offer as professional to the nearby Fulneck club if he married. The club wanted a married man so that his wife could take care of the clubhouse, and Geddes talked his financee into a quick wedding.

Some demon statistician has come up with figures showing that:-

Bobby Locke, the South African golfer, took 920 strokes for his 40 rounds of British tournament golf this year, placing him at the top of the averages with 73 a round. Dai Rees and Norman Vas Nida, Austalians, tied for second with average rounds of 73.65 strokes.

Britain's Henry Cotton took 2,079 shots for his 28 rounds, giving him fourth spot with an average of 74.25, and Red Whitcombe followed—30 rounds, average 74.42.

SCURVY'S CURE

A British naval man discovered that orange and lemon juice were the most effective cures for scurvy, a dietary deficiency disease that plagued sailors.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Killers"

Mark Hellinger can now bring to the screen the stories and characters he wants. As an independent producer, he selects his own pictures and develops them in accordance with his own views on what makes good entertainment.

Ernest Hemingway's "The Killers," now at the McCarthy Theatre, is Hellinger's first production for Universal release. A spectacular story of the underworld, its solid entertainment indicates the producer's ideas are sound. They should be. They're based on a very wide experience as a Broadway columnist, a playwright, a war correspondent and fiction writer.

In Advertising Business

Hellinger has worked with and writte about people from all stations in life. He was born in New York City March 21, 1903 where, when he finished Townsend Harris Hall high school, he went to work in the advertising business at 18, and soon was employed by Zit's Weekly, a theatrical publication.

By what Hellinger terms a "series of fortunate breaks," he was hired in 1923 by the New York Daily News to report crimes, accidents, divorces and other newspaper grist in the Broadway area.

Hellinger's stories were written with so much color and human interest, Phil Payne, the editor, made him a columnist with a byline.

"The Killers," with Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner and Edmond O'Brien heading a long featured cast, was directed for Hellinger by Robert Siodmak.

FAIR RECORDS BROKEN

Toronto, Nov. 18 — (CP)—Attendance records were broken at the Royal Winter Fair Saturday afternoon when an estimated 75,000 persons passed through the gates. At that point the crowd was so large that officials closed the doors, leaving another 5,000 outside. Long lineups formed at the fair's diningroom and at mealtimes customers were crowded 3 deep at lunch counters.

CHAPTER 17.

Sally didn't expect to sleep much when she went to bed that night. She was too excited. Her heart didn't seem to quiet down and her brain seethed with plans. What would the girls think—Margaret and Dora and the rest? What would Norma Holden have to say? And last of all, what would Aunt Clem say? Would she approve? She wished she could see her alone—to break it to her gently. But after all, perhaps it was better that Jim was to be along. Aunt Clem wouldn't be so likely to ask embarrassing questions—make confusing remarks or mysterious hints as she so often did when they were alone.

It was after midnight when at last she fell into a troubled sleep to waken when her alarm clock whirred and she heard thunder crashing and saw lightning splitting the western sky in long uneven gashes. She slipped out of bed and slammed the windows shut and heard the ambulance rush away from the courtyard below. She turned a a sharp knock on her door and reached for a robe as she called "Come." Dora Bronson entered. She was fully dressed even to her cap and looked fresh and startlingly clean.

"You're early," Sally said superfluously. "Insomnia?"

Dora shook her head. "Love!" she answered succinctly.

Wh-what?" Sally cried and blushed guiltily. "I didn't think—"

• • • •

"You and me both, darling," Dora said, her eyes dreamy, her face like a rose. "I'm the luckiest girl in the world—that is, if the Duchess doesn't find out about it. If she does I'm a cooked goose, I suppose, but I don't' care. I can quit Linton and enlist."

Sally stared at the girl in amazement. "I—I don't know what you're talking about, Dora. Do you mean—"

Dora nodded vigorously. "I don't wonder you're surprised, Sally," she said frankly. "I nearly fainted—with joy, myself, when he proposed to me."

"Who—who proposed to you for Pete's sake?" Sally cried.

"Why—why Bill, of course, Bill Tyler. Who else?"

"B-Bill Tyler?" Sally gasped. "I—I didn't even know you liked each other. When did all this happen, Lora Broson?" she demanded.

"The trouble with you, Sally Maynard," Dora said her voice aggrieved, "is that you haven't been able to see anyone except Jim Hallock for the past few weeks so you couldn't know about Bill and that—well—we've found each other. That's all."

"But—but Doctor Hallock and I—"

"Oh, don't bother to pull that broken life, disappointed romance on me again, Sally Maynard," Dora went on, still peeved at the other's obvious surprise at her news. "Sometimes I think you made the whole thing up to act as a red herring a cover-up for your affair with Hallock."

Sally stared at her in open-eyed wonder. "Oh—oh!" she whispered and Dora with a little rush of contribution threw her arms about her.

"I didn't mean it, darling," she cried. "Please, please forgive me! I'm a nasty little beast; but" —she drew back from her embrace to say earnestly — "you weren't very flattering just now, you know. What's so surprising about Bill falling for me?"

"It isn't at all surprising," Sally assured her. "What surprised me is myself — my dumbness that I didn't see it coming. Does Margaret know?"

"Darn it!" the other said dejectedly. "She was worse than you were. And I don't see why."

Sally laughed and hugged her close. "I'm so happy for you, darling. Bill's a fine lad; but how are you going to keep Sunderlin from knowing?"

"She hasn't found out about you and Jicm Hallock, has she?" Dora asked.

"Why do you say that?" Sally demanded, her face suffused.

"Why, every member of the staff has been watching you two," she said matter-of-factly. "Oh, I know you have acted aloof and above reproach like—like Caesar's wife was supposed to; but you haven't fooled most of us and neither has he. Are you going to be married before he leaves, Sally? Why don't you break down and confess? It isn't anything to be ashamed of."

"Of course not," Sally said unexpectedly. "You have all been so much wiser than I, Dora. I didn't know until last evening that I loved him."

"Wh-what? You didn't? Gosh, Sally, you are dumb. Why, even I knew that."

When Sally returned to her room she found Margaret Adams seated on her bed laughing at Dora's rhapsodies. Sally dressed in haste. She didn't want to discuss her engagement just now and yet she knew Margaret would be hurt if she didn't tell her. However, she was saved the trouble by Dora who blurted out the whole thing.

"And don't act as surprised at that bit of news as you did when I shot my bolt," she advised. Margaret laughed.

"It really isn't surprising at all," she said. "I'm awfully glad, Salloy. Jim Hallock is a fine man and I'm sure you're going to be happy. But how are you going to square yourself with Sunderlin? That's what puzzles me."

"Listen," Sally said seriously. "It's Aune Clem's prerogative to announce this engagement, girls. Personally, I should prefer keeping it entirely secret. It is really nobody's business you know, and after all, rules are rules, and Jim is still a member of the staff, though not for long now. He may be released any day now."

"Just the same I feel in my bones that the Duchess is going to blow a gasket, whatever that is, when she hears about it," Dora announced. "She may be willing to make an exception in your case, Sally, but wait until she hears of my infringement of her sacred rules!"

The girls laughed at her. "You are not being especially frightened at the prospect, we can see that very clearly," they told her.

"And why should I be?" Dora asked. "If Linton can get along without me I can certainly exist without Linton. Come on, you two, I'm hungry. Being in love hasn't dulled my appetite any."

They were entering the dining room when Dora whispered: "What would you do if Blair Canfield should suddenly appear, Sally?"

Sally bit her lip. "Nothing," she said coolly. "Nothing at all. Dear or alive, Blair Canfield is definitely and completely out of the picture. I never want to hear his name again."

"Good!" 'Dora told her. "Somehow, I never did like that man, Sally!"

• • • •

"I'm glad," Dr. Willoughby told Sally. "Jim's a fine man and an exceptional surgeon. He will go far—with you beside him, Sally."

Sally stared at him in surprise. "How—how did you know?" she asked. "We haven't told anyone except Aunt Clem."

He laughed teasingly. "We have all been watching your romance grow and blossom, my dear," he told her.

"But—but," Sally stammered, a little annoyed, "it only happened ten days ago, Doctor. I—I—"

"You were too close to it, Sally," he said. "We on the outside had a better view. Now you're angry. Don't be, my dear. We at Linton love you very much, you know, and want only your happiness."

And suddenly Sally was crying, her head on the tall resident's white-clad shoulder. He patted her back comfortingly murmuring: "There, there, my dear," as he would to a child, and it wasn't until Norma Holden, hurrying along the deserted corridor, stopped with an exclamation of amazement at the sight of Sally Maynard in the arms of the resident that Sally lifted her head and accepted the big handkerchief he put into her hand.

"Is—is something the matter?" Norma asked, her face avid with curiosity. "Can I do anything?"

"Th-thanks," Sally gulped. I'm all right now."

"Maynard's just about worn out, Holden," Doctor Willoughby told the staring nurse. "If you're not busy right now you might take her over to her room and see that she lies down for a while. You might fix her a bromide—or, wait a minute, I'll give her something to quiet her. An hour's nap will put her back in shape all right." He went into one of the rooms down the hall and returned with a glass of water and a small tablet. "Take this," he told her, "and trot along to your room."

"I'm all right," Sally insisted, as Norma took her arm. "I am quite capable of going alone." Norma's arm dropped and she stepped back. "But," Sally added quickly, sensing the other's hurt, "if you aren't busy or needed for a minute or two I should be glad to have you come with me." She spoke diffidently and saw Doctor Willoughby's nod of approval. Had he sensed the antagonism between her and Holden? She drew Norma's hand through her arm and they walked slowly down the stairs and out through the side door where Sally paused for a moment to breathe deeply before going on to the Annex.

"They work us like horses in this plase," Norma said tentatively as the two mounted the stairs to Sally's room. "But I didn't think you had been having it so hard as some of the rest of us. Shows how mistaken a person can be."

"I imagine a vacation wouldn't hurt any of us," Sally said, wondering if Norma, too, was aware of what Doctor Willoughby had said was so perfectly obvious to the entire staff.

The two girls entered Sally's room and Norma turned down the covers of her bed and lowered the shades, while Sally sat before her dressing table and thought what a simpleton she had been to make such a spectacle of herself.

"There," Norma said patting the pillow. "If you slip out of your uniform you'll rest better. It's terribly warm so I'll leave both windows up."

"You're being very kind, Norma," Sally murmured. "Why—why couldn't it have always been like this? Why have you hated me—"

And Norma slipped to the floor beside Sally's chair and buried her head in her lap. "I've never hated you," she sobbed. "I was just jealous. You had everything I—I wanted and—and—I—I had nothing."

"Everything, Norma?" Sally asked. "What do you mean?"

"You're beautiful—you're good and -and popular. Sunderlin favors you. Willoughby's crazy about you and so's the Chief. I—I'm a good nurse, Sally, and yet no one ever tells me so. I don't get the private cases—the specials like you do. No one cares if I'm hurt or not. I—I'm so—so miserable!"

And then Sally laughed gently and her arms tightened around the weeping girl.

"Don't be a goose, Norma Holden," she chided. "We all know you're a good nurse. I heard someone say that just the other day. You have let your imagination run away with you. If I'm popular—and I'm not sure that I am—it's' because I like people —like helping them— being glad with them— sharing their interests and worries. Don't be jealous of me, darling," she urged.

"You—you're so sweet!" Norma said, wiping her streaming eyes.

Aunt Clem had approved of Jim Hallock and she gave her beloved niece her blessing and if her gaze was questioning as from time to time it met Sally's she had nothing to say about the mythical Blair Canfield. Doctor Hallock spoke of her tact on their way back to Linton.

"I like your aunt, darling," he told her. "You know that old affair isn't exactly a pleasant subject to me and I appreciate her thoughtfulness." And Sally appreciated it too.

Richard Gregory was due in Lintonville soon after the Fourth and Sally wondered if his visit had anything to do with Blair Canfield's proposed advent. As the time approached she grew increasingly nervous. Suppose news of Blair Canfield's' coming should appear in the Lintonville Chronicle. What could she say? There was always the truth, of course. She could tell those interested that he was not the Blair Canfield she had known. But she doubted if she could carry off the explanation calmly and convincingly. Blair Canfield was by no means a common name. How had it come so glibly to her tongue? She didn't know.

Richard Gregory came to the Annex to see her on the afternoon of his arrival in Lintonville. He looked at her anxiously as they shook hands in the empty reception room of the nurses' home.

"You're thin, Sally, he said, "and pale. Have you been worrying over Canfield's coming here?"

"What do you think?" Sally asked.

He smiled into her troubled eyes. "No sense in that," he said. "I've found out that he's been ordered back to the Pacific. Winning the war seems to be more important just now than acquiring medals, and I, for one, am glad. Now you look more like yourself, my dear," as Sally uttered a sigh of relief. "Color good, eyes bright and even a smile for me. Carolyn wrote me that you and that fine Doctor Jim Hallock had apparently come to your senses. Allow me to wish you every happiness, Sally. You deserve it."

"Oh, I don't, Dick," Sally whispered, her voice choked.

"Well, anyway, it's yours, my dear, and take my advice and guard it with your life. It's precious. 'Bye for now."

And Sally's heart sang as she went back to her duties in Women's Surgical, which, as usual, was filled to capacity.

"Has someone left you a fortune, Miss Maynard?" asked middle-aged Mrs. Carson, a Nurse's Aide, just now acting as floor nurse. "It must be a big one from the stars in your eyes."

"No fortune, Mrs. Carson," Sally caroled. "Just grand news — wonderful news and I'm terribly happy about it. Anything happen while I was gone?"

"Hardly," the other said dryly. "You have been gone just 20 minutes. What could happen in this ward in that length of time? No, everything has been quiet."

"Good!" Sally replied and turned as the elevator whirred to a stop. Doctor Hallock stepped out and came toward her. And while neither one stopped, the look in both faces as their glances met and clung brought a glow to the heart of the watcher. What it was to be young and beloved!

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 19 (CP)—Stocks continued on the down grade in the early session, trailing the New York list. Industrial stocks led the decline with an index drop of 2.85 while the mining groups weakened .38 and .83 for the golds and base metals. Western oils lost .15. Volume was comparatively light at 703,000 shares.

There were spotty recoveries in the early afternoon. Fanny Farmer firmed to 48 7-8 for a gain of 7-8 and other foods showed more gains than losses. The paper, steel and utility issues moved to the down side.

Losses were limited to about 10 to 15 cents in the gold group. Wright-Hargreaves, Teck Hughes, Rush Lake, Detta, Donalda and Akaitcho were among the weak issues.

Noranda, Sherritt, Steep Rock, Mining Corporation and Normetal were all softer base metals. Western oils posted only minor changes.

"LABOR REBELS"

labor and socialism are as dust in the balance compared with his," lobby estimates of Labor members failing to vote in the division ranged from 100 to 150. There are 640 members of the House.

Replying to those who asked repudiation of the idea of an Anglo-American alliance similar to that suggested by Winston Churchill in his Fulton, Mo., speech last February, Mr. Attlee said:

"This government does not believe in the formation of groups or opposing groups of the east, west or centre. We stand for the United Nations."

(Mr. Churchill, opposition leader, was not in the House yesterday.)

No Ganging Up

There are no "ganging up" on Russia, as some Labor members charged, and it was recognized that the United Kingdom was unable to measure up in armament to Russia or the United States.

The House also rejected 320 to 53 an amendment regretting the continuance of conscription in Britain.

V. F. Yates, Labor member for Ladywood, said conscription can not save Britain from atomic bombs and should be abolished by the government as an "affirmation of slavery to the state."

Present Canadian Butter Ration To Be Continued to End of Year

Ottawa, November 19—(CP)—The Government has decided that the present individual butter ration of approximately six ounces a person weekly can be maintained until the end of the year, The Canadian Press learned authoritatively today.

The supply position beyond that date, however, still is too obscure to determine whether or not a ration cut will be necessary and the butter stock and production picture will be reviewed again as the year-end approaches.

Authoritative sources reported that the supply position was running close to the margin where a reduction would be essential but it was expected the country could reach the New Year without going to the extremes of last winter, when the ration was slashed to four ounces.

One reason for the improved situation this year is the fact the individual ration—at six ounces—is two ounces less than it was this time a year ago. The eight-ounce ration of last year proved a heavy drain on butter supplies and forced successive reductions which brought the allotment down to its low of four ounces a person.

It became known today that the butter ration was one of the main problems before the Cabinet in a lengthy sitting last Thursday, when many speculated that the discussions were pointed at such matters as Arctic defence, the atomic bomb and biological warfare.

While the Cabinet did touch on defence problems it also was said to have devoted much discussion to the possibility of borrowing a couple of million pounds of butter in an effort to avert a possible lowered ration.

The only place where Canada could borrow enough butter to meet her needs would be New Zealand and it was brought out during the Cabinet discussion that if Canada did take New Zealand butter she could do it only at the expense of Britain, which buys all that Dominion's surplus.

What the Cabinet finally decided was not known but it is believed the borrowing suggestion was dropped for the time being.

Latest official figures indicate that while Canada's butter stock position is slightly better than it was a year ago her production is slightly worse than it was then.

At November 1, for example, stocks totalled 66,232,690 pounds, an increase of 1,083,547 over the total of November 1, 1945, and a seasonal decline of 4,026,690 from the stocks of October 1 this year.

On the other side of the picture, butter production during October dropped to 21,807,000 pounds from the 23,926,000 pounds produced in October, 1945, with all provinces sharing the decrease. Production for the first 10 months of this year totalled 245,994,000 pounds against 268,752,000 in the corresponding period of 1945, a decline of 8.5 per cent.

In reporting those figures, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics commented that the six-ounce ration was continuing to hold the domestic disappearance — which means the amounts Canadians spread on their daily bread—below that of last year.

Rickey Anxious To Name Manager Of the Dodgers

New York, Nov. 19—(AP)—If Leo Durocher is not ready to renew his managerial contract with Brooklyn Dodgers by next Monday, Branch Rickey, club president, says he is going to appoint someone else.

Durocher, who told newspapermen at the conclusion of the National League pennant playoff with St. Louis last month that he would "stay in Brooklyn until the day I die," now is on the West Coast. He last saw Rickey Oct. 31, in Columbus, O.

"I want him back here for a talk before I meet with newspapermen next week," Rickey said yesterday. "There's a lot to talk about and a lot of things to be explained. This thing has got to be settled. I don't want to be put in the embarrassing position of answering any questions until it is.

"But I'll say one thing, however," he added. "I'm getting fed up. Somebody's going to be named manager of the Dodgers Monday. It may be Durocher and it might be someone else."

Ottawa, Nov. 19 —(CP)— Canadian horse racing fans dug deep this year and wagered $48,667,744 to put the first post-war betting season only a few strides behind the 1925 total of $49,867,765, top figure during the free-spending "roaring twenties."

The Agricultural Department said today the $48,667,744 pari-mutuel betting was during the 305 days of racing at the 33 meetings of 27 racing associations. In 1925, 33 racing associations held 344 days of racing.

The Dominion's composite bet in 1946 increased $6,474,486 over last year's. More prize money was paid/this year, too — $1,815,090, compared to $1,588,345 in 1945. Twenty-six associations held 35 meets totalling 307 days in 1945.

Ontario fans brought more of the pasteboard tickets than the racing devotees of all other provinces — and were rewarded with the biggest single pile of prize money. In 116 days of racing, Ontario tracks paid $912,300 in purses and the chalk players bet $30,714,144.

Largest betting at any meet was the $1,633,838 wagered at the Ontario Jockey Club's spring meeting at Woodbine Park, Toronto — scene also of the King's Plate, won by Kingarvie, owned by R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa.

Statistics by provinces, with 1945 figures in brackets:

Quebec — days, 42 (70) wagered, $1,712,574 ($2,179, 529); prize money, $188,000 ($243,600).

Ontario — Days, 116 (98), wagered, $30,714,144 ($25,907,764); prize money, $912,300 $747,000).

Manitoba — Days, 28 (28); wagered, $4,505,347 ($3,862,183); prize money, $168,900 ($161,600).

Saskatchewan — Days, 15 (16); wagered, $816,978 ($709,625); prize money, $41,300 ($37,525).

Alberta — Days, 41 (39); wagered, $3,223,909 ($32,667,823); prize money, $149,690 ($136,545).

British Columbia — Days 53 (56); wagered, $7,693,792 ($6,859,792); prize money, $354,900 ($3,262,075).

FREDDIE MILLS ADVISED TO STAY IN CLASS

British Light Heavyweight Not Good Enough for the Top Heavies

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 19 — (CP) — Any British sports fan will doff his hat to Freddie Mills. But the tribute will be to the mournful tune of the Funeral March if the beetle - browed British light-heavyweight champion continues to stray in the top-weight class.

Freddie, a courageous battler and the answer to any fight promoter's prayer, is the "pin-up" boy to those folks who like blood-and-thunder boxers. However, legalized mayhem, at £1 ($4) to 20 guineas ($84) a throw, is too much for anybody — especially when Freddie's blood is spilled.

After three drag-'em-out fights within six months, all against men with weight, height and reach advantages, even Freddie's staunchest admirers have come to the reluctant conclusion he isn't good enough for the heavyweights.

Mills, who did his wartime fighting in the R.A.F., bounced back into civvy street this year, adjusted his sights on the country's light-heavyweight crop. There were no British prospects.

Promoter Jack Solomons came to the rescue, "importing" Gus Lesnevich from the United States and Gus scored a 10th round technical knockout in one of the most battering and bruising fights seen in this country.

Despite the setback, Freddie was thought "ripe" for British heavyweight champion Bruce Woodcock. Ten pounds lighter than the rival, Mills battered, and was battered, through 10 vicious rounds before losing the decision.

Then came heavyweight Joe Baksi, another American import. He had a 28-pound advantage, in addition to three inches in height and reach. Each time he sank his ham-like fists into Freddie's face and midriff, the boys in the gallery winced. It was all over in six rounds and Mills was a gory spectacle.

51 Fur Coats In Weekend Theft

Toronto, Nov. 18 (CP).—Burglars stole 51 fur coats valued at between $14,000 and $18,000 from the Skolnix ur Shop on downtown Spadina avenue during the weekend. They entered the store by breaking into a club above it and cutting through the ceiling.

Police said one of the burglars must have used a rope ladder to bring the coats to an accomplice above. They believe a delivery truck was used to take the furs away.

TAYLOR LEADS SCORING RACE FOR FOURTH WEEK

Maurice Richard is Close Second and Roy Conacher Third

Montreal, Nov. 19 (CP) — National Hockey League statistics released today showed Billy Taylor, fleet forward of Detroit Red Wings, the league's leading point-maker for the fourth straight week.

Taylor added a goal and an assist this week to run his total to 18 points, made up of six goals and 12 assists. Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens is in the second slot with 16 points accumulated from 10 goals and six assists. Another Detroit player, Roy Conacher, is in third place with five tallies and nine assists for 14 points.

Richard leads the goal-getters with 10 goals while Taylor heads the assist department with 11.

Turk Broda of Toronto Maple Leafs is the league's least-scored-on netkeeper with 26 goals fired past him in 11 games. Boston's Frankie Brimsek has turned in two shutouts while Bill Durnan of Canadiens and Broda have one each.

Kenny Reardon, Canadiens' aggressive defenceman, leads the penalty parade with 29 minutes spent in the cooler while Hal Jackson of Detroit is right behind him with 27 minutes in the box.

Toronto Maple Leafs are atop the league standing with 17 points made up of seven wins, three ties and one loss. Canadiens are in the second spot with 15 points, two more than the third place Boston Bruins.

HAMILTON TIGERS BEAT STAFFORDS BY 5-0 COUNT

St. Michael's Down Szabos 11-1 While Barrie Takes Oshawa 4-2

(By The Canadian Press)

The leaders in both the junior and senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association consolidated their grips on first place last night as Toronto St. Michael's Majors and Barrie Flyers scored junior victories and Hamilton Tigers were senior winners.

The Tigers hung up a goose-egg on Toronto Staffords at Toronto to the tune of 5-0 and prevented the Torontonians from climbing into a first place tie in the senior series. The fifth straight win in five starts for Tigers, it was Staffords' third loss — all of them to Hamilton teams — two to Tigers and one to Patricias.

Swat Mason was the big scoring figure with two goals and an assist. The other tallies came from Ab Conick, Clarry Shillington and Bob Laurent.

St. Mike's kept ahead of the second-place Flyers by trouncing Hamilton Szabos 11-1, Bain robbing Howie Harvey of a shutout at 8:33 of the third period.

Les Costello with a hat trick and Rudy Migay, Bobby Paul and Fleming Mackell with a pair of tallies each, headed the scoring parade. Red Kelly and Ed Harrison collected the balance of the Majors' scoring.

At Barrie the Flyers showed power in topping the Oshawa Generals — junior greats of recent years. The hometowners rang in four goals before Generals were able to retaliate and kept the visitors to two tallies to strengthen their grasp on second place in the junior loop.

Rusty Alkins, Meger, St. Pierre and LaFrance did the honors for Barrie. Don Bauer and Caresino were Oshawa's goal-getters.

In an exhibition intermediate A game at Brantford, the hometown Redmen trounced St. Moose 13-6.

One senior game is scheduled for tonight. Hamilton Pats meet Owen Sound Mohawks at Owen Sound.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 19 — (CP) — Jim Hendry, publicity man for the American Hockey League, comes up with an interesting suggestion . . . Jim, an advocate of two major hockey leagues, says it would be a good idea to make the proposed second major league club in New York an A.H.L. entry . . . He explains it this way: "The A.H.L. will be a major league within a few years and it would be a great idea, both from the fan's point of view and from the competitive standpoint, to have hockey follow baseball's example of two major loops with several cities having entries in both. Both Chicago and New York could support rival league teams. And the winners of league championships could play off in a sort of world's series for the Stanley Cup." . . . Perhaps such a development might help silence criticism of the play-off system in the N.H.L. . . .

Notes from a Busy Weekend

Joe Cooper, veteran New York Ranger defenceman, plans to retire next fall and open a swank bowling alley in Winnipeg's north end . . . Joe, a Winnipeg boy, figures on building the alley himself at the corner of Main Street and Redwood Avenue . . . A fair-sized delegation of Toronto sports experts came to New York for Sunday's N.H.L. game between Maple Leafs and Rangers . . . In the party were: sports editor Tommy Munns and Jim Vipond of the Globe and Mail, veteran George Loughlin of the Telegram, Gordon Walker, of the Star, Joe Crysdale, CKEY sports announcer, and Foster Hewitt, No. 1 Canadian hockey announcer . . . Leaf forward Howie Meeker and Ranger defenceman Jean Paul Lamirande both suffered groin injuries in Sunday's rough game . . .

Funny Coincidence

Damon Runyon and Eddie Walker, the fight manager, were discussing Joe Louis. "Joe never smiled when he first came around," said Runyon. "Now he often smiles." Walker explained: "When he first came around he was broke. Now he smiles—because now he has money."

Leonard Lyons gossip column, page 28, N. Y. Post, Nov. 18

"Billy Fox is a real frozen face," a guy said. "He didn't crack a smile when they introduced him at the Garden the other night." . . . "Louis didn't smile either when he first came around," a fight manager said. . . . "Louis didn't have money then," said Eddie Walker.

His Majesty's Stable Seventh Biggest Winner

(By The Canadian Press)

The stable of King George finished seventh among the money winners in Britain's 1946 turf season which closed Saturday. His Majesty's earnings totalling £16,539 ($66,156). With 12 winners, Marcel Boussac of France was the second leading owner with £21,377, only £3,077 behind the Aga Khan, perennial titleholder, whose horses accounted for 34 victories, mostly in small races.

Horses trained in France accounted for 22 races for a value of £39,425, the crowning success of the invaders being the victory of Souverain over Airborne, Britain's three-year-old champion.

After being floored twice, Jack (Spider) Armstrong, 34-year-old Toronto fighter, registered a ninth-round knockout over Paul Zenit of Mexico City in the scheduled 10-round main bout last night at Boston.

John Holota of Cleveland Barons and Norman Burns of New Haven Eagles were tied for scoring leadership with 24 points apiece in the American Hockey League statistics released last night. The leading netminder is Harvey Bennett of Hershey, with an average of 2.13 goals per game against him.

Yesterday's opening sales at Keeneland auction, Lexington, Ky., saw 197 thoroughbreds change hands for $486,760, the highest price being $13,000 for a six-year-old chestnut mare by Ace-Hash Hurry. Prices were far below those of last summer's auctions.

Pittsburg Ironmen won their second game in the Basketball Association of America last night when they trounced the visiting Toronto Huskies 54-48 before a crowd of about 1,200. At New York the Knickerbockers took Detroit Falcons into camp 61-56 before 10,137 fans.

The British Ryder cup team has been invited to compete for the International trophy in the United States next summer, it was announced yesterday by President Ed Dudley of the Pro Golfers Association of America at its 30th annual meeting in Chicago.

Warren C. Giles was named president of the Cincinnati baseball club yesterday after serving as vice-president and general manager of the National League team for 10 years.

Indianapolis Indians of the American Association obtained a new pilot yesterday in the appointment of James R. Brown, former infielder of the St. Louis Cardinals. He is the team's eighth manager in 10 years.

President Bill Star of the San Diego Pacific Coast League team yesterday announced that James (Rip) Collins, formerly of Albany, N.Y., would succeed John (Pepper) Martin as manager.

Among the top candidates to succeed H. Roy Hamey as president of the American Association are two baseball writers, Bob Hooey of Columbus, O., and Halsey Hall of Minneapolis. Hamey recently became general manager of Pittsburgh Pirates.

400 TAKEN FROM VAULT

Windsor, Nov. 18 (CP).—Safe crackers escaped with $400 in cash when they forced open the door of the office vault at the W. D. Lowe Vocational School during last night. Police said it was the job of "professionals".

The thugs apparently worked for hours on the vault before knocking off the dial, tumbling the combination and forcing open the heavy steel door. The money, in small bills and change, was taken from a cash box which also was forced.

"LIFE'S BIGGER MOMENTS"

"It's your own home!"

U.S. Asks Complete Reports of All Troops

Calls on United Nations to 'Lay All Cards on Table'

Sen. Connally Asks Time To Study Molotov Proposal

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 20—(AP)—The United States today called on all members of the United Nations to lay "all cards" on the table and make complete reports on the numbers of their troops both at home and abroad.

Without formally accepting a double-barrelled proposal of Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia on the troop-reports question, Senator Tom Commally (Dem.-Tex.) declared that the United States agreed that complete information on troop dispositions should be made public.

Senator Connally and Mr. Molotov spoke before the 54-member political committee of the United Nations Assembly, called into session to debate a Soviet proposal asking information on Allied troops and bases in non-enemy territory.

U.S. Ready to Give Figures

"If it is the view of the committee that these reports have value, the United States is prepared to furnish the information," Senator Connally said. "We think all cards should be laid on the table. We think that the Soviet Union should go beyond this resolution and have a report on all troops throughout the world — whether in Russia proper, in border states or anywhere."

Senator Connally said, however, that the United States delegation would need time to study a new proposal which Mr. Molotov offered to substitute for Russia's original resolution and which would broaden it to include troops in enemy states as well as non-enemy countries.

Mr. Mototov also declared that Russia was ready to give full data on her troops at home, but suggested that this be linked with discussions of Russia's four-point arms limitation plan and not considered along with the quetsion of troop dispositions abroad.

Opening his reply to Mr. Molotov's sharp criticism of the United States and Great Britain for maintaining troops on the soil of friendly countries in peace-time, Senator Connally declared:

"The United States delegation wants to make it clear at the outset that the United States categorically rejects as unfounded the contention that the presence of our troops abroad threatening international peace and security or justifies any feeling of uneasiness among the people of the world".

Molotov's Resolution

Mr. Molotov's new resolution proposed that the U.N. members give the following information:

1. Where and in what numbers troops are located on non-enemy territory.
2. At what points in enemy states and in what numbers Allied troops are located.
3. At what points in these territories air and naval bases of Allied States are located and the size of garrisons in such bases.
4. The informatoin should apply to the situation as of Nov. 1, 1946.

Then extemporaneously he broadened the question to include data on troops at home. He said the Soviet government was ready to accept Mr. Austin's proposal in this respect and to conclude agreements to this effect.

There were no veto discussions yesterday because Mr. Molotov had asked for postponement to enable him to attend the plenary sessions of the General Assembly. However, Mr. Molotov did not appear there and it was believed he was awaiting instructions from Moscow on the veto issue.

Three New Members Received

Yesterday the plenary sessions of the Assembly held the spotlight when the 54 delegations received the representatives of 3 new members — Afghanistan, Iceland and Sweden.

However, the election of six members to the economic and social council to replace six retiring members was put over to a late date.

The powerful steering committee of the Assembly met yesterday and set Dec. 5 as the target for completing all committee work, and Dec. 11 as the target for the General Assembly to complete all its work of this session.

The steering committee also agreed to send to the General Assembly for debate the proposal of the Ukraine that the 1947 session of the Assembly be held in Europe.

The Assembly yesterday passed without record vote a proposal offered by the political committee asking the Security Council to re-examine the rejected applications of Albania, Outer Mongolia, trans-Jordan, Ireland and Portugal.

OPINION GROWS FOR REFERENDUM ON COCKTAIL BARS

Move Started by Toronto Board of Control and Endorsed by Windsor

Toronto, Nov. 20. (CP)—Opinion appeared growing behind the move started by Toronto's Board of Control to hold a referendum in the prvinces "Big Five" cities—Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, London and Windsor—on proposed establishment of cocktail bars.

Toronto Board of Control approved a motion calling upon the Provincial Government to amend existing liquor licensing legislation which excludes the so-called "Big Five" from holding referendums on the question.

But in Toronto Controller McKellar said he would submit another resolution today to submit the question to a vote of the electorate January 1 anyway. He said he realized the submission would have no legal status but it "will at least give the citizens a chance to speak on the question and offer guidance for the provincial government."

Similar sentiment appeared developing in Windsor where the question is to be reconsidered further today.

Mayor Reaume said: "The cost

Walkout of Soft Coal Miners Spreads While Lewis Maintains Silence

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, Nov. 20 (AP). — The soft coal miners walkout spread today as John L. Lewis let the 11th hour arrive still silent on whether he will recall his midnight contract "termination" or defy a federal court order and risk jail.

Approximately 89,000 miners—more than one-fifth of the United States' soft coal-producing ranks—have already laid down their tools.

In the crisis:

1. The army announced that troops will be ready, if needed to maintain order.

2. The government readied a call to governors of all states east of the Mississippi for "brownouts" and rationing of electricity and manufactured gas—a move affecting millions. Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri and Minnesota may also be included.

3. Republicans and Democrats joined in a raising chorus of demands for labor-management legislation when Congress meets Jan. 3. There were some scattered demands from lawmakers for an immediate special session.

Under Mr. Lewis' own formula, the present government-union contract which went into effect when the administration seized the pits last May becomes "void" a one minute past midnight tonight. Presumably, Mr. Lewis has until the hour to withdraw his cancellation of the pact—or risk imprisonment for contempt of court.

He was ordered to withdraw it in a notice issued by Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough on Monday.

In Pittsburgh, John Castor, a union official, said the miners had received "all the instruction they needed" and could be expected to stage a mass walkout today.

But if a strike was inevitable, all signs pointed to a "silent" shut down, with no surface omens of violence. The War Department talk of troops brought from individual miners their traditional retort: "You can't mine coal with bayonets".

President Truman, vacationing at Key West, Fla., was following developments. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said Mr. Truman was "very pleased" over what he termed the "vigorous" public support of his decision to fight Mr. Lewis to a finish.

NORANDA MINERS VOTE IN FAVOR OF STRIKE ACTION

Company Notified Men Will Not Report For Work for Shift On Friday Morning

Noranda, Que., Nov. 20—(CP)—Local 688 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.) announced in a press release today that, following decision at two membership meetings last night, the union has advised Noranda Mines Limited the 7 a.m. shift Friday, Nov. 22, will not report for work.

The press release, handed out by T. F. McGuire, district co-ordinator for the union, added that subsequent shifts also would not report.

The meetings last night were held to decide whether to request a resumption of contract negotiations with the management of the mine or to implement the strike vote taken by union members Monday.

On the question "Are you prepared to strike to enforce your demands from Noranda Mines Limited" the vote was 496 for strike action, 21 against and five ballots were declared spoiled.

A wage increase of 16 cents an hour, retroactive to Feb. 8, is demanded by the union, while the company offers 10 cents an hour. Secondary demands, including a union checkoff, also are being made by the union.

Head office of Noranda Mines Limited is in Toronto.

Company Distributes Statement

The company in a statement distributed at the mine gate in Noranda yesterday said the 522 employees who voted to strike represent only 55.4 per cent of the 943 employees of the bargaining unit as of Oct. 31.

The union claims 597 members among the 1,147 employees and contends that only about 600 are eligible.

The union's press release today said the company also has been advised that the union negotiating committee is ready to meet with the management at any time either before or after 7 a.m., Friday, to negotiate a settlement.

It said that preparations to establish picket lines have been completed.

The union said the company had been advised in advance of the Friday deadline so as to enable it to put the equipment at the mine in shape so it would not suffer damage.

The press release also reported that the union has advised the company that necessary arrangements will be made for the continuation of the water services for the twin towns of Rouyn and Noranda.

Madoc, District Pay Sorrowing Tribute To Victims of Fire Tragedy

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Staff Reporter)

Madoc, Ont., Nov. 20 — Still overcast with the pall of stark tragedy that struck swiftly, terribly here on Monday morning to take seven lives in a fiery disaster, this Hastings County village yesterday paid reverent final tribute to Mrs. Thelma Ray and her six children, victims of the worst catastrophe to visit this district in 53 years.

In the reverent hush of Trinity United Church, broken only by the heart-wrenching sobs of a grief-stricken father, villagers who turned out en masse to honor the memory of the seven dead heard the Rev. Alfred Poulter pay a brief but eloquent tribute to a loyal devoted mother and her family who died in their beds in the little metal-sheeted home on the outskirts of the village as fire ravaged the structure.

Leaning heavily on the arm of a relative, Ephraim Ray, thirty-two year-old truckdriver, head bowed, entered the church in the van of several mourners. He maintained his composure until the brief ministerial eulogy then gave way to his grief. Sobs wracked his slim body as the broken father and husband said his final farewell to his loved ones.

Stark Drama in Scene.

There was stark human drama in the scene. Women, tears streaming down their faces rose and silently left the church. Strong men choked back sobs in their throats. School children cried unashamedly as the low tense voice of the minister recalled the love and devotion of a young mother suddenly snatched from the bloom of life with her children.

Long before the scheduled time for the service the church was filled to overflowing. The staff and pupils of Madoc Public School paraded in a body and were accorded special seats in the church auditorium.

Garbed in their full regalia, members of the Madoc Boy Scout troop, buddies of the dead thirteen-year-old Douglas Ray, oldest boy of the stricken family, formed a guard of honor outside the church and at the graveside.

Business Section Closed

Streets near the church were lined with automobiles. The business section of the village closed in memory of its dead, was strangely silent. Little groups of people stood on street corners conversing in hushed tones. The flag atop a building hung limp in brilliant November sunshine. The shadow of tragedy hung heavily over the community.

In two steel caskets heavily banked with floral tributes of white chrysanthemums and other flowers, the victims of the disaster lay before the pulpit of the church. One contained the bodies of the young mother and her baby, one year old Emerson. The other held the remains of the other five children.

Well Known Hymns

The organ intoned the opening notes of a well-known hymn and voices in muted tones sang the familiar words. In front of the flower-laden caskets containing his loved ones a stricken father sat in his lonely grief, head bowed on his arms.

"This great tragedy, which seldom comes to any community, has left us numb with shock," Mr. Poulter said in his opening remarks. "It has been a terrible blow to this village and district to have these neighbors, and children who mingled with us, suddenly snatched away.

"It has been one of the times when we as humans realize our great futility when all resources fail us. There is very little we can do. We must leave that in the hands of a Greater Power."

Frantic in Mind

"Never before did we realize human futility so much as on Monday when we stood by after this great tragedy struck, frantic in mind and unable to stretch out a hand to help the helpless," Mr. Poulter said.

The minister paid eloquent tribute to the loyalty and devotion of the late Mrs. Ray. "She did her utmost to provide and care for her family, physically as well as spiritually," he said. "This community, while helpless to do anything, can and will always hold the memory of this stricken family close to their hearts."

There was scarcely a dry eye in the church as the father, leaning on the arm of a relative, sobbing audibly slowly left the church. With the mourners were Mr. and Mrs. Manley Boomhauer parents of the dead woman, and her five brothers Charles, Wilson, Oscar, Andrew and Alvin and a sister Mrs. Mike Kralik, all of Madoc, and Wilfred Sleeper, Bancroft and Russell Bruce, Carrying Place also relatives.

Guard of Honor

The flower-banked caskets borne by stalwart bearers slowly wended their way through crowds of people and the Boy Scout guard of honor to the funeral hearse. A long cavalcade of cars followed the cortege to Lakeview cemetery where interment was made.

The bearers were, for the late Mrs. Ray and baby, John Storring, Arthur Brady, Archie Wickens, Perry Bronson, Pat Kellar and Sim Ashley. For the other children, Albert Bronson, Roy Bronson, Cecil Ash and John Ash. The bearers were fellow employees of the father who was employed as a truckdriver with the Reliance Fluorspar Mining Syndicate.

Appellate Court Dismisses Appeal Of George Bilton

Toronto, Nov. 20 (CP)—Ontario Court of Appeal today dismissed the appeal of George N. Bilton of Whitby, Ont., against his conviction on a murder charge in the rock slaying last June of Mrs. Teresa Laurie during a quarrel near Ajax, Ont.

Bilton, who claimed Mrs. Laurie had threatened to tell her husband he (Bilton) was the father of a child she bore more than a year ago, at his trial in Whitby was sentenced to be hanged Dec. 10

The woman and her small daughter, Patricia, allegedly were slain at the same time, strangled before their heads were smashed with a heavy rock.

Defence Counsel Louis Isaacs told the Appeal Court that at the trial the word "murders" were mentioned before the jury although Bilton was charged only with the murder of Mrs. Laurie. Reference also was made to "bodies." These references, Isaacs contended, were prejudicial to Bilton's case.

VALUABLE COW SHOT

Whitby, Nov. 20 —(CP)— A $1,200 Scotch Shorthorn cow from the herd of Charles Fothergill was found dead in a pasture today and police blamed the death on a stray bullet from a hunter's gun.

Court of Appeal Quashes Conviction Against Sears

Toronto, Nov. 20 (CP). — The Ontario Court of Appeal today quashed the conviction last September of 18-year-old Ronald G. Sears of Windsor, Ont., for the "slasher slaying" in August of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price.

Sears had been under sentence to be hanged Dec. 3. Decision on Sears' appeal against the conviction had been reserved yesterday.

Sears still faces two murder charges in connection with other Windsor "slashings" last year. The charges were traversed to the spring assizes upon his conviction of the Price killing.

"This appeal should be allowed and the conviction is quashed," said the judgment handed down by Chief Justice Robert S. Robertson—which made no mention of a new trial.

"In our opinion, the evidence upon the present record does not satisfy the burden that rested upon the Crown of establishing that the confession put forward, and which formed substantially the only evidence of guilt, was a voluntary confession, and it should not be admitted."

HYDRO OFFICIALS SAY CONVERSION PLAN PRACTICAL

Change From 25 Cycles To 60 Would Involve Expenditure of More Than 200 Millions

Toronto, Nov. 20 (CP) — Inauguration of a 60-cycle frequency in the Niagara District to replace the existing 25 cycles would be practical from a technical viewpoint and would involve an expenditure of approximately $200,000,000 covering a period of 20 years.

This is the opinion expressed by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario in an interim report submitted yesterday to the Ontario Municipal Electric Association executive.

The change would not materially increase wholesale rates for power, nor would it entail any increase in retail consumer rates, the report submits. The estimate of the expenditure takes into account the conversion of existing equipment operated by several classifications of consumers and would be effected without any cost to the domestic, rural and commercial customers with equitable adjustment for industry.

To keep changeover costs to a minimum the commission said it would require a special engineering organization, including field and shop crews, which would make conversions in predetermined areas with despatch and at a minimum cost.

With such an organization it would be possible to salvage the maximum of material and equipment and reduce to a minimum the inconvenience to consumers.

The Southern Ontario or Niagara District runs east from Pickering, which is 20 miles east of Toronto to Windsor and north from Lake Erie to an irregular line stretching from Lake Simcoe to Lake Huron, just above Palmerston and Goderich.

Sixty cycles has become the standard frequency in Canada and the United States.

The report emphasized that cost of effecting a changeover would increase if postponed too long.

While the report does not detail a complete plan for conversion, it indicates the initial steps.

The Des Joachims development on the Ottawa River, now under construction, would be completed for 60-cycle service so as to be available for a changeover program on a step-by-step basis.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Nov. 20—(CP)—Synopsis: Very cold wintry weather covers the prairie provinces and Northern Ontario. Over Southern Saskatchewan and Alberta there has been more than 30 hours of continuous snow. Over Manitoba and Northern Ontario only light snowfalls or flurries have been reported. The cold air is expected to continue moving slowly southward over Ontario reaching as far as Toronto by early tomorrow but not advancing much farther. Meanwhile Southern Ontario is enjoying relatively mild weather with clear skies. Temperatures fell last night to near freezing but today they will again climb to well above normal.

$30,000 in Charred Vault Safe As Fire Sweeps Bank in Embrun

Embrun, Ont., Nov. 20—(CP)—Fire late last night gutted the Royal Bank of Canada branch in this Russell county village 30 miles southeast of Ottawa, causing damage estimated at $10,000.

But at 9 a.m. today, more than 10 hours after the fire, when a time lock opened the charred bank vault, acting manager Robert Dorval found $30,000 in cash undamaged. Also safe were the ledgers and several important papers.

The blaze, believed to have started in overheated furnace pipes, was the third misfortune to strike the bank in seven months. Last April 29 two masked gunmen held manager Joseph Cloutier and his family captive for several hours but obtained no loot because of the time lock on the vault.

A second holdup attempt was foiled Aug. 16 when shots from Mr. Cloutier's revolver routed a gunman who later was captured and sentenced to penitentiary. One of the shots accidentally wounded Harold Malette, Ottawa taxi driver who had been forced to drive the bandit to the bank. Malette still is in hospital, his legs paralyzed.

Mr. Cloutier now is in the Maritimes on sick leave.

No Lives Reported Lost in Accident On Mersey River

900 Wives And Children Forced to Delay Journey

Liverpool, Nov. 20—(CP Cable)—No human lives were lost today when the bride-ship Empire Brent, carrying 900 wives and children of Canadian servicemen to Halifax, capsized the cattle steamship Stormont in an early morning collision in the foggy Mersey.

The Empire Brent is better known to Canadians as the former hospital ship Letitia.

(The Canadian Wives Bureau in London said that none of the Empire Brent's passengers was hurt. A statement will be issued later in the day.)

After the collision the Empire Brent, with startled women lining her rails, was taken into Alfred dock with damage to her bow.

More than 200 head of cattle on the Stormont were thrown into the river and some still were swimming, or had drowned, three hours later.

The 1,031-ton Stormont finally was towed ashore off Duke's dock wall, where she is lying on her port side with the upper structure almost submerged. All of the Stormont's crew were rescued by harbor craft and tugs.

Early investigation here indicated that none of the Empire Brent's passengers was hurt.

En Route To Halifax.

The collision occurred at 7.15 a.m., shortly after the bride-ship had left Princess landing stage, Liverpool, en route to Halifax. The Stormont, owned by the Belfast, Mersey and Manchester Steamship Company, was en route to Manchester ship canal with a cargo of cattle, foodstuffs, poultry and Christmas fare. Her decks were littered with crates.

After the Stormont went aground, her stern seemed to be slowly sinking and water poured into the funnel.

Men in rowboats and launches worked in a driving rain to lasso cattle and drag them ashore but many were so weak they had to be shot as they lay in the water.

The trip, which started, would have been the 13,595-ton Empire Brent's last voyage as a bride-ship. After hospital service the liner took thousands of women and children to their new Canadian homes. The former Letitia was renamed after her recent purchase from the Donaldson Line by the British government.

(A spokesman for the Ministry of War Transport said the Empire Brent put into dock for examination and her sailing date would be decided after a check. He said the ministry's information was that there was "some damage to the stem", the exact extent of which was unknown. The ministry is in consultation with Canadian authorities on provision for the wives and children.)

The Stormont was taken under tow after the collision but overturned before she reached shore.

Saw Ship Turn Over

"I first saw the Stormont in the half light of morning being towed by the Watchful, a Mersey Docks' tender, and a tug," Robert Capener, an electrician employed at Duke's Dock, said. "As she approached Duke's Dock wall, the Stormont suddenly started to heel over. The crew, all wearing life belts rushed to the side of the ship lowered boats and scrambled into them. They had hardly moved away when the ship turned over.

"I've never seen anything so sudden in my life."

Most members of the Stormont's 17-man crew, under Capt. Percival Peacock, live in northern Ireland.

The wives and children will return to London Thursday. Passengers are being taken by special trains to Canadian Wives Bureau Hostels. If the Empire Brent is not seriously damaged, Canadian officers said, they will resume their voyage in a few days but otherwise they will have to await another vessel.

The majority of the 600 wives and 300 children were asleep when the collision occurred. There was no undue alarm and many went on deck to watch the stricken Stormost towed away.

SIX ARE KILLED ONE MISSING IN EXPLOSION, FIRE

Police Patrolling Blast Area Report Looting Near the Scene

Greenville, S. C., Nov. 20—(AP)—Six persons were known dead and about 90 injured today as the result of last night's earth-shaking gas explosion which shattered the Ideal Laundry plant and damaged scores of buildings in the northeast section of Greenville.

State guardsmen patrolled the damaged area, assisting city police in preventing looting. Some residences, abandoned by their occupants after they were shaken by the blast, were reported robbed last night.

Dead were.

J. Carl Trammel, 41, plant superintendent.

J. Wylie Mims, 48, who was visiting in the laundry and assisted in getting workers evacuated before the explosion.

Three Negro laundry workers, Jerline Simpson, Mamie Earle and Mary Brown.

W. L. Harbin, white fireman at the laundry who turned off leaking gas, was missing.

Members of the State Guard today were patrolling the blast area after reported looting last night in homes near the scene.

Damage was estimated at $500,000 by John Burns, the laundry's sales manager.

Haynie was quoted as saying he detected gas leaking shortly before the explosion and instructed the plant's fireman to cut it off.

While Haynie rushed to a nearby fire station to call out equipment as a safety measure, Mims directed evacuation and became a victim of the explosion and fire that followed.

Haynie said the workers killed must have been returning for their belongings after being warned to leave.

Scores of injured were treated as hastily-erected first aid stations, and Greenville's two major hospitals reported 30 were admitted.

SEA CADET CORPS GUESTS OF THEATRE

Members of the local sea cadet corps under the command of E. Zeran, commanding officer, were guests of the management of the Belle Theatre Tuesday evening to witness the currently running movie "Meet the Navy". Well over fifty of the corps members "fell in" at the armouries shortly before seven and marched to the theatre for the showing of the picture. Following the show the cadets voiced their appreciation to Mr. Forhan, theatre manager, for his kindly gesture.

LARGE R.A.F. BOMBER LEAVES AIR STATION

The giant RAF Lincoln bomber "Thor" took off from the Trenton Air Station yesterday on the third leg of its Canadian-American tour. It will visit Winnipeg and after remaining there for two days will go on to Edmonton where it will be inspected by high-ranking RCAF officers at that station. The bomber was "on parade" at the Trenton and Mountain View air stations during its stay here.

POLICE RECOVER LOST BAGS OF GRAIN

Two members of the local police force turned "miller" for a brief period Tuesday evening when, after a truck owned by a Sidney township farmer lost a dozen or more bags of grain the boys in blue gathered them in as they lay scattered along West Moira Street.

Driver of the truck and his companion had previously been apprehended by police on charges of drunkenness and several bottles of ale were stated to have been found on the seat of the truck. According to police the truck had been turned onto Moira Street from North Front Street where nine bags of grain tumbled to the pavement. The balance of the load was lost at the Coleman Street intersection.

Owner of the truck paid $53 fine and costs on a second offence drunk charge, while his companion paid the conventional $10 and costs.

Teachers of Three Counties Meet For Conference

Throughout the province on Saturday elementary teachers were in conference. Presidents, conveners of committees and other teachers interested in Federation work in the inspectorates in Hastings, Lennox and Prince Edward counties met in Belleville.

Miss Margaret Hillis, vice-president of the Belleville Association, welcomed the teachers and introduced Miss Grace Philip of Toronto.

In her opening address Miss Philip who is a member of the Board of Directors of the Federated Women Teachers Association of Ontario, stressed the theme of the conference "It is smart to be informed."

Urged to be Active.

The various committees such as publicity, research, sick benefit, etc., were urged to be active as they are the back-bone of Federation. Miss Philip named the steps through which an idea passes before it reaches the Department of Education. After a recommendation is made to the Board of Directors of the Federation it is sent to all units in the province. These units discuss it and send in their suggestions which must pass the Board of Directors, then the Board of Governors and finally it is taken to the Department of Education.

The conference divided into three groups for an hour for discussion. At the end of the hour recommendations were presented to the conference as a whole and these were voted on.

After luncheon at the Y.M.C.A. these discussions were completed. Miss Philip mentioned briefly some work that is being done on salary, schedule and sick benefit. Following a Question and Answer period the conference was concluded.

Belleville Post Office Set To Handle Seals

The Belleville post office is "all set" to handle the sorting and delivery of thousands of letters containing tuberculosis Christmas seals which it will receive within the next few days from The Hastings Tuberculosis Association.

"We do not look upon this as a chore," Postmaster J. C. Waddell said. "We look upon it as a privilege. All of us, here, at the post office, are delighted that we have so important a part to play in helping this very worthwhile campaign."

Postmaster Waddell stated that he and his staff have a close tie with Christmas seals, not only through mail delivery of them to every household in the community, but also because the originator of the seal was, himself, a postal employee. It was Einar Holboell, a Dane, who first thought of seals as a means of "selling health" and his idea, which was adopted in 1904, quickly spread throughout the world. Christmas seals are now the principal means of financing the fight against tuberculosis.

The seal campaign gets under way November 25th and will continue through Christmas. The sale locally will enable the Hastings Tuberculosis Association to finance important T. B. control projects during 1947. Among such projects are mass X-ray surveys in Deseronto, Trenton and Belleville.

Optimist Club Hears Address On Housing

The fact, that Belleville, a city which possesses every requisite for expansion, industry and progress, cannot possibly hope to avail itself of these opportunities unless, and until such time that adequate housing is provided, was vividly portrayed in a most interesting address delivered to the Belleville Optimist Club on Monday evening at the New Queens Hotel, by Mr. Jack Badgley, Manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

The speaker divided the desirability of proper housing into two channels. First, the selfish motive, that is the necessity of homes for the staff of new industries interested in locating here. Mr. Badgley said that at the present time, although many industries are very favorably impressed with the transportation facilities and the many advantages offered by Belleville, they have no alternative but to drop the matter when it becomes evident that there is no accommodation available even for the advance engineers necessary to send here.

The second group Mr. Badgley mentioned were those individuals in dire need of housing for themselves and their families. In this group it is the opinion of the speaker that the veteran has no advantage whatever over any citizen, as the many benefits publicized for his use are now mostly extinct, and at best provide him with nothing more than a hunting licence, in view of the present scarcity of materials, a condition which is not likely to improve in the near future.

Mr. Badgley believes that since it is an impossibility for the government to direct available material through personal channels, the Maritime Housing plan is the only solution. In this plan the government will build for the city of Belleville one hundred homes, now, which would rent from $25 to $30 monthly. In view of the great benefit to be reaped by both the city and the individual, the initial amount necessary to finance this project, which the city has the opportunity to invest, would be practically negligible, and is an amount which it is imperative to release if there is a desire for expansion in industry and better living for our citizens.

The speaker was introduced by Optimist Jack Sharland and thanks of the club were expressed by Optimist Ray Wood.

Radio Signal Tracer Acquired By Local Firm

That technical equipment built for war purposes is gradually finding its way into commercial channels is indicated by the recent acquisition of a radio signal tracer by Art Booth and Son, Front Street, radio servicemen. The machine is the only one of its kind in the city

According to owners of the equipment the signal tracer cuts service time in the repair of a radio by approximately one half as it removes entirely the guess work in locating the trouble. With the machine it is possible to trace the signal from the arial to the loud speaker and will locate the trouble in any particular part of the radio.

The machine was built in the United States for army use in locating trouble in their field communication equipment, the surplus now being released to the commercial trade.

Obituary

LATE MRS. RACHAEL GRAYDON

The funeral of Mrs. Rachael (Booth) Graydon, late residence, 12 Charlotte Street, was held Tuesday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at Evergreen cemetery, Trenton, was conducted by the Rev. D. C. Amos, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

The bearers were T. F. Graydon, W. A. Graydon, H. V. Graydon, A. L. Booth, K. E. Moult and John Pitman.

JOHN M. SIMPSON
(Napanee)

Napanee, Nov. 20—John Milner Simpson, one of Eastern Ontario's best known legal counsels, died in the Kingston General Hospital on Monday afternoon. He had been ill for several months. The late Mr. Simpson was the son of Dr. T. W. Simpson of Napanee and had resided in the town all of his life excepting during a period of services in the First World War.

Deceased had always been active in the service of his home town. He served on the town council for four years and, in 1930, he was elected mayor. At that time he was the youngest chief magistrate in Ontario. At the time of his death he was chairman of the Board of Education.

He was a member of the Anglican Church and was the present lay reader at St. Mary Magdalene Church here.

Active in social circles he was a past president of the local Rotary Club and past assistant grand chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Ontario.

Surviving are his widow, formerly Dorothy Reeves; a daughter, Katharine (Mrs John Nicols), and a son, John.

Ald. J. J. Trudeau Will Not Seek Electoral Honors

Due to extensive business expansion and the increased duties involved, Alderman J. J. Trudeau will retire from municipal life for next year at least, he announced today.

Acquisition of the Lennox and Addington district as sales territory for his motor car division and the extension to Picton of the agricultural division of the firm, together with instruction of additional staff calls for more time and effort on his part, Mr. Trudeau pointed out.

"I feel," he said, "that one in municipal government life should have the proper time to devote to the interests of the people. It cannot be done half-way. One must neglect something or other and this cannot be done if the proper achievement is to be attained."

"The year after next," Mr. Trudeau said, "I may come back into the civic field, but I am not in a position to state that definitely yet."

Alderman Trudeau was elected to council in 1944 and held the chairmanship of Tourist and Publicity that year. In 1945 he was chairman of Public Works and this year headed the committee for Printing and Stationery.

POWER USE RESTRICTED

Stratford, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Use of electric power today was restricted to residential consumers following an interruption near Freelton, Ont. It was forbidden to industrial users until the break was repaired.

Hydro men here said they were told the restriction applied to Kitchener, Guelph, Stratford, Galt and possibly part of London.

Closing Hours for Merchants In Christmas Season Decided

Late closing hours for local merchants during the forthcoming Christmas shopping season were decided unanimously by members of the local retail merchants' division of the Chamber of Commerce at their regular monthly meeting held on Monday evening.

Starting on Wednesday, December 18th, when stores will not observe the half holiday and will close at six o'clock, stores will remain open until nine-thirty on Thursday and Friday and on the Monday before Christmas. On the Saturday before Christmas they will close at the customary time, while on Christmas Eve stores will close at six o'clock to give sales help the opportunity of getting away for the holiday.

As has been customary in Belleville for the past few years, stores will remain closed on Boxing Day, the day following Christmas.

Question of local taxi operators using certain business sections of the city as taxi stands came up for considerable discussion by merchants.

Forwarded to Council

Earlier a recommendation from the committee had been forwarded to city council asking this body to consider a proposal set forth by merchants' division. This proposal called for a parking area for taxis to be provided by the city and that operators having offices on Front Street be requested to park only one car at a time in front of their premises.

A letter from the city clerk was read at the merchants' meeting informing that body that the matter had been taken up by a special council committee of Aldermen Thompson, Hyde, Allin and Butler. This committee had recommended that downtown areas on Victoria Ave., Front Street, Bridge Street, and the market square be not used by taxis for parking purposes. The report was approved by council at their last meeting.

Not to Meet in December

As a parting shot, however, one of the merchants present stated that if the Riverside Drive were completed this would automatically alleviate the parking situation in the city.

The Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce will meet on January 20 to select a new committee to act during the ensuing year. The regular monthly meeting of the merchants' division will not be held in December owing to the Christmas season.

Controversy Over Proposal by Cheese Producers' Assoc. Aired at Meeting

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer)

Opinions were expressed at a special meeting of the Kingston Cheese Board, held yesterday afternoon, that the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association could best serve the producers by seeing that they received a proper price for their milk, instead of going into the wholesale cheese business.

Eardley Wright, president of Hodson-Rowson Company Limited, Montreal, cheese exporters, declared that the cheese industry should not be knocked around, and that the wholesalers were prepared to co-operate with the producers in getting them satisfactory price for their milk.

Several board members expressed the opinion that there was too great a difference between the price paid for whole milk, which was sold to the domestic trade, and the price received for milk delivered to the cheese factories. It was claimed that the cheese factory price was about $2 per 100 pounds, while the city dairies were paying $3.35 per 100 pounds.

Disapprove Action

Strong disapproval was expressed over the action of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association in having an Order-in-Council passed on Sept. 17, 1946, known as the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing scheme, which gave that body authority to requisition all cheese.

Allan Lemmon, president of the Cheese Board, stated he had asked Harold Wartman, secretary-treasurer, of the board, to attend a meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association in Toronto, and obtain some information in connection with the Order-in-Council, which had been so much complained of. Mr. Lemmon further stated he had suggested to the secretary-treasurer that he ask S. L. Joss, secretary-treasurer of the Cheese Producers' Association for a representative of that body to attend a special meeting of the cheese board, but Mr. Wartman had been unable to secure Mr. Joss, for the meeting this week.

Mr. Wartman stated that it had been made quite clear to him at the meeting in Toronto that the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association had no intention of eliminating the cheese boards, and there would be competitive buying. Mr. Wartman said he had been informed authority had been granted at the last annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association to request the Order-in-Council to be passed.

Made $4,000.00 Profit.

"The Ontario Cheese Producers' Association made a net profit of about $4,000 on the cheese which they handled last summer, which is not very much considering they purchased cheese in the amount of a million dollars," said Mr. Wartman.

Mr. Lemmon replied, "I cannot see the function of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association if buyers are restrained from purchasing cheese on the open market."

W. R. McCreary, cheese buyer from Belleville, asked for information in connection with the proposed purchase of the Belleville Cheddar cheese business by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. Mr. Wartman replied, "They dropped that idea." Mr. Wartman further stated that Mr. Joss, the secretary-treasurer of the Cheese Producers' Association had come in for some criticism in connection with the purchase of the cheese firm at a reported price of $250,000. "Mr. Joss," said Mr. Wartman, "told the executive that he was a shareholder of the Belleville Cheddar Cheese. The directors thought the price was a little too high, and they dropped the idea," concluded Mr. Wartman.

Strictly Business Deal.

Jack Cook, representing Belleville Cheddar Cheese, replied, "We gave a price which was strictly a business deal. They turned it down and that's all there is to it."

Matthew Shannon asked, "Would you be selling out to the cheese producers?" Mr. Cook replied, "that deal is done."

Mr. Lemmon, in reply to one of the representatives, said, "We tried to have Mr. Joss attend our meeting, but he said he was too busy until after Nov. 27."

Mr. McCreary—"I am rather surprised that someone from the Cheese Producers' Association was not here today."

Arthur Olive, of Olive and Dorion, Montreal—"I don't like the controls, but I try to cooperate, and I believe in fair and open competition. We would like to see a higher price paid for the milk, and we simply have got to get a higher price for the producers."

Timothy O'Shea, of Wolfe Island, said he was sorry that no representative from the Cheese Producers' Association was on hand to give the necessary information. "The war is over and we should receive more for our produce."

Harvey McNevin, of Kingston, said that New Zealand was receiving 18½ cents per pound for cheese on the English market, while in certain parts of the United States 46c per pound was being paid for cheddar cheese.

Says Cheese Board Fair Way.

Mr. Wright said he was disappointed that the Ontario Cheese Producers was not represented. "Canada had hoped to export 125 million pounds of cheese, but she was only able to ship 90 million last year to the British Isles. "I believe that the farmers should receive more money for the milk used in the production of cheese, and my firm would support this move. Canadian cheese is not permitted to enter the United States, as it does not comply with the standards."

"The Ontario Cheese Producers' Association," said Mr. Wright, "under this new Order-in-Council, was given a monopoly on cheese. We in the trade think it hardly just that we should be ignored in this matter. The majority of producers do not support this move on the part of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. The only fair way to sell cheese is on the open board. We have the word of the government that this legislation will be amended," said Mr. Wright.

Mr. Lemmon said he was definitely opposed to the Cheese Producers' Association going into the buying end of the industry. The cheese factories which I own manufactured 314,000 pounds of cheese last year, and the most I could pay for the milk was $2 per 100 pounds.

Action Needed Now.

"Several producers are dissatisfied and they are going to sell their cattle to American buyers. There should be something done about the whole situation right away."

Mr. Wright said "the cheese business has got into an unsatisfactory state, and we have got to do something about it. This cheese industry should not be kicked around any more."

Mr. McCreary advocated the necessity of pooling all milk as they do in England, and then the farmers would get their just rights. "The farmer never did get his share of the National wealth, and it is high time that he did," said he.

Mr. O'Shea asked the president if Mr. Joss said he could come after Nov. 27th., and Mr. Lemmon replied, "yes." "Mr. Joss said he was tied up until after Nov. 27." "We have not been hearing anything from the other side," said Mr. O'Shea.

Mr. MacLean — "I would like to hear Mr. Joss tell us how he could run the cheese industry without competition."

Mr. Wright in reply to Mr. O'Shea, said, "the wholesalers only received 45c profit on a box of cheese, and all their overhead had to come out of this 45c."

Mr. Lemmon suggested that the cheese producers across Canada embark on an advertising campaign and urge people to eat cheese. "You could create a demand for a large part of your cheese."

Wilfred Coopper, Sunbury, urged that something be done to adjust the situation if cheese production was to keep up in 1947.

A CHRISTMAS POEM

If you have friends in a foreign part
And you want to be sure that they'll bless your heart
"Give them a gift from Schwab's."

Or if it's a soldier who has just come home
And you'd like to keep him from wanting to roam
"Bring him something from Schwab's."

We know that we have things that really will draw
Approval from any man's mother-in-law
It's an unusual gift from Schwab's.

There must be some young men with hearts in a whirl
Trying to choose a gift for their girl
We'd say they could get one at Schwab's

And folks—if the kids are away at a college
Trying to cram their poor heads full of knowledge
You'll find them a gift down at Schwab's.

Shall you get this for Auntie or Uncle or not
It seems that whatever you pick on—they've got
There is something different at Schwab's.

So for Dad or for Mother or Sister or Brother
Or Uncle or Cousin or Aunt
If you ask Santa Claus to bring something from Schwab's
You won't have to admit that you can't.

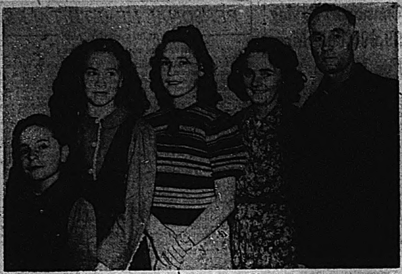
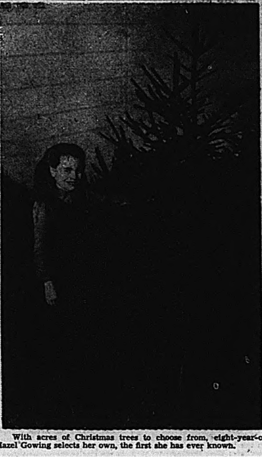
To the Clergy of Our Community—
Our profession brings us into close and frequent contact with the pastors of the various churches of the community, and we are indebted to them for splendid co-operation and many courtesies. We take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to the fine group of men engaged locally in this noble calling.



After a separation of eight years, the Gowing family of Norwich, Eng., will sit down together at Christmas dinner next month in their new Canadian home. Beryl, 12, and Brenda, 14, came over to Canada in 1940 to live as war guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. McCloy, near Courtland. Now they have been joined by the rest of their family. From left to right are Hazel, Brenda, and Mr. and Mrs. Gowing.



With acres of Christmas trees to choose from, eight-year-old Hazel Gowing selects her own, the first she has ever known.

So firmly did Beryl and Brenda place themselves in the hearts of their Canadian foster parents that Mr. and Mrs. McCloy couldn't think of letting them go back to England. So the kindly farmer built them all a house on his property and brought the rest of the family out to Canada. Beryl and Hazel are seen leaving their new home.

Commencement Exercises At Madoc Well Attended

The auditorium of Madoc high school was crowded to capacity last Friday evening as the annual commencement exercises were held with diplomas and other awards being presented to the successful members of the student body.

Chairman of the high school board Mr. J. A. Watson, presided over the evening's program and expressed a welcome to guests, while Allan Rollins, president of the students' council, also added a welcome from the student body. Jane Symon was valedictorian for the graduating class.

Besides the presentation of awards a splendid program of entertainment was included on the evening program as pupils of all grades in the school contributed choral numbers. The boys' athletic display of pyramids and tumbling indicated that considerable training had gone into their effort, while dance numbers and a play entitled "The Kid Makes Up His Mind" was presented as a finale to the fine program.

Musical director for the program and play was Mr. Stanley Hawthorne, while Miss Lamoine West, and Mr. Donald Patten acted as accompanists.

Members of the high school staff at Madoc are Miss E. MacDermid, B.A., Principal and mathematics teacher; Mrs. K. A. Brown, M.A., English and History; Mr. D. C. Drinkwater, B.A., Science and P.T.; Miss R. Silvester, B.A., French, Art and P.T.; and Mr. G. A. Tilden, B.A., Social Studies, Commercial and Latin.

Bomber Pilots Transport Plane Spot Wreckage

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 20—(AP)—Two United States bomber pilots spotted the wreckage of an American army transport plane on a 12,000-foot-high plateau in the southern French Alps today as French alpine troops struggled up the steep slopes to aid the seven passengers, including four women and a girl, and four crew members.

A C-47 transport plane was reported en route from Turin, Italy, with food, blankets and medical supplies as the two bombers circled the wreckage of the C-53 —which crash-landed yesterday— to guide rescue parties.

Reports from Vienna said five persons aboard the downed craft were hurt, but that there were no fatalities. There was no information as to who was injured or how badly.

Passengers on the C-53 included a United States brigadier general and his wife and the wives of two other brigadier generals, one of whom was the mother of the pilot, Capt. Ralph H. Tate, Jr.

HONOR NONAGENARIAN

Rockwood, Nov. 20 (CP)—Guests gathered in the town hall Monday night to celebrate the 90th birthday of Samuel Peart, believed to me the oldest man in Rockwood district. Mr. Pert said he attributes his lengthy life to no drinking, no smoking, no swearing—not even singing.

This Waiting Season

Frost has come and been on the fields and roofs. Already there has been ice on the pools of water, already the temperature at night has touched the ground but, like the first and only snow, that of October 1st, the ice and frost have disappeared in the generally moderate weather conditions with which this part of Canada has been favored. Western parts of the United States which have reported heavy snowstorms have blanketed the country but there has been none of that here in this season of late autumn. Moderate weather predominates though temperature dips below freezing at night, which is to be expected at this late time.

The frost and freezing are the evidences of winter somewhere in the offing. But still when there is precipitation it has been in the form of rain.

The kindly atmospheric conditions have been a boon to urban and rural populations with reduction in the amount of fuel required for heating and with the opportunity for plenty of outdoor work.

The coming winter has been gentle in its warnings and it can hardly be that this will deceive any persons into a false sense of security as if it were afar off. That should not be for householders know what to expect and they realize that cold and snow are inevitable. But they will hope for a mild winter. They have had warning signals and they realize that time has come when to be prepared for winter. In the interim between now and the complete freeze-up everyone will enjoy the mild conditions and count them all to the good, because of the opportunity for enjoyment and labor they have provided. This pleasing lull when the year is expectant and waiting is one that appeals to everyone.

A Great Friendship

One of the truly great friendships which will be remembered through history is that of the two great statesmen, the late President F. D. Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Both men of the greatest capacity for statesmanship in so a great a time of crisis as in the period of the most colossal of wars, their friendship was forged on the anvil of destiny and the temper of the times, and the democracy of the two great powers that these men represented in spirit and led and the character of the men, combined to make their relationship one that will be remembered as long as the Second Great War is recalled.

Mr. Churchill has paid numerous tributes to his great friend, whom he has called "the greatest American friend that Britain ever had and the most powerful champion of freedom who ever brought help and comfort from the New World", and said the lend-lease, which "will stand forth as the most unselfish financial act of any country" was "Roosevelt-inspired."

It was natural that Mr. Churchill should speak on behalf of the fund that the people of Britain are raising to erect a statue to Mr. Roosevelt in the heart of London. He could not be silent when the people of his country were thinking in terms of a national tribute to the American partner in the numerous conferences held for the sake of world freedom.

Mr. Churchill spoke for Britain and his sentiments regarding Franklin Delano Roosevelt's contribution to world security will be reiterated around the world. A man of vast experience who has met the great of many lands and knows greatness when he sees it in a man, Mr. Churchill has again paid the warm tribute of a true friendship to the great American statesman.

Early Guns

Hunters when they go into the woods carry today the straight-shooting weapons. A century ago quite a different weapon was in use, the flint-lock whose maximu range was 150 yards. It was inconvenient to use, uncertain enough in good weather, worse in bad.

The great grandfather of the modern hunter used a flintlock such as those in the Royal Ontario Museum. In order to use the gun, he had to cast the bullets and pellets of lead and test the black powder which was quite variable in quality. To load the weapon he had to measure out a quantity of powder, pour it down the barrel and over this tamped a piece of wadding. Finally a little powder was sprinkled on the firing pan. On pulling the trigger a spark formed by the impact of flint on steel, ignited the trail of powder which in turn set off the powder inside. Its explosion propelled the lead shot. Much of the power was lost, since the shot fitted the bore loosely and the flintlock had no rifling.

Explosive Eggs

Federal agents are enforcing birth control upon two species of birds which harass farmers and fishermen—herring gulls, which prey upon lobsters and blueberries, and cormorants, which eat both blueberries and young clams.

In the first efforts at control, agents in small boats, armed with hammers and needles, punctured each egg they could find. This didn't work, for punctured eggs filled up with gases and exploded. The female herring gull then would start all over again with a new batch of eggs.

Now the method is to spray the eggs with an oil emulsion. Returning to the nest, the bird sits patiently on the devitalized eggs until her seasonal urge to become a mother has passed.

—Business Week

Buckets of Money

Strange things happen at Post Office counters. One of the strangest was when an old farmer handed a bucket full of money over the counter with the remark there was a thousand pounds ($4,000) "for the Bank of National Savings." The somewhat dazed clerk, more used to bags than buckets as money containers, counted the money and found only £900 ($3,600). The farmer asserted that he had counted the money only that morning, and he was sure it was £1,000 ($4.000). The clerk made another count and still it was only £900. The farmer then had a brain-wave: "The wife has given me the wrong bucket."

Liners

The head of the Cunard White Star Line, disclosing plans for the construction of five new trans-Atlantic liners, makes it clear that none of them will approach the Queens — the Mary and Elizabeth — in mammoth size, The Boston Post notes. Indeed, he points out that those two vessels, with the auxiliary assistance from the smaller craft will be able to handle the postwar volume of traffic over the ocean for some time to come. Neither the Mary nor the Elizabeth will have any challengers until many a year of service has passed.

New Outlet

It is of some interest to observe that Germans are joining the French Foreign Legion in considerable numbers, and that the Legion is quite ready to welcome them, says the London Spectator. Indeed a receiving centre has been opened at Kehl, on the German bank of the Rhine, opposite Strasbourg. The motives of the recruits are no doubt various, the principal one being probably the desire to get well clothed and fed. Not more than 25 percent of Germans will be accepted in any Legion regiment, and it looks as though that limit would be easily reached.

It should be possible enough to absorb 25 percent in the general mass, especially since two rules are implacably enforced—Only French must be spoken and all political talk is banned. The Legion regiments serve not in France but overseas; there are three at present in Indo-China and others in North Africa.

Evidence that the world is out of joint is found in the Kat River citrus area of South Africa, where oranges are assuming in oblong shape. Spinach, however, still remains a rugged individualist, remarks Hamilton Spectator.

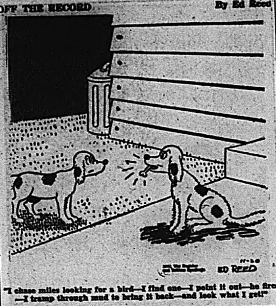
ASK YOUR MOTHER

Was it Adam first who said:
"Ask your mother"?
"Must we go so soon to bed?"
"Ask your mother."
And since then, have fathers all
Dodged such issues, great or small,
With this phrase I now recall:
"Ask your mother."

Begged for candy, cake or pie,
"Ask your mother."
This seemed safest to reply: :
"Ask your mother."
When they turned in hope to me
That my answer, "Yes" would be,
This evaded many a plea:
"Ask your mother."

With this answer men have stayed:
"Ask your mother."
When decisions must be made:
"Ask your mother."
Fathers, soft of heart and head,
Tears of saddened children dread,
And since Adam's time they've said:
"Ask your mother."



"I chase miles looking for a bird—I find one—I point it out—he fires—I tramp through mud to bring it back—and look what I get!"

Ten years ago today, 1886, the Belleville Vinegar Works were totally destroyed by fire. The stone building was situated on the north side of Dundas Street, in the vicinity of Charles and Albert Streets, and was formerly owned by the Hon. Robert Read. Years ago it was used as a distillery until a boiler explosion shattered it and left it in ruins, in which state it remained until a few years ago when Mr. D. R. Leavens bought the property, repaired the building and established a vinegar factory and fruit evaporator. Later the premises were leased by him to W. D. Moody and George Easton. Only a few barrels of cider and vinegar were saved when the building burned.

Reconversion of Canadian Industry From War to Peace Three Quarters Completed

Granby, Que., Nov. 20 (CP)—Transport Minister Chevrier said yesterday that reconversion of Canadian industry from war to peace now is three quarters completed and more than 1,000,000 former members of the forces and war workers have been absorbed into peacetime positions.

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Granby Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Chevrier said the government by means of reduction in excess profits and income tax and special depreciation allowance had assisted private industry "considerably."

"Since Canada's economy is based chiefly on private enterprise it is felt that government assistance should be provided to industry," he said.

Special depreciation allowances up to Oct. 1 amounted to $400,000,000.

Canada now was third among the industrial nations of the world and had 1,000,000 more people gainfully employed than in 1939."

There now were more jobs available than persons to fill them he said. Last month there were 138,608 jobs available and 135,989 persos seeking employment.

"This figure of unplaced persons is well below normal unemployment in times of relatively high levels o' employment," said Mr. Chevrier. "Even during the peak period of the war there were at times as many as 50,000 or more people unemployed.

Mr. Chevrier said he deplored the fact that Christian democracies were doing so little to defend their democratic ideals against attacks from all sides.

Four Arrested In Fur Theft

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP) —Police early today arrested four Toronto area residents in connection with the theft last weekend of 51 fur coats valued at between $14,000 and $18,000 from the Sholnik fur shop on downtown Spadina Avenue and held a fifth person, a woman, as a material witness.

Charged with breaking and entering was Norman Hebscher, 26, of Toronto. Held on charges of receiving stolen goods were Frank and Frances Blair, both 33, of nearby Lakeview, and Abraham Rush, 47, of Toronto. Police also detained Kathleen Hume of Toronto as a material witness.

Police said thieves entered the fur shop by breaking into a club above it and cutting through the ceiling.

Investigators said they believed one of the thieves used a rope ladder to take the coats to an accomplice above and that the gang used a delivery truck to take away the furs.

Consumers Paying $9,000,000 More For Milk in Year

Toronto, Nov. 20 —(CP)— The royal commission investigating Ontario's milk industry opened the third day of its week-long hearing in Toronto today after hearing figures yesterday which showed consumers would have to pay approximately $9,000,000 more for milk in a year as a result of increased retail prices.

C. M. Meek, chairman of the Milk Control Board said that since 1942 the supply of milk has been below the normal level of requirements. Mr. Justice Dalton Wells is commissioner inquring into all phases of Ontario's milk industry. The inquiry follows discontinuance of a Dominion Government subsidy of two cents a quart last Oct. 1, and subsequent increase in retail price of milk to 16 cents a quart.

The commission will adjourn at the end of the week and resume hearings later in other Ontario centres.

Cancellation of the subsidy resulted in a loss of $8,985,597 to the trade in Ontario, Mr. Meek said. This loss would have to be made up by the consumer.

Figures made in a survey of 40 dairies in the province for the purpose of breaking down the consumers dollar were presented to the commission. These showed that 59.19 cents went to the producer.

In answer to a question by Beverley Matthews, commission counsel, Mr. Meek said it would be difficult today to buy a good milch cow for less than $150.

Continuing a discussion of wartime measures aimed at establishment of economy and fair trade practices, Mr. Meek said he favored certain restrictions such as: the five-cent deposit on bottles; refusal to grant credit; adoption of standard containers; and elimination to special deliveries.

Car Shortages, Weather Holding Up Shipments

Regina, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Western Canada farmers today had a green light from the government to go all-out on wheat deliveries but other factors, such as weather and in some places a shortage of freight cars, indicated any rush of grain to country elevators may be some time in developing.

Normally, wheat pool officials said here, the removal yesterday of farmers' delivery quotas by the Federal government — quotas ranging up to 20 bushels an acre depending on locality — would mean a surge of wheat from farms.

But recent snowfalls have slowed up road travel in Saskatchewan while in Northern Alberta elevators were reported "plugged" because of too few freight cars in which to start the crop moving away from country terminals.

Back of the Federal decision was the crying need for wheat for export. Early removal of the quota delivery system this year sprang from heavy wheat shipments overseas early in the new crop season.

From Edmonton grain dealers said a slight delivery increase might be expected in Southern Alberta where elevators were reported in less congested shape.

R. J. Boutillier, secretary of the Alberta Farmers' Union, however, said he did not anticipate any general rush and pointed to the stable price of wheat for his reason.

The quotas are installed to ensure that farmers living a goodly distance from elevators, and thus faced with a longer road-haul, still have a chance to get rid of a portion of their crop early. Federal authorities said that in the first 3½ months of the current crop year producers had marketed the "exceptionally high total" of 201,000,000 bushels of wheat from farms.

Western Ontario Cities Without Power for Time

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP) — Guelph, Kitchener, Galt, Preston and, to a lesser degree, Stratford and St. Marys, were without electric power early today after an automobile sheared off two legs of a four-legged hydro transmission tower south of Freelton, about 15 miles northwest of Hamilton, shortly before 1 a.m., officials of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission here said.

Normal service was restored at 8:40 a.m. upon completion of temporary repairs. Earlier the hydro system provided a restricted service over secondary lines.

The damaged tower fell across a highway and cut off power supply from Burlington, Ont. Repairmen spotted the break an hour later.

Secondary lines through London, Ont., were pressed into use to provide temporary service to the areas affected and at 7 a.m. the Hydro Commission asked industries not to use the service so as to make power available to residential consumers.

GIVE THE BABY THE WORKS

Since it is practically impossible to insure adequate vitamin intake for the infant or young child in the child's natural food it is the standard practice now to supplement the diet of baby or young child with vitamin concentrates of one kind or another or to "fortify" or doctor various foods suitable for infant feeding with various vitamins.

It would require a small book to describe the manifestations due to deficiency in the intake of the essential vitamins in infancy, childhood and youth. And that small book, so far as I know, has not yet been written. But I'll tell you what I believe some of these essential vitamins do for the baby and growing child.

Thiamine hydrochloride tends to improve and maintain the "tone" of the gastro-intestinal muscle coat and hence to prevent so-called "colic" and "constipation." Together with other components of the B complex it tends to improve digestion.

Ascorbic acid (vitamin C) probably contributes to the formation of both the dentine and the enamel of the teeth and hence to protection of the child's teeth against decay.

In the second edition of "The Vitamins in Medicine" the London authors, Bicknell and Prescott, cite investigations by various workers who have found that the phagocytes (white blood corpuscles) contain considerable vitamin C, and most nutrition authorities now believe vitamin C contributes toward development and maintenance of immunity to infections — infections to which the healthy body reacts with a marked increase in the number of white corpuscles (leukocytes, phagocytes) in the blood. I say immunity—not "resistance." We do know something about immunity. Nobody knows a thing about "resistance" the charlatans of the medical and health professions, and they won't tell what they mean when they prate about "resistance."

Common manifestations of deficiency of vitamin D (the sunshine vitamin) in infancy and early childhood are, short of the signs of rickets, are irritability of the nervous system, the child starting suddenly from sleep with a cry as though pricked or pinched, and then turning over and becoming quiet again, or the child is spasmophilic—that is, inclined to have spasms from slight causes. If the infant or young child gets insufficient vitamin D the teeth tend to erupt late and decay early. A little vitamin D may suffice to prevent outspoken rickets but it takes well over 400 units a day to give the infant or child a chance for sound, strong teeth.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Saccharin Again

Due to the sugar shortage I know many people are using saccharin tablets to sweeten tea and coffee. M. told a prominent physician advised that saccharin should not be used unless prescribed by the physician, as it may result in loss of eyesight.

(H. C. W.)

Answer—Any one may use up to 5 grains of saccharin a day indefinitely without risk of any injury to health.

Habit

I have a twelve-year-old brother and I am fifteen—we both wet the bed. Our seven-year-old sister stopped wetting a year ago. Mother took us to several doctors but —we feel very ashamed.

(H. A. D.)

Answer—Nothing to be ashamed of, as long as you try earnestly to correct the habit. If you will send me a stamped envelope bearing your address I'll send you a pamphlet telling how to break the habit of bed-wetting. A good many youths had to be treated for bed-wetting when they were drafted for army or navy service.

Worms

Is it possible for a boy twenty years old to have worms of any sort? If so, what are the symptoms and what is the cure?

(H. B. J.)

Answer—Any one of any age may have worms—pinworms, roundworms, tapeworms, or other worms. These and other parasites are discussed in the booklet "Unbidden Guests"—for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope. Do not use a clipping, please.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What are the duties of the poet laureate of England?

The poet laureate of England, though technically an officer in the lord chamberlain's department of the royal household has no prescribed duties.

Thomas Shadwell, who became the second official poet laureate of England after John Dryden was deposted by William and Mary in 1689, originated annual birthday and New Year odes, and until the latter part of the reign of George III the poet laureate, in his capacity as court poet and official, was expected to produce formal and appropriate odes for the occasion of a national victory.

Since Shadwell the official poet laureates have been Nahum Tate, Nicholas Rowe, Laurence Eusden, Colley Cibber, William Whitehead, Thomas Southey, William Wordsworth, Alfred Lord Tennyson, Alfred Austin, Robert Bridges and John Masefield.

George V appointed Masefield poet laureate in 1930 upon the recommendation of the Labor Ministry headed by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald. Theoretically the poet laureate is chosen by the sovereign; actually the selection is made by the ministry in power.

Thus far no woman has been seriously considered for the honor.

Sir Walter Scott turned down the job, and Wordsworth, before he would accept the office in 1843, stipulated that no formal or state productions would be required. In fact he never wrote a line of poetry during the seven years he was poet laureate.

His successor, Tennyson, voluntarily produced numerous works in his capacity as court poet. Algernon Swinburne, one of England's greatest living poets after Tennyson's death, was passed over as poet laureate because of his "radical views."

Rudyard Kipling was not appointed, according to a legend, because Queen Victoria was offended by his "The Widow of Windsor, one of the Barrack Room Ballads in which he described the widow of Windsor as sending English soldiers to "barbarious wars" and acquiring "all o' creation" with their blood.

The "honorarium" of the poet laureate, now equivalent to about $360 in gold a year, has varied considerably. Pye received the regular salary of 100 pounds plus 27 pounds in lieu of the traditional Canary wine. Wine ceased to be part of the poet laureate's salary when Tennyson was given 72 pounds a year plus 27 pounds in lieu of the Canary.

In America some of the States—for instance, California, North Dakota, Texas, Georgia, West Virginia and South Carolina— have designated by executive or legislative action individuals as State poet laureates without salary.

7,500 LOOMS IN USE IN EAST CANADA HOMES

Orillia, Nov. 20 — (CP)—There are 7,500 looms in use in Eastern Canada homes, Oscar Berioul of the Department of Planning and Development, today told the Orillia Rotary Club. Sales of home-made products in Eastern Canada run into millions of dollars and young people are once again proud to wear home spun clothing, he said.

Several Records Expected to Fall At Winter Fair

Toronto, Nov. 20 —(CP)— When the 18th Royal Winter Fair comes to a close tonight after eight days, several records are expected to fall—notably that of attendance. An unofficial estimate last night predicted more than 400,000 visitors by today, making the fair the most successful ever.

Though past records were inadvertently destroyed during the war years, officials also believe a record was set for the quantity and quality of stock on display. Value of the livestock in attendance was set by experts at more than $4,500,000.

A capacity crowd was in attendance at the coliseum for the second last night of the horse show with four featured events conducted. In livestock, Manitoba and Illinois cattle divided top honors.

The most colorful event of the horse show last night was the military knock down and out with three army teams competing —the United States, Mexico and Peru. All were in excellent form and several jump-offs were required.

Two members of the Mexican team finally walked off with first and second honors. Lieut. Raoul Campero Nunez took the first prize followed closely by Maj. Humberto Marlles Cortes. The United States team member, Lt.-Col. Charles A. Symroski, was third.

In the $1,500 Rogers Saddle Pony Stake, Alasa Whitey owned by Mrs. H. A. MacLean of Richmond Hill, Ont., was the winner with little Miss Valera Sayre of Philadelphia up on the second place winner, Brown Derby.

A second $1,500 event — the President's Jumping Stake—was won by My Play Boy, owned and ridden by Russel Stewart of Albany, N.Y. Vernon G. Cardy's Price Tex was second.

In the cattle show Searle Clarina from East Selkirk, Man., was judged senior female champion in the Shorthorn class and Mariebar Mandate owned by William Bartholomay, Libertyville, Ill., was adjudged the Shorthorn bull grand champion. The reserve title in the senior female Shorthorn division went to Morley Beath of Oshawa, Ont., with Beathon Nonpareil. The reserve in Shorthorn bulls went to W. A. Dryden of Brooklin, Ont., on Killearn Norseman.

Peggy Vanguard, owned by Mitchell F. Hepburn of St. Thomas, Ont., won the grand championship for mares in Clydesdale horse judging. Peggy Vanguard captured the red ribbon for a yield mare, foaled previous to Jan. 1, 1943, won the champion senior mare award and then went on to take the grand championship.

Cat High in Tree Thwarts Navy Men For Whole Night

Esquimalt, B.C., Nov. 20—(CP) —It took an Admiral, a chimney sweep, the Navy fire department, S.P.C.A. and lots of moral persuasion to convince an altitude-loving cat that its proper place was on a hearthrug before a fire instead of being "up a tree" here.

First seen Monday the tabby was 50 feet up a tree, too high for a chimney sweep to reach with his gear. Captain James Barr, of the S.P.C.A. then was notified. He called Rear Admiral E. Mainguy, Commanding Officer of the naval barracks. The Admiral quickly dispatched the Navy Fire Department with ladders.

Tabby was reached but made a record high jump out of rescuers' arms and went further up the tree.

The Navy called a truce, pondered the problem overnight and went back Tuesday with the result that the family pet of W.H. Walker again is purring in its favorite spot before the fireplace, content with thwarting the might of the Royal Canadian Navy for one whole night.

Hens on Short Rations But No Egg Shortage

Ottawa, Nov. 20 —(CP)—The hen that laid the golden egg and helped capture a large slice of Britain's egg market for Canada's poultry farmers has gone on short rations but, except for a slight lapse, it hasn't affected her laying capacity.

The Agriculture Department reported today that available protein supplies are inadequate to meet the present heavy demands for poultry feed but said the birds, the best crop this year that Canada ever has had, seemed to have adjusted themselves to the shortage.

Those who are wise to the ways of the feathered folk said they started laying well this year, went on a "strike" about a month ago when the protein feed shortage became apparent and now are back to producing schedules again.

They said the resumption of laying was indicated by the fact offers of surplus eggs again were coming to the Special Products Board for export to the United Kingdom.

Greek Guerillas Driven From Skra By Army Unit

Athens, Nov. 20 —(AP)— The foreign office announced today that it would appeal to the United Nations for investigation of Greek border fighting as a week-old battle in the Skra-Notia sector see-sawed across a connecting mountain road and hit-and-run raids continued at other points.

An army spokesman at Salonika said the "invaders" had been driven from Skra and Notia but that fighting continued outside the towns. He said advancing troops found the bodies of 21 soldiers around Notia military headquarters and fixed the number of guerilla dead at 12.

The spokesman quoted refugees from embattled villages in the area as saying that "communists" in those communities had joined with the attacking bands in the fight against the army.

The government press office in Athens said a strong band had attacked [illegible] village, near the juncture of the borders of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Greece, and had killed the gendarmerie chief and one gendarme and set fire to freight cars loaded with merchandise.

(Moscow radio broadcast a report that the guerilla movement in northern Greece was "rapidly spreading to the south, embracing the Pindus mountain range which divides Greece in half." It reported that a band of guerillas raided an arms dump at Ternavos Nov. 10, held the town for three hours and then "retreated without having suffered any losses.")

PIECES OF SILVER TO CLUBS

Mimico, Ont., Nov. 20 (CP) — Magistrate John Pritchard used Solomon's solution of an impasse in Mimico police court yesterday. John O'Connor Thistletown was convicted of keeping a gaming house and fined $200 and costs. A pool table was confiscated. On the table police found $20 in 50-cent pieces. The magistrate ruled that half the pieces of silver were to be given to the Lions Club and the other half to the Rotary Club.

Election Pot Begins to Boil In P.E. Town

Picton, Nov. 20 — With municipal election nominations next Friday night, the pot is beginning to boil but only one definite fact seems to have emerged. Lance Nethery, local lawyer, has announced that he will be a candidate for the mayor's chair. It is possible that he will receive an acclamation. Ex-Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon, who has been acting mayor since the removal from town in August of Mayor Ralph Warren, had been expected to contest the office. He has not definitely decided what office he will seek but it is unlikely he will oppose Mr. Nethery.

Councillor Robert Cockburn is expected to contest the deputy reeveship. Reeve A. E. Grindrod is desirous of retiring but may be persuaded to seek the office again.

The nomination is expected to be a lively one, since there is great interest in the sewage disposal question.

Nomination meeting was advertised to be held in Shire Hall. A petition asking the meeting to be held in the larger Parish Hall was disregarded by council as advertising had been done. However, private persons are sponsoring a public meeting in the Parish Hall after nominations and it is expected all candidates will be heard there.

Mr. Nethery served as deputy reeve before enlisting in 1939 and going overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regt. He is a son-in-law of James deC. Hepburn, M.P.P.

Windsor Council Asks Atty-General To Conduct Inquiry

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 20. (CP) —Windsor City Council, with only one dessenting vote has asked Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell of Ontario to conduct an inquiry into its administration of justice.

A resolution to this effect was passed at last night's Council meeting with only Alderman Albert Long dissenting.

It came just before adjournment, and without prior notice, from Alderman Thomas F. Brannagan and brought from Controller Gordon B. Ellis an attack on the administration of justice throughout Ontario with criticism of the "appointment of magistrates by processes of political patronage".

"We know it has taken place in Windsor city court," he declared.

Only last week the Windsor police commission considered charges by Alderman J. Al. Kennedy and Alderman Ernest Davenport having to do with administration of justice in Windsor and Mayor Arthur J. Reaume said then the matter would be taken up by the Commission and council after the municipal election at the end of the year.

Last night's resolution from Ald. Brannagan came as a surprise.

He based it on a recital of facts surrounding acquittal of a prominent citizen on a charge of drunken driving after evidence had been given by four constables and a desk sergeant that the accused was drunk. He did not name the "prominent citizen".

Ald. Davenport expressed "grave concern" after the resolution had been put forward— "I'd like to say if I was gravely concerned before I'm much more gravely concerned now."

He based his concern on what he said was failure of the court to accept evidence of four police officers given on oath.

OPINION GROWS

of the plebiscite for Windsor would be $5,500. It would be worth it, I guess, because we can't go far wrong if we leave the matter in the hands of the people. If they want cocktail lounges, they'll vote for it."

Have Right to Demand

In Ottawa Mayor Stanley Lewis seemed to feel the same way—"obviously the people have the right to demand the privilege of casting a vote." Earlier he had heard United Church ministers in a submission urge the advisability of a plebiscite.

Mayor Lawrence of Hamilton said he disliked interfering in matters of provincial authority but nevertheless felt all municipalities — regardless of size — should have the right to vote on the question. Such a vote, however, might prove costly — in Hamilton's case "from $12,000 to $15,000."

Controller McKellar, in suggesting a plebiscite in Toronto anyway, said he doubted if there was time for the government to amend the Liquor Act and hold a plebiscite before the operational hour for cocktails in hotel bars strikes.

The man who originally raised the subject, Controller Stewart Smith, had asked only in his motion that the provincial government be asked to amend the act so a plebiscite could be held. It was approved with one dissenting voice.

No Legal Effect

Soon afterwards City Solicitor Wallace Angus admitted such a plebiscite, prior to government action on the legislation, would have no legal effect on the provincial government.

Controller Smith opposed any suggestion of a plebiscite prior to amendment of the legislation, and in this he had an echo in Windsor from Controller Brophey whose reaction showed he took the same stand.

Cntroller Brophey told Windsor Council: "I would not like to see a referendum on cocktail bars submitted to the people to distract their attention from municipal issues at the election here in December."

From Windsor's Controller Arthur L. Mason came another reaction: "I feel the people should have a right to express their views anyway. Toronto should not have tried to shove cocktail bars down our throats without first asking us about it."

WEDDINGS

ELMY—SMITH

Northport— The Rev. W. R. Pair, of Picton Pentecostal Church, officiated for a double ring nuptial ceremony on the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 16, at the home of the bride's parents, Northport, when Miss Mary Ruth Smith, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Smith, was united with Mr. Harold James Elmy, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Elmy, of Shannonville, Ont.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the drawing-room to the strains of wedding music played by Mrs. W. R. Pair. She made a very attractive picture in a floor-length gown of petal white taffeta, featuring a sweetheart neckline and a bouffant skirt. Her imported circular embroidered veil was held in place by a bandeau of gardenias, and she carried a shower bouquet of Better Time roses and bouvardia.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Lois Pair, wearing a floor-length gown of heavenly-blue silk jersey, with sweetheart neckline and full skirt. She carried, a nosegay of white, pink and blue baby 'mums ,centred with Rapture roses.

Mr. Gordon Elmy, brother of the groom, ably performed the duties of groomsman.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served. The bride's table covered with a snowy linen cloth, and decorated in the traditional shades of pink and white, was centred with a three-tier wedding cake. The Misses Christine Kerr and Doris Kerr, cousins of the bride, assisted with the serving.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pair of vanity lamps; while the bride presented her attendant with a gold glamor pin. The groomsman received a gold pen-knife, the pianist a gift of china, and the serviteurs boxes of chocolates.

For a motor trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls, and Buffalo, N.Y., the bride donned an embroidered rose feather-weight wool dress, over which she wore a gold colored fur-trimmed top coat, with black accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmy will later reside in Belleville.

SHERWIN—CURRY

At 3 p.m., on Saturday, Nov. 16th at the parsonage in Roseneath, Ont., a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. C. A. White, when Marjorie Aileen, youngest daughter of Mr. S. Curry and the late Mrs. Curry, Donald Street, Belleville, became the bride of Lloyd Everett, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Sherwin, of Roseneath, Ont.

The bride looked very lovely in a street-length dress of ice blue crepe with gold sequin trimming and brown accessories with which she wore a corsage of red and pink roses and baby breath. Her bridesmaid, Mrs. S. Parks, of Port Hope, Ont., was also gowned in blue crepe with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of pink roses and baby breath.

Mr. Keith Sherwin, brother of the groom, performed the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony a delicious supper was served to a number of relatives and friends, the table being centred by lovely three-tiered wedding cake in the dining room which was tastefully decorated for the occasion.

Amid showers of confetti the young couple left on a short honeymoon and upon return will reside in Peterborough where the groom is employed. They were the recipients of many beautiful wedding gifts.

Shannonville W.A. Holds Annual Tea and Bazaar

The L.O.L. Hall at Shannonville was a scene of activity on Wednesday afternoon when the ladies of the W.A. of the United Church held their annual bazaar and afternoon tea.

The spacious room was attractively decorated, and the tea and sales tables were all centred with bouquets of Autumn blooms. Guests were received by Mrs. A. W. Lougheed and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald, president of the W.A.

Many pretty and useful articles including a quilt in the "Dresden Plate" pattern were displayed on the fancy goods table, convened by Mrs. K. R. Vivian, Miss Eckardt and Mrs. Walter Morden. Aprons of all colors, sizes and styles were offered for sale by Mrs. Everett Stratton and Mrs. Chas. Kierl.

Delectable dainties on the home cooking table were in charge of Mrs. Russell Wescott, assisted by Mrs. Lorne Lazier, while the gaily colored packages on the "Touch and Take" table were presented by Mrs. Sam Elliott, and Mrs. Elmer Vivian.

Garden products were displayed on the vegetable table, under the direction of Mrs. Robert MacFarlane and Mrs. Clarence Mastin; while a Fish Pond convened by Mrs. Ross Shetler was a busy corner after school hours.

The table covered with a lovely lace cloth, was very attractive with its floral centre reflected from the mirror upon which it stood; Mrs. Arthur Houston and Mrs. W. D. Robertson presided over the silver services for the first hour, being later relieved by Mrs. Robert Liddle and Mrs. C. Boulstridge. Assisting were Mesdames C. Wood, W. Hicks, K. Juby, and M. Liddle with Mesdames H. Cook, Dafoe, S. MacFarlane and O. Stratton replenishing from the kitchen.

The treasurer reports that the proceeds from this effort more than repay for the effort put forth to make this event a social success.

HAMILTON HOSPITAL PACKED

Hamilton, Nov. 20 —(CP)—No beds were available today in either medical or surgical wards of the Hamilton General Hospital, Superintendent Miles G. Brown said today. Emergency cases were held in the admitting room.

Officials said the overcrowding was largely due to delays in proceeding with plans for extending the hospital. It now is expected the new hospital addition will be in operation by the end of the year.

Carmel Comrade Club Meets

The Carmel Comrade Club met in the church, Thursday evening, under the leadership of Miss Iva Horton and Mr. Harold Howes.

The meeting opened with a song service led by Mr. Carman Dafoe.

The worship service began with quiet music, Miss Horton at the piano. A poem "The Builder" was read by Mr. Clarence Chambers, followed with prayer by Mr. H. Howes and a Scripture lesson from the 16th Chapter of St. Matthew, read by Vernal Prindle. An interesting paper, "The Two Searchers", read by Mr. Harold Howes, and a solo by Mr. Carman Dafoe were much enjoyed. Miss Iva Horton introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Rev. L. Shorten of Foxboro who spoke on "Committing Our Lives to Jesus Christ".

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Shorten for his inspiring address. Musical selections by Mrs. C. Chambers, Miss Iva Horton and Mr. Carman Dafoe were sincerely appreciated, as was also a guitar duet by Miss Hilda Howes and Mr. Harold Howes.

Rev. J. R. Trumpour gave a short talk. Recreation was enjoyed under the leadership of Miss Mildred Jones and Mrs. Clayton Sullivan.

Refreshments were served by the ladies in charge.

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

WEST HUNTINGDON W. M. S.

Mrs. Peter McInroy was hostess to the West Huntingdon W.M.S. ladies on Thursday, Nov. 7, when the President, Mrs. F. Ashley, opened the meeting by using hymn "The Morning Light is Breaking", after which Mr. Stewart led in prayer, and Mrs. J. Wilson used Psalm 34 as a Scripture Lesson.

Mrs. George Cooke and Mrs. F. Wilson, as heralds of the Watch Tower brought interesting news items. The Study Book chapter was synopsized by Mrs. Elmer Poste, while Mrs. W. Fitchett and Mrs. A. Wright contributed a much appreciated vocal duet.

Mr. Stewart presided for the election of the 1947 officers with the following results:

President, Mrs. F. Ashley; 1st Vice President, Mrs. A. Wright; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. J. S. Wilson; 3rd Vice President, Mrs. R. Gay; Rec.-Sec., Mrs. Dan Cooke; Treas., Mrs. G. Cooke; Lit. Sec., Mrs. M. Sarles; Press Sec., Mrs. H. Cooke; Supply Sec., Mrs. P. McInroy; Stew. Sec., Miss Sara Wilson; Com. Friendship Sec., Mrs. C. Wright; Cor. Sec., Mrs. Stewart; Associate Helper Sec., Mrs. F. Wilson; Pianist, Mrs. W. Fitchette; Auditors, Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. E. Poste; W.A. Pres., Mrs. Cooke, Mrs. McCurdy; Sec.-Treas., Mrs. John Moorcroft; Sick Com., Mrs. P. McInroy, Mrs. M. Sarles and Mrs. M. Reid; Fin. Com., Mrs. F. Ashley, Mrs. G. Cooke and Miss Sara Wilson; Mission Band Leader, Mrs. C. Green; Assistant, Mrs. E. Poste; Card Fund, Mrs. S. McCurdy; Baby Band, Mrs. A. Ashley, Watch Tower Heralds: China, Mrs. E. Poste; Canada, Mrs. J. Gay; Japan, Mrs. P. McInroy; India, Mrs. G. Cooke. Sec. of C. Stew., Mrs. F. Hammond; Sec. for Temperance, Mrs. Baragar.

Prayer by Mrs. P. McInroy closed a profitable meeting.

MADOC

Anniversary Services Held At St. Peter's

Madoc. — Large congregations attended the anniversary services at St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, on Sunday. The services were conducted by the Minister, Rev. J. R. Murdock, B.A., who also delivered the sermons. In the morning he preached from the text: "Awake Awake, Put on Thy Strength, O Zion", Isa., 52nd, verse1. In the evening he took as his text: "Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into His Hands and that He was come from God, and went to God; He riseth from supper and laid aside his garments; and took a towel. —Gospel of St. John 13: verses 3 and 4. Music for the day included special anthem by the choir and solos by Ronald Elmy, gifted boy soprano of Belleville, who sang "Open the Gates of the Temple" and "The Holy City".

Country Fair at Bridge St. United Church a Success

As is usual the "Country Fair" attracted a large crowd of both old and young, although the event under that title was held in the Sunday School Hall of Bridge Street United Church, where visitors were eagerly examining the goods displayed in the different booths even before the "Fair" was officially declared open by Rev. D. C. Amos, who was impersonating a "barker" inviting all within the sound of his voice to 'step up and be weighed", for the small price of a nickel.

A "Rogue's Gallery" against the wall at the back of the stage created considerable merriment among the folk who closely examined the photos for some resemblance to present day and former officials and active members of the Bridge Street Congregation.

The children found much amusement at the fish pond, sponsored by the C.G.I.T. groups, while the Invictae Mission Circle was in charge of an attractive display of beautiful cards, some reminding everyone of the close proximity of the Christmas season, others of the probable need for "Birthday Greetings" or "Good Wishes" to a sick or shut-in friend.

Interest In Novelty Booth

Ladies evidenced a lively interest in the "Novelty Booth" convened by Mrs. Price, Mrs. Gilroy and Mrs. Bateman, where aprons, fancy articles, children's wear and "novelties" of many kinds suggested Christmas gift possibilities. The home-cooking table also attracted considerable attention with its tempting array of assorted pies, cakes, cookies and tarts, as well as canned fruits, vegetables and freshly laid eggs. This booth was in charge of Mesdames Countryman, Massey and Fetterly.

Relationship between home and church life was aptly suggested by the Young Adult Group of the congregation in an attractive model of a log cabin home, complete with fireplace and chimney, displaying invitingly lighted windows against a terraced background of green. Three outstanding posters presented the thought-provoking captions — 1st, "Our Church Serves Your Home" 2nd, "Our Home Can Serve Our Church"; 3rd— "Is Your Home Off Balance?".

Minister Acts As M. C.

Mr. Amos as master of ceremonies for the program, invited "Grandma Jerusha Dow" (Miss Helen Sulman) to present the story of her Family Album assisted by her granddaughter, "Rosie May", (Loraine Hopkins), Grandma's reminiscences about the relatives pictured were very enlightening as to personalities and characteristics.

Other numbers on the program consisted of two readings by Miss Nancy David and musical contributions by Mr. Bruce Sills on a piano accordion and a musical saw, all of which were greatly enjoyed and appreciated.

"The Young Fry" presented an impromptu parody on "The Family Album" with modern characters for the 1947 Album, the outstanding picture being one of how Rev. D. C. Amos will probably look a year from now, which was the cause of considerable hilarity.

No country fair would be complete without a refreshment booth, and this one was no exception to the rule, a wide choice of things palatable to the tastes of old and young were offered in the "tea room" and at the table holding apple juice, pop corn and chocolate drinks; the former being convened by Mrs. Finkle, Mrs. P. McGuire and Mrs. McCabe, and the latter under the direction of Miss Jessie Hart, president of the Young People's organization.

Mr. Ray Grant was treasurer for this altogether novel "bazaar", which proved that a joint project of various groups may indeed become an outstanding success.

Christian Youth Fellowship Meets At Emmanuel Ch.

The auditorium of Emmanuel Church was well filled on Monday night for the fifth inter-denominational meeting of the Christian Youth Fellowship of Belleville. Splendid music and an inspiring message given by Rev. Arnold R. Kalamen, Th.B., evangelist and gospel soloist of New Jersey, highlighted the evening of worship.

Prefacing his address with a solo entitled "The Love of God" Mr. Kalamen lifted his splendid voice in joyous cadences that resounded from every rafter and throbbed yet again in the hearts of an audience that was visibly moved by the earnestness of the singer.

"My finite mind cannot fully comprehend the immeasurable, unmerited love of God as manifested in Jesus Christ," said the speaker. "The more you know Jesus the more you love Him. When you speak of Him it draws toward the inner strings of your heart. What we need is a personal revelation of Christ and not second hand information. Like Bedouins, we are making this pilgrimage on earth but some day we shall meet Him face to face.

Avoid Spiritual Pearl Harbor

"The nations today talk of peace but they leave out the Prince of Peace. The word of God tells us that Jesus will return to the earth some day to reign in righteousness, King of Kings and Lord of Lords. We do not know the day nor the hour, but He has promised to come again. Let us therefore avoid a spiritual Pearl Harbor by being prepared for that great day."

Chairman for the evening was Mr. Geo. Ellerby and leader of the song service, Mr. Eric C. Naylor. Scripture was read by Mr. W. Wright. Two inspiring numbers were sung by the youth choir under the direction of Mr. Stan Lessels, "Jesus Is The Joy of Living" and "Where's a New Day Dawning." A trio of young ladies from Kingston, Miss Ruth Hall, Mrs. Ted Loney and Miss Kay Hudson, sang very sweetly "The Lord Is My Shepherd," and "Living for Jesus." Their accompanist was Mrs. Loney Sr.

Mr. Gordon Brown, well known local violinist, contributed an instrumental number that was sincerely appreciated. Miss Dorothy Mitchell, pianist of the evening, gave her usual sterling performance.

The benediction, given by Rev. Telford S. Russell, pastor of Emmanuel Church, brought to a close another in the series of services that are proving to be so worthwhile to the Christian youth of the city.

TO TRY AGAIN

London, Nov. 20 — (Reuters)— Sir Malcolm Campbell, holder of the world water speed records, plans to pilot his jet-powered "Blue Bird II" on Coniston water, in the lake district of England next March.

Sir Malcolm said last night he will be "stepping into the unknown," and will have to "go very warily" as the slightest error might cause the speedboat to capsize.

"Blue Bird II" will be the most powerful speedboat ever built.

UNRRA Outlined To Kiwanis Club By Mrs. C. Reid

Three new members were introduced and initiated into the Kiwanis Club at their weekly meeting held at the Hotel Quinte on Tuesday. The members also heard a most interesting account of the operations of UNRRA in Greece by Mrs. Caroline E. Reid of Kingston. Don Stanton, introduced by Frank Creeggan, Jack Bonn introduced by Bill Brown and Dr. George Craig introduced by Ross Stiver, were the new members initiated by Past Lieutenant Governor Cliff Baragar. The welcome to the club was extended by President Mark Vanner.

The President also announced that at a recent meeting of the directorate, Ross Stiver, the efficient secretary of the Kiwanis Club for many years had resigned that office on account of pressure of business and health and that Taylor Franklin would in future be the secretary of the club with W. S. Stone as treasurer. A number of invitations were extended to the local club to join with other clubs in celebrating certain events. Peterboro Club will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its founding on November 21st with a ladies' night and Watertown Club is holding a reception and Ladies' Night on December 3rd to welcome their new District Governor. It is more than likely that many Belleville members will be at both parties.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Leo Dandeno and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Harry Trepanier. Mrs. Reid stated that 44 nations comprise the UNRRA and that it was the first post-war organization to operate in Europe, where 35 countries were overrun with Greece, Poland, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Albania receiving full-scale operations of the UNRRA. The speaker stated that all countries agreed to give one per cent of their national income into UnRRA but some countries gave as high as 10 per cent and Canada was the second highest contributor. It was explained that UNRRA would cease operations in Greece in about six weeks and the organization would be out of existence about the middle of March next year.

Mrs. Reid explained that Greece was completely drained of food by the Nazis, who came into the country when the harvest was taken off and collecting it at special warehouses had it all transported to Germany. "The caloric content for the people of Greece when the UNRRA entered was 205 per head per day and the average necessary to maintain proper health is 2,000, so one can see the terrible misery that the people suffered" said Mrs. Reid. She explained that shipping was a great problem for UNRRA but the organization finally drafted one-half million tons of shipping and when the goods arrived it was always a problem as to what to unload first. The main bulk of the supplies was handled over to the government and UNRRA became an observing body and not an operating body. "A black market existed in Greece" said the speaker, "but they also had the highest standard of distribution."

72,000 Taken from Home

Mrs. Reid stated that 72,000 Greeks were taken from their homes for forced labor in Germany and only 12,000 returned and that 80 per cent of the population was eligible for UNRRA. "No race, color or creed was discriminated against in the distribution of supplies and Greece is 100 per cent better off than it was when I went there nearly two years ago but there is a long way to go yet before the country will be producing all the needs of the people" said Mrs. Reid. The speaker described the procedure taken with Displaced Persons, which she stated was the most complicated problem that had to be dealt with but order was being brought out of chaos.

New Soapless VEL
Is New Modern Cleaner

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Soapless VEL has changed my ideas of washing clothes and doing dishes. This modern discovery has shown me for all time that heavy suds, such as soap products produce, are not necessary for cleaning.

The light fluffy suds you get with VEL are somewhat like a frothy drink or an ice-cream soda—the goodness is beneath the froth and bubble—and lasts long after the suds subside. You don't need lasting suds with VEL. I've found that the clear solution left after VEL suds dissolve, has all of VEL's original cleaning power. And it acts just as soft as rain water. That's why VEL is so easy on the hands and so beneficial in the bath-tub.

VEL FOR DISHWASHING

A teaspoonful or two of soapless VEL in dishpan or sink (nothing else, please!) is all that is required to speed up dishwashing. No need to add soap or any other cleaner to your VEL solution. Soapless VEL alone cuts grease quickly and leaves no smears on glass or china, nor scarcely any scum around the sink. For hard-to-clean pots and pans and for egg-stained spoons and plates, VEL's cleansing action is really amazing.

VEL FOR DELICATE FABRICS

I have found that soapless VEL dissolves instantly and completely in lukewarm water. This makes it particularly good for washing lingerie, woolens and nylons. Unlike soap, VEL is a neutral product, free from soapy alkalis. It contains nothing to harm colours or delicate fabrics. Use a little less VEL than soap (no need to add more when the suds subside). You'll find one rinsing is sufficient and it eliminates soapy film and scum.

VEL FOR HOUSEHOLD CLEANING

A tablespoonful of soapless VEL in a pail of warm water quickly removes grease and dirt from painted surfaces, walls, windows, mirrors and tiles. No rubbing, rinsing or drying is necessary. Just wring out the cloth and wipe off the dirt.

London Letter

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 20—(CP)—Trains rumble overhead and traffic noises fill the streets outside, but in the Players' Theatre the Victorian show lives again.

This is where Rudyard Kipling got his inspiration for "Barrack Room Ballads." It was Gatti's Music Hall then, under the arches of the approach to Charing Cross railway bridge across the Thames. Later it became a movie theatre.

Early this year the players moved in, to bring back the 19th Century. Their theatre is a cabaret club, only one of its kind in London and probably in the world.

The audience, restricted to members and their guests, sit in canvas-seated chairs around small tables, sipping beer or spirits as they watch. Century-old jokes are accepted with gales of laughter and applause.

This is no ordinary audience. It knows everything by heart; and it joins in the choruses of the old songs with more gusto than the actors.

Nothing since the reign of Queen Victoria is recognized. Compere Leonard Sachs and his deputy, Don Gemmell, wear Victorian costume — fawn trousers, chocolate-colored coat, winged collar and black four-in-hand ties. Even their haircuts are 19th Century.

"The queen," says Gemmell with reverence, "would certainly not be amused."

The wit in the audience who had made some questionable remark is crushed by the awful hush which follows the reference to Her Majesty.

"India? Her Majesty's latest colony, you know," says Gemmell. Visitors laugh: but the "regulars" accept this sally as a sign of Gemmell's erudition.

". . . Our cousins — late brothers — in America," says Gemmell in a reference to the American Revolution. Everybody roars in delight.

This is probably the easiest audience in the world to entertain. It is less interested in the quality of the acts than in its own part in the show. Its frequent applause is just as exaggerated as the motions of the "Victorian" actors and actresses.

Gatti's was a place for the common soldier and the little man. "Fourpence, which included a pewter of beer or porter, was the price of admission," wrote Kipling in "Something of Myself."

The Players' Theatre is more expensive by far, with its two guinea ($8.50) membership fee, two guinea annual subscription and costly drinks; and it draws mostly officers, intellectuals and successful businessmen.

But the songs are the same. The place rocks when the audience helps vivacious Joan Sterndale Bennett sing "He's Going to Marry Mary Ann" or "Algy." Daphne Anderson (Gemmell calls her "The English Rosebud") almost brings tears with "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree."

"It's Naughty But It's Nice," "Covent Garden in the Morning," "The Sweet Little Girl with the Jersey On," "Love's Old Sweet Song," "Mother Says I Mustn't" — all get their turn on the program.

And tomorrow night or the next night all the "regulars" are back, with a new bunch of guests, ready for another trip back to the Victorian era. The Players' Theatre has lived 10 years now, at various locations, and it's more popular than ever.

Abandoned Freighter Flying "Revolt Aboard" Found Off Portugal

Lisbon, Nov. 19 — (AP) — A marine mystery was revealed yesterday when the Portuguese steamship Ilha Do Corvo arrived towing a small Spanish freighter found abandoned 300 miles off the Portuguese coast. The steamship's crew said signal flags denoting "man overboard" and "revolt aboard" were flying from the halyards of the 300-ton Spanish vessel. Broken bottles and other debris were strewn about the decks.

Bread Drivers to Place Demand Before Board

Toronto, Nov. 19 — (CP) — More than 800 Toronto bread drivers plan to unite in placing a demand for higher wages before the Ontario Regional War Labor Board, Al Hearn, business agent of Local 847 of the Bakery Wagon Drivers' Union, said today.

The drivers took their decision last night at a special meeting called following announcement that the National War Labor Board had disallowed increases the Brown's Bread Company granted 220 of its employees.

Raymond Hamilton, 19, who was charged yesterday with the murder of Alfred Hull, 43-year-old Queen St. East shopkeeper, who had made a place for the jobless youth in his home and in his store.

HYDRO OFFICIALS

Cost Estimated at $45,000,000

In this way the cost up to the time when the Des Joachims plant would be loaded was estimated at $45,000,000. This figure includes all costs incidental to frequency conversion. Including the changing of consumer equipment.

The commission emphasized the information continued in the report was presented as a basis for consideration and discussion.

Commenting on the proposed changeover, Gordon Mathews, of Peterborough, Past President of the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association, said the plan would have "all of Ontario behind it."

"The longer the project is postponed, the more it will cost," he said recommending that it should be undertaken as soon as possible.

Report Must be Studied

"One cannot properly evaluate the report until a careful study has been made of it," K. A. Christie, K.C., Honorary Vice-President and former chairman of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, said in commenting on the report.

"Pending a more detailed study," said Mr. Christie, "I think there will be general agreement of the advisability of the changeover provided the cost of making it is not prohibitive and is distributed in an equitable manner."

There is no doubt in the mind of R. M. Durnford, Sarnia, President of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, as to the necessity of the changeover.

"There is no question of it being done—it will have to be done," he declared last night.

Mr. Durnford headed a delegation of 25 of his executive members which received the report from Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the commission, yesterday.

He said that even those members of the executive who were somewhat adverse to such a step, believing it would mean added expense to the consumer, were surprised to learn that the commission was agreeable to bearing the cost of the changeover.

"The commission proposed to pay for it out of its reserves on the condition that the municipalities assume a status quo on rates and waive any potential reductions," he said.

11 Radios Stolen From Hamilton Shop

Hamilton, Nov. 19 — (CP) — Robbers late last night or early today broke into premises of Heintzman and Co. Ltd., King St. East and then forced their way into the Morris Luggage Store at 77 King Street East.

Police said the thieves climbed to the second storey roof at the rear of a restaurant and then forced open a window leading to the Heintzman store. Here they obtained 11 radios valued in all at about $300. They then forced open a window leading to the luggage store. Merchandise valued at several hundred dollars was stolen.

Veteran Team Captains Proof That Experience Still Factor In Pepped-up N.H.L. Race

Every One of the Six Can be Found Well Up in Scoring Summaries

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

To counter-balance the accent on youth place by Toronto's rollicking young Maple Leafs, the National Hockey League offered ample evidence today that experience remains a potent factor in this day of the speed-demanding redline rule.

For a representative sample of how the Old Guard is standing the strain, how about the showing of the league's six team captains, whose combined playing time adds up to more than 40 years?

Every one of the six can be found well up in the scoring summaries. Even Toe Blake, the patriarch of the sextette at 34, refuted any suggestion of slowing up by turning one of the league's infrequent hat-tricks as his Montreal Canadiens whipped Boston Bruins Sunday night.

The other five captains, none of whom show signs of arthritis attacks, are Bobby Bauer of Boston; Sid Abel of Detroit Red Wings; Red Hamill of Chicago Black Hawks; Syl Apps of Toronto and Neil Colville of New York Rangers.

None who have watched the lanky Apps seemingly leap down the ice in two strides would compare his speed unfavorably with any of the six rookies on the Toronto lineup. Although out more than three weeks through injury, the 31-year-old Paris, Ont., native has helped himself to four goals besides being the rallying post of the league-leaders.

Starting Fifth Campaign.

The two youngest of the sextette, 28-year-old Sid Abel and 29-year-old Hamill, have compiled the best scoring records so far this season with 11 points each, seven off the leading total of Detroit's Billy Taylor.

Although pushing 30, both Abel and Hamill are starting only their fifth N.H.L. season as both went into the services after the 1942-43 season.

Little Bobby Bauer, who hadn't even intended to turn out this season, so far has picked up four goals and as many assists to form an integral part of the third-place Bruins' attack. The silver-thatched Colville, at 32, returned from the army to move back to the New York defence.

Four of these veterans will be showing their wares tonight when Toronto goes to Boston and Detroit visits Chicago in the two N.H.L. matches scheduled. Bruins will be seeking to better their third-place position at the expense of the league leaders while the other two are fighting it out for fourth place, with Detroit holding the spot by a single point over Hawks.

In the Toronto-Boston clash, there is another potent argument for the value of experience. The two rival goalies so far are leading candidates for the Vezina Trophy, the 32-year-old Walter (Turk) Broda with 26 goals scored on him in 11 Toronto games and Boston's 31-year-old Frankie Brimsek with three more in 12 matches.

Vic Christie makes his first appearance in a Belleville ring on Friday night when he wrestles Karl Krippler Davis, he of the "Shoulder-Smash" technique who has accounted for any number of defeated opponents in this city. The tall stream-lined Christie who has been nick-named by sports-writers all over the continent as "Baby-face" is one of the internationally known "greats" of wrestling. Violent Victor is a treat to watch in action and has satisfied more wrestling fans with his perfect elbow-smash action than any other of all the big matmen.

Friday's card also has the Sharpe Brothers, tall and statuesque Hamilton boys, in action. Ben Sharpe the older brother — (He's twenty-seven girls) meets big Olaf Olsen the Swedish Swiveller. Mike Sharpe, the younger member of the Tiger team stands over six feet six inches and is only twenty-two years old. As important a wrestling authority as old Strangler Lewis recently predicted that young Mike will go right to the very top of the wrestling heap in the next few seasons. On Friday night here Mighty Michael meets the elongated Henry Piers of Holland to round out a card of thrills and action.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Through the mail comes a note from a boxing fan asking if this desk knows anything about the greatest double - cross in the history of boxdom. Sorry we can't recall that, but we do have a record of the greatest double-cross in fistiana.

You'll have to go back four or five decades when the famous Peter Maher and Kid McCoy had both lost their prowess but not their mutual contempt.

Certain folks who were getting up a benefit affair thought the "card" would be wonderfully attractive if Maher and McCoy, then long beyond their ring days, during which they were deadly rivals, could be brought face to face in an exhibition bout.

"I don't suppose there is much chance of getting them together remarked one of the promoting group.

"Leave it to me," replied another, and he went out hunting Peter. After a bit of idle talk he said, "Oh, by the way, Peter, I hear that Kid McCoy has been talking about you. He called you an old fossil, or something like that."

"He said that about me?" thundered Peter.

"Yes, so I hear," was the answer. And I understand, Peter, that he's been boasting about how he licked you. Claims you were about the softest thing he ever tackled."

While Maher was speechless with rage, the promoter bloke said, as an afterthought. "Peter, a boxing benefit has been arranged for next week and the boys would like to have you take part in a four-rounder. All the old-timers are going to be on the bill, including McCoy."

Maher's eyes narrowed. "Well," he said. "I'll box if you let me box with McCoy. Do you think you can fix that for me—get me the match with McCoy?"

"Sure I will, promised the promoter and away he went in search of McCoy.

"Say, Kid," he said by way of introduction. "I hear that Peter Maher has been going around telling people that the victory you scored over him years ago was a fluke. Pete's telling 'em he'd have killed you if you hadn't slipped over a lucky punch."

McCoy's face took on a savage expression, but before he could speak the other fellow cut in with: "By the way, Kid, the boys want you to take part in a benefit entertainment next week; want you to work in a four-rounder. Peter Maher's going to be on the bill and—"

"Peter Maher, you say? Is Pete figurin' on boxing?" asked the Kid excitedly.

"Yes."

"Who's he going to box?"

"Oh, Pete says he'll box anybody we pick. He isn't particular."

"Give me the match with that fat-headed Irishman and I'll box at your benefit, said the Kid.

It's a bargain," agreed the promoter.

Only relics of the splendidly conditioned warriors of their more youthful days, Maher and McCoy climbed through the ropes that night. As the cheers for the veterans died down, the referee called the boxers to him and said. "Now remember boys, this is to be only an exhibition match; no slugging, no rough stuff."

Peter and the Kid shook hands, squared away and sparred for a few seconds. Then the Kid backed off and, seemingly oblivious to the presence of Maher in the ring, began to look around the crowd as if in search of some familiar faces.

Maher was watching him intently. Was that stance a trick of the Kid's? Maher pondered over it. At last he decided it wasn't. Memory of knockout by the Kid ten years or so before came back to him. It kindled a fierce anger. He remembered, too, that the Kid had called him an "old fossil" just recently.

Maher took a step forward. McCoy did not move. Another step! Maher was within range of McCoy's jaw, with the Kid still looking out into the audience. The Irishman steadied himself, doubled his huge right fish, and let fly a "haymaker" for the jaw of McCoy.

But it never landed.

McCoy, one of the brainiest, trickiest men that ever stepped into the ring, had assumed that apparently unprotected attitude in the hope of boxing Maher into a swing. It did. With the very fraction of a second that Maher started his punch, McCoy whirled out of range and before Maher could recover, McCoy had hooked a right hander with crashing force to Peter's jaw.

Peter dropped as though struck by a crowbar. The bout was over. McCoy had scored a kayo that never went in the books.

HAMILTON PATS NOW SECOND IN SENIOR SERIES

O.H.A. Referees Will Meet on Sunday in Toronto to Discuss Rules

(By The Canadian Press)

In the only Ontario Hockey Association game played last night, Hamilton Patricias moved into a second place tie in the senior series by trouncing the luckless Owen Sound Mohawks, 7-2. The win boosted Pats up to the level of the second slot Toronto Staffords.

It was the third win for Pats as against three losses, while it was Mohawks' fourth loss in as many starts.

Veteran Hugh Barlow paced the Pats offensive with a hat-trick performance, one goal in each period. Tom Tindal tallied two and Murray Comfort and Ted Grasser garnered the others. Hard-working Jimmy Boddy counted both Mohawk scores.

Owen Sound made a brave fight in the initial period holding the visitors to a 1-1 tie but Pats added three in the middle frame and three more in the last stanza to wipe out any chances the Mohawks had of winning the first victory.

An important meeting of OHA referees has been called for Sunday, Nov. 24 at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto. The meeting is slated for 2 p.m. in room 9 of the hotel. All persons who expect to act as arbiters in O.H.A. series this season are requested to be there. Following the referees meeting, the sub-committee of the O.H.A. will meet.

Two junior games and one senior tilt are scheduled for tonight.

Stratford Indians travel to Hamilton where they meet the league-leading Tigers. Tigers won two previous contests from Indians by 9-3 and 5-0 scores.

A four-point tilt brings Toronto Marlboros to Stratford for the teams' second meeting this year. Kroehlers topped the Torontonians 8-2 in their first battle. The second junior game sees Galt Red Wings tangle with the powerful St. Michael's Majors at Maple Leaf Gardens. St. Mikes won their first encounter against the Red Wings 4-2.

Agreement Slams Door in Face Of Army for Game

Berkeley, Calif., Nov. 20 — (AP)—The Pacific Coast and Big Nine conferences early today signed a five-year football agreement that slammed the Rose Bowl door in anxious Army's face and probably will send Illinois—which voted against the pact—into the world's richest bowl contest Jan. 1.

Illinois, ranking fifth nationally, is the potential Big Nine (Western Conference) champion, having only to win from Northwestern Saturday to clinch the title. Other colleges making up the Big Nine are Indiana, Purdue, Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio State, Wisconsin and Iowa.

An official press release by the Big Nine-Pacific Coast negotiators made no mention of powerful Army, but the terms of the agreement left the Blanchard-Davis machine—No. 1 in the United States—out in the cold.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By NORM ALTSTEDTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, Nov. 20,— (CP)—Bobby-soxers almost everywhere make much of that thin man who moans into a microphone but in Regina the burly boys on skates are not without their feminine following.

When a group of collegiate girls wrote pleading for a lowering of prices to students at the local hockey emporium, Scotty (Regina Leader-Post) Melville appointed himself "Galahad of the younger herd" and promised to take the matter up with the hockey masters.

Odd baby-sitting jobs didn't boost the girls' finances sufficient to take the 50 to 75-cent rap of adult tickets — the ladies were not happy about sitting in the section reserved for the strictly small fry.

The rink management, including officials of the senior Capitals and the junior Patricias were all in favor of a 25 or 30-cent student ticket but remembered with distaste the number of middle-aged fans who entered on students' tickets in previous years. If the kids could evolve a fool-proof plan they would revive the old student order.

The young hockey idolizers were miffed at the idea that the escutcheon of the whole collegiate crowd should be blotted by the racketeering of only a few of their clan and deemed it "contrary to British justice." Nevertheless, the girls suggested that a special wicket for students be installed with a bobby-soxed scrutineer handling the turnstile to ensure that no greybeards slipped by on students' tickets.

Another teen-ager, self-styled "the brain," came up with the idea of a rubber stamp, applied to young wrists when they bought their tickets at the school and later to be proudly displayed at the wicket.

Meanwhile, the management is making ironclad arrangements through the physical training instructor of one collegiate and is considering the idea of the rubber stamp for an overall plan.

Who said the younger generation was decadent?

PLAYERS URGED TO COMPETE IN TOURNEYSBOOKED

Big Name Golfers Do Not Like Grind of Forty Tournaments a Year

Chicago, Nov. 20 — (AP)—Reluctance of some star golfers to continue the grind of playing a schedule of 40-odd tournaments a year is a problem now being discussed by the United States Professional Golfers Association at its annual meeting here.

Ed Dudley of Colorado Springs, Colo., elected P. G. A. president for his sixth term yesterday, said the executive committee was studying methods of urging players to compete in tourneys for which they are booked. This would avoid dissension among sponsors because of absenteeism of big name drawing cards.

Dudley said the new tournament program would include the establishment of a tournament bureau office in Chicago to serve as a clearing house for players and sponsors alike.

Byron Nelson, who retired to his Texas ranch last fall with the decision to play in only major meets each season, may be followed by such top performers as Ben Hogan and Sam Snead who also would like to pick their spots in the future and appear only in 10 or so big meets.

Meantime, a committee of Walter Hagen, Craig Wood and Fred Corcoran, manager of the Tournament Bureau, is studying a player selection plan for the American Ryder Cup team. Dudley has received word from the British P.G.A. that England is anxious to revive the Ryder Cup series next year after a war-enforced lapse of 10 years.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 19 — (CP) — Contributions to sport made by James J. Walker, witty and dapper mayor of New York in the 20s who died Monday, were recognized in many columns of tribute in local sports pages . . . . One newspaper called Jimmy "New York's No. 1 sports fan" and all mentioned his sponsorship of the. Walker Law legalizing boxing in New York State and other bills permitting Sunday baseball and movies . . . Jimmy introduced the bills while a State Senator, thus opening the way for Tex Rickard's fabulous New York boxing promotions of the 20s . . . The Walker Boxing Law came into effect March 25, 1920.

Fair Enough

Walker loved all sports and was a familiar figure at major events but he liked boxing best because, as he said once: "I like it because a man is on his own in the ring. Nobody asks where he was born, who his parents were and what his religious faith was. All they want to know is: can he fight? . . .

The Master Touch

Walker's great gift for an apt phrase was perhaps demonstrated by his comments at the Edward J. O'Neill (boxing) award dinner in 1941 . . . Jimmy presented the trophy, given annually to the man judged to have done most for boxing, to heavyweight champion Joe Louis . . . Then he turned to the outstanding Negro boxer and said: "Joe, you have laid a rose on Abe Lincoln's grave."

Not Without Honor

Incidentally, Walker was the only man ever to win both the O'Neill award and the Boxing Writers' annual Meritorious Service Award . . .

The Fight Beat

Bob Montgomery will defend his lightweight title Nov. 26 against Wesley Mouzon . . . That is, he'll defend the New York-Pennsylvania version of the championship . . . Ike Williams is recognized as "world" champion by the National Boxing Association.

MANITOBA WILL MAKE BID FOR SENIOR HONORS

Three-Team League Will Operate in Winnipeg This Winter

Winnipeg, Nov. 20. (CP) — This year, for the first time in 15 years, Manitoba will make a real bid for Dominion Senior Hockey honors, not since 1931, when the Winnipegs won the Allan Cup and brought back the world's championship from Lake Placid Olympics a year later, has a potential championship senior team.

Now, senior hockey-starved fans here will have an opportunity to view a first-rate three-team league which will open at the amphitheatre rink tonight when the Stylists, Manitoba's only Senior entry last season, tackle the newly-organized Flyers. The third team—Selkirk fishermen— will see action against the Stylists Nov. 27.

In past years, most players on completion of the Junior Hockey, left the city to seek their fortunes elsewhere and consequently Senior hockey here folded up. But this year, through the efforts of a few businessmen, a number of last year's juniors were persuaded to stick and perform for local fans. These, along with other local talent, make up the nucleus of the new loop, and hockey fans are predicting great things for Manitoba's Senior winner.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

True bridge never runs smooth. Gossip gushers do not permit it. They spread false rumors that can be traced to no reliable source. Their phoney reports start nowhere and end that way.

Someone has again dug up the old hearsay that an opening of one no-trump is forcing. The twisted tale is that if partner starts with a one no-trump bid, you must make a bid in response. 'Taint so.

When these misinformaniacs get around to you, waive them to the showers. They are out of line. An opening one no-trump is not forcing. It never was. It has no reason to be.

A bid that is forcing requires partner to bid. It is a bid that does not permit partner to pass. Even if he has nothing. Even if he has no more than the minimum already expected.

To do this with an opening of one no-trump is impractical. It is mathematically wrong. It is logically irresponsible. It is contrary to natural policy in the sensible purpose of bids.

To make any one bid, the pair must take seven tricks. The opener promises five of them. Two are expected in partner. If forced to bid, partner with two or less is deliberately asking for defeat.

For a time, players gave you an argument. It was: "If partner opens with a no-trump and I have a bust, it plays better in a suit of nine no matter how weak." And it listened good.

Came an epidemic of rescuers. Every time a player opened with a no-trump, his partner would stagger in. Lifesavers were all over the place. Instead of saving, they lost him as a partner.

You have this hand:

♥ 8 4 3
♣ 9 7 3 2

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one no-trump. Are you forced to bid? Only when you have no regard for life, limb, and the pursuit of happiness.

OMAHA KNIGHTS IN SECOND PLACE

(By The Canadian Press)

The up-and-coming Omaha Knights took over second place in the United States Hockey League's Northern Division last night by shutting out Dallas Texans 6-0. The victory gave the Knights a one-point margin over the idle St. Paul Saints.

Goalie Harvey Jessiman chalked up his second shutout of the season. In his last three games he has allowed only one goal. Joe Iannarelli led the Knights with 2 goals. Winkie Smith, Don Morrison, Sam Kennedy and Forbes notched the other four.

In the league's other contest Tulsa's Oilers boosted their Southern Division leadership to three points by whipping the hapless Houston Skippers 4-1. Bud Lamarche, who starred in the nets for Tulsa, had a 4-0 shutout until 5:18 of the third period when Whitey Carls scored. Ralph (Bus) Wycherly counted twice for the Oilers and Dillon and Ublaco accounted for the other points.

It was the eighth straight defeat for the Skippers who have been unable to gain but one tie this season.

AT THE CAPITOL — Conrad Janis and Janis Wilson are two of the George Abbott hand-picked unknowns to play principal roles in the film production of his Broadway stage hit, "Snafu," showing under the Columbia Picture banner at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow. They have many tender scenes in this comedy of a returned under-age war hero. On the same program "Rough Riders of Cheyenne" with Sunset Carson.

West Point Cadets Voted Best College Team of the Year

(By The Canadian Press),

The weekly Associated Press poll of 110 sport writers in the United States resulted in 58 votes for the West Point Cadets as the college football team of the year. Sixteen of the scribes marked their ballots for Notre Dame, compared with 31 supporters for the Irish one week ago, while 23 other writers paired the teams for the initial position.

Georgia was given the preference for third place in the unofficial standing, slightly ahead of the University of California at Los Angeles. University of Illinois was next in the list.

Directors of the American Association yesterday signed Frank Lane, general manager of the Kansas City Blues to a two-year contract at a reported $12,000 annually as president of the circuit in succession to H. Roy Hamey.

Col. Lawrence Jones, manager of Athletics at West Point, said yesterday the Cadets had not yet received any invitation to a bowl game on New Year's Day. It had been reported the Army would be one team for the Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena.

Cliff Roach, son of Mickey Roach of Sydney, N.S., famous goaltender of the former New York Americans was signed yesterday to a $4,000 contract for one year by Providence Reds of the American Hockey League. Cliff has been playing coach of Truro Bearcats in the Maritime Senior Circuit.

Top price at yesterday's Keeneland Fall sales, Lexington, Ky., was the $15,700 paid for a yearling bay colt at Whirlaway-Blue Delight in a purchase by Point-a-View stud farm from John Marsch and T. S. Piatt.

In a scheduled game last night of the Basketball Association of America at Philadelphia, St. Louis Bombers rang up their sixth victory in seven starts with a 66-63 decision over the Warriors with a crowd of 33,135 in attendance.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking the 2nd half of his ferst cigar, and ma said, William, I want to tell you the most wierd and uncanny thing. Every time I open the dictionerry at random it invariably falls open between pages 252 and 253. I mean it's happened so often it's the pure hand of Fate. Always between those same 2 pages, in the mist of the letter eyes. I think I'll talk to Madame Seero and ask her if there's a dictionery in my life, she said.

Madame Seero being the lady palm reeder in the Zipper Tea Room, and pop said, You dont need Madame Seero, my dear, you need a syko analist.

Now I'm not going to consult any expensive syko annalist, it may not be that serious, ma said, and pop said, I've dabbled a little in syko annalysis, so maybe I can help you out. Just shut your eyes and relax and think of nothing but werds, werds, werds, he said.

All right, yes, go on, ma said, and pop said, Does the werd irresistible end in ibble or abble? Never mind trying to answer, I know you have no idea. You've asked me how to spell that werd a thousand times, and when I'm not here you ask the dictionerry, so as a result of going through the motions so many times, the book opens to that page all by itself now. Look between pages 252 and three and I'll bet you'll find irresistible, he said.

Which ma quick looked, and that's where it was, and ma said, Well I don't care, that's not enough to explain an unthinking dictionerry acting like that. I think I'll ask Madame Seero anyway. She's uncanny, she told Elsie Cavanna she was thinking seriously of going to see a docter, and as a matter of fact Elsie had an engagement to meet her husband, Dr. Cavanna, in just 20 minutes. I really think I'll talk to her, ma said.

Meening Madame Seero.

BEES AND MILD WEATHER

St. Thomas, Nov. 20 (CP)—The unusually mild weather this fall is creating problems for district bee keepers. The bees that were put away weeks ago for winter hibernation are still active in the hives and apiarists said there is a serious danger of disease and high mortality developing.

Court of Appeal Reserves Decision On Slasher Verdict

Toronto, Nov. 20 — (CP)—The fate of 18-year-old Ronald George Sears of Windsor, Ont, today was in the hands of the Ontario Court of Appeal.

Yesterday, the Appelate Division of the Ontario Supreme Court reserved decision in the appeal of the young Windsor lad who was sentenced to be hanged Dec. 3 for the slasher slaying in Windsor of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price in August, 1945. Sears was sentenced last September.

The two-day hearing was highlighted by argument of G. A. Martin, counsel for Sears, who said statements allegedly made to Windsor police after the youth was taken into custody last July were obtained "by improper pressure and influence."

Martin described Sears as a youth "addicted to going to the movies to see horror pictures." He expressed the opinion that, on reading the accounts of the slasher killings which terrified Windsor citizens, Sears signed the statements to "gain notoriety and put himself in the public eye."

Mr. Justice W. T. Henderson said he could not be convinced that a statement made "under the conditions admitted could be voluntary."

C. R. Magone, appearing for the Attorney-General, told the court that details which had been described in the appelant's statements had been identical with those surrounding the murder. He maintained no undue pressure was exerted by police.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 1

The little tearoom was cheerful enough on a grim January day. Each small table wore a checked red-and-white cloth and was decorated with a slim glass vase and three jonquils.

Jennifer Richie sat at one of the little tables, the farthest one from the door, under the slant of the stairway, and waited. She waited as a woman waits when a child is in the surgery or when a strong drug is fighting in the hands of doctors and nurses to save an indispensable life.

Her tragic young eyes moved from the clock to the doorway, the doorway to the clock. But they took in everything else too. The little tables, the lunching, murmuring women, the smart cashier at her raised desk, the pretty girl having such a good time with the so obviously infatuated young man. Every time there was a bustle of moving shadows in the cramped little lobby, as some man checked his hat or some woman her parcels, Jennifer's heart sprang up; that might be Sid..

Finally it was Sid—only twenty minutes late. But then she had been twelve minutes early, and the added minutes dragging by had made it a long wait. And even now it was not much better. For Sid looked just his usual compact, well-groomed, selfpossessed self. No look of concern, nothing new and serious in his aspect. Just Sid, the man she had adored from the first moment her eyes had fallen upon him; not rich, but with much more money than Jennifer had ever before seen so casually spent; not handsome exactly, but with the sort of assured, aristocratic, confident look that all women loved. Sid, whose years were twenty-six to her eighteen, who seemed grown up and sophisticated and wise beyond her wildest girl-dream of a lover.

He slid out of his shabby, handsome coat. Sidney Borrows, IV, could afford to wear a shabby coat, when it was of that material and that make. His smile was just the impersonal smile she expected as he took his chair and picked up the bill of fare.

"Hello," he said. "What cooks?"

"Literally, what cooks?" she echoed with a shaken laugh. "Apparently everything we like today. Crab Louis and sand dabs — everything."

"Only I'm not hungry," he said. Jennifer's heart for some reason she could not quite analyze sank in a moment of chill misgiving. Somehow a meal was much more intimate, much more real, when both she and Sid were ravenous. "I was down at my aunt Clara's last night," Sid explained," and I didn't get up until after nine. Migs telephoned the office that I had a touch of flu but would be in later."

"Oh, how is Migs—as pretty as ever?" Jennifer did not belong to Mig's world, and she knew it. When Sid entered that world of rich people—people who had beautiful homes down the Peninsula, people who played golf and tennis and gave big dances for their young daughters—he had to leave Jennifer behind. Exactly how cruelly, how completely behind, Jennifer appreciated far more than he did. But she must always assume an admiring interest in Migs.

"You ever seen her?" he asked, surprised.

"Only her picture in the paper."

"You don't remember all the girls who get their pictures in the paper?"

"I do when they're your cousins," Jennifer countered. This was better. They both laughed.

She was really hungry, but when Sid said that all he wanted was a salad and coffee Jennifer asked for the same things. She could not sit opposite him and devour pot roast and noodles while he was toying with lettuce. Her heart began to beat fast as the waitress put water glasses and butter on the table; she had not much time. And if he would not open a serious conversation she must.

"I was sorry to telephone your office, Sid. I know you hate that."

"No, I don't hate it at all," he said amiably. This was all bad; there was a wall between them. Jennifer tried to recall some of the phrases that had been running through her mind; her thoughts for days had been on this hour.

"Sid, I'm so troubled—I'm so ashamed—you must know how I've been feeling these last three weeks. I'm not like that. I'm not that sort of girl. It's like a nightmare to me. If we really love each other—and you did say in that first note that you never would love anyone else—"

She discarded them all. Her mind and soul began to spin in a sort of panic; time was passing, nothing was getting said.

"Sid, the reason I rang you up," she began bravely. Sid looked up from his salad.

"Yes?" he said expectantly. So cool, so untroubled himself.

"It's this, Sid." Jennifer smiled a somewhat uncertain smile. "Things can't—I mean I hate to have them go on this way," she said, weakening.

"I keep thinking," Jennifer persisted, feeling a little frightened anger stirring in her, and glad of the courage it afforded, I keep thinking that—that if what we did was wrong—and we know it was—at least everyone would say it was! I was thinking that—that loving each other enough will make it right....I mean—I mean ..." She floundered to a stop.

"It's nothing to get all worked up about," Sid said in a low tone, looking at her watchfully with a sympathetic and amused air.

She could not talk against this sort of thing, with no help. But she must talk to him now. Her heart shrank away from the thought that if she failed now she might not have another chance, but she knew in her mind that it was true.

"I mean, you talked about our getting married, Sid. That night when you stayed in Phil Neville's apartment—that first time, when I went up and we had supper. Remember, you said we were engaged?"

"I remember perfectly. But — get married? What on?" the man asked reasonably. "I haven't even a job. I've got a desk in my uncle's office, where I fool around drawing airplanes all day, but I've no salary. Uncle Dick keeps talking about something turning up. But the only thing that will really turn up is my toes when they need that desk and fire me," Sid said lightly, with an explanatory shrug.

"I know. But it wouldn't be just that, just to have someone supporting me; that I'd like—that we might get married. I couldn't leave home now—there's Betty and the girls. But we love each other, Sid. And you said..you said.."

He smiled at her in the friendly fashion that had once seemed to her the most wonderful thing in the world and that now tore at her heart with bittersweet memory.

"We do love each other, and I hope we always will," he said. "What makes you think I've stopped loving you?"

"But—but you haven't telephoned for days. We haven't been out, to a movie or just to have tea, for—it's two weeks ago yesterday," Jennifer faltered. This was not what she had meant to say; it made men mad when girls took this tone. She could see that he did not like it, although his kindly, abstracted manner did not change.

"Well, so what?" he said. "Don't worry. I'll be around one of these days....How about dessert? Let's have the card again. I'll have a grapefruit and you'll have that disgusting mixture of gingerbread and cream cheese. I saw your eyes light on it from the first minute."

Jennifer managed a laugh; was serious again, felt her spirit dragging like a weight within her.

"Then—and this is the last thing I mean to say, Sid — we are engaged?"

He looked up at her, looked at the tip of his cigarette.

"No, I wouldn't say we were." he said deliberately. And she knew with a sudden sickness of soul that this conversation was costing him something too, that there were things he felt he must say to match the things that she must. "I wouldn't say that," he continued in the dead silence. "I'll tell you," he went on with a little effort, "let's leave it like this: we'll not see each other for a while; we'll think things over. And then, if we naturally come together again and like each other —why, great."

"Is there anything to think over?"

"Good Lord, yes. Money and rent and—everything like that."

"But you told me..you said.."

"Yes, I know I did. And I thought you were swell about everything, and I still think so..The gingerbread there, mine's the grapefruit," Sid said to the waitress. "Listen," he went on with a little laugh, "let's not look so serious about all this. Let's consider it settled, for the moment anyway. We see each other when we can and we like each other a lot, but no more telephoning, because it just gets me in Dutch with my uncle. Now! Tell me something about your little sister. What's she been saying lately?"

Jennifer tried for a cheerful response, hating herself—hating him, that he could force her into this false equanimity, proceeding meanwhile to hurry through his dessert, ask briskly for the check. There had been a time only a few weeks ago when they had loitered over this same table until half past one, half past two o'clock, when Jennifer had hurried back to the office glowing and thrilling, indifferent to the office manager's sharp reproof, indifferent to everything except the swimming, shining glory of her love. That time was dead.

Sid walked with her to the corner; explained that he had to go round by the city hall on an errand for his uncle.

"Sid, is this." She caught at his hand as he extended it in goodby. "Mightn't it be that someday you'd—you'd be glad if we stayed together? You might be sorry to remember that you—you ended it this way?"

"Ended what?" he would not understand her. "Listen," he said, "you don't have to take things so seriously. Quit it. You know I'm terribly fond of you. There's no percentage in making me feel badly or feeling badly yourself. I'll telephone you soon and we'll cook up something. Don't let things get you down. You make me feel like a heel. And now listen—aren't you late? I've got four minutes of one."

"I can make it." They parted on the phrase. Sid giving her hand an extra hard squeeze for farewell. Jennifer walked on in a daze; she had hoped and feared many things of this interview but just because she was actually to see Sid, actually to talk to him, the fears, she had told herself, had been absurd. Five minutes together would make everything right.

Now the talk was over—everything was over. And nothing for Jennifer would ever be quite right again.

It was January, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-six. Jennifer had a job with a big accounting firm; she had been thankful to get it because her small-girl years had been shadowed with bitter talk of unemployment and hard times and she was in a perpetual state of surprise that she could hold it. But it was dull.

GEN. "MAC" FAVORED IN JAPAN

Gen. Douglas MacArthur is given what the Japanese consider a signal honor. A military portrait of the Supreme Allied Commander now adorns Japan's "battledores" or flat sticks used by children in the game of shuttlecock and battledore (Hagoita"), which is most often played during the New Year's Day ceremonies. This is the first time that a foreign personality has had his portrait on the battledores. One of the girl workers in a toy shop places finished samples of the new "Hagoita" on the shelf with some of the older types.

DONALD MEEK, ACTOR, DIES

Hollywood, Nov. 19 (AP). — Donald Meek, 66, film character actor, died here yesterday of acute aleukemic leukemia.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, July 14, 1880, Mr. Meek joined an aerial circus act at the age of nine, toured Australia with a British company in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and spent twenty-two years in stock companies.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war Mr. Meek enlisted in the 6th Pennsylvania Regiment and was wounded in Cuba. He served during the First Great War with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. Afterward he played in several musical comedies on Broadway. His first film part was in "Oh, Promise Me" in 1933.

Mr. Meek is survived by his widow, Belle, and his adopted daughter, Alice Lorraine, 20.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 20 (CP)—Moderate losses were compiled in the morning session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today, the base metal stocks showing the main weakness with an index drop of .83. Trading was light and the turnover was down to 533,000 shares for the first three hours.

Fear of a severe clash with the soft coal miners in the United States was evidently the drag on the market. In the industrial section prices were lower for the steel, liquor, paper and utility stocks. The big oils displayed firmness.

Losses of 5 to 10 cents were scattered through the gold group. Rush Lake was sold for a loss of 8 cents, Louvicourt dropped 13, Osisko 9 and Preston 10. The base metals, including Smelters, Nickel and Noranda, weakened fractions. Labrador, Steep Rock, Normetal and Golden Manitou were weak spots in the cheaper list.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Nov. 20 —(AP)—Stocks regained a measure of balance after an early dip in today's market but remained in lower ground.

Extreme caution ruled consumers' commitments pending the outcome of the bituminous coal crisis since a mine shutdown would have widespread effects on industrial production and transportation.

Dealings were sluggish and losses of fractions to more than a point were numerous near the fourth hour.

Lower were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Youngstown Sheet, American Telephone, General Motors, Goodyear, Kennecott, American Smelting, Republic Steel, and Western Union "A". Resistant were Goodrich (on declaration of a special dividend) and Dow Chemical.

Canadian stocks were off fractionally at mid-day. Dome Mines and Hiram Walker each dropped ⅜ and Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram ¼. McIntyre gained ⅛.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 20—(CP)—Cattle prices were unchanged, sheep strong, lambs firm, calves steady and hogs up 15 cents cwt. for the week, in trade on the livestock market here up to mid-session today.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: cattle 200, calves 100, hogs 400, sheep and lambs 140. Unsold from yesterday were 1,500 head of cattle, 1,000 stockers.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: Weighty steers $12-$13.50, butcher steers $10.50-$12.65, heifers $12.25 down, boners $8-$10, butcher cows $7.75-$10, canners downward to $5.50, bulls $8-$10.50, fed yearlings $12.50-$14.50, a few plain stockers $9-$10.50.

Calves: $15-$16 choice vealers, plain downward to $10.

Lambs: $15 good ewes and wethers, $14 bucks.

Sheep: $4-$9.

Hogs: Grade A $20.65, Grade B1 $20.25, sows stronger $18-$18.25, dressed.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Toronto, Nov. 20. (CP)—Produce prices in the spot market here today were reported as follows:

Eggs: A large still in short supply, other grades more plentiful, demand good for immediate delivery, wholesale to retail, A large 47-49, A medium 44-45, A pullet 40-42, B 41-43, C 33-35; country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free, A large 43-44, A medium 41-42, A pullet 36-37, B 37, C 30-31.

Churning cream was unchanged at No. 1 lb. 41 F.O.B. 45 delivered, plus 10 cents subsidy.

Butter: Prints, First Grade 42, Second Grade 41, Third Grade 40; First Grade solids 40, Second Grade Solids 39, market firm, offerings light.

Mohawk Reserve

Golden Wedding Anniversary Observed by Mr. and Mrs. I. Brant

Mohawk Reserve — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Brant was the scene of a happy gathering Tuesday evening when their sons and daughters served a bountiful wedding dinner in honor of their parents' golden wedding anniversary. Two three-tiered wedding cakes were on the long dining table, which was surmounted with pink and white festoons and streamers. Also on the table were some unique dishes used at Mr. and Mrs. Brant's wedding fifty years ago. The bride and groom of half a century were married in Christ Church by the Reverend A. Grasett Smith, M.D., then rector of the parish of Tyendinaga. Shortly after, they, with the kindly assistance of their neighbors, built the comfortable home in which they now reside. They are the parents of two sons and five daughters, and have twenty-six grandchildren and five great grandchildren. The bride and groom of long ago were the recipients of many gifts, among them two wine shade jacqured velour upholstered rocking chairs from the family. A congratulatory address by the Reverend Rural Dean Herbert Pringle accompanied the presentation. The festivities were later continued at the Council House, where a large number had assembled with gifts and best wishes for many more happy years together for this well loved and highly respected couple. Delicious refreshments brought the very enjoyable evening to a close.

MOHAWK RESERVE

Memorial Service For 13 Soldiers Killed in War

Mohawk Reserve — A capacity congregation filled Christ Church Sunday afternoon to honor the memory of the thirteen soldiers of Tyendinaga Reserve who gave their lives in the Second World War. White chrysanthemums adorned the altar, and a basket of roses, given by the Kan-yen-geh League in memory of departed soldiers, was placed in the cancel. The service was attended by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, Dr. John Lyons and H/Major, the Reverend Arthur Smith, who read the lessons and preached the sermon. A guest book was presented to Christ Church and dedicated by the Bishop, in memory of a former churchwarden, Pte. Lloyd Edwin Brant, who was killed in action at Ortona, Italy. The book was given by his family.

The service was attended by the Deseronto branch of the Canadian Legion, the Ladies Auxiliary to the Legion, the Kan-yen-geh League, veterans of both world wars, and representatives of the Mohawk Council.

Assembled on Lawn.

At the conclusion of the service the congregation, led by the choir and clergy, assembled on the church lawn, where the Bishop dedicated the cenotaph which was erected by the Kan-yen-geh League, in cherished memory of the heroic soldier dead from the parish. The memorial, a grey granite stone, covered with the Union Jack, was unveiled by the president of the Kan-yen-geh League, Mrs. Stafford Claus. Clusters of maple leaves, centred by the cross of sacrifice, decorated the stone, which was inscribed with these names: Francis Maracle, Huron Brant, M.M., Kenneth Brant, Elmer Brant, Robert Armitage, John Culbertson, Lloyd Brant, Russell Loft, Clifford Brant, Clinton Toppings, Howard Green, John Maracle, and Williard Zachariah. Underneath the names was carved "Their name liveth forever more." Erected by the Kan-yen-geh League.

At the conclusion of the dedication wreaths were placed in front of the cenotaph in memory of Pte. Lloyd Edwin Brant and Pte. Francis Maracle, and a basket of flowers as a tribute to all the soldiers who paid the supreme sacrifice was placed between the wreaths by the League. Dinner was later served at the rectory by the Kan-yen-geh League, at which Mrs. T. Austin Smith and Rev. Arthur and Mrs. Smith were guests.

Forced to Leave Plane in Hurry When Tree is Hit

Campbellville, Nov. 19 (CP).—Ontario provincial police today said they had solved the mystery surrounding the apparent abandonment of a private plane near this Halton County community.

The owner, Caroll Fennyvessy of Rochester, N.Y., reported he had to leave the plane in a hurry Saturday after it crashed during an attempt to operate it on gasoline he had obtained from farmers.

On a flight from Rochester to Detroit, the plane ran out of fuel. Fennyvessy landed on Jack Cameron's farm, bought the gasoline but struck a tree on the take-off.

A faulty fuel tank cover was blamed for the forced landing of a light aircraft at Sheridan, also in Halton County, yesterday. The pilot, Alan Wingate of Toronto, escaped injury and the aircraft was undamaged.

Says 10 Shot For Each German On 3 Occasions

Rome, Nov. 19 (AP).—British War Crimes Tribunal heard today that 10 Italians were shot in reprisal for each slain German on at least three occasions in Rome before the Ardeatine Caves massacre in which 335 hostages were executed for the deaths of 32 S. S. troops.

Testifying in the trial of Col.-Gen. Eberhard von Mackensen and Lt.-Gen. Kurt Maeltzer, accused of responsibility for the Ardeatine atrocity, S.S. Lt.-Col. Herbert Kappler said the previous reprisal-executions were for the slaying of "four or five" German soldiers and had never been communicated to the Italian press.

Kappler, who carried out the execution of the Ardeatine victims, was given a searching examination by the legal member of the tribunal, C. Sterling, to determine the responsibility of Gen. von Mackensen, commander of the 14th German army.

China Supports Russian Proposal And U.S. Demand

Report U.K. May Propose Board Inspect All Forces

By LARRY HAUCK

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 21 —(AP)—China today gave full support to a Russian proposal for reports to the United Nations on the disposition of all troops outside home borders, but joined with the United States in demanding that the figures also cover domestic armed forces.

V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate, reiterated before the assembly's 54-member political committee that United States troops were in his country at the specific request of his government. He said they were "not interfering in internal affairs and gave cause for no friction or misunderstanding." The American forces would be withdrawn in due course.

Dr. Koo spoke in the presence of Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia who yesterday indicated that the presence of United States troops in China was the cause of anxiety.

The Chinese delegate said he was ready to support the Russian plan because it might implement the work of the military staff commitee in setting up an international police force and facilitate work on the board problem of reducing armaments.

Earlier Reported British Plan

Earlier, authoritative sources had said that Britain might propose establishment of a United Nations inspection board to "determine with accuracy" the number of armed troops in the world and where they are located.

The British plan would implement a United States proposal that all members of the world organization submit complete figures on all troops at home and abroad.

Russia yesterday signified her readiness to give a full accounting on Soviet troops abroad if other United Nations members do likewise but shied away temporarily from the American demand that the accounting include a statement on the forces maintained at home.

Counting of Troops

Under the British plan, the inspection board would be allowed to go into any United Nations member country and count troops. It would further be able to inform the United Nations on their dispersal, both at home and abroad.

The question of reporting an Allied troop strength abroad was first raised by Russia in the Security Council last August, when she proposed that United Nations members be required to make public the strength of their forces in non-enemy countries.

The Security Council declined to place the Russian proposal on the agenda and Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov came forth with a new resolution yesterday calling for a report on troop strength in former enemy as well as non-enemy countries.

Molotov's Viewpoint

Mr. Molotov declared, however, that a United States proposal that United Nations members submit figures on all mobolized forces at home and abroad should be taken up when the Soviet arms limitation plan is discussed later.

He sat tight when United States Senator Tom Connally (Dem.-Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, demanded that "all the cards" be laid on the table.

Both the United States and Britain said they wanted time to consider Mr. Molotov's resolution.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, November 21 (CP)—Synopsis—There is extensive fog and drizzle over southeastern Ontario. While the fog will gradually lift skies will remain overcast for the greater part of the day. Over Central and Western Ontario skies are overcast and the weather is somewhat cooler. Over Northern Ontario freezing rain and drizzle is spreading eastward. It is still snowing over the Prairies and temperatures are tumbling over the midwestern states as a cold wave plunges southward east of the Rocky Mountains. This cold air is expected to move into Southwestern Ontario early Friday bringing rain and then much colder weather.

BODIES OF TWO HUNTERS FOUND, INQUIRY OPENED

Located in Bush Two Weeks After They Entered Leaving Car on Roadside

Bridgetown, N.S., Nov. 21 —(CP)—Discovery of the bodies of two Wolfville, N.S., hunters after a fortnight's search of the woods back of this Annapolis valley town today led only to the mystery of the cause of their death.

One of 35 parties of searchers yesterday came upon the bodies of the pair, Brooks Salsman, 19, and Rupert Forsythe, 46, within three miles of the spot where the hunters parked their car and entered the woods 13 days ago.

A coroner's jury viewed the scene by flashlight last night, then adjourned until Dec. 4 to allow police to complete their investigation.

R.C.M.P., who refused to comment on possible causes of death, called in provincial pathologist Dr. R. P. Smith to conduct an autopsy later today.

Members of the search party said there were no signs of violence about the bodies. Forsythe, found face down between two rocks, had scatrches on his forehead but these were apparently the result of a fall.

Salsman was lying on his back. His shirt was torn in several places and pieces of the garment were strewn on the ground but there were no marks on his body.

Guns Propped Against Tree

Two guns were found propped against a tree. Empty shells were lying about and a cigaret lighter was found on a rock. Also nearby was a bottle containing a small quantity of liquid which searchers believed to be moonshine.

The bodies were said to be in good preservation.

Veteran woodsmen, hesitant about believing the pair had actually become lost in the woods, were unable to suggest what might have happened.

The weather since their disappearance had been comparatively mild and the surrounding district was studded with hunting camps, some of them containing supplies of food.

The discovery was made after one of the most intensive hunts in the history of western Nova Scotia. More than 2,000 woodsmen and farmers turned out to help in the search, assisted by six planes from nearby airfields.

Greensboro, N.C., Nov. 21 —(AP)— The wife of Charles H. Doggett, a Greensboro insurance official, struck him lightly in the eye during a friendly frolic—and now he can see much better. Doctors told him that the lick dislodged a cataract from which he had suffered for five years.

More Turkeys for Christmas Feast With Plenty of Chickens and Geese

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 21 —(CP)— More turkeys are destined to make the supreme sacrifice for the adornment of Canada's Christmas table this year than at last yuletide.

But even if the succulent birds fail to strut to their destiny in the expected numbers, drumstick connoisseurs will not be entirely out of luck, for prices board officials said today there will be plenty of chicken and goose available.

Throughout Canada this year farmers have raised more turkeys. The Ontario Turkey Producers Association has reported an increase in production, and in Toronto poultry dealers expect carloads of the festive birds to move into that city any time.

Prices board officials say Ontario is not quite self-sufficient and many will be imported from the Prairies.

Board officials added that there is a normal production in both Saskatchewan and Manitoba, upon which most of the other provinces depend for a large part of their supply.

Lucky turkey seekers will find themselves pay 2 1-2 cents more a pound for their birds in November and December than they paid during the corresponding period a year ago. Ceiling price for a grade A turkey is 49 cents a pound, meaning that a 15-pound bird will cost $7.35.

By way of cheering the unfortunates at the end of the turkey lineup, officials predict all kinds of chicken for christmas—in fact "the quality and quantity of chicken this season is better than it has been in years.

STATE SECRETARY WANTS COUNCIL TO DISCUSS GERMANY

Economic Merger Of American and British German Occupation Zones Chief Issue

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Nov. 21—(AP) — State Secretary Byrnes of the United States was reported ready today to press for discussion of Germany by the Foreign Ministers' Council the next time the Big Four strike a time consuming snag in their work on Italian and other satellite peace treaties.

Following a conference with Mr. Byrnes and British Foreign Secretary Bevin yesterday on economic merger of American and British German occupation zones, Lt.-Gen. Lucius D. Clay told reporters he and American Ambassador Robert Murphy were standing by here for the German talks and for consultation with Mr. Byrnes on United States policy toward Germany.

Gen. Clay is deputy commander in the American zone and Mr. Murphy is his top political adviser. While preparing for the Big-Four attacks on longe-range control and development of the defeated enemy country, they are also winding up arrangements for the two-zone economic integration.

This step, Gen. Clay told a press conference last night, should make the two zones economically self-sufficient in the next three years but meanwhile will add many millions a year to the American budget for importing foods into the Reich.

Self-sufficiency should be attained, he said, by a joint Anglo-American export program, selling German products on the world market for money which then can be used to buy the food that is Germany's greatest need.

Feels Optimistic

Gen. Clay said he felt optimistic about the possibility of Russia's eventually adding her zone to the German economic group being formed by the United United States and Britain. Some progress may be made on this in the Big-Four discussions.

Mr. Byrnes' chief aims in those talks, however, have been defined as (1) to revive his Soviet-rejected 40-year German disarmament treaty and (2) to seek agreement of Britain, Russia and France on the appointment of deputy foreign ministers to begin work on a permanent German peace settlement.

Meanwhile the Foreign Ministers Council inched along toward final agreement on the kind of government to be set up over the proposed international territory of Trieste. Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, adding to the concessions by which he had already broken the Trieste deadlock, agreed last night that the territorial governor should have veto power over the foreign policy of the locally elected government.

Two big questions remained in working out this statute. First there is Mr. Molotov's demand that the council fix a deadline for removal of British and American troops from the territory. Second there is his insistence that Yugoslavia be given special economic rights in the zone by the creation of a Yugoslav-Trieste customs union.

Reprieved Until Further Appeal Is Considered

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Mrs. Marie Desmeules of Fort William has been reprieved till December in order that her counsel may have time to carry a further appeal of her death sentence to Ottawa, the Ontario Appeal Court ruled yesterday.

Counsel C. L. Dubin — acting for Mrs. Desmeules, who had been under sentence to be hanged Nov. 26 for the murder last June 29 of her Fort William landlady—will appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada for leave to appeal to that body against the conviction.

The Ontario Supreme Court dismissed Mr. Dubin's appeal on behalf of Mrs. Desmeules earlier this month by unanimous decision, but Chief Justice Robert S. Robertson yesterday granted the stay in execution which will permit the last-hope appeal. Defence has argued Mrs. Desmeules had "complete absence of motive" for killing 65-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth Thoms, found dead in bed with a hole in the left side of her head.

WALKOUTS SPREAD TO ANTHRACITE FIELD IN PA.

7,500 Hard Coal Miners Quit Work in Sympathy With Lewis Men

Pittsburgh, Nov. 21 —(AP)— A general walkout by the United Mine Workers shut down the United States' soft coal industry today.

The 400,000 United Mine Workers in the bituminous fields predicted their walkout upon John L. Lewis' regarded as a termination of the Union's contract with the government. Traditionally the miners do not work without a contract.

The walkout spread into the anthracite field of Pennsylvania, with 7,500 employees of eight large mines quitting work. The hard coal industry employs 80,000 miners, who are under a contract eparate from the bituminous one.

The situation in the fields was generally calm. Miners simply failed to show up at the pits.

A representative of the solid fuels administration said at Pittsburgh that the walkout is "definitely on."

Paralysis spread through coal-producing states across the United States with the termination by John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers Union of their contract with the government. The miners do not work without a contract.

Even before the midnight deadline set by Lewis, some 140,000 miners had laid down their tools in 13 states.

Government notices asking miners to stay on the job still clung to mine bulletin boards. These said the contract was still in effect, for the duration of government possession of the mines. The government took over the mines last spring to end the last big coal work stoppage.

End Shift Before Deadline

Night shift workers signalled the start of the walkout last night by failing to report or by arranging to end their shift before the midnight deadline.

The walkout of 1946 is the 8th to hit the soft coal fields since 1941.

Reports from the field gave every indication miners everywhere would go along with Lewis in his tug of war with the government.

Many large mines in Pennsylvania and West Virginia which between them have half of all U. M. W. soft coal miners, were among those closed earlier this week. This was true also of Kentucky, with 50,000 U. M. W. workers.

In the far west, an estimated 6,400 miners in Colorado ended at midnight workshifts that usually end at 12.45 A. M. Forty-three hundred miners in Wyoming also came off the shifts earlier to avoid being on company property after the Lewis deadline.

ADVERTISEMENT 'PROVOCATIVE TO THE BRITISH'

Representative of P.A.C. For Palestine Sorry Story Appeared In New York Post

London, Nov. 21 —(CP)— Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin (Rep.-N.Y.) said today an advertisement of the Political Action Committee for Palestine which was "provocative to the British" appeared in the New York Post Tuesday because his instructions to delete certain references arrived in New York too late.

Mr. Baldwin, administrative chairman of the committee, is here in an attempt to push a plan for a joint Arab-Jewish state in Palestine.

A provocative passage, he said, referred to His Majesty's Government as having "dipped the Crown in Jewish blood and polished it with Arab oil." Mr. Baldwin told a press conference he had cabled and telephoned the committee cautioning against advertisements "provocative to the British."

The Congressman said such advertising made his position here embarrassing.

The Daily Telegraph, in a dispatch from New York, said "Mr. Baldwin has suddenly become aware of the embarrassing results of publishing announcements of this nature in the United States while trying to carry out his entirely unofficial private mission to London.

Mr. Baldwin planned to see Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the council, tomorrow and then go to Palestine for conferences with Jewish and Arab leaders before submitting a report to the Palestine conference reopening in London Dec. 16.

Form of Letter.

The advertisement in the New York newspaper appeared under the heading "God Save the King!" in the form of a letter from Representative Baldwin in London addressed to "Fellow Americans."

The letter quoted Mr. Baldwin saying:

"I came . . . (to London) to form a bloc among the more understanding and patriotic members of parliament to offset the obstinate, blind and wilful policy which stands in the way of justice and of peace . . .

"England can no longer afford to preach justice and practise injustice, to proclaim democracy and act tyrannically, to raise the white flag of peace in one part of the world and the black flag of piracy in another part . . . Palestine is not their property . . . Palestine belongs to the Jews by every legal and moral right . . .

"God save the King from his government . . . his government has dipped the Crown in Jewish blood and polished it with Arab oil . . ."

The advertisement closed with a plea for contributions to the Political Action Committee For Palestine, Inc., "an organization of vigorous and militant Christians and Jews."

Philadelphia Sites Offered for UN Capital Inspected

Philadelphia, Nov. 21 (AP) — The feeling spread through Philadelphia today that the city was in line to become the peace capital of the world.

A special United Nations subcommittee inspecting four American cities as possible homes for the U.N., left for San Francisco last night on the second leg of a 9,000-mile trip after reporting it was pleased with the two sites offered by Philadelphia.

Dr. Eduardo Zuleta-Angel of Colombia, chairman of the headquarters sub-committee of the U. N., told a press conference "we have been here a brief few days and it has been time enough for us already to feel at home here."

CBS CLOSES OFFICE

New York, Nov. 21 — (AP) — Richard C. Hottlet, Moscow correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, has been ordered by CBS to close its offices in the Russian capital and have the CBS staff proceed to Berlin. The move was the result of a ruling Tuesday by the Soviet government declaring United States and other foreign correspondents no longer would be allowed to broadcast from

Man is Killed At Grade Crossing Crash at Milton

Milton, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Earl Timbers, 39, father of two children, is dead, and John Timbers, 40, a brother, escaped injury today in a railway grade crossing crash on the northern town limits of Milton.

The two men, on the night shift at the Milton Spinning mill, were returning home from work when on a railway crossing about 100 yards from the factory, their car stalled. Both men got out of the car, and it is believed that they were attempting to move the automobile off the track when an eastbound C.P.R. freight, travelling from London to Toronto, crashed into it. The car was carried about one-quarter mile.

John Timbers informed police it was very foggy, and that he had noticed a light in the distance, but thought that it was a station light about 100 yards down from the crossing. Suddenly, the light seemed to loom larger, and he yelled to his brother to jump as the crash occurred.

Albert McLean, engineer, of London, said he saw nothing on the tracks until a light flashed into the air at the moment of the impact. Timothy Mulhall, of London, was the conductor. Dr. George E. Syer, coroner, and Dr. J. Robertson responded to the call.

Careless Smoking Cause of Blaze In Toronto Hotel

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP)—A small fire, said by police to have been caused by "careless smoking," broke out in the Sheldon Hotel on downtown Victoria St. early today and was quickly extinguished by firemen.

The blaze, the second hotel fire in the city in the last 19 days, was discovered by Mrs. J. M. Brown at 3:30 a.m. when she returned to her room. After opening the door and finding the room filled with smoke she awakened the caretaker who roused the 45 guests and summoned the fire department.

"I told the guests to stay in their rooms and to open the windows when I found the fire did not look serious," said William Boitall, the caretaker.

Five women guests, including three visitors from the United States, left the hotel in night attire carrying their baggage and clothing. They returned when they found the flames, which started in a pantry adjoining the kitchen, were under control.

Damage was estimated at $800.

Australian Rocket Range 1,200 Miles Long and Stretches Into Indian Ocean

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canberra, Nov. 21 —(CP)— The government has accepted British proposals for the establishment of a rocket range that stretch some 1,200 miles across the Australian continent and eventually reach far into the Indian ocean.

An announcement here confirmed reports circulating since April when Lt.-Gen. J. F. Evetts came from Britain with a rocket mission" and surveyed prospective sites for such a range.

The Canberra announcement said that Gen. Evetts will return soon to lay the groundwork for the $20,000,000 project to start out with rocket firing at limited distances and progress to experiments with guided long-range projectiles.

First step will be the setting up of a 300-mile-long range, but the final testing area 200 miles wide will extend northwest from the fringe of the grazing lands in the state of South Australia across the windswept desert to the northwest coast at Pearling Centre, or Broome, and out toward Christmas Island in the Indian Ocean.—

The range head will be located at Mount Eba, about four hundred air miles north of Adelaide on the edge of the southernmost of a series of undulating red deserts which spread across central Australia.

The projectiles, to be assembled and manufactured at Salisbury munitions plant near Adelaide, are expected to be aimed in the direction of Broome and fly over the sandy wastes into which few people venture. Aboriginal wanderers who travel in the territory have been promised protection by the other.

Up to 500 British and Australian Scientists and workers are expected to be employed at the rangehead and special township will be set up to accommodate them.

The munitions plant which will feed the range is the largest in Australia. It was started in 1940 and cost nearly $20,000,000.

Legal Officials Expected To Cite Union Head For Contempt of Court

Orders Issued to Conserve Coal Supplies of Nation

Washington, Nov. 21 —(AP)— The United States government moved today to cite John L. Lewis for contempt of court as a general walkout of United Mine Workers occurred in the soft coal mines.

Reports from the field indicated some anthracite miners were joining the 400,000 bituminous diggers in a stoppage that could eventually touch all industry. Work suspension came in the face of government pleas to keep the mines going.

Mr. Lewis, who disregarded a court order to restore the effectiveness of the miners' contract with the government continued silent.

Lewis at Home

The United Mine Worker boss was at his home in suburban Alexandria, Va., and as the morning passed there was no indication that he planned to come into his Washington Union headquarters. There were indications there that Mr. Lewis may have made arrangements for an extended absence from his office. It was known that he spent much of yesterday answering mail and otherwise clearing his desk of pending business.

By noon today, government lawyers were expected to go before Judge T. Alan Goldsborough and petition for a contempt citation that might subject him to fine or imprisonment.

However, mid-day came and went with the government lawyers still in consultation and indictations that there would be some delay in their appearance in court.

No Action by Noon.

Judge Goldsborough disposed of routine matters before him during the morning and adjourned his court for the day shortly before 12 o'clock. He left the court building for lunch but aides said he would be in his chambers later in the afternoon.

Orders went out to cushion the impact of a prospective coal famine.

Philip B. Fleming, federal works administrator, ordered a return to wartime heating and lighting strictures in all federal buildings throughout the country which depend on coal.

Mr. Fleming said he will seek to reduce temperatures to the wartime level of 68 degrees. The order affects approximately 300 buildings in Washington alone.

The civilian production administration prepared a directive designed to help ration artificial gas, produced from coal. The same agency pondered an electricity conservation order.

Assistant Attorney General John Sonnett awaited only the word from Attorney General Tom Clark before presenting the contempt citation before Judge Goldsborough.

The petition, it was learned, was drawn up by Clark, Sonnett and other government lawyers.

The finishing touches were applied at a staff conference this morning.

Govt. Pledges "Stock-Taking" Of Whole Economy

London, Nov. 21 (CP) — The government stood pledged today to a "stock-taking" of Britain's whole economy early in '47 as the House of Commons wound up an eight-day debate on the government program outlined in the Speech from the Throne to parliament last week.

The survey of business, industry and manpower—an "economic inquest" as House Leader Herbert Morrison called it last night—was promised by Labor's leadership in reply to official opposition amendments to the throne speech.

Debate of the speech was expected to end tonight with an overwhelming vote of confidence for the government's domestic policies, challenged by the Conservative opposition on the ground that "further measures of nationalization...must confuse and retard the recovery of the nation."

Mr. Morrison, in last night's debate, filled in one notable omission in the throne-speech, declaring that the bill to nationalize iron and steel "is coming all right" even though not listed for debate at the current session of parliament.

'Battle of Skra' Has Terminated

Athens, Nov. 21. (AP)— An official announcement today said the nine-day "Battle of Skra", in the Vardar Valley six miles from Yugoslav frontier, had been terminated and that Gen. Ventiris, commander of the Greek 3rd Army Corps, had returned to his headquarters in Salonika.

In earlier reports, the Army said Leftist raiders, described as having come from across the Yugoslav border, had been driven back after bloody fighting which resulted in casualties and the destruction of several villages.

Three newspapers in Athens containing a purported "Communist Party Communique" denying that the bands in Northern Greece were receiving aid from outside the country were seized early today by police, but later were allowed to publish after removing the article.

A spokesman for E. A. M. (National Liberation Front) and K.K.E. (The Communist Party) said he had no knowledge of the alleged "communique" and "no idea how it came here nor how it was distributed." He added that "it was not an official statement from the Communist Party."

Parliament, meanwhile, passed leniency legislation which provides amnesty for all Partisan band members who surrender to authorities within thirty days. Excluded, however, were those charged with major civil crimes.

City and District News

SIX WOLF BOUNTIES PAID IN RECENT WEEKS

With wolves reported to be appearing in increased numbers in other parts of the district, there has been no great increase in Hastings County during the past six weeks, County Treasurer Ross Bailey said today. Six animals shot in the northern sections of the county and in Tyendinaga township have been reported and bounties paid.

LIBRARY TO OBSERVE CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK

This week, Nov. 16-23, is being celebrated all over Canada as Children's Book Week. To mark this event, the Corby Public Library has assembled on the main floor a display of the better children's books for the benefit of parents, teachers and all those interested in the welfare of children and young people. There are picture books and stories to be read to very young children, books for "middle-aged" children, and books for older children and teen-agers.

These books may be seen anytime during library hours, and reservations will be taken for them.

HIGH SCHOOL EDITORS MEET IN KINGSTON

Editors of high school and collegiate institute publications were guests of the "publishers" of the Kingston Collegiate Institute Times at the annual conference and banquet held in Kingston on Wednesday.

The dinner meeting made possible by a grant from the Municipal Board of Education got under way at 6.30 and included discussion of the different aspects of the publication of school magazines.

Miss Etta Robinson, of the KCVI staff was in charge of the conference. Representatives from Belleville Collegiate Institute, Albert College, Prescott, Brockville, Trenton, Wooler, Picton, Brighton, Sydenham, Napanee, KCVI and Regiopolis College were present.

PARTY OF ELEVEN SECURES QUOTA

A party of hunters including Fred Reid, Charles and Fred Duesberry of tihs city was fortunate in securing its quota of deer some miles northeast of Millbridge on Black Creek. There were eleven in the party and each hunter secured a deer. Mr. Reid stated the weather was quite cool and that all the deer were shot close to camp.

WEEKLY FEATURES ARTICLE ON GOLD BEATING INDUSTRY

An article of considerable local reader interest appears in the magazine section of the current week's publication of The Standard, Montreal tabloid weekly, wherein description is given of a Belleville industry which is unique in Canada.

The article, which is illustrated by several story telling pictures, refers to the Gee family on North Front Street, who carry on a thriving industry as gold beaters manufacturing gold leaf. Belleville is the only place in Canada where the industry is carried on at the present time. The story first appeared in the Ontario Intelligencer during the summer of 1945.

HUNTER GETS BUCK DRESSING 234 POUNDS

The deer hunting season ended in Peterborough and Haliburton counties on Tuesday at sundown and reports from all parts of these two counties indicate one of the heaviest shoots in years. There were a few bears taken.

One of the largest bucks shot was brought down by Jack Arnott, Peterborough insurance man. His deer weighed 234 pounds dressed and was a twelve pointer. The Arnott party brought out eight deer.

Hastings County hunters report that deer are fairly plentiful in this district and already a number of hunters had made their kill. Bears have been shot but the bruins appeared to be scarcer than usual in the northern haunts.

LOAD OF CHRISTMAS TREES EN ROUTE EAST

The first load of Christmas trees passed through the city this morning en route for an eastern point. The truck carried approximately 150 young trees which appeared to be of good quality. They were cut in the vicinity of Madoc.

RAY INQUEST BEING HELD AT MADOC

The inquest inquiring into the circumstances surrounding the death of the late Mrs. Thelma Ray and her six children who perished in the flames when their little Madoc home burned to the ground on Monday morning, opened in the village this afternoon.

County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, who ordered the probe, was in charge with Coroner Dr. S. R. Beatty presiding.

Pre-election Activity Begins To Stir in Civic Circles

Candidates for the mayoralty of this fair city may now settle down and arrange their various platforms and gird their electoral loins for the struggle. For the biggest threat to their aims and aspirations for the highest office the city can bestow, is removed from the amphitheatre of municipal combat.

That is, if you can believe in signs.

For in chalk on a city building was inscribed this morning, "Kilroy won't run for mayor. He won't even be here."

So it appears the ubiquitous gent whose calling card has been left on the highest buildings all over the continent, has passed up the opportunity to guide this city along the even, more or less, tenor of its way.

Apart from Kilroy, the corridors of electoral back-chat are strangely silent. If there are whispering campaigns, it is merely a potential mayor, alderman, trustee or utilities commissioner talking to himself after some wishful thinking.

Two in Mayor's Race.

True, Mayor Frank Follwell has announced he will run for a third term, while Alderman Harold Woodley has come boldly out in the open and stated that he will throw his gauntlet into the civic arena with the hope that his shoulders will grace the emblem of mayoralty next year.

There are street-corner rumors that "Joe" will run for an aldermanic seat, while the usual sources of information regarding election are more or less saying nothing but with tongue in cheek muttering something about "dark horses."

Be that as it may. Suffice it to say that seven gentlemen of the aldermanic board of civic strategy will be on the electoral market for re-election or will breathe the free air of the taxpayer. Those who will relinquish their seats, for the time being at least, are Aldermen Harold Armstrong, H. J. Clarke, J. J. Trudeau, Glen Thompson, Lorne McDougall, Harold Woodley and E. E. Follwell.

Intentions Not Announced.

And so far there has been no trumpeting of election horns on the part of these gentlemen as to whether they will again seek the honor of being ministers on the city cabinet.

Things are very quiet on the election front although it is stated that forces are marshalling in various sections of the city for a frontal attack come election time.

Yet another source states that the famous Wharf Street Debating Society is garnering its forces for the annual unveiling of city officials' deeds and alleged misdeeds. 'Tis said that an elaborate questionnaire has been completed. Special lighting arrangements will be installed so that the quick-changing color effects usually noticeable on the features of city officials past, present and future, will not be so apparent.

New Nomination Procedure

A very important change in the procedure at nomination meetings is now in effect of which every prospective candidate and returning officer should take note. Formerly, if a candidate were nominated for several different offices he had until 9 p.m. on the day following the meeting to decide for which office he would stand. This is not now the case. Under new section 68 (3), Municipal Act, a candidate must decide at the nomination meeting and resign from any offices for which he does not desire to run. If he does not do so the returning officer is required to place his name on the list of candidates, only for the office for which he was first nominated, and this will be the only office for which he will be entitled to qualify. The returning officer should, therefore, number and announce each nomination as received. Resignations at the nomination meeting may be given verbally in person by the nominee, but although he cannot insist on it the wise returning officer will request that all such resignations be put in writing.

A candidate who has been nominated has until 9 p.m. of the following day in which to qualify. If he fails to do so his name is not to be placed on the ballot. If within the time limit he files his declaration of qualification, oath of allegiance and certificate as to no unpaid taxes of a previous year, he may afterwards resign in writing within the same time limit. In such case his signature to the resignation is to be attested by a witness and the resignation is to be filed with the clerk.

Experts Differ On How Miners Can Hold Out

Washington, Nov. 21 —(AP)— Labor experts differed today on how long John L. Lewis' coal miners could hold out in a fight-to-the-finish strike.

On one point most of them agreed: the miners generally lead a hand-to-mouth existence, even at the top pay of $75.25 a week, and few have cash reserves in the bank.

But — in past strikes, notably in last spring's 59-day walkout, the miners and their families have undergone little if any actual suffering from hunger.

For one thing, the thrifty wives usually keep a "war chest" of supplies stored away in their cupboards against just such a rainy day. Then, too, a good many of the miners are skilled hunters — and the pits lie in some of the finest hunting land in the country.

Although the union has an estimated $13,500,000 reserve, it does not generally disburse relief funds in strikes. At best, it would be a drop in the bucket for the 400,000 miners in a long strike. Nor could they count much on state help to weather the storm, since most states reported they will give no unemployment compensation to miners on strike.

In a pinch, the union might revert to past practice. Years ago, striking miners paid their bills with union-backed scrap which was accepted by stores.

INVESTIGATE FIRE

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Police and firemen today investigated possibility of arson following a fire which early today drove 45 persons from the downtown Sheldon Hotel on Victoria Street in the second hotel blaze in 19 days. Damage was estimated at $700.

45 Tons Poultry Sold at Napanee

Approximately 90,000 pounds of poultry were disposed of at the annual two-day poultry fair held in Napanee on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Prices ranged from 26 to 30 cents the pound with the greater majority of the offerings bringing top prices.

Only two lots of turkeys were sold during the second day, the larger shipment of 76 birds bringing 38¼ cents the pound and the other a group of eight choice young birds that averaged 20 pounds each went at 40 cents.

Twenty-eight tons found a ready market on the first day of the fair. WPTB officials were on hand and kept a close check on the 30¾ cents a pound chicken ceiling price.

One company bought a total of 15 tons of chickens, paying top prices. Another company bought six tons at from 26-30 cents the pound, and one load of milk-feds, about 180 pounds at 30¾ cents the pound.

On the first day of the fair, only one load of turkeys made its appearance, 16 birds in all, which sold readily at 38¼ cents the pound.

A further market is being arranged for December 12 when turkeys and geese are more plentiful.

Jail Term Given On Theft Charge

Floyd M. Wood, 1st concession Sidney township, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment when found guilty in county court before Judge Madden on Wednesday on a theft charge involving the taking of a coat and camera from a parked car.

The charge was laid as the result of offences committed last June, the accused electing trial by judge and jury when he was arraigned in police court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

In addition to the charge on which Woods was sentenced, he also faces additional charges of attempted theft of an automobile, and a theft charge, as well as three charges of property damage. He was scheduled to appear before Magistrate Wills today in police court on the above charges.

POLICE COURT

Pleading guilty to receiving stolen property Norman Tinney of Deseronto was given one year's suspended sentence by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in local county police court Thursday morning. In giving suspended sentence Tinney was ordered to pay court costs.

The charge against Tinney was that he had been found in possession of fish nets, belonging to a commercial fisherman. Alan Sprague acted as counsel for the accused, while on the plea of guilt entered a summary of the evidence was given by Provincial Constable Driscoll who made the investigation.

James Kehoe, Read, was assessed $20 fine and costs of $22, following a guilty plea to a charge of careless driving. The charge arose out of a motor accident which occurred at the village of Foxboro during October when his truck struck an Ivanhoe car broadside at the intersection of Highway No. 14 and the Madoc Road. Mr. Cushing acted as counsel for Kehoe, while Provincial Constable James Heath, as the investigating officer, gave a summary of the evidence.

Bail of $500 was granted to Ted Blaind charged with theft of carpenter tools at Point Anne. Both charges were enlarged in order that the Crown might continue its investigation. Francis Claus of Deseronto also was remanded for one week on a breaking and entering charge.

Campbellford's Grand Old Man, 100, Dies

Campbellford, Nov. 21—Benjamin Moir is dead, at the age of 100 years and nine months. Mr. Moir, "Campbellford's grand old man," was ill only a short time. Two weeks ago he was a guest at the Rotary Club where he gave a talk on pioneer days and ended by singing a Scottish song.

He came to Canada from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, at the age of 21. His trip in a sailing ship occupied 57 days and he landed in Quebec with $5 in his pocket.

As a farmer and a blacksmith for over 70 years, he was one of the best known men in the community. His health has always been good up to the time of his brief illness and as he enjoyed good hearing he took an active interest in public affairs. One daughter, Mrs. M. White of Bruce Mines, survives him.

DIDN'T EXPECT REPLY

London, Ont., Nov. 21—(CP)— Little Agnes Lloyd of nearby Glanworth really didn't expect a reply when she put her name and address and "God bless you" in a note on one of her coats which she sent overseas in a clothing bundle. But yesterday she received a letter printed in Norwegian from an Amsterdam child. It said in part: "I was so happy because I didn't own a coat . . . may God bless you too."

Tight Squeeze For Canadian Ship At Panama Canal

Balboa, Panama Canal Zone, Nov. 21. (CP)—Two Canadian warships weighed anchor today and sailed for Acapulco, on the southern coast of Mexico, for a rendezvous with a third sister ship.

One was the aircraft carrier Warrior which eased through the Panama Canal last Saturday into the brine of Balboa harbor for her first taste of the Pacific. The other was the destroyer Crescent which joined her on Tuesday.

They will rendezvous off Acapulco next Monday with the cruiser Uganda, will carry out three days of training exercises, then head into port. On Dec. 1 they will take part in ceremonies marking the inauguration of the new Mexican president, Miquel Aleman.

Behind the Warrior is an experience her sailors will long remember. She squeezed through the canal from the Atlantic with only a foot of beam to spare in the deepest of the locks. Once through, she found herself harboring with two 45,000 United States navy giants, the battleship Wisconsin and the aircraft carrier Leyte Gulf.

Had the Warrior possessed another foot of overhang, the canal passage would have been denied her. While by no means the largest vessel to use the locks, her beam is extended by outjutting gun platforms along her side. It is possible to remove temporarily the outer extremity of the more prominent ones but, even at that, she has a width of 109 feet. The width of the Panama locks is 110.

In the Pedro Miquel lock, where the greatest drop occurs and where the ships overhang was completely below the upper level of the lock, it was breathless going. But with the exception of a couple of light rubs, the vessel came through as cleanly as a sword drawn from a sheath.

Income Tax Tables For 1947 Being Sent to Employers

Ottawa, Nov. 21 (CP)—Distribution of 1947 personal income tax tables to employers across the Dominion has started and should be completed by the end of the week, a revenue department official said today.

They embody the tax changes announced by Finance Minister Ilsley last spring when his budget forecast an average of 12 to 15 per-cent reduction for roughly one million taxpayers. Accompanying them are copies of tax form "T.D.1" for use by married employees and single employees with dependence. It now is simplified to a single sheet.

The tables will prepare employers for deductions at the source beginning Jan. 1, 1947. The departmental official said they could obtain additional forms from their district income tax offices but asked that their applications wait until those offices are ready, probably late next week.

The appearance of the tables coincided roughly with the departure of C. Fraser Elliott, who will leave his post as deputy minister of the income tax division Dec. 1 to become ambassador to Chile. His place will be taken by Frank H. Brown, who now is clearing his desk as financial adviser to the minister of reconstruction.

Explanatory Letter

Mr. Elliott, in a circular letter to employers, explained the new tables bring in a single schedule of graduated rates to replace the present normal tax graduated tax and family allowances recovery tables. Present tax credits for married status and dependents are superseded by deductions from income of $750 for single persons, $1,500 for married persons, up to 100 for dependents registerable for the allowances and up to $300 for other dependents.

Under the new law, too, a husbands exemption will be $750 if his wife also has an income of her own of more than $750, or, if his wife's income is less than $750, his exemption will be $1,500, reduced by the amount of her income in excess of $250.

Single receipt of family allowances now is considered automatic and included in all tax payments calculations, persons with large families will find their deductions increased, but partially covered in the monthly allowances remittances. For tax purposes the allowance is based on an average of $8 for each child monthly.

For instance, under the rates of this year, a man with three children, earning $175 monthly, paid $5 a month income tax. Beginning in January he will pay $5.35 monthly, but receive $18 tax-free compensation through the allowance.

Eight Children.

One comparison of the manner in which the new tax education rate will work out, as compared to the 1946 levels, including family allowances, follows:

A married man with eight children earning $250 monthly now has a deduction of $1.15. His family allowance cheque runs an approximate $40 monthly, of which the government recovers $34 leaving him a $6 net.

Under the new rate, he will have a deduction of $13.25 monthly, but will receive $40 clear in family allowance.

A new table, providing reduced deductions for employees engaged in agriculture or other employment of a casual, seasonal or part-time nature is meant to guard against excessive taxation.

Main feature is that for a person employed in such occupations for "not much more than 200 days" of the year, the deductions are calculated to pay the greater part of his income tax:

For single persons whose daily wage rates, including board, are below $4, there will be no reductions: between $4.50 and $5, a tax of 25 cents; between $5 and $5.50 tax of 40 cents; between $5.50 and $6, tax of 50 cents; between $6 and $8, tax of 10 per cent.

TRENTON

23 Cases Heard In Police Court

Trenton—33 cases were heard in Trenton police court on Tuesday afternoon before Magistrate T. Y. Wills and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C.

James McLeod, Trenton, appeared on a charge of assault (common) and had his case enlarged to December 10th.

James Hedger charged with breaking and entering a dwelling was given suspended sentence for six months after paying costs of court $16.35.

George H. Webb, Walter St. and Gordon Anderson both charged with theft, had their cases enlarged to December 4th. The two boys were alleged to have broken into the pigeon loft of a local citizen and stole a number of valuable racing pigeons.

For violation of the Liquor Control Act the following persons were fined $13. each: R. A. Smith, Neal Pane, James N. Hartt, Amazin Wallace and Gordon Coe (the latter paid $13. each on two charges).

Pay Speeding Fines

The following motorists paid speeding fines: Oswald G. Parker, $12.50, G. W. Richards, $12.50, Donald E. Patrick, ($7.50) Bernard Pannel, $7.50, Donald Fox $7.50, and E. Gerber, $7.50.

For failing to obey the traffic signal, Joseph R. Fauteux and James Armstrong were each fined $4.50.

For a breach of the parking by-law, G. D. Rupert, E. D. Robertson and Clarke K. Hornsell each paid $2.00.

Arthur R. Chapman appeared on two charges under the Highway Traffic Act and was assessed $18. Charges were laid by Provincial Constable Jack Rogers of Frankford.

Report Accident

On Monday last Cecil W. Thompson of Bleecker Avenue, Belleville reported to police that he was driving his car west on Dundas Street, when a second car travelling in front of him stopped for an eastbound truck. Thompson swung his car to the right to avoid hitting the car and collided with the rear of a parked truck on the northside of the street. Passengers in the Thompson car were Earl Cook, 23 St. Paul Street, Belleville, and Lawrence Watson, 73 Mary Street, Belleville.

ON "SCENT" OF CRIMINAL

London, Ont., Nov. 21 —(CP) —London's police force is hot on the "scent" of one of the most cunning and elusive "criminals" ever to match wits with the strong arm of the law in this city. For five weeks now the hunt has become more intense but no capture was made yet.

One difficulty is that the hunted is a skunk — a large, fleet, garbage-tipping skunk. So bold is he that last night brought him to the city's main street in full view of two rifle-bearing policemen whom he again eluded.

Mrs. J. McCullough New President H. and S. Club

At the "Open House" in the auditorium of King George School on the evening of Nov. 18th., the principal, Mr. E. Fairman, welcomed the parents and other guests, and introduced the guest of honor, Mr. J. Musgrove, who is now teaching Vocational Guidance at the B.C.I. and V.S., which service is being extended to the grades seven and eight of Elementary Schools in the city, with records of complete information regarding the result of each child's test examinations to be filed and kept through the years.

Mr. Musgrove said in part: "Some teachers are interested in guidance because the object is to co-ordinate teachers, students and parents, all working together to assist students in selecting suitable studies, and to help them progress in same. Teachers are sometimes more able to judge the ability of a student, after he has passed the formative stage of the lower grades, and by association have gradually learned how best to advise re the courses of studies chosen. Conversely, the parents know best their own financial resources and can decide what business opportunities to offer to the child."

Mr. Hackett, retiring president of the Home and School Club, expressed appreciation to Mr. Musgrove for this very instructive address.

Earlier in the evening parents and guests were met and welcomed by Mrs. M. Ward, convener of the membership committee, who directed them to the classrooms where the work and books of the pupils were on display. Later they were assembled in the auditorium, where they were welcomed by Mr. Hackett on behalf of the Home and School Association, and where he introduced the new president, Mrs. J. R. McCullough, who presided for the business meeting and program.

Miss Goodfellow's class was successful in winning the award for regular attendance. Five new members were selected to sit in at executive meetings, namely: Mrs. J. MacDonald, Mrs. J. Fisher, Mrs. J. Thompson, Mrs. C. Brown and Mrs. G. Soule. Mrs. Lovelace was chosen for the post of pianist.

During the evening, pupils of grade eight contributed musical selections which added much to the evening's enjoyment.

MONTH FOR TALKING BACK

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — "You —!" shouted Geraldine St. Louis, 32, at Magistrate James Bigelow yesterday. She had been sentenced to three months in jail after pleading guilty to being drunk. "Bring that woman back!" said His Worship to the bailiff. He then added one month to the sentence. "—— you, you ——!" shouted the woman as she left the courtroom.

DEER DIES IN PENSTOCKS

Niagara Falls, Nov. 21 — (CP) —Roy Bealey suffered injuries to his left eye last night when he attempted to rescue a 235-pound 10-point buck from the penstocks at the Queenston hydro powerhouse. The animal died before it could be taken from the water.

BANCROFT

Carload of Girls In Plenty Of Trouble on Trip

Bancroft —(Special)— Five local residents of the fair sex of Bancroft undertook to motor to Belleville for a shopping expedition Saturday and all went well until the return journey. Some miles out from Belleville the driver decided to run a race with one of those black and white furry animals, but when it turned out to be a tie it wasn't so exhilarating to the driver and the other occupants of the car. From that point on things still went wrong. Further along the highway during a deluging rain a front tire went flat and while the girls were debating just what to do a Bancroft man drove along and assisted in changing the tire, substituting it with his own spare.

In jacking up the vehicle the jack slipped once, but no attention was paid at this time until they started up the engine to proceed on home, but all they could smell was hot oil — even above the already dreaded odor of skunk. However the girls kept going until the engine finally stopped. There they sat and in their sorrowful plight one of them remarked, "Well there is one consolation, you have real good lights," but during the next five minutes even these failed so there they sat in utter darkness in the middle of the highway.

The male motorist, having gone on, wondered why the girls were not following him, so feeling somewhat concerned, turned back to see if there was more trouble. Several miles back he found the stranded girls. After some minutes of tinkering he managed to get the lights working on their car but as the engine did not want to run he was obliged to shove their car the balance of the way into Bancroft, which was, by this time, in the wee sma' hours of Sunday morning. However the girls will have many incidents to remind them of their shopping episode.

PLANES GROUNDED BY FOG

Toronto, Nov. 21 —(CP)— Heavy fog this morning grounded Trans-Canada Air Lines planes at nearby Malton airport. Incoming flights were delayed. Airport officials said they expected the fog would clear by noon.

Seven Momentous Years

Nearly seven years ago the first Canadians arrived in the United Kingdom to share in the defence of Britain and to fight the war of democracy and freedom against aggressors. Now the last Canadian army outfit has closed up at Brussels and the last Canadians are on the way home.

In that period the war has been fought, the enemy crushed, steps taken for the signing of peace and for the maintenance of security about the world, returned men of the armed forces are passing or have passed through the stage of rehabilitation and of finding their place in civilian life and the nation is passing through the reconversion stage. This country like all the other nations has felt the shock and unsettlement which so great a threat brought to the whole population of the globe. These seven years have been years jammed with events of importance for all mankind which can be fully understood only in the future in all their values. Only historians and the status of the world in the future will be able to reveal the full story of this momentous time.

In the course of these seven years Canada gained in stature among the nations by the heroism of her men and women in the armed services, navy, army and air force, in the devoted service of the home front, in the tremendous efforts to feed and arm not only our own forces but the peoples of the other members of the United Nations who needed food and munitions to help crush the assault of those men of evil who were bent on conquest and loot, the Axis aggressors. And Canada has become the third industrial nation of the world and she has made friends all about the globe.

These have been tremendous years. Many hundreds of thousands in the forces have developed into the full consciousness of their duty by undertaking their responsibility to King and Country and they look forward to years of progress ahead with hope. Returned service folk with their earnest endeavor have added a stimulus to the nation, the result of which will be shown in all the later history of this country. How well they are assuming their place and how earnestly they are fitting themselves or have fitted themselves for their peacetime task, every Canadian knows. They have grown through the service and through the years to do honor to and help build up Canada and a peaceful world.

Actor of Great Talent Passes

Donald Meek, a character actor, who has been familiar to the stage and screen for many years, died this week in Hollywood after a brief illness and with his passing goes one of the outstanding figures of the movie world.

He had the gift of portrayal of a type of man, described by a writer in the New York Times as follows: "Several generations of play and movie-goers came to know Donald Meek, a slight bald quavering-voiced character as the entertainment world's representative of Mr. Average Man. On the stage and screen he was usually covered with confusion, a man burdened by feelings of timidity and ineffectuality. A mere glimpse of Mr. Meek was generally calculated to arouse audiences to loud laughter. To them he was by virtue of his name and deportment, truly one of the meek of the world.

"Actually Mr. Meek was far from colorless. The only thing meek about him was his name, which was his from birth and not the inspired creation of some Hollywood publicity man as so many persons believed."

Donald Meek actually lived a life of activity, of excitement and adventure. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American War and in 1914 he donned the kilts of the Canadian Highlanders. His taste in athletics was for the vigorous quality, as in boxing and in literature his inclination was for the manly and robust works of Rudyard Kipling. His hobby was criminology.

He went on the stage while young and as an adult player made a tour of the world with road shows and then came back to Broadway. His screen debut was in 1928 and three years later he gave all his time to the film. In the thirteen years since, he has made more than one hundred pictures.

He helped to make millions laugh, his performance always being recognized as marked by finish in character portrayal. He was a thorough artist on the stage and on the screen. He played his part with a perfection which no one can approach or duplicate, so he has enriched life and left it happier for his artistry and his high sense of the comic in life.

It is a high tribute to the appreciation of the public and to their sense of fine acting that such actors as Mr. Meek win their applause. Their verdict stood by him all through his screen career and inspired him in his work. There can be no doubt of that.

Ship Greetings a Hobby

With flags by day, and lamps by night, Miss Kathleen Cashion sends a greeting-message to ships which pass her Tasmanian home. She lives at East Arm 25 miles from Launceston. The ship greetings are her hobby.

The Navy gave her special authority to send her messages during the war, when such signals were normally banned.

Miss Cashion took up her hobby 10 years ago when she was sick. She used to wave to ships passing her house. The officers and the crew waved back at first, were soon sending messages in morse code with flags and lights. Miss Cashion learned Morse herself and started sending messages back. The crew of one ship recently signalled a compliment on her skill.

U. S. Highway Modernizing

A planned program for fifteen years and an expenditure of some twenty billions of dollars is needed to modernize our great system of streets and highways, according to a recent statement from Charles M. Upham, engineering director of the American Road Builders' Association. City dwellers often do not realize that there are more than 1,000,000 miles of rural roads in the nation lacking all-weather surface. There are about 95,000 miles of State-controlled highways in the United States without all-weather surfacing. More than 75,000 miles of alleys and city streets lack macadam, concrete or tar coating.

From every angle good roads are good business. With an annual traffic fatality toll aproaching the 40,000 mark, our highway engineers face an imperative problem in decreasing accidents. Through the use of wider driving lanes or separated lanes for various speed levels, through construction that will eliminate right-angle entrances and exits and other engineering devices, the cost in human lives, suffering and property damage can be decreased. The change in transportation in one generation can be seen in the fact that forty-nine of our large cities now receive all their milk suply over the highways; 54 per cent of the nation's livestock is now hauled in trucks; small businesses send almost 50 per cent of their freight over the roads.

Modernizing the country's highways is a tremendous undertaking, but as soon as materials are available a start should be made. Many States have sizeable reserves earmarked for the purpose. The Federal Government has appropriated money to match State funds for the all-weather finishing of rural roads. The problem falls into two parts. The nation needs new, wider and better through roads between cities and large towns; hundreds of thousands of miles of country roads need to be surfaced. The needs in both fields will require years to satisfy; both contribute directly to the welfare of the country.

—New York Times.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

NOV. 21ST., 1926.

In a basketball match at the Y.M.C.A. last evening the John Street Church seniors defeated the Holloway Street Church team, the final score being 44 to 4. The following composed the teams: John Street, Boulter, Christie, Kerr, Armstrong, Miles, Buchanan and White. Holloway Street team, Woodley, Hibbard, Morrison, Harden and Andrews.

The term of office of the following public school trustees expires this year, but they are eligible for re-election: Foster Ward, F. S. Anderson; Samson Ward, G. B. Smith; Ketcheson Ward, Arthur McGie; Baldwin Ward, A. Jones; Bleecker Ward, F. Potter; Coleman Ward, G. Sprackett; Murney Ward, E. A. Geen.

Mr. A. H. Ketcheson went to Hamilton today.

Mr. Howard Clarke has returned home from Toronto where he attended the Winter Fair.

NOV. 21ST., 1916.

When the final returns in the Y.M.C.A. drive to raise $15,000.00 were tabulated last evening it was found that the sum of $14,854.75 had been subscribed and the small balance necessary to make the sum desired was quickly guaranteed by several members of the executive committee who were present. Speeches were made by S. Burrows, D. V. Sinclair, W. B. Deacon, Dr. H. A. Yeomans, the chairman of the campaign committee, and the President of the association P. C. MacLaurin.

The severe frost last night had the effect of forming ice in the harbor and on the river up to the lower bridge. Ice was also formed on several parts of the bay.

Mr. M. Bird of Stirling was in town today.

The Rev. C. G. Smith, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, is spending a few days in Peterborough in the interests of the Montreal Temple Fund.

40 YEARS AGO

NOV. 21ST., 1906.

At a meeting of Mizpah Lodge I.O.O.F. the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: R. H. Ketcheson, J. P. S.; William Thompson, N.G.; A. Middleton, V.G.; Charles A. Ostrom, Recording Secretary; F. M. Clarke, Financial Secretary; L. B. Cooper, Treasurer.

Mr. C. F. Campbell of the Mail and Empire, Toronto, is in town today.

Col. Thomas Stewart has returned home after spending several days in Toronto.

During the heavy wind at an early hour this morning the Steamer Annie Lake became loose from her mornings and was driven against the west side of Victoria Park. No great damage was done to the boat.

At a meeting of those interested in the Junior O.H.A. team the following officers were elected for the season: President, Mayor Charles N. Sulman; Manager, R. Arnott; Treasurer, A. Vandervoort; Secretary, H. A. Fish; Captain, J. Connolly. The team, which has been entered in the junior series of the O.H.A. will no doubt make good as they are a speedy bunch. The following composed the team: Phillips, Pepper, Connolly, Spangenberg, Allan, Turner and Burke. It is practically the same team which showed up so well last year.

50 YEARS AGO

NOV. 21ST., 1896.

The first snowstorm of the season commenced this morning and is still going strong. The city clock became snowbound at noon.

Mr. James Duckworth of the firm of Orr & Duckworth, has purchased the Bell property at the west end of the lower bridge and the plant of the firm will be removed to that location.

Mr. Charles S. Clapp has opened a handsomely arranged confectionery store in the lower floor of the Burdett Building on Bridge Street east.

The local trolley cars had trouble with snow on the rails today.

LEGAL OFFICIALS

A high authority said this is the government's operating plan under President Truman's instructions to "fight this one out to the finish":

1. Before the day's end, Justice department officials will go before United States District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough and ask for a contempt citation against Lewis. If Lewis should be found in contempt for noncompliance with a court order, he could be fined or sent to jail—to stay until he purged himself of contempt, if the judge so ordered.

(Judge Goldsborough issued an order Monday directing Lewis to recall his "termination" of the United Mine Workers (A.F.L.) contract, effective last midnight. Lewis did not recall it.)

2. Evidence is being collected with a view to prosecuting under the Smith-Connally Act anyone, from Lewis on down, whom the government may contend is encouraging a strike. The Smith-Connally law forbids encouraging or inciting a strike in a government-operated mine or plant. Conviction carries a penalty of $5,000 fine or a year in jail.

3. Study is being given to the possibility of "freezing" the United Mine Workers' $13,500,000 Union Fund, and this will be done if a way can be found around "legal technicalities."

In the mounting crisis, United States troops stood ready to move into the coal fields to prevent violence—but not to mine coal. Unit commanders were placed on the alert.

Government officials also kept an anxious ear to the ground for any manifestations of a general upheaval by labor. The A.F.L. with its 7,150,000 Union members and C.I.O. with its 6,000,000 had already thrown their moral support behind the U.M.W. Chief.

By resolution at its Atlantic City convention, the C.I.O. termed Judge Goldsborough's order an attempt to impose "economic slavery" on the miners.

A.F.L. President William Green, in a statement, declared the order "represents force, violence and the threat of punishment."

Silent to the last, Lewis permitted the 12.01 a.m. deadline to pass without a word—and without revoking his notice that the government-union pact covering 3,300 soft-coal mines and 400,000 miners was "void" at that hour.

The U.M.W. leader went home to bed at his suburban Alexandria, Va., residence as though it were the end of just another routine day.

Even before the zero hour, upward of half the miners had walked off their jobs in 13 States.

Presages a Showdown

Presaging an historic showdown, President Truman sent word from his vacation headquarters at Key West, Fla., instructing the Justice Department to press for contempt charges against Lewis and signalled other steps in the government's strategy.

In the wake of the strike, widespread repercussions affecting millions of Americans appeared inevitable. Among others:

An embargo on all foreign shipments by rail, except for essential commodities such as food and medicine, was reported imminent.

Brownouts and electricity rationing were forecast for all states east of the Mississippi.

Steel mills with their tens of thousands of workers prepared emergency steps. An industry spokesman said most of the mills would close by Dec. 1 if coal supplies are cut off. Coal-burning railroads estimated they have enough fuel for 30 days of normal operations, but some had only a 10-day supply.

Conflicting Opinions

Government opinions conflicted as to the general outlook for winter's onset.

Coal mines administrator Capt. N. H. Collisson said the United States is in a favorable condition on coal reserves, with just about the same stockpiles as before last spring's 59-day strike. Capt. Collisson declared anthracite hard coal, which is not involved in the present crisis, is the most important domestic heating fuel, and that bituminous soft coal is used chiefly for industry.

By contrast, the civilian production administration said there are sufficient reserves only "to fill the most urgent needs."

One government official said the administration is counting heavily on public opinion to end the strike, and declared that time is running out on Lewis because:

1. Congress returns Jan. 3, ready to "crack down" on labor-management strife.

2. Christmas is a bad time for a strike.

3. The miners have already lost two month's pay, in last spring's walkout, and a prolonged new strike might not be popular.

4. By quitting work, the miners are losing $600,000 a week on their union health and welfare fund, based on the current payment of five cents a ton for an average 12,000,000 tons per week production.

While President Truman called for no retreat, interior secretary Krug kept his doors open through the last hours before the midnight deadline—in case M. Lewis wanted to withdraw his notice of cancellation.

Neither Mr. Lewis nor Mr. Krug has disclosed the union's new demands, although the prevailing impression is that Lewis wants the same pay for a 40-hour week as the miners now get for a 54-hour week. The top is $75.25.

Lewis also is reported to ask a 10-cent instead of the present five-cent royalty on every ton of coal for the union's welfare fund. This would make the fund's "take" approximately bert had a low of four below. pushed eastward. Regina reported a total of 10 inches of snow on the ground, and the fall was heavier in other parts of the south. Saskatoon and Prince Al-$56,000,000 a year.

SOME B.C. POINTS STILL ISOLATED BY COLD WAVE

Sub-Zero Weather Seen and Coal Famine Threatened in Some Sections

Vancouver, Nov. 21 —(CP)— The icy hand of winter gripped Western Canada from the Coast to Manitoba today and reached into the Northwestern States, bringing sub-zero temperatures to already-isolated northern British Columbia points and a coal famine in the East Kootenays.

As Alberta and the rest of the Prairies shivered in winter's first real blast — it was 34 below at Penhold, Alta. — the B. C. Kootenays town of Cranbrook near the snow-choked Crow's Nest Pass reported a "desperate" coal shortage. None was immediately in prospect as snowplows struggled to clear roads of a snowfall reaching as much as three feet.

A possible coal shortage also loomed in southern Alberta.

A snowstorm which struck B.C. during the weekend left northerly Prince Rupert and Prince George cut off from regular communications and put heavy pressure on gas systems in Vancouver and Victoria, the only coast cities without an appreciable amount of snow. In the B. C. capital gas was cut off to some parts of the city for a time yesterday.

Family Sought

An Indian family of four missing since Saturday in a small gas-boat were sought by B. C. police in the Gulf of Georgia.

Washington State reported five deaths due to the storm. Blizzards swept across Utah and Idaho and many northwestern Montana communities were reported isolated.

Quesnel in northern B. C. shuddered at 15 below. Isolated Prince George had 11 below.

Southern Alberta was in the grip of its worst weather of the season with almost a foot of snow at some points and temperatures in the low 20's. Coal mines in the Crow's Nest were idle because of a power shortage.

Lethbridge in southern Alberta had 40 inches of snow for the season and eight below temperature. At Winnipeg all aircraft normally operating through there were grounded because of a mixture of snow and a freezing drizzle. Manitoba's coldest spot was northerly Churchill on the shores of Hudson Bay with a sub-zero 11.

Saskatchewan temperatures, less severe Wednesday, were expected to fall as the cold wave

Claim New Plastic 30 Times Stronger Than Other Plastics

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 21—(AP)— A new plastic substance with 30 times the impact strength of and stronger than other plastics and lighter than any metal is claimed by the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory.

The unnamed material is 20 to 30 per cent stronger and 40 per cent lighter than aluminum and possesses 30 times the contact resistance of other plastics, according to Norman E. Wahl, who directed the development in the Laboratory's wood and plastics division.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

YOU CAN'T EAT CAKE AND HAVE VITE TOO

I have been following the Basic Health Diet you give on p. 49 of your booklet The Seven Keys to Vite, writes Mrs. F. P. R., and I am—oh, oh, I almost said amazed, but I know you don't like that much abused word, so I'll just say I am well pleased with the results. In five weeks, during which I ate desserts only twice as a dinner or luncheon guest, I have lost six pounds—but wait till I tell you what has happened to my girth rate. Waist measurement was 32 inches, now 29 1-2 inches; hip measurement was 44, now 41 inches; my clothes feel comfortable now, not as though they are about to burst at the seams. And that isn't all. I haven't felt so well and so ready for work or play in years (I'm 44 and have two children in their teens), and finally the thing that counts so much with us poor women on the wrong side of forty—everybody, even my girl friends (you know what cats we are) notice how well I look. As the children say: "You better carry a flag, Fran—across the street we can't tell you from the rest of the college girls.

Louise H. C. says she has been following the corrective protective diet twelve days and is getting along fine. Now she asks whether it is a reducing diet. Stt! Stt! Stt! If Louise is curious enough to turn to p.49 of the Seven Keys to Vite she will find, slightly more than half-way from top to bottom, the answer to her question:

"Remember it is simply a basic, fundamental or model health diet, on which to build or pattern your own diet to suit your particular requirements. As it stands it may be regarded as corrective, protective, regeneration, rejuvenation or reduction diet."

Now I'd reprint the menu here but for Louise and a million other readers who might try to subsist on the 2100 calories the menu allows per day—and presently become discouraged and lose interest in dieting altogether. . . .

Please notice I offer the corrective prospective, regeneration rejuvenation diet merely as a model or pattern on which to build a diet to suit your particular requirements. That is, your requirements for health, vite, efficiency and good looks, good looks including, for one thing, a good figure.

Few boys or girls in their 'teens can safely subsist on less than 2500 to 2800 calories a day. So the skeleton (I mean outline) or pattern health diet described in The Seven Keys to Vite (ask for the booklet in writing and inclose twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope—do not use a clipping. A great many mature adults who exercise, play or work little if at all may limit their calories to 2,000 a day for three or four days in each week with benefit to their health, vite efficiency, personal appearance and longevity.

This basic health diet may fail to supply the minimum daily requirement of iodine, in some parts of the country, where soil, water and food locally produced are deficient in iodine. Even if the soil, water and food are not poor in iodine, it can do no harm to take a suitable daily ration of iodine or iodid in one form or another two or three times a week at least.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

LEMONS

I take two lemons in a glass of warm water every morning. Is that too much and will it cause me to lose weight? (Mrs A.)

Answer—Fine for anyone who likes it. Of course it will not is not so nourishing as orange but still it is nourishing, so it is a mistake to imagine lemon juice aids reduction of weight.

POOR MAN'S INSULIN

Following instructions in your booklet about wheat germ my wife has been able to cut the dose of insulin from 45 cc to 13 cc, and she is much better and stronger. (R. E.)

Answer—The booklet "Training for Diabetics ESHRD AT ing for Diabetes" mailed on written request (do not use clipping) if you inclose ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What does "A Roland for an Oliver" mean?

"A Rowland for an Oliver" means blow for blow, tit for tat or giving as good as one gets.

The phrase alludes to two semi-legendary knights in Charlemagne's time who are the heroes of many exaggerated romantic tales.

Roland, who in real life held the office of warden of the Breton Marshes, figures in the legends as the son of Charlemagne's sister Bertha. Most of the stories about him are more fable than fact. He is represented as a sort of super-knight, gigantic in stature and redoubtable in battle and as the chief Christian champion against the Saracens.

Legend has it that at first Oliver was his chief adversary and that finally the two met in single combat on an island in the Rhine and fought five days without either gaining the least advantage. A heroic friendship developed between them and ever after they were inseparable companions in arms. What Roland did Oliver could do, and what Oliver did Roland could do. They were a match for each other, alike in virtue, courage and deeds of derring do. The prowess and warlike qualities of the two knights are referred to by Shakespeare in I King Henry VI where the Duke of Alencon says:

> Froissart, a countryman of > ours, records,
> England all Olivers and Rolands bred
> During the time Edward the > Third did reign.

The real Roland was in command of Charlemagne's rear guard when he was compelled to retreat from Spain in 778 A.D. At Roncevalles in the Pyrenees Roland and the flower of the Frankish knights were ambuscaded and slain by the Gascons who had revolted. One legend has it that Roland escaped from the ambuscade but died of hunger and thirst in the mountains while trying to return to France.

"A Roland for an Oliver" is used in reference to an action taken in retaliation or something done or said to match the exploit of another. When one person tells a cock-and-bull story another gives a Roland for an Oliver by telling one just as incredible. This latter sense of the term may have been influenced by the fact that the old romancers went to such extremes in exaggerating the tales about the two knights. One story has it that at the battle of Roncevalles the bugle of Roland could be heard nearly a hundred miles away.

END FOUR DAY WALKOUT

Manchester England, Nov. 21—(CP)—Six thousand transport workers went back to work today ending a four-day walkout that had paralysed surface transport in this city of 1,000,000.

A joint committee of representatives of the corporation transport committee, the management and the transport and general workers union, has been set up to investigate the causes of the stoppage and the case of driver Christie, whose dismissal for alleged dangerous driving led to the unofficial strike.

WIDE TERRITORY UNDER CONTROL OF NEW ZEALAND

Islands Scattered From the Equator to South Pole Administered by "Smallest" Dominion

By J. C. GRAHAM
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Auckland, N. Z. —(CP)—New Zealand, usually referred to as the smallest of the Dominions, administers territories spread over a vast area. In fact, they extend from the equator to the South Pole.

However, many of them are merely uninhabited coral atolls separated from each other by hundreds of miles of sea, and at the other end of the scale is a huge wedge of the Antarctic regions also uninhabited.

With the end of the war the future of several of these far-flung territories is causing concern and it is likely that they will be frequently in the news.

Fartherest north is Nauru, the rich phosphate island almost on the Equator, formerly owned by Germany. Its mandate is held jointly by Britain, Australia and New Zealand and it plays a vital part in the Dominion's economy because of the great reliance placed on the fertilizer drawn from there to secure a larger yield from pastures in dairying districts. It now is a scene of great activity as major repair work is carried out to restore damage to equipment done by Germans and Japanese during the war.

South of Nauru are the Cook Islands, an integral part of New Zealand, which consist of about 15 main islands lying between nine and 22 degrees south latitude, and the Union Islands, which lie between eight and ten degrees south latitude, and are administered by New Zealand on behalf of Britain.

Growing political consciousness among the 16,000 inhabitants of the Cook Islands mostly natives closely allied to the Maorie of New Zealand, has led to a demand for political representation in the Domion's parliament. This has so far not been granted, but the government has made a concession by establishing a legislative council for the islands, comprising 10 official members from the administration and 10 unofficial members by the inhabitants. The resident commissioner has a casting vote.

Defence Bases?

Several of the islands in the Cook or Union groups may be considered in the next few years for development a bases. The groups form part of the natural South Pacific defensive chain running to the north of Australia and New Zealand. If the United States decided to maintain fortifications in this chain, it may seek rights in some of these island. In any case military writers in New Zealand believe that the Dominion government will establish defence bases in this area.

Most populous of the Pacific groups administered by New Zealand is the mandate of Western Samoa, taken from the Germans in the First Great War, which has a population of 66,000, mostly natives. New Zealand has offered to hand this mandate over to the Trusteeship Council of the United Nations.

New Zealand controls a number of sub-tropical islands. South of New Zealand lie the Auckland, Campbell, Antipodes and Bounty islands, largely uninhabited down the years. Sheep have been established on some from time to time and wartime meteorological stations are being maintained.

New Zealand's responsibility for the Ross Dependency, a segment of the Antarctic region extending from 60 degrees south latitude to the South Pole, has been largely technical, but plans have been mooted for Australia and New Zealand participation in an Antarctic expedition within the next few years. New Zealand interest in the southern seas has also has caused her to view with alarm the resumption of Japanese whaling in these waters, and a resumption on anything more than a temporary basis will certainly meet with strong New Zealand opposition.

Need Closer Link Between Peoples

Montreal, —(CP)—A true sense of relationship between people of the world's countries is needed to give meaning to the United Nations Organization we have founded, Warwick F. Chipman, K.C., Canadian Ambassador to Argentina, said in an address to the women's Canadian Club here.

He urged his listeners to turn their thoughts in all directions.

Speaking of the four South American countries—Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru—where Canadian trade missions have been established, Mr. Chipman said "there has been a warmth of welcome and understanding for Canada that is deeply gratifying to those who represent her and to my Canadian visitors."

As a result of the war, there are immense difficulties in the way of trade, transportation and travel. However, there is a great need to "send back on their missions as soon as we can do so, these three ambassadors of peace."

Business and pleasure travellers would do much for international fellowship.

"We on this hemisphere, northerner and southerners, know far too little of each other,' said Mr. Chipman. "We cannot begin too soon to know more."

By inaugerating diplomatic missions, Canada was joining in a work that more and more must be done for unity.

Bancroft

Bancroft (Special) — One has heard of two-legged deer and four-legged deer but now a new species has come to light. Mr. Arthur Tompsett of White Pine Lodge reports that one of his guides, Calvin Baumhour, while out on one of the watches with a hunting party on Eel's Lake bagged a three-legged deer. Mr. Baumhour having heard the hounds baying in the distance kept his eyes peeled on his water watch and soon he spied an animal swimming the lake. The guide held his fire until the animal just left the water and let go with the only fire arm he had with him—a shot gun, and brought the deer down. On going over he found it to be a two-year-old buck which had during the present hunt evidently had a close call as the one front leg was completely shot off. It was quite evident that the accident had occurred during the fall hunt for the stub of the leg was not as yet healed over.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. H. Tabbiner wish to announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Anna Nancy, to Alvin Kenneth, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Morris, of Belleville, wedding to take place in Christ Church, Saturday, Dec. 7, at 2.30 p.m.

Mrs. J. A. Rickett, Coleman Street, is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, having undergone an eye operation.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Y. Jones, who have been visiting the latter's sister, Mrs. J. Weymark, Church Street, left for their home in Fort William today.

Miss Phyllis Jones, who was a weekend guest of her aunt, Mrs. Jos. Weymark, has returned to Kingston, where she is a six-year student at Queen's University.

Friends of Mr. F. W. Marner, 82 Queen Street, will be sorry to learn he is a patient in the Kingston General Hospital.

The many friends of Mr. Thomas Mascaro, manager of the Capitol Theatre, will regret to learn of his bereavement occasioned by the death of his mother, which occurred in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral will take place at London, Ontario.

WEDDINGS

McHUGH—CRUJI

St. Michael of the Archangel Church, Belleville, was the scene of an Autumn wedding on Monday November 11, at 9 a.m., when Patricia, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Cruji, was united in marriage to Mr. Isaiah Alfred McHugh, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. P. McHugh, of Eganville. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, D.P., V.G., rector of St. Michael's Church, performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father wore a gown of white taffeta, simply fashioned with slim bodice and long full skirt. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place with a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of white chrysanthemums and lily-of-the-valley. Mrs. George Gist, sister of the bride, was the matron-of-honor, and wore a pastel rose gown with matching headdress of tulle and ostrich plumes, and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and bouvardia.

Mr. George Delaney, Gananoque, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Arthur Cruji, brother of the bride, and Mr. Leo Buckley, of Belleville.

Mrs. Leo Buckley, sang several solos during the ceremony accompanied by Miss Dorothy Grant at the organ.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, after which the bridal couple left for a wedding trip to Montreal and points east, the bride travelling in a dressmaker suit of dove grey wool, with red accessories and mink marmot furs. On their return they will reside at the Churchill Apartments, Earl St., Kingston.

Out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. Clifford Bracken, Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, Mr. Bob Allen, and Miss Elaine Sterling, of Kingston; Mr. George Delaney, Gananoque; Mr. and Mrs. D. Mavety, of Woodstock; Miss Anne McHugh, of Montreal; and Mrs. A. A. McHugh, of Ottawa.

REID—GROVES

On the afternoon of Nov. 16, St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Lois Anne (Peggy), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Groves, of Madoc, became the bride of Ernest Irwin Reid, Harold, Ont., son of Mrs. J. Reid, and the late John Reid of Campbellford, the Rev. J. L. Hutchison officiating, with wedding music supplied by Mrs. James Aylesworth, of Madoc.

Given in marriage by her father the bride made an attractive picture in a floor-length gown of white satin and net; the bodice featuring a sweetheart neckline, and long sleeves, and the bouffant skirt being appliqued with satin bows. Her full length veil was held in place by a halo and she wore a three-strand necklace of pearls with matching earrings, a gift from her aunt, Miss Hazel Phillips, of Toronto. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Joyce Groves, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor, wearing a gown of old rose taffeta, with matching headdress and shoulder-length veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white, pink and yellow 'mums with pink roses.

Miss Beverly Groves, the bride's youngest sister, was bridesmaid, wearing pink taffeta with matching headdress and shoulder-length veil and carrying a cascade bouquet of blue, white and yellow 'mums and pink roses.

Little Patsy Donohoe, of Stirling, was the flower girl, making a quaint picture in a floor-length gown of powder blue net, with pink headdress and blue shoulder-length veil. She carried a bouquet similar to those carried by the other attendants.

Mr. Claude Reid, brother of the groom, performed the duties of the groomsman, and the ushers were Messrs. Dick Groves and Percy Reid.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, with Mrs. Reid receiving in a powder blue dress, matching hat and wearing a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a rose dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The home was decorated in the traditional color scheme of pink and white, the table was covered with a handmade cloth, crocheted by the bride's grandmother, the late Mrs. Annie Phillips and was centred with a beautiful wedding-cake, flanked by tall tapers in silver holders.

Miss Mildred Heagle of Hoard's Station, catered for the refreshments while assisting in serving the guests were Mesdames Russell West, Edward Bateman, Ernest Cain, and Don Donohoe, also Misses Jean and Ruth Morton. The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver, to the groomsman and to the ushers, fountain pens. The bride presented her attendants with compacts and to the flower girl she gave flower plaques. The waitresses received earrings.

For travelling to Toronto, Hamilton, Windsor, and Detroit, Mich., the bride wore a lime green wool suit with brown tuxedo fur-trimmed top-coat, matching accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Out-of-town guests were from Frankford, Campbellford, Stirling, Wellington, Springbrook and Belleville.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Reid will reside in Minto.

GEGGEAR—RUTTAN

On the afternoon of Nov. 20, a quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the officiating clergyman, Bleecker Ave., when Rev. E. Farnsworth united Mrs. Mary Antoinette Ruttan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Burley, of Picton, Ont., with Mr. Reginald Roderick Geggear, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Geggear, of Copper Cliff, Ont.

Mr. Geggear is at present employed at the Mountain View Airport, and the young couple will reside in Picton.

Extensive Program Features Pie Social

Marsh Hill.—A most successful pie social was held on the evening of November 15, at Marsh Hill School under the auspices of Pine Grove W. I.

Mr. Wm. Rodgers was chairman for the following program: Community singing led by Mr. Farley Lindenfield, assisted at piano by Miss Gena Vanderwater.

Mr. Alec Parks, of Stirling, gave an interesting sketch of the life of Sir Gilbert Parker, one of the early teachers of Marsh Hill School.

Mr. Parks also contributed a recitation.

Mr. H. Ashley, of Stirling, gave some amusing anecdotes.

Mrs. Percy McMullen, of Rawdon, gave several humorous readings.

Little Miss Joan Campbell, and Master Douglas Detlor, dressed in old-time costumes, very charmingly presented a two-act song entitled "Daisy and Michael".

Miss Evelyn Olmstead gave a very humorous reading entitled "When Hulda 'Spects Her Beau".

Mr. Douglas Pyear, accompanied at the piano by his mother, Mrs. Arthur Pyear, rendered two delightful solos.

Mr. Farley Lindenfield, accompanied at the piano by his aunt, Miss May Currie, also entertained with two pleasing solos.

A bounteous supply of all varieties of pie and sandwiches, was served by the ladies.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to those assisting in the program and to the committee in charge.

The pleasant evening was brought to a close with the National Anthem.

COUSINS INHERIT FORTUNE

Several Ration Coupons Expire At End of Year

Ottawa, Nov. 21. (CP)—The Prices Board announced today that a group of sugar-preserves, evaporated milk, butter and meat ration coupons will expire at Dec. 31 this year.

Invalid on that date will be all sugar-preserves "S" coupons Nos. 1 to 25 in ration book five, meat "M" coupons Nos. 56 to 63 and butter "B" coupons Nos. 29 to 34 in book six and all evaporated milk coupons bearing a Beaver design.

Tabernacle W.A. Holds Successful Bazaar and Tea

The warmth of bright November sunshine on Wednesday afternoon proved a strong enducement for ladies of various churches in the city to congregate at Tabernacle United, where the Sunday School rooms were invitingly arranged for the annual bazaar sponsored by the Women's Association of the church.

Guests were welcomed by Mrs. J. W. Houston, Mrs. M. C. Burgess and Mrs. G. Gorseline, and invited to inspect the merchandise offered for sale in the different booths.

Brightly colored aprons were displayed to advantage on a table in charge of Mrs. George Elliott. The home baking, convened by Mrs. Adam Palmer, was attractively arranged on the stage at the front of the room, where a long table was covered with an abundance of tarts, pies, cakes, cookies, tea biscuits and buns, color being added by the jars of jams and pickles.

Well Patronized

The booth of "Things-hard-to-get" convened by Mrs. R. Johnston, was well patronized by ladies searching for salt, soap and shortening, all of which were on sale, as well as other articles equally rare.

Mrs. E. R. Nelson was in charge of the towels and novelties, which included useful linen handkerchiefs edged with fine tatted lace, crocheted centres, children's wearables and toys.

For guests with the proverbial "sweet tooth" a small table, effectively decorated in red and white, held enticing containers of candies. This was convened by Mrs. H. J. Poste, and sponsored by the Church Choir.

Delightful Tea Room

Mrs. N. Wardner, convened the "tea room", which occupied the large central floor space roped and decorated with crepe paper in a delicate shade of rose pink. Twelve small "foursome" tables, each with its individual pink taper, were arranged around the larger one in the centre, which was covered with beautiful handmade lace cloth, a product of the "Needlecraft Group". Here tall pink tapers in crystal candelabra vied with the deeper rose tones of snapdragons used as a centrepiece.

Presiding at the tea services were Mrs. R. B. Grose and Mrs. George Ashley, for the first hour, who were later relieved by Mrs. G. F. Lent and Mrs. Gordon Miller.

Serving the guests with tiny sandwiches and a variety of dainties were twelve ladies, namely—Mesdames Gorseline, Ackerman, Cornell, E. Ashley, Cornish, Judge, Rowe, G. Winter, Farnell, Isard, and Miss Ethel Horton; each waitress being responsible for one table, while Mesdames Harrison, Buck and Walker were kept busy replenishing the plates and tea pots.

Mrs. A. H. Fisher, treasurer for the afternoon, reports that approximately two hundred ladies visited the tea room and bazaar, marking this as another successful event in the pre-Christmas whirl of social activities.

Prices Board's Pamphlet Keeps Women Informed

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 21 (CP)—No advertising campaign, no sample copies, were necessary to build the Consumers' News into the publication with what is believed the largest circulation in Canada.

For the last four years country and city women alike have looked for the latest on rationing and shortages on this eight-page monthly bulletin put out by the Consumer Branch of the Prices Board.

No postage is required for the 319,000 copies which each month are distributed to housewives from Prince Rupert, B.C., to Princeton, Ont., Vancouver to Vigneau, Que. First they are sent in batches to the 16,000 Consumer Branch representatives throughout Canada, and to each of the 1,700 labor union representatives. From there they go to members of the various community organizations.

"Not only does this 'passing along' save money, but it also lends the personal touch," said Rosa Shaw, former women's editor of the Montreal Gazette, who puts out the bulletin. "As the paper shortage became acute subscribers were urged in turn to pass their copy long to a neighbor, rather than keep it, or throw it away...and those who no longer wanted copies were asked to notify us and have their names removed from our lists."

"It's the only publication which gives the policy of the board," continued Miss Shaw. "We have tried to anticipate what people will be wanting to know...when any new board ruling comes out it's up to us to try and explain it—not in the language of the economist, but in words everyone will understand."

Male Readers Too

Not only women are avid readers of The News. A Toronto lawyer recently wrote in asking that the names of several of his friends be added to the list of subscribers.

Take for instance the November issue in which it discusses the reason for the increase in the price of milk. A brief story reviews the entire milk question.

Another story, humorously illustrated, points out that Canada had an excellent potato crop this year, and urges Canadians to eat more potatoes.

"Turkey for Christmas" tops another story in which the consumer is told of the recent board price ruling which will allow more families to enjoy turkey for Christmas this year.

Many a Canadian newspaper has used the bulletin's copy on its editorial page, concluded Miss Shaw. "Many a housewife has written thank-you notes to use for the information it contains."

West Huntingdon

W. I. Meeting

West Huntingdon.—The monthly meeting of the local branch of The Women's Institute was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace on Tuesday evening, with a splendid attendance of ladies and several gentlemen. Mrs. Wm. French presided and considerable business was discussed. A paper on the Motto was given by Mrs. R. Geraldi. Misses Marilyn Fitchette and Joyce Wallace each contributed a solo. Mrs. Ernie Moore, the district president, gave an informative address on the varied work of the Institute. Mr. Kenneth Stewart was the guest speaker, choosing as his subject "As Citizens of Canada, What Do We Owe Our Country?" Mrs. Milton Shaw, presided at the piano. The National Anthem concluded the meeting and delicious refreshments were served.

The ladies of the W.A. of Fuller United Church, held their November meeting at the home of Miss Bessie Hollinger on Wednesday afternoon.

This district was well represented in Toronto, during the past ten days. Messrs. Melville Donnan and Clifford Green attended the special religious rally held in Maple Leaf Gardens, when members of the "Old-Fashionel Revival Hour" radio program furnished the entertainment.

Messrs. Philip Carr and Morley Haggerty attended the Cheese Producers' meeting in the Capital City on Wednesday and Thursday.

Those attending the Royal Winter Fair were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sills, Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Welsh, Messrs. John Wallace and Sam Donnan, Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ashley were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Bird, of Belleville.

Mrs. Foster Wilson, Mrs. John Moorcroft and Miss Sarah Wilson were Friday guests of Mrs. Fred Barlow, of 2nd of Thurlow.

Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and family, spent Sunday with Mrs. Edward Pitman and family, of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Wilson were Sunday evening guests of Sarah and Arthur Wilson.

The Standard Church congregation of Ivanhoe have been holding special evangelistic meetings during the past two weeks and this weekend with hold their annual convention.

Mrs. Morley Haggerty and John, spent a few days recently with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. E. Brummell and daughters, of Norwood, Mrs. Adam Brummell and Steven, of Massassaga, spent a couple of days with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr.

The members of "The Endeavorers" Sunday School Class held a very helpful meeting on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr. Mr. W. E. Belch, of Stirling, was the guest speaker and brought a most inspiring message. Mrs. Elmer Post presided and was assisted in the worship service by Messrs. Kenneth Stewart and Arthur Wilson. Mrs. E. Brummell, of Norwood, gave a fine address. A trio composed of Mrs. Clifford Green, Clayton Wright and Elmer Post brought a message in song. Mrs. Elmer Post gave a reading and at the conclusion of the program Mrs. Carr and daughters served lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ashley returned home from their wedding trip on Monday and were given a welcome by members of the "Happy Gang".

The West Huntingdon Cheese Manufacturing Co., closed their plant for this season on Saturday.

SIMPLE LINES and a minimum of ornamentation are best for the bag that has to go with most every outfit. Such a bag is a deep, squarish, double handled pouch with rounded corners and broken base. Made of black or brown suede or calfskin, it has a long gold metal bar across the frame and deep oval metal tabs at either end.

THE FABRIC is the thing with smart dresses that use little or no extraneous trimming. Deep brown satin, with coin dots worked in copper metallic thread, is used for a handsome afternoon dress made with one-sided, squarish neckline and softly draped skirt. Midriff is gently fitted.

THERE'S NOTHING to compare with fine lace for the evening frock that wears and packs well. Fine lace in the palest shade of coffee-with-cream color is used for a handsome evening frock cut on slim lines. It has a three- tiered skirt, the tiers dipping gently toward the back. A back-dipping flange of lace marks the square neckline.

NEW AND INTERESTING is the beloved felt casual handled on formalized lines. White smoke felt is used for such a hat, the casual brim dipping softly in front and back. The crown is draped with capuchine velvet and is punctured with a question mark of iridescent coq feathers.

IT'S A BIG SEASON for coats. Very new-looking is the double-breasted, fitted reefer made with high closing and high-placed collar and wide, pointed revers. And, to top it off, the coat is of boldly plaided woolen, the sort usually reserved for travel coast or bulky toppers.

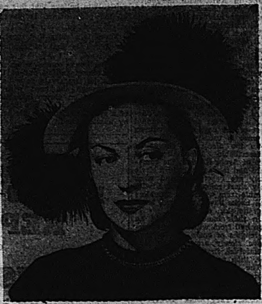
A Black and White Cloche



By PRUNELLA WOOD

Even girls who don't think they wear hats well, and have rushed around in summer suns without any, will find the cloche a good start for cold weather.

This felt model is shown here in an off shade of white, and it is trimmed with two big ostrich puffs which give it chic, and gear it both for frocks and suits.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Disposition Manifests Itself in The Face

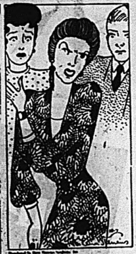
It isn't enough to have physical health; one must also have mental and emotional health. What goes on in the mind, can be seen in the face, and don't' let that fact escape you when you look in the mirror on a bad day, and wonder what can be done about those little lines that are forming, the dull look in the eyes, the droop of the shoulders.

It is better, much better, to be a sprightly Mrs. Gay than a dismal Mrs. Gloom, better for oneself, one's friends, one's family and the woman next door. There are many members of the glum and surly sisterhood who are distributing depressing influences, casting shadows over the lives of other individuals.

And how they look! lips drawn down into mournful sags! Frowns between their eyes! Ever present is a look of disapproval for the remarks and behavior of other people. Nothing suits them. They haven't patience with the old, or the young or the betwixt-and-betweens. They're always harboring thoughts of intolerance. Are they so perfect in the performance of their own duties and responsibilities that they can hold others up to criticism? They are not. They are all mold and mildew. In the course of following their life policy, they will have machine-gun faces.

Nagging women are headed for the scrap heap of unloved individuals. They are the world's loudest complainers, never realizing that the reason they are neglected is because nobody can endure being near them. They have neither sweetness nor light.

Nearly every large family has a sour member. If only such women could see themselves as they are, see the mistakes they are making! What do they gain? Can't they do a turn-about? Be a little more human? Have sympathy for other people? Put themselves in other people's places? Others have troubles, too. Even the bravest of us have our weak moments. But if we're wise, we don't let them get us down. We may fall into the ditch of despair, but we don't stay there. We make an effort to crawl out. Old Mrs. Gloom likes her ditches. She feels at home in them.

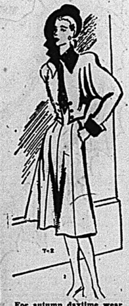


Nagging women are apt to become unloved individuals

It would do Mrs. Gloom a lot of good to go on a big beauty binge, get a facial, scalp treatment, manicure, new hair-do. There is something about a beauty shop that gives a woman hope that she can defy Time, stay young in spite of him. She finds refreshments.

Let her get out into the open, breath the fresh air of autumn, give her muscles exercise. Let her go to a movie that will make her laugh. Let her get away from her depressing self. She will feel better, look years younger, be happier.

Smart Street Suit



For autumn daytime wear

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

BROWN wool jersey plaided in gray and yellow points up this neat gray wool suit and so creates a smart color combination. The skirt and blouse are attached, the skirt built up above the waist and notched into a V. The blouse has a plain round high neckline. The waist length jacket is lined in plaid and has a high turned-over collar of plaid and three-button fastenings at the waist. The skirt is gored back and front. This is a wonderful suit for smart strolling.

GOOD MANNERS

Writing the Notes Telling of The Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am going to announce my engagement within the next few weeks, and I realize that before the public announcement in the newspapers I should write notes informing my relatives and friends. What is the proper form for this kind of note?

2. And what about my fiance's relatives and friends — who writes to them about our engagement?

F. R.

1. There isn't any definite form for these notes telling your relatives and friends of your engagement, for what you write depends on (1) how intimately you know the person to whom you are writing, and (2) whether or not the person has met your fiance. If the relative or friend hasn't met your fiance, you should, naturally, write something about who he is, where he is from, and so forth.

The first sentence of these notes has become almost a tradition, and justifiably so, for it makes the person feel an intimacy and importance in connection with being told the news:

Dear Aunt Emily,

Of course I want you to be among the first to know that Tom Rowland and I are engaged. He's from Columbus, Ohio, has resumed his law practice after serving overseas, and after our marriage, we'll live in Columbus — which delights me for, as you know, I went to college near there and many of my classmates live there or thereabouts.

Mother and Dad are going to announce the engagement on Tuesday, November 5th (no party, just a newspaper announcement), so please "don't tell" till then. I'll write you later about our wedding plans, but I wanted you to know the happy news at once.

Dearest love from Tom and me.

Affectionately.

2. At the same time that you mail your notes to your relatives and friends, your fiance should mail his notes to his relatives and friends.

Of Christenings, Godparents, Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for the sister of a mother-to-be to give a baby shower?

2. How soon after the baby's birth should we have the christening?

3. Should we give each of the godparents a gift, or isn't this customary?

4. Are the godparents expected to give the baby a gift? If so, what form of thank-you card or note should be used?

Prospective Mother.

1. It is not considered good taste for a close relative to give a shower. A shower given under such "auspices" obviously gives the impression that its (as it undoubtedly is) a promotion for gifts.

2. The age at which a child is christened varies, the time of christening depending on the regulations of the denomination. If in your church there is no rule governing this, you and your husband decide for yourselves.

3. It isn't customary to give gifts to the godparents.

4. Yes, the godparents are expected to give the baby a gift. If, as is usual, the gift is handed to the baby's mother, the donor is thanked at that time, and perhaps also by a note of thanks — never by a "thank-you card."

What Every Teacher Knows

By. Mrs. Beeckman

When a child enters a schoolroom, the teacher knows, inevitably, what that child's home training has been. To the well-bred and well-trained child, it will be as natural as breathing for him or her to say, "Good morning, Miss Marsh", and "Please Miss Marsh" and "Thank you, Miss Marsh."

DON'T THINK that little five- and six-year-olds aren't fashion-conscious. They like suits, especially bolero types such as a long-sleeved bolero suit of blue or brown faille with box-pleated skirt, worn with a white cotton blouse.

POPULAR LEADER WILL TAKE OVER CANADIAN POST

Francis M. Forde, Australian High Commissioner to Canada is Veteran of Labor Party

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 18—(CP) — Francis Michael Forde, parliamentary veteran who was deputy leader of the Australian Labor Party for 14 years and army minister for the last four years of the war, is Australia's new high commissioner for Canada. He succeeds Alfred Stirling, who has held the post for nearly two years.

Forde was personally unsuccessful in the Australian general elections in September, and the Canadian appointment has been looked upon in political and newspaper circles as a reward for long service to the Labor party.

Forde headed the Australian delegation to the San Francisco conference in 1945 though Dr. H. V. Evatt, external affairs minister, was leading spokesman.

Until September, the former army minister, now replaced as deputy party leader and deputy prime minister by Dr. Evatt, had represented the federal division of Capricornia for 24 years. For five years before he had been a member of the Queensland state legislature.

Forde was the choice of the late Prime Minister John Curtin for the army portfolio when Labor took power in 1941 and held the post from then on.

For a short time in 1945 between the death of Curtin and the Labor party's choice of Benedict Chifley as leader, he was head of the government and his name was mentioned freely in speculation over the succession.

The high commissioner is 56, a good mixer and a good public speaker. He is popular in Labor circles in which he is usually called "Frankie," and his stock went up with the way he accepted the election result in Capricornia where counting went on for several days before it was definite that C. W. Davidson, a Country Party-Liberal candidate had won in the close vote.

Praise for Party.

The army minister told newspapermen that while he regretted his personal defeat he rejoiced in the re-election of the Labor Party and he added words of praise for Prime Minister Chifley's campaign leadership, the party and its policies. Among reasons given for the upset was newspaper criticism of arrangements for Australian occupation troops in Japan.

As deputy prime minister he had also been under fire when he stepped into a difficult labor situation on the Sydney waterfront last April during Prime Minister Chifley's visit to Britain and the United States.

Early in the year, the metropolitan papers, most of which are anti-Labor, had criticized him in connection with the army's handling of the repatriation of Japanese internees who were crowded aboard the Japanese destroyer Yoizuki for their trip home.

While the electoralu division which he represented so long is in his native state of Queensland, the home of Mr. Forde, his wife, three daughters and one son has been in a Sydney suburb in recent years. His Queensland birthplace is Mitchell, a town about 40 miles inland from Brisbane.

He was educated at a Christian Brothers' school at Toowoomba, became a teacher and later an electrical engineer. When he was elected to the federal house after five years in the state parliament, Forde was only 32. He sat on a royal commission on the motion picture industry and in the Scullin labor government of early depression years, was assistant minister and then minister of trade and customs, and acting minister of markets and transport. Cats Have Rat for Dinner — But in the case of this bold rodent, he is a guest rather than main course. Two years ago Paavo Heino of Montreal found a half-frozen baby rat in a snowdrift, brought him home and christened him "Pity." Today Pity and Miri, the cat, along with Miri's daughters, are old pals. They eat together and sleep together, and when Miri licks her offspring she never fails to offer a similar caress to Pity if he's around.

Reporter-Angler Tells All About Ontario Fishing

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 18 (CP) — Ontario, termed "Fisherman's Paradise" by Jack Hambleton in his book of that name, has a long, long way to go before anglers put a strain on its lakes and streams. Hambleton brings out in his book that currently anglers are tapping no more than one-thousandth of Ontario.

But he thinks not only of the far places and is the first to admit that many a Toronto man and boy has gone by street car to Grenadier Pond in High Park and had a fine time with bass and pike.

"Nobody can truthfully say they have fished all the waters in Ontario," says Hambleton. "You couldn't live that long."

Nevertheless he has covered a good deal of it and this virtual textbook on what to do, where to go and how to go about catching any kind of game fish in Ontario from perch to the giant muskies of the Lake of the Woods region, is filled with the stuff anglers want to know. It's slanted for anybody who wants to fish Ontario, preferably the "little fellow" who must keep fishing costs down.

Throughout there is reflected the wholesome fullness of any fishing trip from the pine needles on the far reaches of the Albany River to the rocking deck of a bass-fishing launch on Lake Ontario. Here you come bump up against not only anglers' tips in great and detailed mass but you also meet the people who are to fishing what Paul Bunyan is to the spinner of lumber jack yarns.

Keep Pack Down.

For instance Hambleton remarks that weight-saving is important in the bush. Keep your pack down. There are not many like the fellow from Brent" that Jerry Kennedy of Algonquin Park talks about.

"This fellow, according to Jerry, carried four 100-pound bags of flour on his back; his ten-year-old boy sat on his shoulders; he pulled a loaded toboggan with a tumpline; carried two 100-pound pails of lard in his hands and was kicking a full barrel of gasoline uphill throughout the deep snow."

Hambleton introduces the bush pilots and men of the Ontario Provincial Air Service to show the angling that lies ahead when cheep air transportation reduces travelling time.

They speak of the tremendous country north from Lake Superior to James Bay, from Manitoba to Quebec — approximately 275,000 square miles —"such mighty rivers as the Sachigo, Severn, Winish, Ekwan, Attawapiskat, Kapiskau, Albany and Abitibi," then this: "At present we are fishing on but a fringe of our potential fishing country, probably a tenth of one per cent of the lakes and streams which contain fish."

And, with a candor that could only come from a newspaperman-angler who writes a column called "Fishing for Fun" he comes up with this remark which will shock so many who call themselves anglers instead of plain fishermen: "Worms, your best bet for fishing."

Natives on Mystery Island Flog Themselves With Chains to "Honor" Caliph Who Was Killed—Scene is Supposed to Represent Actual Assassination

(From the Sheffield, Eng., Telegraph)

Less than 30 miles long, only 10 miles across at its widest point and almost hugging the El. Hasa shore of saudi Arabia in the Persian Gulf lies one of mystery islands of the world.

Bahrein is almost unknown although it was given some prominence during the war, and the oil from a refinery set up in 1936 by an American company played a big part in the naval warfare of the middle and far east.

Apart from a narrow strip on the northwestern coast the island is a desolate expanse of rocky desert on which not even the scantiest vegetation exists.

But it has a history steeped in romance of Arab and Mohammedan tradition. Before the discovery of its oil bearing sands it was known to archeologists and explorers as "the Island of Tombs."

Covering practically the entire length of the coast near to the Arabian mainland and stretching inland for about three miles are thousands of strange mounds heaped seven and eight feet high with large stones now worn as smooth as silk by centuries of wind and sand.

The limited exploration so far conducted has shown them to be two storey sepulchres. The discovery of human skeletons, primitive implements and pieces of pottery has definitely established them as being of Phoenecian origin.

There are several schools of thought on these strange burial places the most widely accepted being that as the island had nothing to offer man as a habitation it was used as a communal cemetery.

Today a black ribbon of asphalt winds from the oil company's headquarters to the only town and port, Manama, and hundreds of the burial mounds have been despoiled by the needs of modern transport. But thousands remain reminding one that a civilization dating back to 600 A.D. used the island.

Until late in the 1920's Bahrein was the centre of the Persian pearling industry. Even up to 1937 the grounds yielded pearls valued at two million rupees. The water around the island is nowhere more than seven fathoms deep, and in the best days was the breeding ground of the Pinctada Margeritifera oyster, which produces that rare treasure the pure, rose pink oriental pearl.

There are still small fleets of Arab dhows bunched together in the harbor, and teams of Arabs said out to dive in the gulf for elusive fortune.

Fortune came the way of 20 of these naked divers in 1928. In a shell not more than three inches long was found a pearl of fabulous size, which brought each man 6,000 rupees. It was eventually sold in Paris for 4,000,000 francs, and is today the centre piece of the famous Barbara Hutton necklace.

The natives of the island are Shiites, a sect of the Mohammedan faith who reject the Sunna (a book of teachings left by Mahomet), which truly orthodox Mohammedans consider equal in importance to the Koran.

A somewhat gruesome ceremony is performed by this sect every year in commemoration of the assissination in 660 A.D. of Ali, the fourth Caliph. He was was known as a good and wise ruler and married the daughter of the prophet.

In 660 a distant cousin, who had opposed the ascension of Ali and had given a lot of trouble arranged a meeting at a river bank in Kufa, with the object of making peace, Ali and his followers, however, walked into a carefully planned ambush and all were murdered.

It is not usual for Mohammedans to allow any unbeliever to witness the rites and ceremonies connected with their faith, but in recent years the Europeans and Americans on the island have been allowed into this one ceremony.

It takes place in a sandy courtyard, walled in on all sides, during the hottest and most humid part of the day, and to witness it once is usually enough.

To the discordant chorus of indescribable lamentations, a line of Arabs file into the courtyard and move slowly in a circle They are barefooted, and wear only short ragged trousers, with a tunic from which the shoulders and backs have been torn, leaving the skin exposed.

In their hands they hold an iron ball from which hang several lengths of chain, and as they move slowly around they flog themselves, first over one shoulder, then over the other.

The chorus takes on an even more terrifying sound as they are followed by a circle of performers dressed in long white smocks. They walk slowly around, bowing low toward the ground, and as they straighten up they beat themselves on the forehead with long curved swords.

Some of them injure themselves but the white smocks are already smothered in blood when they appear, and it is not difficult to believe that this part of the performance is cleverly stage managed.

There is a story that most of the blood is that of captured gulls.

The climax comes when an Arab, almost falling out of the saddle, he appears to have been run through the head with a sword, but on closer inspection one sees that it is two halves of a sword, fastened to his head by a wide band.

The scene is supposed to represent the actual assassination of Ali. In a most realistic performance he is taken from the horse and laid on the sand, while a wailing mob of performers and onlookers file past him.

The concentrated drive for more and more oil during the war led to the discovery of huge reserves of this mineral wealth and it is certain that places such as Bahrein, and other almost unknown spots in the Persian gulf are destined to be very much "in the news" during the next few years.

AUSTRALIA GIVES WARM WELCOME TO CAN. BRIDES

Some Girls Have Taken Jobs Before Settling Down to Full Time Housekeeping

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 18 (CP)—A "breath of home" is the way Canadian war brides here term the Canadian Women's Club whose secretary, Mrs. Gordon Young, formerly of London, Ontario, and wife of the director of physical education for the New South Wales Education Department, is busy helping the Canadian girls become accustomed to their new surroundings and settle down in their Australian homes.

Ruth Toppin, formerly Ruth Harris, N.B., came here more than two years ago. Her husband was formerly an R.A.A.F. wireless air-gunner and there's Mrs. J. R. King, formerly Barbara Cowie, Montreal, who met her Australian husband in Nassau.

At the club's monthly meetings the "old hands" gave a cheering welcome to new arrivals such as Mrs. Terry Jane Baker, formerly Terry Jane Hough, Toronto.

"Life here is very much as it is at home—only warmer," was Mrs. Baker's comment when asked how she liked her new home.

Mrs. Arthur Tebbutt, formerly Jay McKell, Calgary, was married here last May. Her husband, formerly an air-gunner in the R.A.A.F., was a prisoner-of-war in Germany for three years.

While waiting to settle down to full time housekeeping several of the Canadian girls have taken jobs. Mrs. R. A. Parker, formerly Carol Coote, Edmonton, has become supervisor of the Sydney Overseas Brides Club, an organization sponsored by the Y.W.C.A.

Help With Problems.

"You get adjusted to a country just that much faster if you work in it," said Mrs. Parker. She added that she has found Australian people friendly and genuine and sympathetic to problems which may crop up for the girls from overseas.

As the main object of the Overseas Brides Club is to acquaint its members with Australian conditions, Mrs. Parker feels in supervising it she can do a valuable job for both Canadians and Australians.

Another career girl is Dorothy Ashcroft, formerly Dorothy Crawshaw, Vernon, B.C., who came here from Hong Kong in 1940 and married three years later. While her husband was away serving with the R.A.A.F., Mrs. Crawshaw visited Canada and on her return became a script-writer for a Sydney broadcasting station.

In Melbourne many of the war bride members of the Canadian Women's Club there also are continuing the work they did at home. Mrs. D. Charlwood, formerly Nell East, Edmonton, is acting librarian at the Y.W.C.A. Mrs. J. Morley, formerly Kathleen Olding, North Battleford, Sask., is doing secretarial work for the same organization.

Mrs. R. M. McPherson, formerly Adelyne Stephenson, Red Deer, Alta., teaches English and History at a leading girls' school.

An active worker with the Little Theatre Group is Mrs. D. M. de Jongh (nee Julie Leight, North Calgary.)

WAR MOTHER HEARS SON'S VOICE FROM THE "DEAD"

Tears of happiness stream down the face of Mrs. Joseph De Bartolo, LEFT, of Squanton, Mass., as she hears the voice of her son, Michael, 24, RIGHT, speaking by transatlantic phone from Rome, Italy, where he is in custody. Missing since 1944 and feared dead, the serviceman insisted his mind went blank on the eve of the Battle of Cassino in 1944. With Mrs. De Bortolo is another son, Joseph, Jr., five.

Ancient Fort in Peaceful Role

(In London Calling)

The ancient Portuguese fort at Zanzibar, famous local landmark the walls of which have been silent witnesses of many barbarous acts in former times, is now to become an up-to-date civic and welfare centre for women and children in the predominately African part of the town.

The scheme for the conversion of the fort has been approved by Britain's Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. George H. Hall, M. P., and a sum of £2,000 from the newly created Development and Welfare Fund has been allotted for the reconstruction. A start on the work has already been made.

A widespread adherence a-certain sections of the people of Zanzibar to purdah customs, and the resultant reluctance among the women to appear in public places, make it desirable that the welfare centres for these women should be situated in a place of comparative seclusion.

As a result the Government of Zanzibar selected the old Portuguese for as a site for this centre, its high walls making it ideal for this purpose.

The welfare centre for purdah women is to include an infant welfare and health clinic.

A part will be laid out as a children's playground, and there will be a walled garden for the benefit of those women who, because of religous restrictions, are prevented from enjoying the amenities of more-public gardens.

The original 'keep' of the fort is to be built in such a way as to provide rooms for use as an infant welfare and health clinic as well as reading-rooms and lecture-hall for use by the women medical officers and members of the Educational Department for demonstrations and instructional purposes.

The architecture of the fort is of considerable historical interest, and although for the most part the structure is now in ruins three, sides with towers, are still intact.

Every effort will be made to preserve the original features of the building during the reconstruction of the fort for the peaceful, twentieth-century role that its original designers can scarcely have foreseen.

Speed Top Factor In Modern Hockey Says Stars of 30s

By ALAN VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Nov. 18 (CP) — At this time of the year you can always find a former hockey star willing to compare modern play with the game of his day.

Lawrence Northcott is no exception. This former National Hockey League star, better known as "Baldy" will talk hockey 24 hours a day.

Commenting on the game of today, 38-year-old Northcott said, "If Frank Boucher and Bill and Bun Cook were at their peak and using these rules, they'd have a field day. Gosh, the way that trio could pass a puck, they'd drive the present-day defencemen crazy."

He said too, now-a-days, defencemen have to be able to skate as fast as a forward, but the hard hitting type, like Eddie Shore, King Clancy or Babe Seibert, belong to the past. Everything depends on speed with forwards skating around a defence, instead of, as in the old days, trying to battle their way through.

Baldy gives Tiny Thompson the nod over Charlie Gardiner for goal-keeper of his time, while Eddie Shore and Ching Johnson were tops at defence. Howie Morenz is his all-star centre, with Bill Cook as right-winger and Aurel Joliat at left.

He said the most under-rated line in hockey was that of Cooney Weiland, Dit Clapper and Dutch Gainor, who were with Boston Bruins in the early 30s. Statistics show this trio amassed 180 points in 1929-30—more than the Cook-Boucher-Cook line ever had in one season. Few people mention this line when discussing hockey, he said.

Calgary Product.

Baldy Northcott grew up in Calgary and learned his early hockey there. He later played with Brantford, Ont., juniors, and with Haileybury seniors in the Northern Ontario league. He turned professional in the fall of 1929 with the Montreal Maroons of the N.H.L. Unlike Frank Merriwell, he did not set the league on fire in his first season. In fact he was farmed out the next year to the Maroons' minor league club, Windsor, in the International League. He was recalled after a month's play with Windsor, and finished that season—and seven more—with the Maroons.

The forward line of Hooley Smith, Jimmy Ward and Northcott gave Maroons its spark thru' many a season and play-off.

Maroons disbanded at the end of the 1937-38 schedule and Baldy went to Chicago Black Hawks for one season, after which he decided to hang up his skates for good.

In his ten years in the N.H.L. Northcott scored 133 goals and had 112 assists for a total of 245 points. He was six times in Stanley Cup playdowns, and in 1932-33 was selected on the mythical all-star team at left wing.

Baldy has not left the game altogether. Following his retirement from active participation he moved to Winnipeg. In 1941 he master-minded Winnipeg Rangers to a Dominion junior hockey championship, and held an executive position with that club when they again won Dominion honors in 1943.

Hockey did a lot for Baldy Northcott. Now he is doing a lot for hockey by developing youngsters.

Schoharie — Messrs. John McGee, Will McGee and Norman Leavitt are spending a couple of weeks in the north country on a hunting trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith of Gananoque spent the supper hour on Friday with Mrs. Lewis Cleave and Mr. and Mrs. Morley Istead.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Taylor, Larry and Lynda were entertained at dinner on Sunday at the home of Mr. Taylor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walters, in honor of their seventh wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Harry Foster and Mr. Keith Foster spent a few days last week in Toronto and attended the Winter Fair and also visited her mother, Mrs. Allan Calnan, who is ill in a hospital there. All Mrs. Calnan's friends are hoping she may soon return home much improved in health.

Mrs. Lewis Cleave is a supper hour guest of Mrs. Mildred Benson on Sunday.

Mrs. John Shaw of Picton is spending a couple of weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Will McGee.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Baxter are attending the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto this weekend also visiting their son, Mr. Arthur Baxter and Mrs. Baxter of Newmarket.

Mrs. Mildred Benson is spending a few days this week at Cherry Valley with her brother, Mr. Harold Thompson and Mrs. Thompson.

22 DIVORCE ACTIONS

Peterboro, Ont., Nov. 19—(CP)—Of the 31 actions set down for hearing this week before Mr. Justice Treleaven in a non-jury sitting of the Supreme Court of Ontario 22 of them are divorce cases the heaviest docket in the history of Peterboro courts.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — Miss Isabel Richardson of Belleville spent the weekend with her mother, Mrs. A. A. Richardson, and also with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richardson. Miss Richardson was the special speaker at the different United Church services on the Thomasburg charge. While she is now attending collegiate she has chosen for her future field of labor the work of a deaconess. Her many friends here wish her every success in her choice.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Williams of Kingston spent Sunday with Mrs. W. W. Morton.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Morton of Belleville spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carter.

Thomasburg I.O.O.F. Lodge sponsored a successful dance in the local hall here on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Kerruish and Master Dennis of Kingston spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. William Holbert. Mr. and Mrs. Holbert are leaving in the near future to visit with their son Floyd and Mrs. Holbert in Toronto before going to Fort William, Ont., where they will spend the winter months with their daughter, Mrs. Dennison and Dr. J. H. Dennison.

The local hockey club, which has been recently organized, held a very enjoyable box social in the Oddfellows' Hall on Thursday evening. An interesting and varied program by local talent was enjoyed. Rev. B. Heywood capably filled the roll as song leader while Mrs. Heywood presided at the piano. Mr. Edward Richardson made a first class auctioneer in auctioning off the boxes. The proceeds from the evening's entertainment were very gratifying and will be used toward the making of the rink in Mr. W. L. Ketcheson's field just east of the highway. In previous years the young and also older people took much enjoyment out of skating, when there was a local rink.

The Women's Missionary Society of Thomasburg United Church held a quilting and dinner on Tuesday in the Sunday School rooms. During the afternoon the regular meeting was held at which a very interesting report of the Sectional Rally recently held in Tweed was given and also the election of officers took place at this meeting.

Messrs. Parkyn Richardson, Harry Martin and Gerald Bateman spent several days in Toronto last week attending the Royal Winter Fair from the local Junior Farmers' Club.

Mrs. John Clark left on Tuesday for Manitou, Man., where she will reside with her son John and Mrs. Clark. Mrs. Clark has been making her home for some time with her sister, Miss Phoebe Kerr.

Mrs. George Thrasher is holidaying with relatives and friends in Toronto for a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Morton of Belleville spent a day recently with Mrs. J. E. Brown.

Master Ernest Kellar, young son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kellar, underwent an appendix operation in the Belleville General Hospital last week.

Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morton in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, November 13th., a son; a brother for Nancy.

The many friends of Miss Margaret Grills will be glad to learn that she is able to be out again following an attack of pneumonia.

Mrs. J. R. Bateman of Belleville is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Ervine Bateman and other relatives and friends here.

DEER STILL PLENTIFUL

Hamilton, Nov. 19 — (CP) — Alfred Parmenter and Charles Morgan have hunted together every year for the last 3 years. Mr. Parmenter recently returned from his 56th deer hunt. His companion completed his 48th trip. Both hunters are of the opinion that just as many deer now roam Ontario's northland as there were 5 years ago.

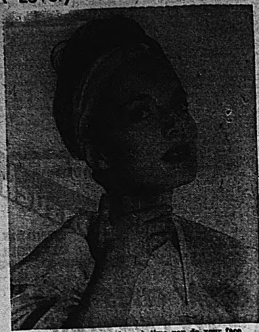
A Lovely Neck is Important



Cold cream your neck each time you do your face

By HELEN FOLLETT

START early to keep your neck in form. It may look like a perfectly good neck to you right now, but there's no telling how it is going to act in the future. Young women make every possible effort to keep their complexions lovely and of fine texture, yet seem to forget that the throat is equally important; it can take on lines almost over night. It is as if old meanie Time enjoys grabbing a girl by the throat.

One way of taking out insurance against neck creases is to carry the head properly. Even very young women (some of them) have the bad habit of letting the chin droop, a position that weakens the fine fibers of the neck, destroys youthful contour. Among the older women, that practice is a crime against pulchritude. It not only wrecks saggy jaw lines; and they are enough to cause moments of weeping.

Watch yourself at all times. See that the head doesn't assume a downward pose to create ugly folds under the chin, perhaps to beckon a spare chin to come and take up squatter's' rights.

Here is a pet exercise recommended by a famous beautician. Stand tall, head balanced; keep shoulders rigid; send the chin forward, tilting the head backward. Then swing the chin from side to side. These movements pull on the muscles of the neck, strengthen them and do the business.

Of course, my gentle reader, you never forget to cream your complexion before going to bed? Include the throat or there will be a color divorce between neck and complexion, the neck being darker.

With anointed, flattened fingers, rub up and down from collar bone to chin, one set of fingers, following the other. Treat the sides of the neck and while you're about it, cream your ear lobes to keep them soft and smooth and white.

Teacup Chatter Taps Ideas For Brighter Homes

London, —(CP)—Seeing Monica Felton tapping at a London door, you wouldn't dream she had come on business that might change thousands of women's lives. She is a bright perky, brown-eyed woman with a direct and friendly smile and, you might think she was simply a neighbor bent on bridge.

But if you stood beside her as the housewife opened the door saw the quick smile that lit the weary face, heard the housewife's warm invitation to come in for a cup of tea and listened to the cozy chat over its fragrant steam you would change your mind. For Monica Felton, Labor Member of Parliament, is the only woman on the New Town Committee of fourteen—Britain's housing brain trust. She represents the women of Britain on the committee which advises government, on rebuilding Britains war ravaged towns and houses and her visits to its housewives are for the purpose of finding out what they really need and want.

The women are talking to no mere theorist when they talk to Monica Felton, Ph. D. She is the daughter of a country clergyman keeps house in the shadow of Big Ben, is a good gardener and cook, knows what it takes to keep house well, and longs to give it to Britain's women.

"The women of Britain are tired of—standing in line and going short," she has said. "There is a limit to patience, even for the women of this island. We showed the world we could take it in the dark hours, when we all pulled together, but we're not going to keep on taking it when there's no need. Now we're going to see to it that we receive.

Worked To Win

"We mobilized labor on a greater ratio of man hours and production than any of our allies in order to get war production. The women of Britain must make their voice heard to ensure that all our resources are poured into keeping up this terrific effort in order to get the things for which we have waited so long—first, houses; second, food; third, security."

Many of the ideas of Monica Felton gleaned from anonymous nextdoor neighbors over a pot of tea have been incorporated into Britain's building program.

Four thousand mass-produced houses (which will be followed by 55,000 more of the same kind) have labor-saving devices that will make a vast difference in the lives of the British housewives. The kitchens feature a hot-air clothes -drying closet, a breakfast table that slides into the wall, an ironing board that swings down from a cupboard, and a unit that combines sink, cooker, table and refrigerator.

One of Doctor Felton's outstanding interests is social welfare. Hence, the New Town Committee has reserved space on its plans for modern maternity and pre-natal clinics, day and night nurseries, schools for delicate and physically handicapped children and school buildings with complete walls of glass, equipped with big playing fields, gardening space and rooms for practical work.

But the things that will delight the youngsters are the new playgrounds and parks which which Dr .Felton recommeneded "Not a bare expanse asphalt, enclosed by wire," she said. "Let imaginative boys and girls make their own adventures. Give them a cave or two, a tunnel, some gnarled tree stumps and ample footholds, some dwarf walls for playing house, a sandpit and perhaps a shallow pond."

Bright Night Lights

By ALICE ALDEN

THIS, the second post-war formal season is one of great elegance, in which the strapless evening frock is playing an important sartorial role. This type of dress calls for a dazzling display of white shoulders bright with flashing jewelry, made more impressive by long black gloves used as a background for more glitter. As was to be expected Coro comes through with pieces well worthy of the occasion. Depicted here is a duo of butterflies in ruby and sapphire stones clipped onto a high snake necklace. A large matching butterfly clip perches prettily on a glove finger in a new ring fashion. A gold, jeweled and rhinestoned butterfly on a snake bracelet adds to the glamorous glitter.

ACCIDENTAL DISCOVERY

Gold was discovered near Los Angeles in 1842 by a shepherd who was trying to dig up a few wild onions for his lunch.

EXCAVATE BOATS 2,000 YEARS OLD

Hull, England —(CP)—Plank boats, 2,000 years old, imbedded in Humber River mud when Julius Caesar landed in Britain, are being excavated under the tender care of scientists.

Efforts are being made to dig out the boats in a solid block of clay and haul them to dry ground on a steel sled. The planks are fastened with yew withies countersunk to avoid wear. Possibly the boats were paddled.

About 30 feet of one boat remains and the other is some 37 feet long. Scientists said the discovery was of great importance in the history of European water transport."

Desserts for Small Folk

Healthy, robust children are the "cream line" of the nation. To achieve this end, milk is an indispensable item in their diet. The milk bottle is the symbol of protected health and sturdy growth for every child in the family.

Milk is both a food and a drink without equal and without a substitute. It is all food and no waste. Milk is a rich source of the minerals calcium and phosphorous—so essential in the building of strong, healthy teeth.

The care of milk in the home is important. It should be stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Always replace it in the refrigerator immediately after use—never let it stand around at room temperatures. It is also necessary to cover milk carefully, since it readily absorbs food odors.

The requirement for each child, as stated in Canada's Food Rules, is one quart per day. There are several ways of using this quota in the daily diet other than serving it as a beverage. It may be used in soups, cereals, creamed vegetables, escalloped dishes, gravies, sauces, egg-nogs and desserts.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture suggest the dessert course as the most popular way of including milk "to eat" in children's meals.

IVORY CREAM

1 tablespoon gelatine
1-4 cup cold water
2 cups milk
1-3 cup sugar
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 egg yolk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 egg white

Soak gelatine in cold water for 5 minutes. Scald milk in double boiler, add sugar and salt. Add slightly beaten egg yolk and cook 2-3 minutes longer. Add soaked gelatine and stir until dissolved. Add flavoring and cool until thick but not completely set. Beat with rotary egg beater until light and frothy. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Pour into a mould and chill until firm. Serve with a fruit sauce. Six servings.

FARINA FIG PUDDING

1-3 cup farina
1 1-2 cups hot milk
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
1-3 cup molasses
1-2 teaspoon ginger
1-4 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup chopped figs or raisins
2 eggs

Add farina and salt slowly to hot milk and cook till thick, stirring constantly. Cook in double boiler for 30 minutes. Add butter, molasses, spices, beaten egg yolks and figs or raisins. If using figs, cut some finely and leave some about the size of raisins. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a greased baking dish and place in a pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees F., for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve hot with top milk or any desired sauce. This pudding may be reheated by steaming over hot water.

CHILDREN'S DELIGHT

4 slices bread
4 tablespoons peanut butter
3 tablespoons butter
1-2 teaspoon salt
3 cups milk
2 eggs—slightly beaten
1-2 cup brown sugar
1-2 cup raisins

Spread slices of bread with a blend of the butters. Cut into cubes and place in a buttered baking dish. Combine the salt, milk eggs and brown sugar. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Add the raisins and pour custard over bread cubes. Set in a pan of water and oven-poach in a moderate oven 350 degrees F., for 1 hour. Six servings.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When Will Girls Stop Falling For This Old Gag?

Years ago children used to believe there really was a Santa Claus and that there also were fairies and goblins and a lot of other things. But most children have learned, by this time, through information passed down from one generation to the next, just how much faith to put in these fictional characters and they are smart enough not to be fooled when someone tries to sell them a bill of goods.

There is another creature, almost equally fictional, however, in whose existence no young woman ever quite seems to lose faith, no matter how often she may have heard that it's foolish to believe in him. He is the older man who tells a very young girl that he is not happy with his wife, or that his wife does not understand him, and that just as soon as he can wangle a divorce he is going to marry her. This gag is almost as old as Time, and women who have been taken in by it through the years have tried to warn other girls. But usually all they get for their pains is the retort that "This man is different! He isn't like those others!"

Here is a girl of 18, for instance, who is hearing the same old story from a man of 50, and seems to be taking it seriously.

This man worked, for a time, in the same place where the girl did, and day after day poured into her ears his tale of woe about his grey-haired, fat and aging wife. He told her he hated to go home at the end of the day, after being around pretty young girls all the time, and that he was "hungry for youth." If she had any sense at all, that remark alone should have given her his number.

"I get a kick out of making him happy," she writes me, "and I felt sorry for him, too, so I started going to lunch with him every day and making him happy. He said he was going to leave home, and that he had told his wife he was going to leave her to get along as best she could. But for some reason he didn't do it. He told me she was almost crazy about it and as they had lived together so long, and brought up four children, he hated to leave her so upset, but that after she got over it, he would leave her."

Later, this girl says, she was transferred to another place to work and she told this man where she was going so that he could come and get a job there, too.

But she hasn't laid eyes on him since, and her explanation of this is that "he can't get away from his wife to come!"

What she wants to know is this: "How can I get to see this man and talk to him, as I know he is not happy and I don't want his wife to know about my seeing him? Why can't she leave him alene to be happy? I don't say I love this man, but I just want to make him happy, as he says he loves me so much."

Somehow, I am not at all sure this particular 18-year-old is as naive as she makes herself appear. She admits she doesn't love this man, but that she just wants to see him "to make him happy." If she has brains enough to know she doesn't love him, then she ought to have brains enough to let him alone. The only possible excuse there could ever be for any girl getting mixed up in a situation like this is that she has deluded herself into believing she is in love.

Moreover, if she thinks that a 50-year-old man" can't get away from his wife to go and see anybody he chooses, she's fooling herself even more than she appears to be.

I don't know what sort of person this girl thinks I am, to ask me to tell her how to make clandestine dates with another woman's husband. But what I can tell her, if she doesn't know it already, is that this man has certainly been lying to her, and that without a doubt the reason she hasn't heard from him is because he already has another girl to whom he is telling the same story.

Communists Take Early Lead In Romanian Election

Bucharest, Nov. 21—(AP)—The Communist - dominated government bloc took a wide early lead over the opposition today in first returns from Romanian parliamentary election, as each side accused the other of irregularities.

Returns from five prefectures gave the government bloc 155,552; the National Peasant Party, 41,235; the National Liberals, 8,242; the Independent Socialists, 1,514; the Magar Popular Union, 63,974, and the National Peasant Democrats, 9,483. No calculations were available of the number of seats won in these prefectures.

The Interior Ministry estimated that from 90 to 95 per cent of the country's 8,000,000 voters had participated in the balloting yesterday.

The United States military mission in Bucharest was picketed last night after 5,000 Romanian citizens appeared to protest that their names had been omitted from the voting register. Brig-Gen. Courtland van Rensselaer Schuyler, head of the mission, who identified the pickets as supporters of Premier Petru Groza's Communist - dominated government, protested the picketing.

Parties Make Protest.

Three opposition parties — National Liberal, National Peasant and Independent Socialist — protested to the Allied Control Commission, to the government and to the United States mission against what they termed irregularities at many of Bucharest's 240 polling stations.

The government, on the other hand, charged opposition groups with causing violence in outlying districts in the Tarava Marb district. A government bulletin said two Communist Party members were killed in a fight at a polling booth. In Galac, the government added, the opposition National Liberal Party attacked and occupied a prefecture for a time.

Long before the voting took place the governments of the United States and Great Britain, in official notes, criticized the election as neither free nor unfettered so far as it concerned the opposition.

Main issue was whether the voters decided to keep Groza's six-party government bloc in power — in office since March 6, 1945.

British Airborne Division May Leave Palestine

Jerusalem, Nov. 21—(Reuters)—A spokesman for the Jewish agency said today there was a likelihood of the British 6th Airborne Division leaving Palestine and that the agency had been informed "from internal sources" that there was a "possibility of trouble before the division leaves."

"This will not be instigated from the top but from small groups of fellows who would like to square all sorts of accounts," the spokesman said.

A British military spokesman, commenting, said:

"British military headquarters in Palestine have no information of any contemplated reprisals by any military formation in Palestine. If information to this effect reaches military headquarters steps will be taken to prevent incidents."

Case of Phantom Children Poser For Justice Dineen

New York, Nov. 21 — (AP)—The "Case of the Phantom Children" is the latest reason why judges get gray.

Supreme Court Justice Benedict Dineen was handed this poser yesterday:

Louis Maliska, 38-year-old Bronx machinist demanded in a habeas corpus proceeding that his wife produce their three children which he never has seen and which he says his wife, Marion Anderson Maliska, 40, a practical nurse, has "secreted them through fraud and deceit."

Mrs. Maliska, however, contends there never were any children.

The children listed by her husband are Louis E., 8; Theresa ,5, and Anna, 2. He testified that each time his wife told him of bearing a child she explained it was in an institution and persuaded him not to try to see it.

He said he later checked records of hospitals and doctors mentioned by his wife "but I never found anything".

Maliska submitted as exhibits letters he said his wife had written to relatives, mentioning the children, and a father's day card signed "Sonny, Susie and Terry".

Mrs. Maliska, still to testify, told newspapermen she had borne no children ,and "the talk about children was more or less a joke."

The Maliskas were married nine years ago.

Order-in-Council Menaces Freedom Says Diefenbaker

Toronto, Nov. 21—(CP)—John G. Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative member of parliament for Lake Centre, Sask., charged in a prepared address today that parliament and the people of Canada are controlled by "an over-mastering bureaucracy" and he attributed, in part, shortages of butter and sugar, to what he termed "the result of bureaucratic sterility".

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Progressive Conservative Business Men's Club of Toronto, Mr. Diefenbaker said the rights of 700 years of freedom have been swept aside by order-in-council and that freedom in Canada is in danger. He suggested the Progressive Conservative party might well adopt "the restoration of freedom to our country" as a basic tenet of its party platform.

"The time has come to demobilize the high-priced bureaucrats and the galaxy of thearists, dogooders and economic wand wavers. Private enterprise must have law to govern it . . . but there is no reason that it be subject to the direction of bureaucrats or the back-seat driving of government officials."

C.C.F. members of parliament had not opposed. Liberal inroads on personal freedom—"the Progressive Conservative party has fought alone. . . We do not accept the authoritarian theory that it is the mission of the governmen to coerce all our citizens into living in a pattern planned by bureaucrats or government."

RE-EDUCATE GERMAN YOUTH

Ford, Northumberland, England —(CP)— Ford Castle, built in 1341, will be used by the National Association of Boy's Clubs as centre for re-educating young Germans in the principals of democracy.

Moslems Will Not Participate In India's Assembly

New Delhi, Nov. 21 (CP)—The secretary of Mohammed Ali Jinnah, Moslem League president announced tonight that the league would not participate in India's constitution — making assembly which convened Dec. 9.

The move precipitated another in the series of crises marking the effort to achieve Indian independence.

The announcement was made in connection with release of correspondence by Jinnah concerning the constituent assembly.

The assembly's secretary said, however, that invitations to delegates to the constituent assembly are being issued and preparations are being completed for the session just the same.

Both Jinnah and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, leading minister of the interim government and former president of the Hindu-led All India Congress, saw the viceroy, Viscount Wavell, separately Monday, and it was reported reliably that each discussed the assembly.

Crude Explosive.

It was officially announced in Bombay that a "crude explosive" burst today in the front area of the city, the European business district, without causing any damage. Five persons were arrested after a stabbing incident in Sewri, an industrial area northwest of the city.

The number of killed in the recent communal riots in Bihar Province was "somewhere in five figures" and the damage to property amounted to several score (millions) of rupees, communications minister Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar told the Council of State here.

Threatening Letters.

Calcutta, Nov. 20 (Reuters).—Mohandas K. Gandhi who is touring the riot-affected areas of East Bengal, has received threatening letters because of his attitude towards the communal disturbances in India, it was learned here today.

A report from Ramganj, in the Noakhali district of East Bengal, said Gandhi disclosed the threats at a prayer meeting at which he told listeners that some Moslems feared he had come to East Bengal to suppress them.

Prairies Breathe Sigh of Relief As Storm Passes

Winnipeg, Nov. 21—(CP)—The Prairies breathed a sigh of relief today as King Winter decided to stop kicking up his heels and settle down to routine.

Skies were overcast and intermittent snowfalls were recorded throughout the night and early morning. Temperatures touched below zero points but generally rose to slightly above zero today.

In Saskatchewan and Manitoba, a 15-mile-an-hour wind was noted but Alberta recorded only "light" winds.

A blizzard which swept the interior Kootenays in British Columbia abated, leaving one man dead, a number stranded and traffic and wire services snarled. Trains arriving from the west were up to one hour late but otherwise service was normal.

Ship Under Jury Rig Survives Hurricane Then Cracks on Reefs

Suva, Fiji Islands, Nov. 21 —(AP)—John Caldwell, an American who left Panama alone in a 30-foot schooner in June, arrived today in a local trading vessel after surviving a hurricane, sailing 36 days with a jury rig, nearly starving,and finally smashing his craft on a reef.

Caldwell ran into a hurricane between the Marquesas and Samoa. His schooner was damaged heavily, and he had to proceed under a jury rig.

Weak from hunger and lack of water, he headed straight for the reef at Thuvata in the Lau group of the Fijis in order to get ashore. Three days later he was rescued by Fijians, who took him by canoe to a Copra boat.

Coldwell served with the Royal Australian Air Force and married an Australian.

Madawaska River Power Projects To Be Sixty Cycles

Ottawa, Nov. 21 — (CP)—The Journal says today Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, announced yesterday, the $14,000,000 power projects along the Madawaska River near Stewartville are to be equipped to generate 60 cycles.

Dr. Hogg spoke to the paper from Toronto in a telephone interview.

The Journal's story continues:—

Initially it had been intended to generate the Madawaska's 80,000 horsepower on a 25 cycle frequency for the benefit of hydro's consumers in the Southern Ontario and Niagara district.

Switching of the Madawaska frequency from 25 to 60 cycles will mean power being made available for the Ottawa Valley and what Premier George Drew has termed the development of "the industrial triangle of Eastern Ontario."

Decision as to which frequency would be generated at the $52,000,000 power site under development at Des Joachims on the Upper Ottawa had still to be made, said Dr. Hogg.

"Shortly — and by that I mean some time in January — it will be decided whether the Southern Ontario system is to be converted to 60 cycles, and if this decision is taken it will mean Des Joachims will be generating the higher frequency."

(At a power conference in Toronto yesterday, the Hydro Commission advised the practicability of converting the Niagara system to 60 cycles.)

Issues, Withdraws Report Missing Plane Located

Paris, Nov. 21 (AP)—A United States army officer issued today, and then withdrew, an announcement that a plane had located the American C-53 transport which crash-landed Tuesday on a flight from Munich.

Col. H. F. Minter, commander of the European Air Transport Service, first said the wreckage was located on a glacier high in the French Alps about 45 miles west of Turin, Italy. He later withdrew this announcement without explanation

Earlier United States army headquarters at Frankfurt reported a radio message saying eight of the 1' persons aboard the C-53 were stretcher cases. The Istres report said a Pan American Airways plane had sighted the transport, but Pan American reported from its Turin office that no planes that landed there had sighted the wreckage.

Other authorities at the airdrome announced receipt of a message at 8:57 a.m. (French time) from the downed C-53, but declined to disclose its contents. It could not be ascertained at once whether it was the same message which United States Army authorities in Frankfurt said stated that eight of the 11 occupants of the plane were "stretcher cases."

The Istres radio station replied to the missing plane at 8:59 a.m. that two army planes were en route to the scene with urgently-needed supplies.

Ground rescue parties meanwhile toiled up steep mountain slopes in an effort to reach the scene of the crash.

Reports of Signal Lights Seen

They were spurred on by reports last night that signal lights and smoke signals had been sighted in the vicinity where the plane was believed to have landed.

A. Dupeyron, a non-commissioned officer in a French Alpine battalion conducting the land search, said that from his post at St. Jean De Maurienne he saw a blue rocket fired into the air which he was certain was a signal from the downed plane.

That there still was life among the survivors seemed assured by a new radio message which a radio operator at Istres said he intercepted yesterday afternoon. The message said: "Plane passed over without seeing us."

Bitterly cold weather increased concern for the fate of the survivors. United States Army sources in Vienna yesterday said they understood there had been no fatalities when the plane crash-landed but that five of the 11 persons aboard had been hurt. Among the passengers were an 11-year-old girl and the wives of four high-ranking Army officers, including the mother of the pilot.

30 Per Cent of all Servicemen And Women Married During War or After Their Discharge

Ottawa, Nov. 21 (CP)—More than 30 per cent of all servicemen and women were married during the war or after discharge from the forces, veterans Minister Mackenzie said today.

He reported the findings of a survey made by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for the veterans department. The bureau interviewed some 6,000 "representative" veterans last summer.

The survey showed that more than 60 per cent of all veterans were married and more than half that number went to the altar during or after their service About 18,000 service men married service women.

Other survey conclusions:

Thirty-one per cent of veterans are between 25 and 29 years of age; 28 per cent are in the 20-24 group; 18 per cent 30-34; 12 per cent are living on farms.

More veterans are living in Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia than enlisted in those provinces.

Thirty-one per cent of employed veterans are engaged in manufacturing, 17 per cent in trade, finance and insurance, and 17 per cent in "service employment" such as laundries and garages. Eleven per cent are in agriculture, 11 per cent in transportation and communications work, nine per cent in construction work, two per cent in mining and two per cent in forestry, fishing and trapping.

About 82 per cent are in paid employment, 15 per cent are self-employed and three per cent are unpaid family workers on farms or in businesses.

About half of all unemployed veterans have no occupation or trade.

Few unemployed women veterans seek permanent jobs; most want jobs to last less than a year.

Seventy-six per cent of veterans obtain jobs within a month of discharge or completion of training; 86 per cent within two months.

Drought Affects Maritimes Power And Water Supply

Halifax, Nov. 21 —(CP)—Fears of a water shortage in Maritime cities this winter unless a heavy rainfall preceded the coming of cold weather were felt today as a continued dry spell left reservoirs in most centres below normal levels.

Two New Brunswick communities, Campbellton and Edmunston were already feeling the effects of the droughts as power supplies were curtailed. In Moncton, N. B., an early freezeup before sufficient rainfall was expected to bring about a critical water situation.

Only in Prince Edward Island where water supplies reported anything like normal. Charlottetown, whose reserves were cut by three recent fires, did not expect a severe shortage providing the frost was delayed.

In Halifax the level of supply lakes had dropped 34 inches below normal. Two other Nova Scotia centres, Sydney and New Glasgow, were unaffected.

But the Pictou county power board, supplying power to new Glasgow an its industrial environs, has had to depend on steam generators for the past two months because dry weather has diminished hydro-electric energy from the sheet harbor plant.

New Brunswick cities were the hardest hit. Effects of the water shortage on Campbellton have so cut the amount of hydro power available that a blackout has been enforced and some firms have installed small generating units.

Forced Landings Made Without Damage to Planes

Windsor, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Two light planes, bound from Hamilton to Calgary, with Pelee Island as their first scheduled stop, were reported down in Essex County today after forced landings during the fog last night.

One plane came down on a farm near Leamington airport and the other was reported to be in a field near Essex. No one was injured, reports said, and the planes were reported undamaged.

The first plane landed near Essex late yesterday afternoon and reported that its companion plane, with visibility nil, then was circling the area.

Considerable alarm was caused regarding the fate of the second plane until today when it was learned it had landed on the Liddle farm, a quarter-mile from Leamington airport. This plane was piloted by Gordon Elves and had as passengers, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Frankish, all of Calgary.

Flown by Gordon Ingham of Saskatoon the plane at Essex carried a man named Bierwirth from Yorkton, Sask., airport officials said in Hamilton.

TWO WHEN SHE DOCKED

New York, Nov. 21 — (AP) — There was only one stowaway on board the Ile De France when the liner left Europe, but there were two when it docked here yesterday. Stowaway Lee Paneth, 20, gave birth to a girl in the ship's hospital. Immigration authorities are holding both.

Canadian Wives, Children Taken To London Hostels

Liverpool, England, Nov. 21 — (CP Cable)—Canadian Military Wives Bureau officials here and in London today completed arrangements to transport 900 brides and children of Canadian servicemen aboard two special trains for hostel accommodation in London pending the next sailing for Canada.

The brides, stranded aboard the vessel Empire Brent following a collision with the cattle boat Stormont in the early morning mist Wednesday, were scheduled to arrive in London this afternoon.

Bewildered by this sudden turn in events, they thronged the orderly room of the Brent last night to find out what would happen to them. They bombarded ship officials with questions, later going to their cabins to pack their belongings for the trip to London.

There were no casualties aboard either ship but the wives and children must wait in Canadian Wives' Bureau hostels in London until damage to the Empire Brent's bow is repaired or another ship is available.

Authorities now are examining the 13,595-ton Empire Brent to determine whether she can be repaired soon enough for another voyage with the wives and children, and attempts are being made to rescue 100 cattle believed to be trapped in the hold of the Stormont after the cattle boat capsized following the collision.

Should License Milk Producers Commission Told

Toronto, Nov. 21—(CP)—Tight control of unregulated phases of the milk industry was recommended before the royal commission investigating Ontario's milk situation yesterday by W. H. Wilmot, secretary-manager of the Toronto Milk Producers' Association.

The week-long hearing is in its fourth day.

"I believe the board should license all transportation of milk from the producer to the distributor," said Mr. Wilmot after Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, commissioner, asked if he had any suggestions on what additional powers the Milk Control Board should have.

"I believe the board should license the producer — and know where he is. There should be a uniform health inspection of dairy farms in the fluid milk business."

Mr. Wilmot said he favored licensing so there would be some control over the business and producers would not lose money.

Such control would keep undesirables out of the business. He defined an undesirable as one who could not pay for his milk, who would reduce prices and resort to unethical practices.

Throughout his testimony Mr. Wilmot maintained that the producer was not getting enough for his fluid milk. Saying the dairy farmer was the most progressive farmer, he claimed that for the average producer there is practically no profit. Only the most efficiently run dairy farms showed a fair profit on the milk business, he contended.

Earlier in the day Herbert C. Cummings, Prices Board solicitor, tabled copies of Price Board orders affecting milk and dairy products covering the period from May, 1942, to May, 1946, in which the board regulated ceilings

HOUND PERFECTLY HAPPY

Campbellford, Nov. 21—(CP)—One customer in the town jail here is completely happy about being locked up. He occupies No. 1 cell, enjoys a special diet and gets personal care from Chief Constable George Hardy.

The "prisoner" is a young deer hound which wandered into this town of some 3,000 persons about 25 miles west of Belleville the other day. He looked in need of food and care and was "without means of visible support" so he was charged with vagrancy and arrested.

Hold Engineer Responsible

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Negligence on the part of John Graves, Canadian National Railways freight engineer, was responsible for the head-on collision of two C.N.R. trains in West Toronto, Sept. 11, a coroner's jury decided last night. The accident resulted in the death of Carl S. White, fireman on one of the trains.

Present day Victoria Park was still an island on which a saw mill manufactured lumber; the Moira River mouth was filled with log booms floated down the bay from rivers to the north and the "bay bridge" was still a convenience of the future.

Looking north on Front Street, names of business firms doing business in Belleville three quarters of a century ago are clearly imprinted on buildings and the street itself appeared like the gravel road that it was.

Such is the picture recalled by many who have been privileged to examine two old pictures which today grace the walls in the private office of Postmaster J. G. Waddell.

Scenes of 75 Years Ago.

The originals apparently photographed from the city hall tower when that edifice was first erected some three quarters of a century ago, the pictures had lain forgotten in the album of one of Belleville's first letter carriers. Some years ago Mr. Waddell was shown the pictures, borrowed them for a time and after photographing them, had them enlarged and framed.

Steam from the exhaust of the laboring sawmill on present day Victoria Park stands out clearly in the photograph as do the sites of one or two other sawmills across the bay. But the "bay bridge" is not there, and the lighthouse in Belleville harbor, which was razed five or six years ago, had not yet been constructed. The present Canadian Pacific Railway bridge across the Moira was still in the future but water transportation was represented by the appearance of the ferry slip which stood at the site of the present passageway beneath the railroad bridge.

Streets Torn Up.

In the second photo looking north on Front Street, a reminder of present day public works procedure is given by the fact that the gravel street is torn up just north of the Bridge Street intersection. Further north nearer the upper bridge, trees can be seen where buildings now stand.

And in the Coleman Flats district which in recent years has been developed as a residential area, only bare commons can be seen.

Much of the detail which must have been present has been lost by the fading of the original pictures, but all in all the photographs give a fair representation as to what Belleville was three quarters of a century ago.

Australia Expands Fishing Industry

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sydney, Australia —(CP)— Australia has set up a commission to organize and expand its domestic fishing industry and reduce imports, particularly of canned fish including Canadian products.

The fishing industry, getting back to peacetime footing, supplies only about a third of Australia's needs. Australia paid $2,500,000 for imported canned fish in the fiscal year 1942-43.

Investigations by the fisheries Division of the Australian Council for Scientific and Industrial Research indicate the industry should be able to meet the country's entire requirements.

Resources are abundant, Australia has 12,000 miles of coastline free of ice all year. Tuna, salmon pilchard and tunny, fish usually canned, are plentiful.

Supplies of fish, sold fresh are more limited because the continental shelf, the belt of shallow water surrounding the continent and where they are found, extends only a few miles from the coast.

Mechanical methods of net fishing are difficult because the sea bottom is strewn with coral along a great deal of the tropical area. Trawling is performed regularly in the waters north of Sydney and as far south as Bass Strait, between the mainland and the island state of Tasmania. The Sydney market is usually well-supplied with flathead, bream, mullet, snapper and other fresh varieties.

There are rich fishing grounds in the Great Australian Bight which extends from Victoria state in the south east to Western Australia, and probably good grounds along the Australian northwest coast.

About 8,000 men and 5,000 boats employed at fishing and their catch is worth about $3,200,000 a year. Several states have canneries where tuna and salmon are packed. The Australian tuna weighing about 80 pounds is claimed to be tastier than the heavier Canadian variety.

Bodies Recovered Off Blackbeard Is.

St. Simons, Ga., Nov. 21 —(AP) —The bodies of two persons who lost their lives when the 85-foot schooner Tondelayo, en route to the Southwest Pacific, went aground and broke up off Blackbeard Island, were recovered early yesterday, the Coast Guard reported.

Two survivors, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Slenzak of Detroit, Mich., were found on the island by Coast Guardsmen after a seaplane and blimp search of the area. Two others still are missing. Slenzak named his companions aboard the craft as Captain and Mrs. Herman C. Schmidt of Baltimore and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Danforth, also of Baltimore.

A Capt. Schmidt, a Baltimore welder, sailed from Baltimore Oct. 6 with his wife and a group of friends for a cruise of the Southwest Pacific.

PINNED IN DITCH

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Passing motorists Tuesday night rescued Douglas Hardcastle, 18, of Toronto after the youth was pinned in a ditch by the jeep he was driving in suburban North York. Police said the jeep overturned after collision with a truck operated by Peter Drimmel of nearby Agincourt. Hardcastle suffered a broken collar bone and rib injuries.

JOINTLY CHARGED

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Arrested Tuesday night as they were about to board a street car, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGann were charged jointly with illegal possession of an automatic pistol.

Police said McGann, 23, was arrested last January on a charge of obtaining $180 by false pretences. He was released on bail of $500 and, police said, failed to appear in court. The false pretences charge against McGann still stands.

War Defaulters And Denied Vote

Wellington New Zealand (CP) —War defaulters in New Zealand—those who refused service when conscripted and were sent to detention camps—will not be eligible to vote at New Zealand's general election on Nov. 27. Those who, after committal to a detention camp, ceased to be classified as defaulters through being classed as medically unfit for active service, or who later volunteered for military service, will be able to vote, but those who remained in the camps will be barred.

All defaulters have been released from detention but the period of disqualification from voting has not yet been determined. Their names were erased from the electoral rolls in 1943 and no action has so far been taken to restore them. The Returned Services' Association Advocates that they be barred from civil rights for 10 years.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking through the back pages of ma's House and Table Magazine at the avvertizements, saying, Here's the answer to a housewife's prayer, the New Revelation vacuum cleener.

I dont remember ever hearing of it, ma said, and pop said, When you hear this discription of it, you'll never forget it.

And he started to read it out loud to her, saying, The New Revelation is a modern vacuum cleener for the present age, the cleener of your dreems.

The vacuum cleener of my dreams always has somebody else pushing it, ma said, and pop said, This one doesn't need anybody, it's a gilded lilly, just listen.

And he kept on reeding the avvetizement saying, The New Revelation has no dusty bag to cleen and no electric cord to get tangled. It requires no pushing or pulling, you meerly sit down with a book and cleen your room from a comfortable chair. Delivery absilutely garanteed.

Well, that last statement is the most unbeleevable of all, ma said. William, I want one of those if you have to morgage the house. How much are they? she said, and pop said, it doesn't bother to mention. But you didn't let me finish, my dear.

And he kept on reeding, saying, Delivery absilutely garanteed as soon as the labor situation eases up, providing the international situation grows no werse.

Oh dear, what does that mean? ma said, and pop said, It probably means they haven't made any yet, but they expect to tern some out unless we have another war and the factory has to bend all its energies tords making percussion caps for middy blouses for the navy.

Oh dear, I might of known, it just shows that nothing can be perfect, especially perfection, ma said.

Which it probably cant.

Madoc

Trinity Ladies Club

Madoc — (Special) — Trinity Ladies Club met in the Sunday School rooms on Tuesday evening for their regular monthly meeting with a good attendance with the president, Mrs. Hulin, presiding. The meeting opened with a hymn and prayer followed by the business period. The treasurer's report showed a standing balance of $190.71 and $32.37 cleared at the recent banquet. On motion of Mrs. Parks and Mrs. Beatty the secretary was requested to send notes of thanks to Messrs. J. McCaffrey and W. Forestell for the donation of cheese for the banquet. Mrs. E. Armstrong, Mrs. Rankin and Miss Ashe were appointed nominating committee for club officers for 1947. Mrs. Duffin and Mrs. Hubert Nickle were in charge of the program. Those assisting were Mrs. Irvin who read the Bible story, Mrs. E. Burnside who gave a sketch on the Sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea and Miss Anna Smith who offered the prayer. Mr. Hulin gave a reading on Remembrance Day" and Miss Ashe read "Memories of Flanders Fields." A pleasing duet was rendered by Mrs. Rankin and Miss Whitton. Mrs. Stevenson contributed a condensed version of the story "We Shook the Family Tree," which was followed by Mrs. Duffin reading a skit, "Allergic." A vote of thanks was tendered all who assisted in making this program a real success. A short time of social intercourse and refreshments were enjoyed.

Madoc Branch W. I.

The members of Madoc Branch of the W. I. met at the home of Mrs. Russell Lewis on Friday afternoon, with a fair attendance. A short sing-song was followed by repeating the Institute Ode. Mrs. Hill, the president, conducted the business period. A report of the booth at the fair showed a balance of $65. A discussion followed regarding the Hoodless Fund and on motion a grant of money will be forwarded to headquarters. A short resume of the Area Convention held in Belleville was given by Mrs. E. Moore with several of the members presenting some of the highlights which appealed to them. The guest speaker was Rev. A. Poulter who took for his subject "The New Patriotism." He said "our old patriotism isn't enough today. During the last few years science has made such vast strides particularly in the bringing into closer relationship the lands that used to be so far away, but now are at our door and are our neighbors, "just across the street." We need not only our patriotism, but a brotherhood to bring the nations together for an enduring peace." His address was much appreciated and a vote of thanks was extended to him by Mrs. B. Tanner on behalf of the members. The singing of the National Anthem concluded a very splendid meeting. Afternoon tea was served by the hostess assisted by Mesdames Tumelty, W. Stewart and Beatty.

When Lady Alexander saw Baby Joan Alspector lying wide awake and expectant in her crib yesterday morning at the Canadian Mothercraft Centre, she did what any other normal mother would do under the circumstances—picked her up and cuddled her. Baby Joan, who is just over two weeks old, is one of the fortunate children whose mothers applied for Mothercraft training after the baby was born, and she is learning how to look after a new arrival at the Centre on Clarendon Avenue.

NEWFOUNDLAND COMPLAINS OF HIGH PRICES

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. John's, Nfld., —(CP)—Joseph Smallwood of Gander, in a drive to win support for his campaign to have Newfoundland federate with Canada, has called the attention of the people to the difference in the prices of the goods they buy and the prices for similar products in Canada.

Smallwood, member of the 45-man convention elected to recommend a future form of government for Newfoundland recently compiled a list of food products and prices which was published in St. John's papers.

Following are Newfoundland prices on some of the items he included in his list with Canadian prices bracketed: cocoa .80 (.58); coffee .80 (.53); marmalade .40 (.18); diced beets .27 (two for .23); cheese .30 (.19) baby foods three for .45 (three for .23); soup .27 (.17); peas .28 (two for .27); sugar .13 1-2 (.9); icing sugar .35 (.9 1-2); rolled oats .10 (.04 1-2); macaroni .30 (.09); canned tomatoes .30 (.09); tinned milk .18 (.09); flour 12.00 (5.50); razor blades .40 (.25); galvanized wash boiler 3.50 (1.20); broom 1.60 (.89); school scribblers .15 (.05).

All except bare essential foods are subject to customs duties, the main source of revenue for the Newfoundland government. The people of Newfoundland complain that the merchants are allowed to mark up after the customs duties have been added.

Would Cut Costs

Mr. Smallwood states that as a Canadian province Newfoundland could ask for extension of the provisions of the Maritimes Freight Rate Act. This would cut down the cost of getting goods to Newfoundland from Canada, now the supplier of two-thirds of the islands needs. There would be no customs to pay on the imports as the Island's system of taxation would be substituted for that of Canada's.

Mr. Smallwood states that many of the people in Newfoundland's 1,300 scattered, coastline communities do not realize the large amount they have to pay out in customs. These people were more inclined to blame the merchant for charging the outlandish prices than to accuse the government of setting the high rates of taxation.

Despite the difference in prices a Canadian would be surprised to see the supplies in Newfoundland stores. Many things made in Canada and in short supply there are openly displayed in windows and counters of stores on this island.

Soaps and soap flakes of all kinds are available. Men's shirts of all colors are found in practically every dry goods store. Chocolate bars of all types and makes are found in every restaurant. Gum of all kinds is openly on sale. Boxes of chocolates are displayed in all restaurants and drugstore shelves. Mantel type and large new radios are plentiful.

Reasons given here for the abundance of supplies is that the export market brings a higher price to Canadian manufacturers than the domestic market where prices are under control.

RAEDER GOOD STATEGIST SAYS FIRST SEA LORD

London, Nov. 21 —(CP Cable) —Admiral Sir John Cunningham, First Sea Lord, told the Royal Empire Society Wednesday that if Hitler and Goering had had more faith in Grand Admiral Erich Raedar "Britain might not have survived."

"Raedar was a sound strategist and he saw clearly that Germany's only chance of putting Britain out of the war was by putting the full power of attack on our trade routes by submarines and aircraft," Sir John said.

13-Year-Old Boy Confesses Much Crime

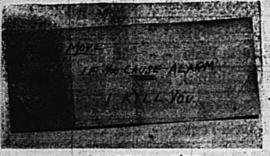
St. Catharines, Nov. 21 —(CP) — Police said yesterday that statements made by a 13-year-old boy disclosed a "mass production" program of crime. The lad will appear in juvenile court.

The boy confessed breaking and entering and theft from six autos, a service station break-in, break-in of a confectionery store and two bakeries and theft of 26 bicycles. Eighteen of the bicycles have been recovered.

WARSHIP MAY BE TOTAL LOSS

London, Nov. 21 —(Reuters)—The Royal Navy destroyer Saumarez may be a total loss as the result of damage suffered when she and another British destroyer, H.M.S. Volage, struck mines in the Corfu Channel Oct. 22, John Dugdale, financial secretary to the Admiralty, told the House of Commons.

Girl Bank Teller Foils Attempted Robbery



MOVE
IF YOU CAUSE ALARM
I KILL YOU.

Note that failed to convince.

By dropping to the floor and quickly eliminating herself from possible line of fire, Eileen Tiroux, 22-year-old teller at the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Mount Pleasant and Manor Rds. branch bank, apparently frustrated the plans of a man who attempted to hold up the bank shortly before closing time yesterday. There were no customers at the cage and Miss Tiroux "was preparing to get things cleaned up for the day" when a man hurried into the bank and pushed a note into the teller's cage. It read: "Don't move. If you cause alarm I'll kill you."

"Then he said, 'Hand over your big bills,'" the teller told police. "When he said this, he pointed a paper bag at me. I thought there was probably a gun in it, so I dropped to the floor and I think I yelled something like, 'Get this man.'"

When the man was confronted with an empty cage, he fled through a back lane and made his escape to an automobile parked on Hillsdale Ave., a block north of the bank.

PC Thomas Parish, 515 Hillsdale Ave., on his way to work at No. 2 Division, observed the man hurrying to the car and "on a hunch" he took the licence number. The constable then walked along Mount Pleasant Rd. to a car stop across from the bank where he was hailed by the bank staff who, by this time, had run onto the street. Within minutes police cars converged on the area and at 3 p.m. were spreading a mobile dragnet around the district in an attempt to cut off the thug's escape. He drove east on Hillsdale Ave. toward Bayview. Shortly after 4 p.m. the '38 black sedan was found abandoned on Redpath Ave., about a quarter of a mile from the bank.

A check of the licence number obtained by PC Parish revealed that the car is owned by W. A. Curry of Orangeville, who, with his wife, had come to Toronto to spend the day shopping. Police were unable to contact Curry and believed the car was stolen from a down-town parking lot.

The hold-up man was described by PC Parish and Miss Tiroux as being about 35 years old, five feet eight inches tall, dark complexioned, slight build, thin faced with a small dark moustache, wearing a brown suit, a fedora and no overcoat.

The note was printed in dark blue pencil on the back of an orange-colored blank cheque of the Imperial Bank head office. The wording of the note and the method used was similar to a case earlier this year at a down-town bank where a robber threatened a girl teller, but did not get any money.

H. L. Sadlier, manager of the Bank of Commerce, was in his office when yesterday's fracas occurred, but did not see the man.

Two Killed, Six Injured in Level Crossing Crash

Sudbury. Nov. 21 —(CP)—Two persons were killed and six others seriously injured yesterday in an automobile-train collision at a level crossing near River Valley, 30 miles east of here.

Dead are: Mrs. Felix Giroux, 30, and her baby daughter, a few months old.

Seriously injured and in a Sturgeon Falls hospital are: Felix Giroux, husband of the dead woman; two of his sons, Girard, nine, and Lucien, 10; Wilfred Chantigny, driver of the car; his daughter, Jeanine, and his son, Armand. The homes of all are in River Valley.

There were no immediate details of the accident, other than the fact the car was struck by an extra eastbound freight train and dragged four or five pole lengths after the collision.

MAY ABANDON EFFORT

Burbank, Calif., Nov. 21—(AP)—Snow and cold weather may force temporary abandonment of efforts to bring down additional bodies from the wreckage of a Western Airlines plane on White Mountain.

Only one of the 11 bodies was brought down a narrow trail Tuesday.

Aboard the plane were three women from Western Canada. The crash occurred last Wednesday.

The Dressy Afternoon Bag

By PRUNELLA WOOD

This big handbag, accompaniment to your best dresses and suits and furs, can be had in suede-like fabric, faille or moire. It is made with two flares which give it a cavalier look, and set into an important frame of gilt.

The model is capacious, and being made of excellent quality fabrics, easily avoids getting that beat-up look.

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

Fashion Flashes

A GOOD WAY of warming up on a coolish day is to look at resort clothes. Ready for Florida is a frock of pure silk in royal blue with a sketchy black and white design. Long torso lines are pointed up by cascade drapery on the skirt. Very wide scooped-out oval neckline is ruffle-flanged.

BUT NATCH, after all the other white fur variations, such as white mink and white nutria; why shouldn't caracul get a chance. One store is showing exquisite coats and cape-stoles of snowy white, silky caracul, and very lovely these fur-fashions are, too! Very rare though, and correspondingly expensive.

A DIFFERENT APPROACH is obvious in the handling of fur-trimmed fabric coats. Sand-beige woolen is used for a smart coat with the front tie scarf in beaver matching the front curve of the hemline border. Twin buckles on either side of the basque bodice waistline; leg-o'-mutton sleeves.

THINGS ARE HAPPENING to the wide-brimmed casual felt swagger, for it is going dressy. Looking to Spring is a high-crowned, wide-brimmed swagger of pale beige felt with gold kid, jewelled buterflies posed at the tip of the crown, at the crown band, and at the brime edge.

INCREASING INTEREST is focused on sleeves in new fur coats. Persian lamb in black or gray is used for an attractive coat which has a high, wrapped petal collar, slim lines, and full, triple-tiered sleeves, the final tier shaped into the wrist cuff. Other detail includes slanting, half-moon pocket flaps.

AFTER-FIVE dresses continue on their important, short-skirted way. Black crepe, figure-molded in a betless line, makes a smart frock, the deep, square neckline softly outlined with appliqued flowers of black and blue lace spattered with paillettes. Similar trim holds the elbow-length puffed sleeves. At back a cluster of soft fullness from the scalloped hip seam dips gently. Hemline is edged with narrow black lace.

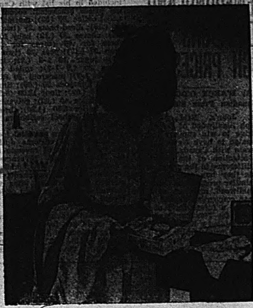
Toilet Kits Come in Handy



A toilet kit with a uniform scent is just the thing for a weekend party

By HELEN FOLLETT

SOME DAY, when you feel like going on a terrific beauty binge and the balance in the check book permits, trail to a cosmetic counter and buy yourself a uniformly-scented toilet kit. Cosmetic chemists think of everything that the dollies want to make them happy, pretty and attractive.

Instead of picking up a jar of cream here, and a lotion there, you can get a united family of toilet-table goodies, all neatly packed away in a stunning container—just the thing to tote to that autumn weekend party.

What the Kit Conalns

There will be a cold cream for removing make up, that you can use in cold weather when your precious cheeks get chapped. You will find a massage cream, to be used after you wash your face at bed time. And there will be included a skin tonic to serve as an astringent, so your pores won't spread themselves, as sometimes happens. Dusting powder to suit your epidermal map will also be on hand.

All these will carry the same odor as the small vial of perfume and the larger container of toilet water.

For the Bath

If you feel like flinging more money, you can collect bath accessories that will make you feel like a million dollars whenever you use them.

First the soap, of course. Then bath salts. Remember the times in the past when you tossed some into the bath water and then fancied you were sitting on pebbles when you reclined in the tub? Nothing like that any more. They dissolve before you can wink an eye.

A lotion for friction after the bath gives one a set-up feeling, keeps goosie-flesh away from the legs and arms. Talcum rubs are nice if you prefer them to the liquid treatment.

GOOD MANNERS

Girl Should Receive Direct Invitation to Wedding Reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My boy friend (we have been going together for three months) has asked me to attend with him the wedding reception of his nephew and bride-to-be. I have never met either the prospective bride or groom. I understand that the reception will be a large affair. Do you think it proper for me to attend?

M. V. S.

It's not proper for you to go to this wedding reception unless you receive a direct invitation, either from the bride's mother or from the bride herself. Your boy-friend's invitation isn't enough, for he hasn't the right to invite a stranger to this occasion, and you would (or should) feel awkward going with him to an occasion to which you haven't been invited. (Suppose you arrive and discover that the reception is a sitdown affair, with places only for those who have accepted the invitation!)

However, it is quite proper for you to tell your boy-friend that you will be delighted to go if he will have a direct invitation sent assuring you that the hostess (the bride's mother or the bride) wishes you to attend. This invitation might be by formal invitation, or by note, or by telephone. The point is that it is a direct invitation from hostess to gues.

Arriving at House Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

four o'clock. At what time should an informal home wedding at four o'cuock. At what time should we arrive at the home?

E. H.

About quarter to four.

Planning for Relatives and Friends of Groom to Congratulate Couple

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son is to be married in the near future. A reception has been planned for the wedding party and immediate families following the ceremony.

Since several relatives and close friends of the groom are coming from a great distance, do you think it would be considered bad taste for the groom's parents to hold Open House after the reception? This is the only way that these guests would have to congratulate the bride and groom.

E. N.

Wouldn't it be possible for your son to suggest to the parents of his fiancee that they add to the list of reception guests these relatives and intimate friends of his who are coming such distances to be present at the wedding? Or perhaps, after the recessional, the couple could plan to receive, in the vestibule of the church, those relatives and friends who are not invited to the reception.

If neither of these plans is possible, you would have to talk over with your son and his fiancee the plan you have in mind, because there would be the time-element to be considered. Having the couple attend two receptions might interfere with their going-away schedule. However, if your plan is agreeable to them and convenient to their schedule, you might properly invite these relatives and friends to come to your house, and ask the newly-weds to come in for as long as they can stay.

COURTESY TIP

By Mrs. Beeckman

When you are being introduced and it is apparent that that "awful moment" has descended on the introduction—the moment when the introducer has forgotten your name—immediately come to his or her rescue and supply your name. Be quick on the trigger about this, for your alertness and un-selfconsciousness will at once lift the embarrassment of the situation.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Speaking of Chins

Except when a chin takes a mate, the quester after good-looks is not inclined to pay much attention to it. Yet it is an interesting feature and one that is subject to beauty griefs. If a woman has a good jawline and does not acquire the habit of doing facial gymnastics, a neat chin will contribute to a pleasing appearance.

The attractive jawline is symmetrically curved, and terminates in a slightly oval chin. The square jaw may be a mark of the strong, determined character, but it is, as a rule, no beauty bargain. When the jaw noticeably protrudes, the fine, delicate lines of the face are destroyed. The receding chin is nothing to be happy about, but one must accept it. Nothing can be done about it.

The face is always changing, and the chin will change under certain circumstances. Thrusting it out gives the face a belligerent look. Drawing it in—a favorite gesture of the stern-minded, the prude, and the intolerant woman—will build a substructure that may eventually develop into an ugly pounch. Pulling down the lip-ends, if continued long enough, will form deep lines on either side of the chin, have a deplorable effect upon tissues that otherwise would remain firm throughout the year.

After all, it is not so much a question of the shape of the jaw and chin as it is of the fleshy contour and the condition of the skin surface. Professional massage will do a great deal toward restoring tone to softened tissues, and it can roll twin chins into a single one. Not with one treatment or two, but in the course of time. The superabundant tissue is dissolved by vigorous rolling movements. When the chin goes flabby, the same thing usually happens to the tissues of the throat. Hence the need of a well-balanced head. Holding the head high draws on the muscles of the neck and the interlacing muscles that extend downward from the face to the neck; it keeps them sound and strong.

We must again stress the need of facial composure. The habit of emphasizing conversation by a downward thrust of the chin, as in disapproval, or depressing the chin instead of holding it up, not only will have a disturbing effect on facial contour, but also will give an unpleasant expression to the mouth. The study of chin-ology is interesting.

Nervous tension will create unpleasant mouth lines; in fact, it affects body carriage as well as facial expression. What it does to the health is pretty dreadful. It is a trouble more distressing than those who have escaped it can possibly imagine.

INDIAN AIRLINES BOOM

Karachi, India —(CP)—A survey by the civil aviation directorate of the Indian government shows that during the first half of this year the number of pasengers carried on the air services trebled as compared to last year. The civil air services were restored to commercial operation on Jan. 1, 1946, and within six months the mileage of air routes and the number of routes in operation had nearly doubled. The number of passengers carried on the air services during the first half of this year was 37,6333 as compared to 24,090 in the whole of 1945.

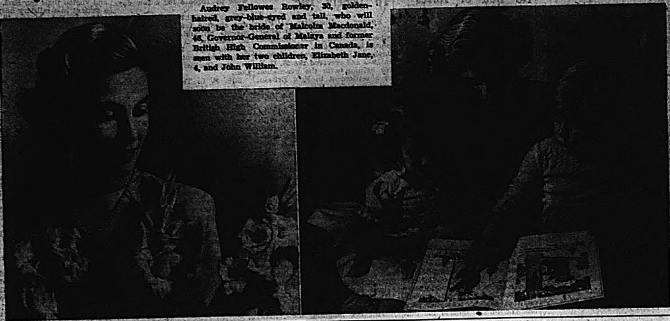
Lovely and Charming Ottawa War Widow to Wed Malaya Governor



Audrey Fellowes Rowley, 30, golden-haired, grey-blue-eyed and tall, who will soon be the bride of Malcolm Macdonald, 46, Governor-General of Malaya and former British High Commissioner in Canada, is seen with her two children, Elizabeth Jane, 4, and John William.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Storey, Baptiste Lake, Celebrate 50th Anniversary of Their Wedding

The number 13 holds no ill omen for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Storey of Baptiste, because for fifty years they have looked on November 13th as a lucky and happy day. Fifty years ago Mr. Storey, known to his many friends as Joe, and Eliza Jane Lewis, both then of Highland Grove, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony at Bancroft by Rev. A. L. Brown, minister of the Methodist Church at that time.

The marriage ceremony was performed in the Methodist parsonage, the present home of Mr. Harold Skuce of Bancroft. The young couple were attended by Mr. John Lewis, brother of Mrs. Storey, and Mrs. Agnes MacFadden, both of Highland Grove.

Made Home in Herschel.

They went as bride and groom to make their home on the west side of Baptiste Lake in the township of Herschel, seven miles north of the village of Baptiste where Mr. Storey and Mr. Alex Nicoll, father of Mr. Arthur Nicoll of Baptiste, had gone ten years before to clear the land and build homesteads in that sparsely settled part of the country. Both the men built by exchange of work, and the two families after marriage lived side by side for twenty-five years without a quarrel, something which would be a proud accomplishment under present-day conditions.

During that time a son, Roy, was born and when he grew up and married Mr. and Mrs. Storey left the home in order to provide a home for the newlyweds. They moved back to Highland Grove staying there three years and then on to Bancroft where Mr. Storey managed the Queens Hotel. They finally sold the hotel, because of ill health on Mrs. Storey's part, and took a trip to Western Canada, returning to Baptiste where they have made their home for the past 12 years.

Since coming to Baptiste the tourist influx caught the business eye of Joe, and they have for some years catered to some of our neighbors to the south who come to Baptiste for vacations.

President of W. A.

During their married years they have both been faithful workers in the Methodist Church and after church union, in the United Church of Canada. Mr. Storey as an active official and one who has been partially responsible for the change of location of the United Church at Baptiste, of which Rev. R. W. McLauchlin, B.A., Bancroft, is the minister; Mrs. Storey as president of the Women's Association for the last few years, both giving diligently of their time for the Christian movement in the community of which they form a part.

On Wednesday, November 13th, they opened their house to their friends to celebrate fifty years of married life. A dainty tea was served by Mrs. Roy Storey and Mrs. Earl Huff, both of Baptiste. Mrs. Huff poured tea to the many friends of the Storey's who came to visit them, and wish them continued health and happiness through the coming years. Many cards were received also from far and near, indicating the esteem in which the Storey family is held.

Canada's Food So Good English Bride Hates To Think of Returning

Hamilton, Nov. 21—(CP)—For the last nine years Robert Beatty of Hamilton has been active in British stage and motion picture work and recently he signed a three-year contract to make two pictures a year. But today he's back in Hamilton with his English bride who says she "can't see why he ever left here."

"Baskets of eggs, washed vegetables, amazing food, clothing and houses!" exclaimed the breathless bride. "I certainly don't want to go back. I hope we can't get passage next January."

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

CENTENARY W.A.-W.M.S.

Mrs. Stanley May opened her home for the joint November meeting of the W.A. and W.M.S. The President, Mrs. L. Hall, opened the W.A. meeting with the theme song and hymn. Rev. Mr. McCallum led in prayer. Mrs. G. McDonald had charge of the devotional period. First part of period was in keeping with Remembrance Day, Mrs. F. Aikens giving a reading on "Some thoughts about Remembrance Day". Mrs. R. Thrasher led in prayer. Mrs. Kelly read the Scripture Mark 10: 2-12 verse. Mrs. McDonald took as her theme "The Christian Home". Her message was very helpful to all. Mrs. R. Edmondson and Mrs. McDonald led in "Meditation on The Lord's Prayer". Mrs. Holton gave a reading on "The Jolly Life of a Farmer's Wife". This was much enjoyed.

A nominating committee was selected to prepare a slate of officers for the year 1947.

The meeting was then turned over to the W.M.S. President, Mrs. Roblin. After the usual business. Mrs. P. Sutherland gave her report on the 21st Sectional Rally recently held at Cannifton. This was particularly interesting to the members who were unable to attend. Mrs. Avory reviewed a chapter of the Study Book on "The Women of India". Rev. Mr. McCallum closed the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. May served delicious refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed by all present.

QUINTE W. I.

The November meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Arnold Mitchell. There was a large crowd and the men folk played cards while the business meeting was in progress.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Akey, District President, gave an interesting and instructive address on the armored bearings of Canada. This was very appropriate in view of the recent publicity in regard to the Canadian flag, and since the program was in charge of Mrs. Mitchell, convener of Historical Research, Mrs. Akey displayed pictures of the Coats of Arms of the various provinces and gave lucid explanations of the heraldic devices.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to her at the conclusion of the address.

Mrs. S. Geddes presented an excellent report of the Area Convention. Speaking without notes, and evidently much interested in the subject matter, Mrs. Geddes held the attention of her audience throughout her talk. In conclusion, she suggested that next year each member attending be asked to give a two-minute talk on what she found interesting in the Area Convention.

Two humorous readings followed one by Mrs. Eric Leeming, "Stop Your Kicking", and one by Mrs. Atkins on "The Woes of the Farmer", trying to find a parking place in the city.

The program was interspersed with community singing with Mrs. Parrott as accompanist.

The Roll Call, "Where I Would Travel if I Could", brought out many a nostalgic longing. Many a woman's eyes shone as she confessed to a desire to go "back home" across the sea. A trip to Bermuda seemed a favorite but the laugh of the evening went to the woman who wanted a trip to Belleville once a week.

Mrs. Wesley Gray completed planes for a euchre to be held at her home in the near future.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. F. Parrott.

W. C. T. U. MEETS

A very enjoyable parlor meeting was held recently at the home of Mrs. Hitchon, Moira Street, when the county president, Mrs. A. T. Fleming, Trenton, was the guest speaker. She presented a report of the 60th annual provincial convention held at Brantford in October last.

The highlight of the afternoon session was the address of Mrs. J. H. Wickson, Toronto, national president, declaring that had the $373,990,800 spent on alcoholic beverages in 1945 been used in a constructive way in this period of housing shortage, it would have provided a $4,000 house, mortgage free, for each of 93,500 families.

She urged W.C.T.U. workers not to be discouraged, tho' it might appear at times that the only reward was abuse and ridicule. "I have no need to tell you that the brewers, distillers, governments of the Provinces and Dominions and the owners of hotels and drinking taverns, without much toiling, are piling up—night and day — millions in money, at the cost of purity of our womanhood, the sanity of our manhood, the happiness of Canadian homes and the good name of multitudes of our citizens. They are not toiling for nothing. But what a catch!"

"Never did whiskey, wine and beer cost as much to the Canadian public as it does today and never did it cost as much in disease degradation, disaster, divorce and death as it is costing in this year." The instrument of unrighteous alcohol, this weapon of the devil, this curse to civilization is multiplying venereal disease, increasing crime, family separation and divorce proceedings, corrupting the youth of our land and breaking hearts and homes, and in high places—who seems to care?"

Millions of bushels of grain have been sacrificed to the manufacture of alcohol, while multitudes were starving and many of British stock, were rationed for bread, almost to health breaking point.

Mrs. G. Dobbs ably presided at the meeting and a helpful devotional period was conducted by Mrs. M. Denton.

Miss Shirley Hitchon delighted all with a beautiful solo, "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked."

BELIEVED HIT ON HEAD

St. Catharines, Nov. 20—(CP) — Police Wednesday investigated circumstances of an assault Tuesday night in which Amos Smith, 31, Decew Falls hydro employee, suffered a fractured skull and scalp cuts. Officers said they believed Smith was hit on the head with a blunt instrument during an altercation but Smith so far has refused to saw how he was injured.

Civil Service Staffs Are to Be Reduced

Ottawa, Nov. 21 —(CP)— A cabinet study of the possibilities of reducing civil service staffs has culminated in a survey of the numerous government departments, it was learned yesterday.

Ottawa's colony of civil servants now numbers some 35,000 men and women in comparison with a pre-war figure of 15,000.

It was reported that a letter from the Prime Minister's office asked department officials to effect economies in staff wherever possible. The letter was described as the opening gun in a determined effort to halt unwarranted expansion in certain departments and to reduce expenditures by cutting down on staff where possible.

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 21 —(CP)— Cabinet ministers grin and bear it when grumbles come from the back benches that British representatives abroad — particularly in countries like Japan — should drive in British, not American cars.

Their answer is that everything possible is being done to get British cars to British representatives because of their advertising value. But it isn't always easy.

By what may be a gentleman's agreement, no one mentions the array of cars humming along Whitehall and turning with long grace into the House of Commons yard. About half of them are of United States manufacture, and have the appearance of not being designed for the luxury trade but rather for wartime purposes.

Prime Minister Attlee himself hurries from 10 Downing Street to a black Humber he often uses, but it normally is parked among half-a-dozen long American cars which carried generals, diplomats and other notables to Downing Street meetings.

The ordinary Londoner, whose ambitions soar to a three-horsepower motorcycle or a 10-horsepower car, takes it for granted these big cars, if new, belong either to the government or someone associated with it.

Government spokesmen swear nothing is done to give priority to government orders for new passenger cars. In 12 months the service departments ordered 181 cars and received 22. Other departments ordered 3,899 and received 1,402. Until production comes nearer demand some envoys will have to continue to use what cars they can get, irrespective of place of manufacture.

Retort Sharp: Maj. Tufton Beamish, Conservative member of parliament for Lewes, said in the Commons that people passing through the lavish "Britain Can Make It" exhibition have rechristened the show "Britain Can't Get It."

"I think it is only so described by the very ignorant," growled Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the board of trade, whose department rules that most of the nice things on display must go to foreign markets.

FUEL ECONOMY IS WATCHWORD FOR BRITONS

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London —(CP)—Fuel Minister Emanuel Shinwell says there may be shortages of coal this winter but "no serious crisis" if the people do what they can to save fuel. The average Briton isn't entirely convinced.

When cartoonist J. C. Walker of Cardiff's Western Mail drew a householder dressed in overcoat hat and motor rug, reading "Bleak House" by candlelight in front of a fireless grate, he reflected a widespread reaction to the minister's forecast.

Week by week, Mr. Shinwell has veered from heavy pessimism to moderate optimism and back again. Meantime, Arthur Horner, general secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, ha said consistently that the anticipated 5,000,000-ton deficit in coal production will throw 1,000,0000 men and women temporarily out of work.

Industrialists in many parts of Scotland have been warned officially that their electricity supply may be cut one day a fortnight to conserve coal. Power plants and railways are nearing the bottom of their stockpiles. Gas companies have threatened pressure cuts when the weather gets really cold.

And already even before the first snowfall—some parts of the Midlands and Southern England have experienced power failures of brief duration. Bradford, Yorkshire, even went without street cars for one stretch of 40 minutes.

"I want to tell you there is not going to be a crisis in coal, if by a crisis you mean that industrial organization is going to be seriously dislocated and that hundreds of factories are to be closed down," Mr Shinwell told the Coke-Oven Managers Association.

Gives His Reasons

That statement, he indicated later in the House of Commons was based on four suppositions:-

1. That the present working force of about 700,000 can be kept in the mines or increased.
2. That absenteeism in the mines is sharply reduced.
3. That production shows an increase of 100,000 tons a week over 1945.
4. That industrial and domestic users of coal effect the utmost economies.

Less than three weeks before his "no crisis" speech, Mr. Shinwell made another in which he warned: "We run a very grave risk of breakdown." A recent government booklet for public distribution said that "Unless output (of coal) rises, there is real danger that coal shortage may act as a brake on reconversion."

The minister's aim in his fuel-saving campaign is a 10-percent voluntary cut in industrial and domestic use of coal, gas and electricity to avert a "breakdown in supplies in the depths of the coming winter."

Industry has been warned that "more drastic steps" will have to be considered if the voluntary saving is not effective. The government is known to be considering a scheme to restrict use of electricity. Demand has increased 76 per cent since 1938 and the gas industry is using 24 per cent more coal than before the war.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge — Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Nicholson attended the funeral of the former's uncle, Mr. Angus Nicolson of Tweed on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. John Chisholm spent a few days of last week at the home of her daughter Mrs. Jack Hendricks, Foxboro.

Some of the hunters have returned home, some were successful in capturing a deer, and some were not.

Some folk from this community attended the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, over the weekend.

The W.A. held a very successful bazaar at the school house last Friday evening. Refreshments were sold also aprons, towels, pillow cases and other useful articles. A good profit was realized. Rev. Mr. Hillis was chairman for a short program of vocal and instrumental music and a reading by Mrs. Clarence Woods.

Mr. John Hogg visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hendricks in Foxboro last Saturday.

Mr. Jas. Hinchliffe and Mr. Barton Hinchliffe left Sunday morning for a few days visit to Toronto.

Mrs. Moore is visiting her niece Mrs. E. Harvey and Mr. Harvey.

Cheese is being manufactured here only four days a week now, instead of seven as formerly.

GERMAN HOUSEWIVES RAID COAL RATIONS

A crowd of German housewives are shown stealing pieces of coal from the back of an emergency fuel truck en route to a city distribution station in Frankfurt. Next to the food shortage in Germany, the fuel shortage is the most critical, with cold weather already set in and a hard winter ahead. The inhabitants of bomb-wrecked towns are unable to keep warm in their drafty, windowless homes as there is not even firewood to be found.

Admiralty Recharts The Deadly Goodwins

By GLENN WILLIAMS

Deal, England —(AP)—The Goodwin sands mariners' graveyard that has engulfed sailors and ships for a thousand years, are being recharted by the British admiralty in an effort to cut the deadly toll of men and wealth annually sucked into its shifting, treacherous mass.

Even the hardy lifeboat men of Deal fear the sands. When they set out in a storm to answer a desperate distress rocket they feel the horror of a voyage into the unknown, for the sands are never the same from one tide to another.

Ancient galleons laden with gold doubloons are squashed in the quicksand against the steel bones of a German submarine trapped there after a first Great War raid on the English coast.

An example of the relentless destruction by sand, tide and wind, rides the sands now—the broken halves of the 7,000-ton United States steamer Helena Modjeska.

She drove hard aground in a September storm and it took 48 hours to save her crew. Shortly afterward, her captain, William Curran, was found dead in his locked hotel room. An inquest witness said Curran called himself "a fool" for not taking a pilot into the sheltered, deep-water downs.

Safe Anchorage

The one service sands provide is shelter for shipping inside its ravenous reaches. For in the five by 10 miles downs between the Kent coast and the sands there lies one of the smoothest deep water anchorages in the world—a spot which once was a rendezvous for the British fleet.

The origin of the shoal is lost so far back in time that there is only a legend of its beginning.

Tradition says it was once the island of Lomea, owned by the Earl of Godwine, the family from which came King Harold of the Saxons.

After William the Conqueror beat Harold at Hastings in 1066, the Godwines were stripped of their vast baronial holdings in Wessex. William's followers divided the lands. But tradition says the island was swept away by the sea in 1097 and became the sandy, ship-trading shoal it now is.

The Godwine wrecks of Norse galleys and great sailing ships penetrated into the plays of Shakespeare.

In the Merchant of Venice, he details the loss of Antonio's ships which bore the cargo to repay Shylock.

"Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wrecked on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried..."

A year ago a survey showed the sands shifting so rapidly that the Admiralty decided to rechart them every year.

Northern Graves Reveal Pottery 1000 Years Old

The Pas, Man., —(CP)—The origin of the black pottery found in the graves of Indians and Eskimos in northern Manitoba but never made by them, was one of many things which interested visitors to the province's hinterland during the summer.

Northern breeding grounds of migratory birds also came in for investigation by ornithologists, as did the effect of sub-arctic weather on broadcasting and reception.

The theory submitted by I. Hallowell of Chicago's Field Museum of Natural History concerning the black pottery is that it came from tribes far to the south and east, and was trading among savages probably 1,000 years ago until finally it reached the northern stretches of Manitoba. The pottery is said to have been made long before white men reached the northland.

One of the largest deposits of these relics was examined by Mr. Hallowell last summer near Berens River. Ernest Manning, a young British archaeologist who spent two years in the Duck Bay region prior to the war, also reported discovery of pottery among the ancient stone huts of the Eskimos.

Study Bird Migration

Several ornithologists interested in the breeding grounds of migratory birds visited the north this year, including two experts from the United States government. Their recommendations assisted in determining the length of the shooting season in the Mississippi flyway states.

Other bird students include representatives of Ducks Unlimited who indicated the organization's hopes to construct new dams to maintain duck breeding zones.

Exploration by mean of radar was done during the summer by a party of national research experts who sought to learn the effect of sub-arctic weather on broadcasting and reception. They were stationed for two months at the Clearwater Lake airbase.

The latest visitor was C. J. Albrecht, world-travelled naturalist from Homewood, Ill. He obtained six caribou for display in the Chicago and the Hastings Ill., museums.

Mr. Albrecht described Canada's northern woods as a collector's paradise, and Canadians as being "most co-operative."

BREAK FOR CHURCH-GOERS

New Barnet, Hertfordshire, England —(CP)— Rev. A. F. Osborne changed the time of morning service from 11 a.m to 9.30 because "I want to give women a chance to cook their Sunday dinners and men to have their round of golf after they've been to church."

Kendal, Westmorland, England (CP)—Farmers' wives are organizing a petition for release of Kendal's ancient Free Market Hall, used by the food ministry since early in the war.

CARGO OF URANIUM SHIPPED

London, Nov. 20 —(CP)— An 860-ton cargo of uranium ore from the Belgian Congo has been sent by train to a "secret destination," Reuters news agency said last night.

Britain has an atomic research laboratory in south-central England.

Canada, Czechoslovakia and the Belgian Congo are the principal sources of uranium, chief component of the atomic bomb.

BLOOD'S SUGAR CONTENT

An adult human has half an ounce of sugar in his blood.

Lake Vessel Home No Bed of Roses

Toronto, — (CP)— Toronto's housing shortage doesn't bother Harry Platt. For the last four years, he and his wife have lived in a "house" with 300 room to spare.

Their home is the old C. S. L. overnight passenger steamer Toronto which has lain at dead-end anchorage in Toronto Harbor for the last eight years. And Platt works at home, too, for he is watchman of the big, four-deck side-wheeler.

But it isn't all smooth sailing (at anchor) for the Platts. The nearest telephone is half a mile distant at an oil company yard. Mrs. Platt treks a mile and a half into the city three times a week to buy her groceries.

Outside of this there are only the noises to cope with. "There are damnable noise, thousands of them" said Platt. "But you get used to them, and I am always able to figure out what causes them."

It is worst in winter when the the temperature may drop as low as 38 below zero. "When an east wind blows and piles the water up in this end of the lake the air under the ice has to blow. At times it sounds like a regiment of soldiers tramping from one end of the ship to the other."

On one occasion the ropes holding the gangplank broke. The ship started scraping on the cement pier as it moved back and forth. "We had everything from a high falsetto to a deep bass," said Platt. "I couldn't find any ropes in the dark, so I finally tied a couple of towels together and hoisted the gangplank with them."

About the only welcome sound to the Platts comes in a summer when they can hear the carp "spashing and rolling like pigs in the mud."

Poison Treatment Gets Rid of Moles

London —(CP)—British moles being blind as moles, still are suckers for the poisoned worm treatment.

The agricultural ministry reminds farmers that poison may check moles when trapping is not used. Crystals of strychnine are sprinkled on worms in a jam jar and this bait is dropped into mole tunnels.

The trick is in making sure all light from the entrance hole is excluded. The mole apparently is thus encouraged to believe the bait is normal.

NATIVE GIVES £1,000 FOR COLLEGE FUNDS

Durban, South Africa, (CP)—A well known native herbalist, Israel Alexander, heads the subscription list with a donation of £1,000 ($4,000) for extensions to the Adams College for Natives near Amanzimtoti, 30 miles from Durban. An appeal for £50,000 for this purpose was made recently.

Alexander is stated to be a great-grandson of the famous Basuto chief Moshesh.

Women Returns To Lonely Isle

Sydney, Australia, —(CP)— Mrs. Gladys Baker who abandoned her Witu island plantation north of Australia, when the Japanese invasion was underway in 1942 and received the M. B. E. for helping with the evacuation of a settlement in New Britain, has returned to Witu to take up business where she left off four years ago.

Mrs. Baker who is 45 will be the only white woman on Witu Island, near larger New Britain where before the war she operated a copra plantation left with her by her husband who died in 1934.

When Mrs. Baker was forced to leave by the Japanese approach, she made for a small settlement on the coast of New Britain in a launch. There she set up an emergency hospital to care for wounded volunteer defenders but finally evacuation was ordered.

Knowing the hiding place of an island steamer, Mrs. Baker took charge of the escape of several white residents and natives and got them safely to Australia after a 12-day trip in which she helped with navigation.

During the war Mrs. Baker worked in Australia with Army Intelligence mapping the new women's services in the hope of a posting to the northern islands but was kept on the mainland.

She remained in Australia until her discharge and recently started back to Witu to reorganize the plantation which was damaged by bombing. Her large home, once an island show-place, was destroyed but Mrs. Baker plans to live in a hut until a new residence is built.

Plan to Naturalize Some Enemy Aliens

Canberra —(CP)—Some of the 2,000 persons interned in Australia during the war as enemy aliens or merely for precautionary reasons will be permitted to become naturalized Australians.

Before naturalization papers are granted in any case, a year's probationary term will have to served. Once naturalization is complete, the former internees will be permitted to bring their families to Australia.

Naturalization will be permitted on the recommendation of a special commission which might also recommend deportation or release pending deportation.

The naturalization plan was decided upon because of the difficulty of repatriation due to shipping restricions as well as of the difficulty of re-settlement in devastated homelands.

The plan will not apply to 18,000 enemy prisoners of war, mostly Italians, a few of who have already started for home.

MISSING MINK

London—(CP)—A £2,000 ($8,000) mink coat was among property in a cabin trunk stolen from novelist Margery Sharp, shortly after she arrived here from the United States.

"To Say the Truth I Am Feeling Better Every Day"

Not Well for Two Years, This Woman Tells How Syntona Relieved Gas, Bloating and Indigestion. Nerves Relaxed, Free of Headaches and Dizzy Spells. Praises it Highly.

"I was not feeling well in the past two years and I tried everything I knew of in a vain effort to get relief," said Mrs. Louis Martin, 141 Park St., Waterloo, Ont., in a recent interview.

"I had so much trouble with indigestion and gas after my meals I didn't know what to do. The gas bloated my stomach giving me a full, heavy feeling that made me feel distressed from one meal to the next. Sometimes I got dizzy spells and dark spots floated before my eyes. I was subject to sick headaches and constipation. After being this way so long my nerves were all on edge so I couldn't get my proper sleep at night and in the mornings I felt very tired and listless.

"I had been disappointed so often with all kinds of medicines that I was discouraged with everything, but after awhile I decided to try Syntona and since then, to say the truth, I am feeling better every day. I am surprised that I can eat my meals now and have no gas, bloating or indigestion afterwards. I am practically free of constipation, headaches and dizzy spells, and my nerves are calmed down. As a result, I am sleeping much better at night and I not only feel refreshed in the mornings, but I find I can do more work without tiring as I did before."

Rely on Syntona, the pure Herbal Medicine made from 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots. Acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and aids in the elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste matter from the system. Many people say that even after the first few days the whole system seems to take on a feeling of renewed strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

ARGOS FAVORED TO WHIP BEACHES IN SEMI-FINAL

Wise Money Laying Three to One Krol and Company Will Meet Bombers

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 21 (CP) — The Monday-morning quarterbacks who won't remind you that they failed to prognosticate an all-Toronto final in the Eastern Canada grid scene are hastily assuring you now that the Argos will whip Balmy Beaches—and wise money says three to one they're right.

Basis for the odds is not only the respective performances of the two teams during the year but also the 14-2 trimming Beaches took from Argos in the 1945 Eastern Canada final. Despite the "sure-thing" certainty of the outcome, there promises to be an overflow crowd.

Both the Big Four Argonauts and the Ontario Union Beaches have strong wing lines, and it's on these lines that the outcome most probably will depend. The Argo line was a standout in the final game against Montreal Alouettes.

The Beach line played mediocre ball during the O.R.F.U. season but came to life when the backfield became more steady.

The "Cinderella" Beaches and the "Giant-Killer" Argos each have one pre-game victory. Argos won their fight to use Varsity Stadium in preference to the other two stadia in the city. Beaches came up with a victory when the C.R.U. voted against allowing Billy Myers, Fred Doty and Tommy Weldon to play for the Scullers. The trio started the season with Argos who lost their services when the Intercollegiate season opened.

Both teams held daylight practices yesterday.

Starry backfielder Royal Copeland hasn't dressed for an Argo practice, and by today, or tomorrow at the latest, rumors will start that cope won't see action Saturday. He injured a leg in Montreal last Saturday and has been limping a little.

Up until game-time Saturday, however, there's a bigger question than the outcome of the game—how to get tickets. The stadium holds about 19,000 and 10 times that number want seats.

After regular subscribers to both Beach and Argo games took their choice there were few tickets left for the general sale. Those few disappeared faster than an ice cube in the tropics.

By the way, does anyone know where we can pick up a pair of ducats for . . . ?

No?

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

National Hockey League scoring leaders made good use of last night's two games and with the exception of first place, tightened up. Billy (The Kid) Taylor, Detroit, whacked in a goal and earned an assist to boost his total to seven goals and 13 assists for 20 points. Maurice Richard, Montreal, idle with his 10 goals and six assists, moved over to give room to Roy Conacher, Detroit, who notched two tallies to up his total to seven and nine for 16 points. Other marksmen scored and three grouped for third place with 13 points, two for fourth berth with 12 and four for fifth with 11 points.

Conferences Pull Squeeze Out Play On Army Gridders

(By The Canadian Press)

The Pacific Coast Conference and the Big Nine of the Middle West pulled a squeeze out play on Army gridders as a potential candidate for the Rose Bowl football classic Jan. 1 by agreeing yesterday to a five-year plan to restrict the Pasadena games to colleges of the respective groups. Thus, instead of bidding the popular West Pointers to the Coast, the New Year's spectacle will probably see Illinois face either Southern California or the University of California in the festive test.

Announcement of the five-year pact led Coach Bernie Moore of Louisiana State to declare this was "the biggest mistake the Rose Bowl ever made." Other mentors though the restrictive policy would enhance the color and prestige of other bowl games.

BARONS, HORNETS DEADLOCKED FOR FIRST POSITION

Both Teams Win But Capitals Can Catch Them by Winning Saturday

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons and Pittsburgh Hornets are doing their best to make the Western Division race in the American Hockey League a close contest, and the former pace-setters, Indianapolis Capitals, are not out of it.

Cleveland and Pittsburgh remained in a deadlock for first place by winning their games last night. Caps, only one point behind the leaders, have a chance to regain the lead Saturday night by winning their set to with Pittsburgh.

Barons outskated Rockets 7-2 at Philadelphia while Hornets were shading Springfield 4-3 at Pittsburgh. Indianapolis remained in the race by defeating Reds at Providence 7-3.

Jimmy Jamieson contributed three goals to the Barons' victory. Jack Holota, the league's leading scorer, took second honors for the evening, beating Nick Damore, Rocket netminder, twice. Bob Carse and Les Cunningham notched the remaining Cleveland goals while Gaston Gauthier and Clayton Lavell tallied for Rockets.

Pittsburgh had to come from behind twice to defeat Springfield. Indians scored twice in the first period by Johnny Quilty and Bill Summerhill while the slow-starting Hornets marked up only one tally by Peanuts O'Flaherty who led the winners with two goals. O'Flaherty's second goal in the final period proved the clincher for Pittsburgh. Wally Wilson and Jack Hamilton accounted for the other Hornet tallies while Eldy Kobussen scored for Springfield.

The game cost Hornets the services of right winger Mel Hill who pulled a muscle early in the game and will be out a week.

Indianapolis held scoreless in the first period, broke through the Providence defence with a four-goal flurry in the final period after tallying three times in the second session. Cliff Simpson and Rod Morrison led Caps with two goals apiece and Enio Sclisizzi, Tony Bukovich and Steve Wochy collected the others. Johnny Chad, Hub Wilson and Billy Warwick tallied the Providence points.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Bobby Bauer, Boston, whose three goals within the first 8 minutes of play paced Bruins to a 4-1 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Clint (Snuffy) Smith, Chicago who tallied two goals and aided in two others as Black Hawks were defeated 8-6 by Detroit Red Wings.

Pete Horeck, Chicago, and Syd Abel and Roy Conacher, Detroit, who each notched two markers.

Crown Will Seek Full Explanation Of Court's Decision

Windsor, Nov. 21 — (CP)—The Crown will seek a full explanation of the Ontario Court of Appeal's decision yesterday to quash conviction of 18-year-old Ronald George Sears of Windsor who had been sentenced to be hanged Dec. 3 for the slasher-murder of Sgt. Hugh Blackwood Price on Aug. 17, 1945. Crown Attorney E. C. Awrey said late last night he did not know where he stood since his main evidence had been ruled inadmissible.

The Appellate Division handed down a decision Wednesday in the appeal which said statements allegedly made by Sears to police could not be used in evidence against him. These statements told of improper advances Sgt. Price made to Sears and how the youth left the sergeant's body lying with a dozen wounds in it.

A second charge of murder and three charges of attempted murder are still to be faced by the Windsor youth who took the news of the decision calmly as he sat in the death cell at Essex county jail. Whether these charges will be pressed depends upon explanation of the judgment, Mr. Awrey said.

The Crown Attorney intimated that since Joseph Gelenscer, who survived a stabbing last July 5, was the only man to point Sears out in a police lineup, all other charges may be laid aside and the youth brought to trial for the attempted murder of Gelenscer at the January Assizes.

Meanwhile there was jubilation at the Sears home here. Sears' mother was first to receive the news. She told her two daughters at home and telephoned her husband. Then she rushed to the jail to see her son.

"Ronnie threw his arms around me and I cried,—just from joy, I guess," she said. "There were tears in his eyes too."

However, Sears will have to remain in jail unless he is allowed bail by the Court of Appeal. The unanimous decision of the five judges hearing the appeal blocked any possible appeal of the Ontario Court's decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Awrey said he did not know the reasons behind the appeal court's findings.

No Increase In Attempted Illegal Entries

Ottawa, Nov. 21 — (CP)—Immigration officials said there has been no increase in attempted illegal entries into Canada at Windsor, and that reported 'leaks' in the border were entirely a United States matter.

They were commenting on a report from Detroit that "around 1,500 young Canadians entered the United States illegally in the Detroit-Windsor area and enlisted in the United States Army."

John Lesinski, chairman of a House of Representatives Committee investigating the border leaks, said several thousand other Canadians were granted visas without establishing residence in the United States and now commuted from Windsor homes to Detroit jobs.

An immigration spokesman here said the "alleged" illegal entries were all "one way."

Scoring Four Goals in Eight Minutes Boston Bruins Beat Maple Leafs by 4-1 Count

Victory Lifts Team Into Second-Place Tie With Canadiens

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

For the in-and-out showing of Boston Bruins, an acceptable explanation today might lie in the testimony of their own Art Ross that they still lack condition — but even that would hardly explain the hex Bruins hold over Toronto Maple Leafs.

From the way Boston piled into the league leaders for a 4-1 victory last night, Toronto undoubtedly would have received official blessing had they asked for a saliva test. Bruins had their four goals before the game was 8 minutes old.

The victory, lifting Bruins into second place tie with Montreal Canadiens two points behind Leafs, came in one of two scheduled N.H.L. contests. The other saw an old-fashioned goalfest as Detroit Red Wings outscored Chicago Black Hawks 8-6, to protect fourth position.

Bruins never gave Toronto a chance to get rolling as they extended their mastery shown in a 5-0 victory and a 3-3 tie in two previous meetings.

Key figures in the triumph for this team were the veteran Kitchener kids. Chunky Bobby Bauer was the standout with a three-goal performance.

Bauer banged in one goal after 57 seconds of play, popped home another at 1:59 and tallied a third unassisted in the eighth minute. Milt Schmidt scored Bruins' second goal a minute after feeding Bobby a pass for the opening tally.

Ted (Teeter) Kennedy took Gus Mortson's pass at 9:06 of the first period to end the scoring for Toronto, whose only two defeats this season now have come from Bruins.

At Chicago, Black Hawks and Detroit rang up the highest scoring performance of this season with 14 goals.

Down 3-0 at the start, Wings held a 4-4 draw at the end of the second period and raced away in the third. Leading the Detroit marksmen were Sid Abel and Roy Conacher, each with two tallies, others were counted by Eddie Bruneteau, Ted Lindsay, Billy Taylor and Adam Brown.

For Chicago, Pete Horeck and Ken Smith each scored twice and Johnny Mariucci, rugged defenceman who suffered a back injury towards the close that will keep him out of action for a few days, and Bill Mosienko fired the others.

Red Wings returned to Detroit to take on the last-place New York Rangers in the only match tonight.

ST. MIKES WIN EIGHTH STRAIGHT IN JUNIOR SERIES

Defeat Galt Red Wings 6-1 and Stratford Take Marlies 8-3

(By The Canadian Press)

The win-pattern set by the leading team in both the senior and junior series of the Ontario Hockey Association is repetitious. For St. Michael's who blasted Galt Red Wings 6-1 last night it was the eighth straight victory, while for Hamilton Tigers who edged out Stratford Indians, 3-2, in overtime it was No. 6 in as many starts.

A second junior game was played at Stratford, where the home team registered its third win of the season, taking a four-point tilt from Toronto Marlboros, 8-3.

The two-year-old rivalry between the two strong junior teams flared in the third period of the Maple Leaf Gardens contest. For the first two frames play was fast, wide-open and fairly clean —only two penalties were awarded. Then the fireworks came in the shape of four minor and two major penalties aside from a 4-goal splurge by the Majors.

Ray Hannigan was the key scoring figure with a triple effort, while Fleming Mackell, Eddie Sandford and Les Costello tallied the others. Montrealer Howie Harvey in the Irish nets was robbed of his fourth shutout when Walter Anatuk dribbled the puck past him late in the last canto.

A Tight Battle

At Hamilton, the first extra session game of the year was the result of a tight battle between the Indians and Tigers. Tied 1-1 at the end of regulation time, the overtime session proved more fiery than the previous three stanzas and three goals were blasted home, the Tigers coming from behind to gain the victory.

Dinning put the Tigers out in front in the first period but Robinson tied the count in the second and the last frame went scoreless. Then Zake rammed home a shot early in extra play to put the Indians ahead only to have Clary Shillington tie the count and Johnny Conick plunk home the winner.

Bill Flick tallied four goals to pace the junior Stratford team to its win in a game that saw only one penalty, that to Don Barrett of the home team for high-sticking in the middle frame. Arnie Kullman dented the nets twice, with George Robertson and Matt Mesich getting the others.

The score read 7-0 before Marlboros came to life with three goals. Frank Kent scored two and Howard got the other.

No games are slated for tonight.

Here are those handsome Sharpe Brothers, "Look" and "Be," adonises of the wrestling ring who will be on the card at the Hume Arena, Friday night. The boys as pictured above are just fooling around, getting in a little practice for the tough sessions ahead when one meets roughie Olie Olsen and the other tangles with Dutch Henry Piers. Mike and Ben are in excellent condition and ready and rarin' to go.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

The Army, Navy Air Force Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch 201 will take the Belleville intermediate hockey team under its financial wing, it was decided at a special meeting held on Tuesday night. A name for the squad has not been decided on as yet.

President Bill Dennis of the Belleville Hockey Association in announcing the decision of the vets to sponsor the bigger team, stated that the city hockey franchise will be retained by its former holders, the executive of the Belleville junior hockey club, but the intermediates would come under the aegis of the Belleville Hockey Association.

President Bill McKenna of the veterans' organization stated that Rex Young, his athletic committee chairman had informed him that action would be taken immediately to get the intermediate squad in action. McKenna further stated that the sponsoring club would co-operate to the fullest with the team and naturally it expected the same in return.

It was reported late today that the new management will be definitely selected within the next day or so, Frank Butler, who masterminded the Redmen of 1945 is mooted as manager while Rex Young will act as keeper of the royal purse. A coach as yet to be selected but the name of Les Shiels, of the Belleville Collegiate Institute staff, has been mentioned in connection with this job.

Vern Goyer, who has been doing a spot of hockeying with the Gananoque seniors in the Kingston City Hockey League, is reported to be coming back to the Belleville fold, while several other players, strange faces to Belleville fans, will likely be seen in action, now that some organized effort has taken place.

Nothing definite has been decided on a name for the team but they will wear the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans' crest on their sweaters. Please, Mister, pick out a short moniker like "Lions", "Bruins", "Bombers" or even "Redmen" again, just so that guy in the composing room who sets the heads won't come out again threatening us with a tommy gun.

The Army and Navy Vets have a strong organization, and should do well in their first venture in hockey. Rex Young, chairman of the Vets' Sports Committee has gathered a good gang of fellows with him and with co-operation with the Belleville Junior association the game should flourish here this winter.

It is reported that several outstanding senior puckists are anxious to come to Belleville and play — if jobs are available. And that's where business and industry can do their bit. Any openings, gentlemen?

The ace handler of youngsters, Don Penniston, coach of Hershey Bears in the American Hockey League, has one of the finest "kid lines" presently operating in professional circles. Paul Ronty, the pivot is only 18, while Mark Marquess, right wing, and Pete Babando, left wing, have just attained voting age. All three are up with the leaders in the scoring parade.

Roger Leger, Buffalo defence star who was voted the "most valuable" player in the American Hockey League last season, evidently finds National Hockey League goaltenders softer touches than the net-guardians in the A.H.L. Roger had a little difficulty getting started with Buffalo this season, but had no sooner been sent to the Montreal Canadiens when he started registering points.

A hockey article in the December issue of Esquire says that hockey fans flock to the rinks to see "bodies flung against the boards, heads dented neatly with flying sticks" etc. There is less foul play in hockey today than ever before in history and the game continues to set new attendance records. We still believe that the true fans prefers hard, clean hockey over the "blood on ice" affairs. Perhaps Esquire's board of experts, four of whom came from such widely-known hockey cities as Muskogee, Oklahoma, Nashville, Tennessee, Dallas Texas and Columbus, Ohio, haven't attended many recent games. We know they never went thirty years ago or they wouldn't have stated that Princeton's immortal, Hobey Baker, was a goaltender.

American Hockey League coaches put the accent on teamwork. Practically every goal is the result of a combination play in which the rubber is passed back and forth before being whipped into the net. Rare indeed is the solo effort of yesteryear, when a player would grab the disc, circle his net, dash up the ice to split the defence and score.

At the University of Minnesota they have taken action which we think might very well be copied across the length and breadth of the continent.

The University had the same trouble as the rest of us with the fabulous, elusive Mr. Kilroy. The legand "Kilroy was here" was chalked and written on innumerable buildings and class - room blackboards. Finally fed up with it all, the Minnesota Daily, the campus newspaper, conducted a funeral. After appropriate ceremonies, a tombstone was erected bearing the inscription "Kilroy is here."

We agree with a Cornwall writer it is high time that we buried Mr. Kilroy. The public infatuation with him is very much like the attitude of a young child, who draws a laugh from his elders with some funny remark and can't realize that it doesn't continue being funny when he repeats it a dozen times. Kilroy had his day, but that day has past. In his prime he brought an occasional smile to our lips, but the only thing to be done now is to inter him, decently and quietly.

BUYERS UNABLE TO FIND HOUSE

Portland, Ore., Nov. 21 —(AP) —A resident complained to City Commissioner Fred L. Peterson that she has been trying to sell her house for two years but hasn't had any buyers because they never could find her street, despite carefully worded instructions. The short avenue hasn't any name plates.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By HERB JONES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Twice weekly at an indoor pool on the shores of English Bay a score of eager youngsters go through their swimming paces under the direction of a man with an eye to Canada's sport future.

The man is swim coach Percy Morman and the future is the Olympics in 1948 and the British Empire Games, probably in 1950. At a snap guess right now Percy figures he's got at least 14 girls and boys — aged 11 to 18 — who are prospective Olympic material.

And Percy should know. He's trained so many Canadian champions he's lost count but admits the coaching of swimmers past and present who still have 40 Dominion marks on the record books.

In fact Percy has become such a water sport figure in these parts, it's hardly possible to talk swimming without thinking of the rotund coach. Kids flock to him to be taught. Officials admire him—so much so that when he tried to quit last year because of pressure of business, they pestered him until he came back.

Wednesday evenings and Sunday he takes time out from his butcher shop business to show "the kids" the art of the free-style, the breaststroke and the backstroke.

Coaching for the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club since 1932 — "just for the love of it"— Percy now considers Irene Strong, dark-haired 17-year-old breaststroke and freestyle artist, probably the brightest star he ever brought along. She holds all the major Canadian junior breaststroke records and the 40, 50, 200 and 220-yard senior breaststroke marks for the Dominion.

Recently Irene caused a sensation by doing the 220 breaststroke in 3:07.6 against the Canadian mark of 3:17.4 held by Joan Langdon, former Norman protege who now lives in Toronto. Excited officials said it might be a world mark. Though it turned out that it wasn't, Percy was far from down-hearted and said:

"Irene is getting better all the time. She'll swim two or three seconds faster than that before long. Sure she'll crack a world mark before she's through. You just wait and see."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You have been around. At least you have probably been around where a game of bridge was played. No doubt you have heard some of the words used by the players. So, I can speak freely.

This is what you must have heard: "Wodja open on?" or "Wodja wanna keep it open for?" or "Why dintcha drop me?" or "Why dintcha gimme another raise?" or "Why dintcha take me to game?"

Hand after hand. Deal after deal. The same ritual by the same players. It is either wodja wanna or why dintcha. If it is not why dintcha or wodja wanna, it is you shoodahad.

Partners using the cumbersome system will reply: "I had my two and a half" or "I had my one and a half" or "I had an extra plus" or "a bare two plus was all I had."

This could go on forever with these players. They use an honor trick table to determine what bids they can make. And honor tricks are not always accurate as to the number of tricks they produce.

In one hand, one and a half honor tricks may produce only one trick. In the very next hand, one and a half honor tricks may help give a half dozen tricks.

No such uncertainty exists in Horse Sense. We simply count one trick for each high card (ace or king or queen) and one for each short card. This tells us the exact number of tricks in our hand.

Each partner knows the basis in tricks for his first bid. For each additional trick he has, that partner can raise one in number. There is no guesswork. There is no doubt.

You have this hand:

♠A K 7 4 2
♥A Q J 5

You open with one spade and show five of your tricks. Your hand counts seven tricks. So, you have enough for two later raises. You can be sharp as a raiser.

Hollywood Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

British films, which are often different from the Hollywood product in mood, scope and type of story, and always in their stars and background, have been causing much discussion among American movie critics, producers and directors.

The consensus seems to be: "What's wrong with Hollywood?"

Bosley Crowther, New York Times critic, plunged into the discussion with this:

"We can indicate whether we want to see more of them (British pictures), whether we find a refreshing variety in the nature of their stories and their stars.

"Take 'Henry V' and 'Brief Encounter,' two decidedly contrasting films in dramatic content and expression — the first a sweeping and classical spectacle and the second an intimate drama on a modest personal theme. The general observation of the audiences has been that they are 'different' from anything that Hollywood does.

"Such specialized British pictures as 'Johnny Frenchman' (featuring Montrealer Paul Dupuis, on loan from the CBC) and 'The Raider' ('Western Approaches' renamed), too, open up vistas of live cinema that we might wish to be further exploited."

Hollywood producer Samuel Goldwyn has also put his blessing on the increasing popularity of British films in the United States. Although Mr. Goldwyn maintained that he spoke for himself only, his opinion may be a sign of the times.

He said he thought British films had improved because "most of all they have stopped trying to imitate us."

"The Notorious Gentleman," a J. Arthur Rank production just released in the United States, is calling forth reviews varying from rave to puzzled. The first are prompted by the pictures' excellent acting and complete lack of stereotype. The others are puzled because they find it hard to turn from the Hollywood formula of tailoring the part to fit the star to the British one of handing a star his part and letting him act it.

In this cause star Rex Harrison also to be seen in "Anna and the King of Siam," was handed the part of a heel and plays it dashingly, charmingly and with complete conviction.

AT THE BELLE — Outwitting poverty, in-law trouble, emotional adjustments and fear of the future, a courageous couple find happiness in "From This Day Forward," Joan Fontaine stars in RKO Radio's sensitive romance and Mark Stevens plays opposite her. Opening today at the Belle Theatre.

McCARTHY THEATRE—Dan Duryea and Ella Raines have singular roles in Universal's "White Tie and Tails", romantic action drama in which they are co-starred with William Bendix, opening at the McCarthy Theatre tomorrow.

AT THE CAPITOL — Robert Benchley and Vera Vague greet Conrad Janis, their under-age son returned from the war, in Columbia Pictures' presentation of the George Abbott production "Snafu", filmed from Abbott's hilarious stage hit and now showing at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program, "Rough Riders of Cheyenne," starring Sunset Carson.

In Manhattan

By FRANK HINDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 21—(CP)—Cautious enthusiasm greeted the launching of the American repertory theatre on Broadway this week.

Theatre-conscious New Yorkers long have postulated the need for a repertory company to supplement the annual crop of good, mediocre and bad new productions in this North American stage capital. But in the past they had to wait for such events as last year's visit from the old Vic company of London to demonstrate what could be done by taking drama out of the library onto the stage.

The new company, headed by Eva Le Gallienne, Walter Hampden and director-actress Margaret Webster, made three rather unusual choices for its first production—Shakespeare's "Henry VIII," J. M. Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," and Ibsen's "John Gabriel Borkman."

The Barrie play was the most successful of the revivals, with June Dupriez—a refugee from Hollywood's dreadful gamut of gangster's molls to jungle queens—scoring a personal triumph in the role of plain Maggie Wylie.

Miss Le Gallienne and Mr. Hampden lifted "Henry VIII" from the category of pageantry into reasonable absorbing theatre

The Ibsen play, gloomy even for Ibsen, was the most impressive drama of the three.

At worst, the company's first efforts were a success D'Estime; at best, the most courageous Broadway experiment in a long time.

Shaws "Androcles and the Lion," Sheridan's "School For Scandal" and a new play yet to be announced, are to be added later in the year.

Grace Note: The blaze of diamond tiaras dimmed the incandescence of nearby Times Square when the social register turned out for the Metropolitan Opera season opening. It wasn't worth the candlepower. A tepid performance of "Lakme," with Lily Pons in the title role, could be barely distinguished over the clamor from the mink-ruffled dress circle, but the occasion was so posh that the mediocrity of the business onstage passed unnoticed.

Katherine Dunham's "Bal Negre" was no end of fun. The Negro dance troupe presented a sizzling pot-pourri of West Indian, South American and plain American jive, sashayin through the Caribbean Islands and back to the jazz mood of the '20s—the Charleston, the Black Bottom, the Turkey Trot, the Bunny Hug and Ballin' The Jack.

Foot on the rail: Theatre district bars are doing a land-office business at intermission time these days. A tour of the mainstem plays is enough to parch a Carrie Nation: Helen Hayes' hit "Happy Birthday," Synge's "Playboy of the Western World" and O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh," are all set in their entirety in bars. "Anna Lucasta," Call Me Mister," "Dream Girl," and "Made in Heaven" all wander in the swinging doors before the final curtain. And tipplers like Elwood P. Dowd, the tosspot hero of "Harvey," are featured in a third category of plays—even though the audience never actually is taken into licenced premises. The Primrose Path pays off for playwrights.

C.N.R. Net Revenue Drops in October

Montreal, Nov. 21—Operating revenues for the Canadian National Railways System, all-inclusive, for the month of October amounted to $37,529,000. Operating expenses were $33,226,000. The net revenue was $4,303,000. In October, 1945, revenues were $36,631,000; expenses, $31,205,000; and net revenue $5,426,000.

To provide for the recent retroactive wage increase of ten cents an hour, October expenses have been charged with $2,600,000 and the aggregate with $7,800,000.

For the first ten months of the year operating revenues were $327,647,000; operating expenses $292,962,000; and net revenue, $34,685,000. The comparative figures for 1945 are: revenues $363,951,000; expenses $296,451,000; and net revenue $67,499,000.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER TWO

Like all quick-witted children, she had found public-school work sometimes boring. Even interspersed with museum visits and movies, gym and folk dancing and handicraft, there had been long, empty hours in school. But school only lasted from nine o'clock until three; there were Saturdays and Sundays, Christmas and Easter vacations, and the long midsummer freedom. Office work was different. From half past eight until half past five it was hard to do monotonous things in which one had not the slightest iota of interest, with a forty-minute break at noon that was spent in the company of older men and women with whom she had no natural affinity.

She worked in a long, bare loft furnished with desks, chairs, wastebaskets, and files. These articles and everything else in the room were of the cheapest possible description: watesbaskets, inkwells, wire letter holders, tall filing cabinets in blistered redwood, all of the commonest type. Each clerk kept clips, erasers, pencils in various little boxes or trays of his or her own selection; here and there a desk had a slender vase on it with a single chrysanthemum or red geranium in it. There were seventy-two desks in the room, with narrow aisles between them. There were no rules about order, and the aisles filled with crumpled papers and odds and ends of cardboard as the slow day wore away. In winter the air was heavy with the smell of cheap perfumes and powders, ink and graphite, dust and chalk, raincoats and radiator gas, and the odor of human bodies. In the hot, still days of spring and fall there were intervals when windows were open and everyone was conscious of the pleasantness of the season. But summer, to Jenifer Richie at least, was the unendurable time, summer with its cool foggy days, its whining afternoon winds, its moving currents of rubbish-filled air that piled blown papers on the window sills and covered the desk and chair surfaces with fine grit. Somehow life seemed hopeless, utterly without promise or possibility, when bright July and August lay upon the world.

Jennifer had been an employee of Tyrell, Jenks, and Simmons for more than a year. She had come in just before her seventeenth birthday, trembling almost to sickness in the excitement of taking her first job, unable to believe that any work she could do could possibly be worth the salary of eighteen dollars and fifty cents a week. Miss Griggs had given her a brief explanation of what she was intended to do; kindly Mollie Evans, from the desk that touched Jennifer's desk, had supplemented the information.

"You'll be sorting out the waybills and vouchers," Mollie had said, laying a plump freckled hand upon a disorderly heap of pink and yellow and gray invoices on Jennifer's desk. "You classify them, and maybe she'll expect you to enter some of them on the account sheets, and if you do, always take a trial balance; it'll save you an awful lot of fuss on Fridays when we make them up. Keep an eye on the girls' extending, too—you know, just a kind of look-see. Sometimes they skip a decimal point and there's the very devil to pay."

All this had been Greek to Jennifer, respectfully listening, but she had felt a passionate gratitude toward Mollie, for Mollie's instructions really did help her to get started, made is possible for her to go through the motions, at least, of coyping and filing and comparing and computing. Much of it after thirteen months was still Greek. She could go steadily on with it; she could be paid her salary without question every other Saturday, but she never in the least grasped what it was all about or why it went on at all.

Small firms sent in the vouchers, the waybills, and invoices, and the girls and men at the desks down at the other end of the room extended them. Extending meant that they computed from the price of one hammer the price of seventeen hammers, with sixteen and ten per cent discount subtracted, and duly marked this down for some small hardware merchant. Or they multiplied the cost of one gross of tubes of cold cream by the required nine cases at eight dozen per case, deducted the discount, sent the bill back to the drugstore proprietor and the duplicate on to Jennifer and her fellow clerks, who entered totals upon large, stiff sheets of multi-ruled paper, marked departments in red chalk, and filed innumerable papers in the cheap redwood cabinets whose drawers always stuck and whose wires were enternally jamming, demanding the services of old Tony.

To keep an eye on the girls' extending meant sometimes to glance at their computations, to see that twenty dozen safety pins at eleven cents had not been absent-mindedly set down at twenty-two dollars, or even two hundred and twenty dollars. When errors of this sort occurred Jennifer must identify the particular clerk who had made the mistake, and walk down the long aisle to lean over some head of brushed and ebullient curls to murmur," Miss Keith, is this right?"

Miss Keith, saved an embarrassing investigation and rebuke, would exclaim gratefully, "My God, a thousand thanks, Jen!" and proceed to convulsive flipping of papers and violent erasures. Jennifer's manner was so quiet, so respectful and sympathetic on these occasions that she shortly became liked in an unrecognized sort of way; she was never noisy, expostulatory, critical, pleased to find anyone else in trouble as many of them were. And yet they all felt her a sort of force, and before she had been many months in the office her superiors knew at least that she was having an appreciable influence on the other girls. There were prettier women in the office, and quicker ones, but little Miss Richie was a nice girl. Prompt and quiet and conscientious the detested Miss Griggs said she wished she had a hundred of her.

After the first few fluttered days Jennifer had settled down to chronic boredom. While she worked or listened to lunchtime gossip or went about carrying meaningless papers to men or women who would scrawl additional meaningless hieroglyphics on them, Jennifer dreamed. And especially she dreamed on a certain type of winter or early spring day when rain was steadily falling and wind drummed without like an orchestra, for the office was on the top floor of the big building and the roof was reinforced with tin.

To see the tall, dirty, uncurtained windows streaming with the clean rushing water, to hear the steady rattle of it overhead, to be adrift in a dim warm world of dangling lights and clicking typewriters—all this was strangly and soothingly soporific; Jennifer liked the office then, for it seemed to have lost its cheap, busy, glaring qualities and be like a great shadowy ship sailing toward some unknown port.

But these days came only occasionally, and for the most part there was only the long glare from the high windows, the clicking of typewriters, the smells of dust and insect exterminators and ink and rubber flooring. Boys came in with sheaves of papers, distributed them; girls said wearily, "Oh my God, look at this!" and got to work. Miss Griggs fastened on paper cuffs with elastic bands, gosiped in low tones with her favorites. When anyone came in from Mr. Pierce's office the group of girls clustered about her broke into fragments, Miss Griggs usually saving her face by warning them briskly, "Hurry about that, will you, girls? We've got a big day today."

To Mollie Evans' desk, as to some of the others, a pencil sharpener was firmly screwed. Jennifer went over there every morning and exchanged a few words with Mollie before settling down to the long grind of the forenoon. At twelve a shrill whistle brought every girl to her feet, stirred hunger pangs in Jennifer's stomach. She would take from a desk drawer the paper bag that contained her sandwiches, hurry with the others to the narrow iron stairway that led up to the roof, where there was a long bare room furnished with benches, lockers, lavatory, washbasins. On a table were two battered gas plates and a kettle; the girls could make tea or cocoa. On pleasant days they walked on the cindery, gritty roof and looked down at the city and the sharp fringe of masts at the piers and the spans of the bridges that were being built across the ruffled blue bay. To touch anything on the roof meant a disastrous struggle with oily soot afterward it was hard to get it off hands or sweater sleeves or skirts. But Jennifer liked to walk with due circumspection on the roof and feel the wind on her hot face and ruffling her loose waves of hair.

She had no intimate friends in the office she was the youngest girl there in more ways than one. Sometimes she looked wistfully at Mollie Evans, who was comfortably and unhurriedly engaged to be married. Dan was evidently wild about Mollie, but Mollie, laughing a great deal about it, wanted to put off all definite plans; she was having a good enough time as it was with Dan taking her to dances and movies; she did not like housework much.

Jennifer Richie could not imagine this state of mind; to love a man was to want to be with him always, to belong to him. Her very spirit swooned within her at the thought of what it would mean to be married to Sidney Borrows, to belong to him, to feel sure and secure of her place in the world of wives. Mollie could hold her man without the slightest effort; Jennifer wondered how she did it. Lots of the girls had sweethearts they discussed them casually. This one had broken an engagement with her young man and he was sore at her another always kept her sweetheart waiting.

"He gets crazy at me," said Lily Brooks. "We always miss the beginning of a picture and have to wait until it comes round again. But . . . I don't know, I just can't seem to help dawdling about last-minute things. He says we'll have a nice time fighting about it, once we're married!"

Little Jennifer Richie, in her shabby warm coat and knitted gloves, her dowdy flat hat and damp shoes, listened respectfully. She had nothing to say.

She considered Betty Slade her mother, although Betty was no blood kin at all, and in conversation with her Jennifer called her "Betty." Betty's years were thirty-five to Jennifer's eighteen; she was a small, compact woman who paid three dollars for an elaborate hair-do every Saturday morning, serving the children's lunch even while a yellow liquid dripped from some scores of tight-pinned ringlets over her forehead and neck. She usually had a date with some woman friend on Saturday night. She was paid thirty-five dollars a month for panitress service in a near-by school. Besides this income she received fifty dollars a month from her divorced husband for the support of Frances and Elinor. Frances was seven, Elinor six.

Betty had married Jennifer's father when motherless little Jennifer had been only three years old. Just widowed, bewildered and helpless, the man had turned for help to the brisk, self-confident, capable little neighbor's girl who had sometimes come in to help his wife with the housekeeping. Jennifer remembered little of this change and had learned from Betty very little more. They had lived in a place called Nevada City, in a white cottage covered with honeysuckle, with a windmill and trees in the back yard and a box with rabbits in it.

C.I.O. President Says Union Not Threatening Strike

Atlantic City, N.J., Nov. 21—(AP) — C. I. O. President Philip Murray said today the Congress of Industrial Organizations is "not threatening strikes" and is "not running around this nation with a club in its hands, threatening the people."

In a speech to the C.I.O. convention, Mr. Murray said to industry:

"Come on; be decent, be gentlemen, sit around the bargaining tables and let us arrive at mutually satisfactory wage agreement without resort to strikes. That is our position. It is not the attitude of the bludgeoned fist, threatening the nation."

Mr. Murray spoke after Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, had called for a "common war chest" of $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 to back any single C.I.O. union in a fight for higher wages.

Mr. Murray left no doubt the C.I.O. wage fight would be pushed, but he denied that it would "agitate inflation" or "jeopardize our economy."

"There are a lot of notions going around," he said, "that the C.I.O. is bent on engaging in widespread strikes. The C.I.O. wants to make a bargain. We want a fair deal. There is no threat of strikes in the offing. We want decent, straight, clean, honorable collective bargaining."

Heavy Floods, Gales Reported In Britain

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 21 — (CP Cable) —Gale warnings ringed Britain today, heavy floods were reported in various sections of the country and London had its first winter sleet.

The Thames valley was threatened with floods if the rains of last night and today continue.

The little market town of Bungay in Suffolk with a population of 3,098 was almost cut off and is likely to be isolated by tonight if the downpour persists. Threatened by the river Trent, the people in some suburbs of Nottingham were warned by loudspeaker trucks to lay in a supply of candles and food in case floods drove them to the upper storeys of their homes.

A cloudburst which hit London during the early morning rush hour forced traffic to a halt in several districts. The Thames, swollen by torrential rains during the night, now is nine inches above normal. At several points between Nuneham, Courtenay and Shillingford on the Berkshire side of the river New Abingdon, the river is over its banks.

The Air Ministry said the gale came from the Atlantic and moved slowly north over Ireland during the night.

23 Nazi Doctors Plead Innocent To Murder Charges

Nuernberg, Nov. 21. (AP)—Twenty-three Nazi doctors pleaded innocent today to charges of murdering hundreds of thousands of persons in cruel medical experiments.

Arraigned before a United States tribunal in the second Nuernberg War Crimes Trial, the defendants, headed by Karl Brandt, Hitler's former physician, leaped to their feet and without hesitation answered "not guilty" to a 17-page indictment read by the chief prosecutor.

Following the pleas, the trial was recessed until Dec. 9.

The arraignments were held in the same courtroom where Goering and other high Nazis were tried, beginning a year ago. The defendants displayed no emotion.

Herta Oberhauser, 35, was the only woman among the prisoners. Wearing a smart purple dress, she pleaded innocent in a sharp, clipped voice.

She was accused of taking part in brutal experiments to find a swift method of sterilizing millions of persons by means of surgery and drugs, "thousands of victims were sterilized and thereby suffered great mental and physical anguish," the indictment said.

Brandt showed no emotion as he was charged with experiments in sterilization, the effects of poisonous gases, and freezing tests in which the subjects were kept naked out of doors for many hours— and "screamed with pain when parts of their bodies froze."

Siegfried Handlocher, medical chief of the German forces, was indicted with others for cruel studies of muscle and bone transplantations.

Brockville Civic Officials Cleared In Lengthy Report

Brockville, Nov. 21 (CP) — A report of an investigation into 20 charges filed by a former councillor in connection with construction here of a sewer by a Kingston firm today exonerated A. D. Huether, town engineer, of any "inability or neglect or fraud, and collusion with the contractor."

The report, presented by Cecil D. Wight, assistant commissioner of works at Ottawa, also exonerated Mayor N. S. Cuthbertson, of Brockville, and Alderman A. C. Lachapelle, works chairman, of giving misleading statements to the council.

Mr. Wight was appointed to conduct the investigation by a provincial order-in-council.

Msgr. Webster Is Consecrated Auxiliary Bishop

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — In an age-old, brilliantly colorful ceremony, Most Rev. Benjamin I. Webster, formerly of Welland, Ont., today was consecrated Auxiliary Bishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Toronto.

James Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto officiated at the ceremony, during a pontifical high mass at St. Michael's Cathedral here, assisted by Bishop J. F. Ryan of Hamilton, and Bishop John T. Kidd of London.

Appointed to assist Cardinal McGuigan, Msgr. Webster was invested with his symbols of office —the mitre, shepherd's staff, pectoral cross and fisherman's ring.

The new bishop was born in St. Catharines, and served in parishes in Orillia, Toronto, Grimsby and Welland, from where he was appointed to the Episcopate. He is a graduate of St. Michael's College in the University of Toronto.

Most Rev. Francis P. Carroll, Bishop of Calgary, delivered the sermon at today's ceremony.

Because he will not be in charge of a See of his own, Bishop Webster will become Titular Bishop of Pafo — an ancient Diocese thought to have been in Asia Minor. He will serve in Cardinal McGuigan's stead when the latter is absent from Toronto, and will officiate at religious functions which call for a priest of episcopal rank, such as confirmations.

1,000 Wild Ducks Plunge Over Falls

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 21—(CP)—Caught in the clutches of one of the worst fogs here since last spring, an estimated 1,000 blue bill ducks plunged over the horseshoe Falls last night and by mid-morning the lower Niagara river was dotted with the bodies of dead birds.

More than half the number survived their plunge over the cataracts and William "Red" Hill, assisted by his brother rescued several carloads from the swirling eddies and liberated them in Dufferin Islands.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 21 (CP) — Mining groups and the industrials were lower in the early session on Toronto stock exchange today and the western oils had a minor advance. Trading moved at a quiet tempo and the turnover for the first three hours totalled only 573,000 shares.

Rush Lake and Pen-Rey became active at stronger prices in the early market and Donalda, after selling down to 1.22, recovered to 1.30 for a small net gain. Amalgamated-Larder, Buffadison, Madsen, Teck Hughes and O'Brien were down about 10c.

Noranda held a small gain and Smelters was slightly weaker. Mining Corporation, Golden Manitou and Normetal eased off.

The liquor, paper, food, steel and utility issues were the weak industrial groups. In the western oils Pacific Pete was active and firm to strong.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Nov. 21 —(AP)— The coal labor dispute continued to cast shadows on today's stock market.

Steels, rails and many industrials dipped fractions to four or more points after an active opening. Dealings then slowed as a little support arrived. Extreme losses were reduced in most cases near the fourth hour. A few gainers appeared.

Canadian issues were weak at midday. Distillers Seagram lost ⅞ and Hiram Walkers ⅜. Canadian Pacific eased ⅛ and Dome Mines and McIntyre were unchanged.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 21 (CP) — Cattle prices were steady on a dull market, up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Butcher steers brought $10.50-$12.50, heifers $12.25 down, a few boners $8-$10, butcher cows $8-$10, canners downward to $5.50 and bulls $8.50-$10.

Calves were steady $15 - $16 choice vealers with plain downward to $10.

Lambs were steady $15 good ewes and wethers, $14 bucks, $10 culls.

Sheep were steady with a few common to medium $4-$8.

Hogs were steady, dressed, Grade A $20.65, Grade B1 $20.25, sows $18-$18.25.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 60, calves 30, hogs 200, sheep and lambs 140. Unsold from yesterday were 800 head of cattle mostly stockers.

Winter Fair Officials Planning Bigger and Better Show in '47

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Their 1946 extravaganza of spine-tingling horsemanship and farm produce exhibits of every sort unanimously proclaimed an unprecedented success, Royal Winter Fair officials today were already planning a bigger, better 1947 edition — which may include pre-fair "elimination" contests at several Canadian centres.

The men who run the Dominion's biggest fair were reliably understood to have under long-range consideration a series of knockout tournaments for would-be stock and equine competitors—largest of which likely would be staged at Winnipeg — to insure that none but the best animals reach the crowded Coliseum.

Another plan which officials are pondering would involve enlarging the arena where horses perform to the fair's largest crowds.

Thousands have been turned away daily from the Coliseum's main arena, which can seat about 8,000 twice a day under the existing set-up. Officials believe as many fans would turn up as they could possibly accommodate.

All Records Broken

Crowds broke all records. There were no official figures issued to cover this year's event. But estimates ranged from an enthusiastic 700,000 total to an ultra-Conservative 350,000 with the latter figure well above any total old-timers could recall.

The consensus among expert observers was that stock seen here this year had never been equalled in a previous Canadian exhibit. T. B. Davlin, who judged the Clydesdales, gave it as his opinion the animals were the finest of their kind in the world.

Most observers were of the opinion that records were broken because Torontonians had not been able to go to large-scale show of this type since 1938 and were entertainment-starved.

The bulk of the visitors formed a typical city crowd—most of whom didn't know a binder from a bantam or an Ayrshire from an Airedale.

There was an atmosphere of carnival to the Fair, but it was a society show, too, with everybody who counts— from Governor General Alexander to the newest debutantes—there in white ties and ermine wraps.

Attractions Swell Crowds

Saturday— the Fair's biggest day—drew between 50,000 and 75,000 through the gates, closed at mid-afternoon with thousands still struggling to get in.

Canadian National Exhibition officials—whose best day in previous years was 271,000—already were wondering how they could handle the crowds expected to flock in when the C.N.E. re-opens next Autumn—if the fair is a criterion.

Specialized attractions swelled the crowd. A dog show and a cat show each lasted three days and drew a record number of entries and fans. Pigeon exhibits drew a select group of fanciers. Automobiles were on display; so were motor-boats, buses and farm vehicles of every type. Grain and seed exhibits drew growers.

But the big show remained the horses on display in the main arena. Highlight of the horse show as the sparkling performance of the Mexican cavalry team commanded by Maj. Humberto Mariles Cortez which rode to victory in all but one of the week's military events.

The crowd thundered its applause last night when the white-tunicked centaurs from South of the Rio Grande topped teams from the United States and Peru to take the G. Howard Ferguson trophy—closing night feature event.

May Seek Subsidy

No Canadian team entered the military contests this year and there were hints a government subsidy might be sought in order to send the Canadian Army back into competition next year.

Other equine stars were the hunters, draft-horses and five-gait hackney performers. Particularly spectacular were the hackneys with their drivers leaning inward at an acute angle to the ground while the vehicles' wheels showered the railbirds with tanbark.

The crowd got a thrill, too, out of the performance of a magnificent team of Belgian draft horses which won top honors for the Meadowbrook Farm of Rochester Mich., last night, galloping around the arena like a single 24-legged beast.

A grand parade headed by the U. S. cavalry team climaxed the fair's last session and as the last notes of "Auld Lang Syne" faded out many of the newly-made horseshow fans could hardly wait for next year's resumption.

Meantime, in the cattle and horse stalls outside the area, dealers were purchasing the prize-winning animals. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were estimated to have changed hands during the fair's closing days, both at auctions and in private deals. Poultry-dealers also did a roaring trade.

Many of the champions are expected to move to Chicago and United States competition for $100,000 prize money at the International Livestock show opening Nov. 30. Others were headed for the abbattoir, their day of glory over.

Communist Trend Not Discernible In American Zone

By DONALD DOANE

Frankfurt, Nov. 21 —(AP)— Military government officials and German politicians agreed today that American-occupied Germany shows no signs of turning politically red, or even pink, in next week's elections.

In numerous selections throughout Europe during the last year this southwestern section of Germany has stood out in bold relief as a comparative stronghold of conservatism.

Communism has gained no more than a toehold in the United States zone. Even the mildly leftist social democrats ran second to the middle of the road party, which calls itself variously the "Christian Democratic Union" or "Christian Social Union."

Those who keep their fingers on the German political pulse, do not expect any marked swing towards the left in the voting just ahead.

In the Nov. 24 balloting in the state Wuerttemberg-Baden, and the Dec. 1 voting in Bavaria and Greater Hesse, Germans will adopt or reject proposed state constitutions and choose state legislatures in what may prove the semi-final step in their progress toward self-government.

Nearly everybody agrees that the constitutions will be adopted overwhelmingly in all three states. Speculation centres chiefly on the comparative party votes.

Out of all the voting in Germany so far, the Russian zone of occupation was the only place where the communists gained a majority, and even there the edge was scant. In October's municipal election in Berlin, where all four allied powers share the rule, the social democrats decisively defeated the Soviet-sponsored, communist dominated socialist unity party.

Federal Marshals Serve Lewis With Contempt Papers

Summons to Appear Monday Accepted Without Comment

Washington, Nov. 22 —(AP)—Two federal marshals today served John L. Lewis with a summons requiring his appearance in federal court Monday morning to answer a contempt citation resulting from the soft coal strike.

Mr. Lewis accepted the summons in his private office "without comment," an aide reported.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough last night ordered Mr. Lewis to show why he could not be held in contempt for refusing to withdraw his contract termination notice — the signal which led to the walk-out of his 480,000 bituminous coal miners.

The two federal deputies went to Mr. Lewis's sixth-floor office a few minutes after he arrived at union headquarters from his home in nearby Alexandria, Va., where he had been in seculsion for 36 hours.

The marshals were with Mr. Lewis only a few minutes and then left.

The writ is another step toward possible clanging of jail doors on the U.M.W. chieftain. It directs him to appear before Judge T. Alan Goldsborough of the United States District Court Monday and tell why he did not honor an order to recall his contract "termination" of Wednesday night.

If Lewis fails then to clear himself of the contempt charge—possibly by calling off his "termination" notice or by showing that his stand is lawful — the next step will come Wednesday. On that day, Judge Goldsborough "with an advisory jury" will decide Lewis' guilt or innocence.

If convicted, the union might be fined and Lewis sent to jail, until he obeys the court.

The contempt citation was issued late yesterday. It was not served immediately because Lewis had gone to his home in Alexandria, Va., and it had to be served in the District of Columbia.

Associates of Lewis indicated then that there would be no difficulty about service — that Lewis would make himself available in Washington.

In the mine fields, tension mounted as the idle miners watched the struggle between their leader and the government. Two men were shot fatally in W. Virginia in the first major flare-up of violence.

Fear Protracted Stoppage

Railroads, steel mills and their customers, public utilities and other big users of soft coal began battening down for the worst—a protracted work stoppage in the 3,300 government-held mines.

A "brownout," to save fuel darkened the Capitol dome itself, while Republican and Democratic Congress members joined in demands for extraordinary measures. Some asked a special session of Congress but men close to President Truman said that was unlikely.

Neither Lewis nor his lieutenants gave any inkling of what he intends to do when he goes before Judge Goldsborough.

President Truman, still on vacation at Key West, Fla., likewise had nothing to divulge on the administration's plans for getting the mines back into production.

Over the country, this was the picture in brief:

Curtail Passenger Travel

The official industry organ "Steel" estimated lack of coal would drive poduction down to 50 per cent of capacity within two weeks. Republic Steel announced it would cut to 65 per cent, Youngstown sheet and tube to 60 per cent. General Motors reported it had only a 24-hour steel supply.

The New York Central Railroad said 165 of its passenger trains will cease operatings Monday. Other lines prepared heavy cuts in passenger schedules.

Stocks of industries most affected by the mine walkout led a slump in the New York market which brought prices near the lowest level since early 1945.

Some 10,000 of the 80,000 hard-coal miners, whose contract is not involved in the Lewis-Government fight, walked off the job in eastern Pennsylvania. A union official blamed it on a false report that Lewis had been jailed.

INCOME TAX HEAD

Frank H. Brown, who left a Canadian Bank of Commerce job in Toronto to join the government early in the war, has been appointed deputy minister of national revenue. He will succeed Fraser Elliott around the end of the year.

Ask Dissolution Wartime Housing

Ottawa, Nov. 22 (CP) — The Eastern Ontario Retail Lumber Dealers' Association last night passed a resolution urging dissolution of Wartime Housing, Ltd., which, the association said, was distributing large quantities of lumber "uneconomically and to the detriment of waiting veterans."

The lumber men also asked that "in future no priorities be given to any Crown company or government engaging in the building industry..." Wartime Housing, Ltd., is a Crown company.

Speakers said they believed irregularities and distributions problems arising out of "black market operations in lumber" would be eliminated if lumber controls and ceiling prices were removed.

The resolution will be sent to the Ontario Lumber Dealers' Association in Toronto.

The association elected H. J. Bertrand of Ottawa to succeed D. G. Anglin of Kingston as president. Other officers: Vice President, L. A. Wheeler, Kingston; Secretary-Treasurer, D. Kemp Edwards, Ottawa; Directors, H. Clarke, Prescott; G. E. Gomme, Almonte; Aurele Pilon, Hull, Que.; Axa Smith, Campbell's Bay, and Martin French, Ottawa.

WIND DEMOLISHES BUILDING

Stratford, Nov. 22 —(CP)—Wind of hurricane force demolished a partially completed cement block building belonging to Yundt Brothers and Yundt and McCann, on the St. Marys Road about a mile from city limits, today.

Husband and Wife Shared Apartment For Eleven Years Without Speaking

Philadelphia, Nov. 22 —(AP)—The story of a husband and wife sharing the same apartment for 11 years but not speaking to each other during that time was a matter of court record today.

It began in 1934, said Charles W. Whitney, vice president of the Petrol Corporation, in petitioning the State Superior Court to set aside a $175-a-month support order placed on him last May by a lower court.

At that time, he said in his petition, a woman and her young daughter came to live in the Whitney apartment at the invitation of his wife, Florence.

Whitney contended the two came into his household despite his objections. He further claimed that while the pair were in his home, his wife refused to accompany him to social functions which he regarded as important to his business connections.

The pair remained until February of 1945, he continued, and left only after an argument between the woman and Mrs. Whitney.

Both Whitney and his wife agreed that during those 11 years they communicated with each other only by leaving notes and through their 23-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Whitney said they ate meals together at home but did not speak. Her husband contended he ate his meals out.

The 52-year-old woman said she left the family home last February to enter a hospital for treatment and did not return because her husband ignored her.

In his petition, Whitney said she left home without cause, adding that he was voluntarily giving her $60 a month subsistence pending outcome of the appeal, which the court took under advisement.

NEVER USED OIL TO LIGHT FIRE SAYS EPHRAIM RAY

Mrs. Ray, Six Children Died by Accident Through Suffocation Or Burning Says Jury

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Staff Reporter)

Madoc, Ont., Nov. 22—In a low clear voice, his face lined with grief, Ephraim Ray, 36-year-old father and husband of the late Velma Ray and her six children who died in their blazing home here last Monday, told a coroner's jury Thursday that he did not use coal oil to light the fires in his house, nor had he ever used it.

The inquest ordered by County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan with Coroner Dr. S. R. Beatty presiding and Frank Gardner, representing the Fire Marshal's Department, Toronto present, was brief and featured Ray as the star witness. The jury after a short deliberation returned a verdict that "Velma Ray and the six children died an accidental death caused by suffocation or burning."

Examined by the Crown, Ray, who had sat through the probe with his head bowed on his chest and a handkerchief clutched in his hand hiding his face, told the jury of the early events prior to the tragedy.

Lighted Two Fires

"I got up at six o'clock on Monday," he testified, his voice low and tense. "My wife was awake when I went downstairs. I lighted the fires in the cook range in the kitchen and in the heater stove in the living room."

"What did you use to start the fires with?" asked the Crown.

"I took newspapers, kindling wood and hard wood," Ray replied.

"Did you use any coal oil?"

"I did not."

"What did you use in the living room stove?" he was asked.

"I used paper, kindling and hard wood the same as in the kitchen stove."

"Did you use any coal oil in lighting that fire?" the Crown queried.

"I did not use coal oil at any time and I have never used it to start fires", Ray answered.

Stories Not True

Certain newspapers had published stories that coal oil had been used by Ray in lighting the fires, Mr. Donnan told the jury.

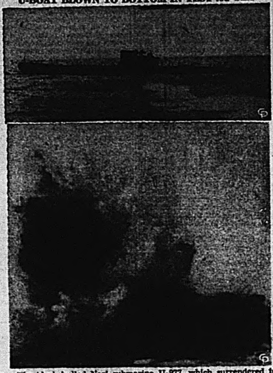
Crossman Opposes Standardization of British and U. S. Arms

London, Nov. 22—(AP)—Plans to standardize British and American arms will make Britain "an American aircraft carrier off the coast of Europe," the leader of a Labor party revolt against British foreign policy declared today.

"Our foreign policy will inevitably be dependent on the foreign policy of the power which manufactures our arms," Richard H. S. Crossman told the National Peace Council. "I believe we ought either to have military agreements with both the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. or with neither."

U-BOAT BLOWN TO BOTTOM IN TEST AT SEA



The black-hulled Nazi submarine U-977, which surrendered to American warships off the east coast at the end of the war, is blasted to the bottom by the U. S. submarine Atule at the end of intensive tests by the navy. At TOP, the standard steam-type torpedo is on its way, streaking toward the target. The U's back is broken and almost immediately after start of the blast. It heaves into the air, debris begins to fly loose, and the shattered wreckage is hidden by a towering mushroom of smoke and water which hides the end of the former undersea raider. The Nazi submarine was a mere oil slick on the water 10 seconds after the torpedo scored.

Many Rivers Break Banks But Danger of More Serious Floods in England Recedes

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 22 —(CP Cable)—Danger of more serious floods in England was receding today although the Thames River was continuing to rise in the wake of tremendous fall gales and nine successive days of rain which caused many rivers to burst their banks.

Many thousands of acres of farmland were under water and coastal shipping was disrupted with gale warnings still in effect.

Newspaper headlines reported an S O S from an unknown ship off the east coast with a destroyer standing by. Another ship, the 2,905-ton British vessel Baron Ailsa, which sent out on S O S during the night, was moving toward port in company with a tugboat.

The situation improved at Bungay, Suffolk, where the overflowing of the River Waveny threatened to isolate the town which is slightly higher than the surrounding countryside. Earlier, observers said the town looked like a "moated castle" and James Giles, hotel keeper, declared: "We were almost cut off. The common is a sheet of water. We shall just barricade ourselves in."

"Going down nicely," however, was the verdict of water board officials today.

Thames Breaks Banks.

Near Windsor, Buckinghamshire, the Thames broke its banks and rain squalls raised the swollen river's level more than a foot in the shadow of Windsor Castle, historic Royal residence.

At Catchet, Buckinghamshire, many fields were flooded and precautions were being taken against flooding by residents of

U. S. TRANSPORT PLANE IS FOUND, OCCUPANTS SAFE

Located About 500 Feet From Peak of 10,000-Foot Mountain in Alps

Paris, Nov. 22. (CP)— Orly Airfield announced tonight that the wreckage of an American transport plane sought sinec Tuesday had been found in the Alps near Interlaken, Switzerland. All the 11 persons aboard were reported alive.

The transport was found on a 30-degree slope about 500 feet from the peak of a 10,000-foot mountain, said a message from one of the search planes which was in direct communication with the grounded crew.

Orly Field said three persons were seen walking about the wreckage. A party of Swiss mountain climbers and American nurses and doctors left Interlaken for the scene of the crash, reported to be 13 miles southeast of that city.

The location announced indicated that the transport came down in the icy wastes of the Bernese Oberland, which is marked by three great peaks, the Jungfrau, the Finsteraahorn and the Aletschoorn. The highest, the perpetually snow-covered Finsteraahorn, rises 14,026 feet.

Air officers said a bomber

PALESTINE TRAIN SERVICE RESUMED AFTER 72 HOURS

More Than Half of Army Said Acting as Security Guards

Jerusalem, Nov. 22 (AP)—Train service in Palestine,, halted for 72 hours because of saboteurs' attacks on railroads, was resumed today, with more than half the British army combat troops in the Holy Land reported to be tied up as railway security guards.

A reliable source intimated that the equivalent of one division and one brigade had been diverted from other duties to patrol the tracks daily before resumption of service. Additional patrols tour the lines at night, though no night trains are in operation.

Railway workers quit work Tuesday in demands for additional security measures against mine attacks.

Haifa, (Reuters)—Heavy explosions heard here today had no connection with Terrorist activities but occurred during army manoeuvres south of the city, it was learned late this afternoon.

The explosions occurred at 10-minute intervals and gave rise to new jitters in this tense Palestine city.

PICKET LINES FORM AHEAD OF TIME AT NORANDA

Manager and Heads Of Departments Are Refused Entrance To Offices

Noranda, Que, Nov. 22. (CP)—Picket lines, formed nine hours ahead of zero hour, this morning blocked entrance to the huge Noranda mine here as a strike called by Local 688 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.) began at 7 a.m.

The Union, which claims a membership of 597 of the copper and gold mines 1,147 employees, called the walkout to enforce wage and other demands. A strike vote was taken Monday and decision to implement the vote was ratified at Union membership meetings Tuesday night.

Approximately 60 pickets massed at the mine gate last night at 10 p.m., although regular members of the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m., shift were permitted to enter the works.

This morning, when a group of company department heads, headed by Assistant General Manager R. V. Porrit tried to go through the picket line it was not permitted to do so.

There was some jostling, and Mr. Porrit was seen to fall to the ground. Whether he slipped or was thrown there could not be determined.

Mr. Porrit appealed to Noranada Police Chief J. H. Leblanc, who with two members of his force was at the gates, to try to get him through the lines, but the police chief replied it was not possible.

No Provincial Police officers were at the mine site.

(In Quebec City last night, Premier Duplessis announced he had ordered the Provincial Police to co-operate with Noranda-Rouyn authorities "to help maintain order, respect of law and public safety.")

Office workers were scheduled to report for work later this morning but some members of the picket line said they would be turned back. The office personnel has been instructed by the company not to try to force the picket lines.

Police Chief Leblanc, however, arranged with the picketers for permission for Mayor James A. Carter of Noranda, chief accountant at the mine, to go through if he so desires.

Picketers maintained their vigil as a cold, 25-mile-an-hour wind blew in this Northern Quebec district, and heavy snow began to fall. A small tent was erected at the mine gate and womenfolk of the Union members brought hot coffee for the men.

Seven Killed, Plane Hits Bus

Largest Crowd In Years on Hand For Nominations

M. Duff Given Acclamation As Utilities Commissioner

In one of the best attended civic nomination meetings held here in a decade, fifty-five aspirants for municipal offices placed their names before City Clerk Wilfred Holmes at the annual nomination meeting held in the City Hall this morning.

Four were nominated for the office of chief magistrate, thirty-two for aldermanic honors, eighteen for school trustees and one of public utilities commissioner.

An eleventh-hour surprise in the mayoralty field came when the name of ex-Mayor Glen Thompson was handed to the clerk. Other nominations were Mayor Frank Follwell, Alderman Harold Woodley and W. C. Mikel.

Morley Duff was given an acclamation to the office of public utilities when his name was found to be the only nomination for the office.

Chamber Well Filled

That interest in civic elections here is definitely on the upsurge was evidenced in the fact that for the first time in years the City Council chamber was nearly filled with aspirants to office and taxpayers. There was a decided hum of activity as proposers and seconders of those nominated moved about the chambers in intermittent periods of activity.

City Clerk Holmes promulgated the names of those nominated with their sponsors in what proved to be the largest nomination list in years as it slowly mounted in numbers.

Sharp at twelve o'clock when the last note of the city hall bell died away, the clerk declared the nominations closed.

Mr. Cliff Baragar, who was not a potential candidate for any office, was selected by the clerk to assume the chair for the brief addresses of any who wished to speak. Mayor Follwell, Alderman Woodley and Commissioner Duff addressed the gathering with ex-Mayor Glen Thompsos and Mr. Mikel being absent.

Glad to See a Crowd

The first to address the gathering Mayor Follwell expressed his pleasure at the attendance and increased interest shown in civic government. "It is the best I have seen in my six years of office," he said. "I think it augurs well for the future. Civic affairs are closer to the taxpayers than are those of Dominion or Provinical governments for it is your money that is being spent, and you should know how it is being done."

The mayor paid tribute to the Junior Board of Trade which is sponsoring a get-out-and-vote

SERVICES FOR 50,000 VETS IN NEW N. ONTARIO DISTRICT

Sudbury, Nov. 22 —(CP)— The new Northern Ontario district of the Department of Veterans' Affairs, whose headquarters have been established at North Bay, will provide services for at least 50,000 veterans in this district, Major R. W. Abraham, administrator, said last night.

Entire Diamond Wealth of Japan, Vast Hoard Found by U.S. Troops

By ROBERT E. GEIGER

Washington, Nov. 22— (AP)—Hundreds of thousands of cut diamonds — probably the greatest assortment ever assembled in modern times — is in the hoard which United States occupation forces uncovered in Japan.

Government officials said today the Japanese government collected the hugh treasure from the Japanese people as a desperate war financing measure. Apparently the intention was to sell the gems for foreign exchange and purchase munitions and raw materials.

A War Department announcement said the gems are valued at between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000. But experts with knowledge of the hoard said the army undoubtedly was speaking conservatively and of the New York wholesale price. In settings and in the possession of individuals, they said, the value would be far greater.

"They represent the entire diamond resources of the whole nation," Edward Henderson of the Smithsonian Institution told a reporter. "This undoubtedly is a situation unique in history. I know of no other time when virtually every diamond owned by every individual in a nation was assembled at one place."

The gems now are in vaults of the Bank of Japan in Tokyo. They were found buried and hidden in many places of the Japanese Empire.

It took two Americans, working with four Japanese, five months to count and classify them.

No famous individual diamonds turned up, and apparently none from the Japanese Crown Jewels. The three heaviest weighed a total of 100 carats. This compares with 106 carats for the famed Kohinoor Diamond of the British Crown Jewels.

Three to Seek Mayor's Chair

Trenton (Special) — Municipal elections in Trenton will take place on Monday, December 16th.

There will be three candidates in the field for mayor. The present Chief Magistrate, Harry Cory, will seek re-election. Kenneth J. Couch, President of the Chamber of Commerce, and partner in the firm of Couch-Newton, has announced that he will be a candidate for mayor, as well as Councillor Ross Burtt.

New candidates for council will include Clarence Saylor, Ed. Simmons, Charles Allore, Gerald Weaver, Sherman Graham and Claude Graham. All of these will be nominated on November 29th. and will stand for election. Present members of the council who will stand for re-election are Henry LaFleur, Norman Banfield, Victor Ryan and William Bradshaw, who was elected last summer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Walter Gainforth.

Optometrists Hold Monthly Meeting

Optometrists of this district held a dinner meeting at the Queen's Hotel on Wednesday evening, which marked the first of a series of such to be held monthly.

The guest speaker for the occasion was Mr. Fred Attridge of Toronto, president of the Ontario Optometrical Association, well known to all members of the profession through his extensive and prolific activities in this capacity. Mr. Attridge in his talk outlined organizational procedure for this and similar lecture and study groups being sponsored throughout Ontario by the association. He, as well, gave a very comprehensive report on the growing public interest in the extensive field of industrial optometry and optometrical surveys of Ontario school children.

These monthly meetings will be conducted throughout the year at the various centres represented, with the next to be held at Picton.

Optometrists present were: Mr. Fred Attridge, Toronto; Mr. Ron McPherson, Napanee; Mr. Keith Hadley, Trenton; Mr. G. A. Powers, Picton; Mr. E. A. Grubin, Picton; Mr. T. Asselstine, Kingston; Mr. H. Hayward, Kingston; Mr. E. MacMillan, Kingston and Mr. J. A. McFee, Mr. R. M. Mitchell, Mr. S. C. Rose, Mr. N. E. Edwards, Mr. G. S. Wonnacott of Belleville.

Cutter to Aid of Ship Wallowing in Ocean

New York, Nov. 22 (AP)—The United States coast guard reported early today the cutter Campbell was proceeding to the aid of the 7,176-ton cargo ship Theodore Parker which is wallowing in the North Atlantic 340 miles southeast of Argentia, Nfld., with its engines dead.

The coast guard said those aboard the Parker, which is owned by the Agwilines, Inc., and which was en route from Bremerhaven to Portland, Me., were in no immediate danger, adding that the cutter was expected to reach the vicinity of the vessel at about 4 p.m. E.S.T. today.

Another cargo vessel, the Rufus W. Peckham, is standing by about 40 miles from the Parker, the coast guard said.

Public Urged To Post Yule Mail Early

Proclaiming the slogan "Mail Early for Christmas" the Belleville postmaster, J. Waddell, announces that all local Christmas mail should be posted by December 18 and proportionately earlier for out of town delivery.

There will be no mail delivery on Christmas Day this year, and letter carriers will enjoy their Christmas at home.

Final date for mail to the United States is announced as December 9. Parcel rates to the U.S.A. are as follows: Up to 8 ounces, one cent per ounce with a three-cent minimum; from 8 ounces to 10 pounds, 14 cents per pound; between 10 and 15 pounds, $1.75 the parcel.

Customs requirements are: Parcels up to 8 ounces, enclose a customs declaration or invoice; 8 ounces to 15 pounds, non-commercial, affix a customs declaration; 8 ounces to 15 pounds, commercial, affix a customs declaration and enclose an invoice.

Obituary

DR. M. STRATTON
(Napanee)

Napanee, Nov. 22 — Dr. C. Milton Stratton, one of the oldest practising members of the medical fraternity died in Kingston General Hospital Tuesday following a long illness. Dr. Stratton had been active in his profession until the time of his last illness, and he was widely known throughout the town and district.

Interested also in municipal affairs he served on the town and county councils for 12 years. He resigned as reeve of Napanee at the end of the 1944 term.

He also served as MOH for the Township of Richmond and during the First World War examined a large number of recruits for active service.

He was a member of the Conservative party, a past master of the Masonic Lodge and a member of Grace United Church.

He is survived by his wife the former Daisy Tucker.

The funeral will be held this Friday afternoon.

Interment will be made at Riverview cemetery.

MRS. CORDELIA E. DINGLE
(Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Cordelia Elizabeth (Cole) Dingle, 1529 Bathurst Street, Toronto, died in the Western Hospital, in that city on Thursday. She was the wife of the late Prof. W. H. Dingle, who was the organist at Bridge Street Church and Director of Music at Albert College gor a considerable time some years ago. Her parents were the late Col. and Mrs. Cole of Brockville. Old friends here will regret to learn of her death.

Surviving her are one son, Guy E. Dingle of London, Ontario, and one daughter, Dorothy, Toronto.

Interment will take place at Brockville on Saturday afternoon.

DONALD WILSON THOMSON
(Bancroft)

Donald Wilson Thomson of Bancroft died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday after an illness of eight months' duration. He was a patient in the hospital for six weeks.

Born at Tweed the late Mr. Thomson was in his 77th. year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thomson. All his life was passed in North Hastings. He was a member of the United Church at Bancroft.

Surviving him are three sons, Robert of Bancroft; Frank of Capreol, Nipissing District, and George of Bancroft; one brother, Frank Thomson of Belleville. His wife, the former Sarah Burworth, died some time ago.

The body was forwarded today to Bancroft from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street.

Harry Gilbert Dies at His Home

Harry Gilbert. Morris, New York, retired salesman-engineer for the Standard Oil Company, died at his home on Monday night, according to information received in the city today.

Mr. Gilbert, a prominent Rotarian, was known in the city and for a number of years spent the summer at Salmon Lake, Limerick township.

Well-known in Rotary circles, the late Mr. Gilbert was a familiar figure at the Rotary Club luncheons here where he was always a popular guest. He was also well acquainted with members of the Trenton Rotary Club having attended several of their meetings during his stay in Canada.

Council Asks Engineering Firm To Give Estimate on Incinerator

The engineering firm of Meadows and Critoph will be retained by the city to submit an estimate on the approximate cost of the incinerator which has been proposed erected, it was recommended by members of city council at their regular committee meeting Thursday evening.

The required information is to be obtained by the engineering firm in time for adequate publicity in connection with the question which is to be submitted to the electors at the forthcoming municipal election. At that time ratepayers will be asked whether they are in favor of the construction of an incinerator. Maximum fee which is to be allowed the engineering firm for their work is one per cent of the estimated cost of the incinerator.

On Cost-Plus Basis

Construction of the public lavatory now being built on the market square will be on a cost-plus basis, it has been decided by council, with Fred Elgie, local contractor acting as the supervisor, working under the direction of city engineer Charles Mott.

In committee meeting Thursday night councillors recommended that Mr. Elgie be employed to carry out the work of building the lavatory on the basis of actual cost plus 15 per cent for supervision, use of tools and equipment. Rate of wages to be paid workers was specified in the recommendation.

Application of Halloran Brothers for permission to install gasoline pumps at their recently erected body, fender and paint shop on Canniften road, was referred to a special committee of Aldermen Trudeau, Tice and Harvey, which is to report to council on the matter.

Council approval was given to the application of John J. Whelan for permission to construct an entrance to his new building on Victoria Ave., on the condition that the entrance be removed, if at any time council so requested.

Two Units Required

A contract for two hydraulic units to be used in conjunction with the snowplow on the city sidewalk Case tractor, was recommended given to Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corp., the equipment to be delivered in time for use this season.

That council requires more information regarding police court accounts before they will be passed was seen in a recommendation calling for the names of cases heard being included in each monthly report. The recommendation also called for the return of the October account with the request that police court case names be added.

The public utilities commission will be requested to consider moving of hydro poles on West Dundas Street in the vicinity of the Devil's Elbow, farther from the roadway. The request presumably arose as result of the frequent traffic accidents which have been reported at this particular district.

New Lights Ordered

Three new street lights were ordered for Everett Street between Henry and Moira Streets, while an additional street light was recommended for Wallbridge Road in front of the Keegan property. Part of Lot 9 at the corner of Wilkins and Sidney Streets was recommended sold to Fred G. Telford, Jr, for $25, while a committee of Aldermen Hyde, Harvey, Allin, City Engineer Charles Mott and Mayor Frank S. Follwell was appointed to investigate and report on the Frank Street C.N.R. crossing.

Absorbing Talk On "Women" Heard By Life Underwriters

Meeting for their monthly luncheon in the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday, members of the Life Underwriters' Association heard with keen interest an address by Dr. R.M. Anderson who was guest speaker on this occasion. The meeting was in charge of the Prudential Life Insurance Company and Mr. B. Ogilvie introduced the speaker to the Association.

The subject of Dr. Anderson's absorbing talk was "Women" and he introduced his theme by quoting the aphorism "The Women, God bless them; we can't live with them and we can't live without them." Dr. Anderson said he would endeavour to show why at times it was difficult to live with them and how the man of the house can view their vagaries with greater understanding.

Compared to woman, man is a very simple organism. Women, on the other hand represent a very coplex nature, complicated physically, psychologicaly, mentally and in the endocrine organs. A woman's physical make-up and routine periodically bring about psychological and mental disturbances which react not only on her own well-being but on the harmony of the whole household.

Dr. Anderson discussed new discoveries which bring about relief that is often most dramatic and it is a gratifying experience to physicians. Such recent developments in medicine enable women to approach their own particular health problems without apprehension, confident in the knowledge that much suffering and mental stress is now known to be needless.

At the conclusion of Dr. Anderson's address appreciation was expressed by Mr. Harry Sager for the very enlightening discourse.

During the business of the meeting, Mr. Don Williams, president was in the chair. He drew the attention of members to the fact that Belleville Association ranked high in the membership campaign and asked all to cooperate in helping this district secure the trophy.

Mr. Jim Anton acted as song leader and the accompanist for the occasion was Mr. Leo Riggs. The members were further honored in having Mr. Riggs contribute a piano solo. He chose the popular Chopin "Polonaise" and gave a most skilful and moving interpretation of this masterpiece.

The thanks of the Association was conveyed by Mr. Don Williams to Mr. Riggs for his part in the success of the meeting.

Blind Operators Man Switchboard

Capetown, Nov. 23 —(CP)— In the Cape Province, the well-know Worcester school for the Blind has a new telephone exchange. The exchange serves a dual purpose—it provides communication to all departmens of the school, and also a "live" medium for training blind switch board operators.

The exchange has three lines and 20 extensions and is claimed to be the only one of its kind in South Africa.

Eight Polish Veterans Arrive For District Farms

Farms in the Bay of Quinte district will mean home for at least 12 months for eight Polish war veterans who Wednesday afternoon detrained at Belleville for placement on farms in the immediate area. The eight Polish veterans were from the first contingent of 4,000 Polish agricultural workers who will come to Canada.

Acting manager of the Belleville employment office stated that three of the veterans went to Prince Edward farmers, while the others were destined for farms in the Hastings district.

According to officials here the Polish veterans were a fine type of men, ranging in age from 25 to 45 years. All had seen service with the Allied forces against the Germans.

The veterans were met at the station by local employment officials and taken to the employment office where particulars were obtained. One of the Polish party with the rank of 2nd lieutenant, acted as interpreter for his comrades who could not speak English.

According to contracts the Polish veterans will work on farms in Canada at least for a two-year period, the first twelve months of which is to be with the farmer to whose homes they were first received. Officials pointed out that additional Polish veterans may come to this district if other applications from district farmers are received.

Concurrent Sentences Given Sidney Farmer

Concurrent sentences of six and three months, respectively, were given by Magistrate T. Y. Wills to Floyd M. Wood, Sidney township farmer, when he appeared in county police court Thursday afternoon on charges of attempted car theft and of theft. The sentences will run concurrently with a six months' sentence awarded by Judge Madden in county court on Wednesday when Wood was found guilty of theft of a coat and camera.

In police court Thursday Wood also was convicted on three charges of property damage and was ordered to make restitution, or, in default, will serve 14 days consecutive to the six months' term given on the previous charge.

Charges against Wood resulted when he was apprehended following the report of a series of parked autos having been entered last June.

campaign. "The Board is not sponsoring any candidate, merely an effort to get as many to the polls as possible.

He felt that with the increased interest there should be a public meeting for candidates and the taxpayers held this year. He also suggested a second public meeting so that the people could hear the two by-laws which will be placed before them on election day, discussed. One was the public incinerator and the other the expenditure of $25,000 for land for industrial purposes.

Incinerator Information Early

Council on Thursday night, he said, had recommended that the services of Critoph and Meadows, planning engineers be retained with regard to the incinerator. All facts, regarding costs and other information he said would be placed before the taxpayers at least seven days prior to election.

The Industrial Commission, he said, had always worked hard and had been faced with many problems, especially that of securing land for new industrial sites. Industry, he pointed out, does not want ten acres but land ranging from 150 to 200 acres.

The fact that he had been proposed for office by two members of his council bespoke their faith in him, he concluded, urging all to get out and vote no matter who their candidate might be.

Eye to Economy.

Noting that he had been an alderman for the past four years, Alderman Woodley stated that it had been his ambition for the past two years to serve the city as its mayor. He had been approached last year, but declined because he thought a mayor should have a two-year term.

If elected, he said, he would legislate for the advancement of Belleville with an eye to economy. "I have no intention of making promises knowing full well that they cannot be carried out. However, this does not mean that I have no plans for the future welfare of the city. My platform will be action, not promises."

Alderman Woodley stressed that first and foremost in his program would be the housing situation for veterans and others. Promises were made to the veterans in 1944-45, but now that they are home they have no place to live. "As a veteran of the war of 1914-18 I feel that I am in a better position to understand the returned man's problems."

Will Ask for Inquiry.

He intends, if elected, to ask for a thorough investigation of the Industrial Commission, as he felt the city was losing industries it should have.

"As to economy," he said, "I do not mean that we should stop spending if the advancement of the city is at stake. What I mean by economy is a discontinuance of the waste such as upwards of $1,000 for an excursion to Vancouver with no report to council of the convention, and $106 of your money for a foot race in Cornwall."

He urged all who were eligible to get out and go to the polls on election day.

Mayor Follwell in rebuttal said that inasmuch as an investigation of the Industrial Commission is concerned, Alderman Woodley sat on the Commission for two years and he should know what was going on. "He apparently didn't grasp the facts," he said.

Legitimate Expenses

Replying to the statement of Alderman Woodley regarding the trips to Vancouver and Cornwall, the mayor stated that all expenses accrued from these journeys were legitimate. "In my own business I sacrificed from five to six times the expenses I received and I was happy to do it. Unless we advertise this city it will not grow and if it does not grow then business stands still and so do I. It was good for the city and the merchant."

Regarding the Cornwall footrace, Mayor Follwell related how he travelled all night and got a few hours sleep. "I sacrificed my time and won the race," he said. "The publicity from coast to coast that this city received over the contest was invaluable. The cost of $106 was the best $106 the city ever spent."

Turning to industry, he said that in the loss of the late Owen Herity the city lost the best industrial commissioner it ever had. "If the late Mr. Herity had received all the support he should have had this city would have been far better off today industrially than it is"

New Industries Locate Here

The Commission, he pointed out, had had a good year and many new industries had come to the city. Workers have a good job and many local firms are expanding. The housing situation is bad here and that is known by everyone. "I know all about it and have spent many days and many nights trying to alleviate the situation."

Commissioner Morley Duff expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred on him on his acclamation to office. He asked the public to be patient with the Public Utilities Commission as it was faced with many problems one of the chief being lack of materials. The commission, he said, was trying to do the best it could with a great lack of equipment.

BAHAMAS ADOPT SECRET BALLOT

60-Year Struggle Ends as "Open Vote" Abolished

By ETIENNE DUPUCH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Nassau, Bahamas —(CP)— An order by Governor Sir William Lindsay Murphy putting into force an act adopting the secret ballot throughout the Bahamas effective Oct. 15, has ended one of the longest political struggles in the colony's history.

Nearly 60 years ago a group of Nassau merchants petitioned the House of Assembly that the secret ballot replace the antiquated "living voice" system in parliamentary elections, under which the colony's population — 85 per cent Negro — were required to state publicly the candidate of their choice. The petition was buried in committee.

Abuse of the open vote system became prevalent as some employers resorted to open bribery or persecution of employees for years after an election. Meanwhile other petitions, presented from time to time, were rejected by the Assembly without the formality of referring them to a committee.

By 1939 election abuses had become so flagrant that Governor Sir Charles Dundas sent a message to the House asking for adoption of the secret ballot. The message met bitter opposition and was allowed to rest in committee until the Governor threatened to dissolve the legislature until the secret ballot was adopted.

As a compromise measure, the house granted the secret ballot temporarily in the colony's chief island of New Providence, where it was made permanent three years later. Members claimed that the Out Islands—which elect 21 members to the 29-seat Assembly — had no suitable machinery for the secret ballot and suggested that New Providence should try the system on an experimental basis.

Experiment Successful.

The experiment proved successful. Elections in New Providence were orderly, in contrast to former years when drunken men loitered about the polls and agents for the candidates moved among the voters openly bribing them.

After a riot in Nassau in June, 1942, in which three natives were killed in a demonstration by laborers in protest against their wages of 89 cents a day, the Duke of Windsor, then Governor, appointed a royal commission which included among its recommendations the suggestion that the secret ballot be made general throughout the Bahamas.

An effort by the House to head off the commission's work by appointing an investigating committee of its own was blocked by the Duke who sustained officials refusing to testify before the committee.

The question came up in the House of Commons in London and a parliamentary mission under Capt. Peter Macdonald was sent to the West Indies. The mission reported unfavorably on the open ballot system and was upheld by the Colonial Secretary Oliver Stanley who interviewed Bahaman leaders opposing the change.

Only when the British Commons threatened to suspend the colony's constitution did the Bahamas Assembly capitulate and the bill was passed unanimously with a large number of members absenting themselves from the chamber.

Tea and Bazaar At Trenton Held In Yuletide Setting

Trenton —(Special)— A typically Yuletide atmosphere greeted all who attended the tea and bazaar on Wednesday afternoon in the church parlors under the auspices of Group 1 of the W.A. of Grace United Church.

The color scheme was carried out in blue and silver with silver garlands touched with red poinsettia. Candlelight fell indiscriminately upon various winter scenes. Even Santa Claus was there! Each booth was individually decorated, arched in pine, centred with clusters of bells and illuminated by blue lights.

The main tea table was enticingly attractive with its hand crocheted lace cloth, centred by a silver bowl of pine cones and red and silver poinsettia. On either side stood tall white and blue tapers in silver holders. The decorating was in charge of Mrs. Harold Jeffrey and Mrs. J. Pinch.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. H. Jeffrey and Mrs. W. Bowen.

Tea hostess and convener, Mrs. J. Pinch.

Serving at the small tables were Mrs. R. White, Mrs. W. Kirk, Mrs. H. Gibson, Mrs. G. Huycke, Mrs. O. Lewis and Mrs. C. Johnston.

Mrs. O. A. Coutts and Mrs. W. Jones presided at the silver tea services.

Mrs. Bell replenished the main tea table.

The babies' wear booth was under the supervision of Mrs. Milligan, who was also the knitting convener.

Mrs. P. Robertson was in charge of the attractive handkerchief stall.

Co-conveners at the apron and fancy work table were Mrs. S. Humphrey and Mrs. C. Shaw.

The "Corner Store" was in charge of Mrs. T. A. Smith and Mrs. C. Leach.

The home-baking table in charge of Mrs. S. Bowden, Mrs. D. Bennett and Mrs. Ackerman respectively, was well laden and was a most popular resort.

Mrs. H. Sager was kitchen convener, assisted by Mrs. V. Carswell and Mrs. C. Brown.

Piano solos were rendered by three children of the church, namely Walter Bowen, Beverley Shaw and Lorraine Topping.

Guests at the tea had an opportunity of purchasing their Christmas cards at an attractive stall under the auspices of the Young Peoples League of the Church.

The treasurer reports that the proceeds of the afternoon were very gratifying.

Communism Threatens Canadian Freedom Says Hon. G. Doucett

Kemptville, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Canada's "greatest heritage"—her freedom—is being assailed by Communists who "do not smell any better because they call themselves Labor-Progressives," Ontario Highways Minister Geo. H. Doucett said last night.

He was addressing a banquet given for Grenville county cheese producers by Stanley J. Sanderson whose father, the late J. A. Sanderson, started the annual practice many years ago.

"We have a Communist party in Canada — and they do not smell any better because they call themselves Labor-Progressives," Mr. Doucett said. "Where do you find them? Wherever there are strikes . . . they are potential fifth columnists, a nuisance in time of peace and a menace in war, opposed to the national way of living."

Communists were in favor of "every crackpot scheme which may get them something for nothing." They were "an outstanding success as agitators and in attempting to stir up strife in their adopted country."

Canadian pioneers had built a system under which the government served the people instead of becoming their master. They had not compromised the freedoms they believed were essential.

"Their hands forged this fine heritage we enjoy. There is no reason this country should depart from those principles . . .

"Dictatorship is foreign to our make-up. The time has come in Canada and in this province for us to demonstrate to the whole world that we need no government crutch to work out our own destiny."

The minister said the development of Ontario's pulp and paper industry since the Progressive Conservative government was elected in 1943 was "a sound example of natural resources, private enterprise and government leadership" working hand-in-hand.

Forests were part of Ontario's "very outstanding resources" and he hoped the time was approaching when the pulp and paper industry would be greatly expanded.

New forest development agreements had been reached and expansion of the industry proceeded. The program had brought formation of two new towns—Marathon and Terrace —and rebirth of "virtual ghost towns" such as Espanola and Sturgeon Falls.

Midnight Curfew Slows Tempo Of Night Spots

Montreal, Nov. 22 — (CP) — The tempo of Montreal's night life was slowed today by a no-dancing-after-midnight edict and the town's reputation as having Canada's gayest night life appeared in for a little revision.

From police director Fernand Dufresne came notice that he had dug up a long-forgotten city ordinance that night clubs, dance halls and so on stop all dancing and entertainment sharp at midnight. And the law would be enforced.

A police spokesman said the change was to give people in the neighborhood of night spots a chance to sleep. But it marked a continuation of a closing in on the all-night pleasure privileges that night-clubbers had enjoyed for decades.

Two weeks ago police cracked down on cabarets where all-night drinking trade flourished. Instead of dawn, they were told they'd have to stop serving drinks at the legal 2 a.m.

The new order banning post-midnight music-making creates the anomaly of patrons being permitted to continue drinking in night clubs till 2 a.m.—but without floor show, dancing, or other entertainment. The liquor-serving hours are set by provincial law and the city police have no jurisdiction other than to enforce the closing hour set by Quebec.

Just to show they meant business, police hailed to police stations half a dozen cabaret managers who chose to ignore the new ordinance. Their names and cases were entered on police blotters and formal charges were scheduled to be laid today.

Some managers apparently were hopeful they would be able to get by with paying fines once or twice a month. Some of them said that for years they have received a summons every week for violating the Sunday no-dancing law, and each time had merely paid the fine and continued their Sunday dancing.

AIRPLANE DAMAGED

Campbellford, Nov. 22—(CP)—Two men—pilot and passenger—escaped with bruises and a shaking up late yesterday when their light airplane crashed shortly after taking off from a farmer's field 60 miles west of this eastern Ontario town.

The pilot was Earl Hoffman of Havelock and Frank Brown of Campbellford was the passenger. The Fleet aircraft had taken off just a few minutes before it struck some trees and crashed, the machine being badly damaged.

Operation Delayed, Cancelled

There is no evidence, said Prime Minister Attlee the other day in the British Commons, that German forces ever left harbor as a fleet to invade Britain. That answers reports and rumors dating back into late summer and early autumn of seven years ago. Mr. Attlee said that his statement was made on the basis of captured German papers and of questioning of Nazi prisoners.

The revelation given by the Prime Minister is one of the most interesting to come from facts which have hitherto not been made public.

Such was the futility of German planning of "Operation Sea Lion" as the Germans called the contemplated project. Everyone recalls those momentous days of August and September of 1940 when the Hitlerite forces after having driven through the Low Countries and France, occupied territory on the Channel which would have been the starting point had the enemy ever made the attempt.

Some time later stories came through of the possibility that the enemy had tried and failed and there were reports that German bodies had been floating in the Channel.

The German Luftwaffe attempted during the weeks of the late summer of 1940 to batter the Royal Air Force from the skies. That was to be a preliminary step. Hitler had found himself up against a check to his sweep over West Europe. Prime Minister Attlee said that "if he (Hitler) was to avoid a prolonged war ... he had to find means of compelling Britain to abandon the struggle. The military situation resulting from the fall of France seems to have encouraged Hitler to believe that Britain would be ready to accept a compromise peace." So he began th eplanning for invasion and ordered that the plan be pushed forward as a threat to supplement the peace." So he began the planning for into be adopted if that offer should fail. Mr. Attlee said that until this time Hitler had not done any long distance planning for invasion apart from naval plans which had been elaborated since November, 1939. In July 1940 Hitler ordered planning to begin for "Operation Sea Lion." On July 16 Hitler's directive said that he had decided to prepare a landing operation against England because England showed no sign of coming to terms. The preparations for the entire operation were to be completed by mid-August.

It is said the German leaders were apprehensive of the proposed plan, fearing the Royal Navy and so the Luftwaffe was given the job of crushing the R. A. F. and foiling the Royal Navy from attacking a landing force the enemy planned. The air assault on Britain failed and Hitler postponed the contemplated invasion five times between August 1940 and the spring of 1942. Hitler showed little enthusiasm for the undertaking, Mr. Attlee said. After the spring of 1942 he seemed to have given up the idea of attempting the undertaking.

The Royal Air Force had blasted harbors along the coast of France in the summer of 1940 when the Germans were embarking in barges but there was nothing to show that they ever left harbor as a fleet to invade Britain. There were German barges which tried to escape from French harbors where they were bombed by the R. A. F.

These were the days when Britain revealed herself in all her courage and strength of the justice of her cause.

Pacific Islands' Loyalty

Of all the defeats that Japan suffered in the World War, none was more complete morally and materially than that she sustained in the Pacific Islands. She started the war in one of them, Pearl Harbor in the north, and the long arm of her aggression was halted at Guadalcanal in the south. The official story of the Pacific Islands at war is now told in a booklet entitled "Among Those Present," prepared for the United Kingdom Colonial Office by the Central Office of Information in London published by His Majesty's Stationery Office.

Although the motion that the Solomons could be defended against Japanese attack was regarded as impossible, no suggestion of abandonment was ever raised. Responsible officials stayed and went underground and a game of hide and seek required ceaseless vigilance and courage was played until re-occupation was possible.

In this plan the natives played their full share, displaying a fanatical loyalty to the cause. The enemy invaded their country and they lived in his midst never doubting that the day would come when those of them who survived would be driven out. They did not speak to him unless they had to: they never co-operated in any shape or form that would do harm to Britain's cause. They ran innumerable risks in conveying information to the Allied forces of enemy dispositions without thinking of the risks involved.

Social Amenity Memorial

One of the finest war memorials in Britain has been given to a Sussex country town by an unknown man. East Grimstead, at one time in the "Battle of Britain" country and with a high civilian death role for its size, is to have 120 acres of park land laid out as public recreation grounds. The Garden of Remembrance will be dedicated not only to the town's own war dead but to all who died for Britain. Among the woodlands will be a swimming pool and an open-air theatre, and in the park football grounds will be provided and a cricket pitch, as big as that at Lords in London, where county matches will be played.

Smokers and Fires

Pointing out that smokers were responsible for 17,582 out of the 52,173 fires in Canada last year, the Industrial Accident Prevention Association have re-issued an outstanding poster for Ontario plant bulletin boards.

The associations suggest that industry use the poster, which has gained international recognition, as a follow-up on the fire prevention campaign carried out across Canada last month.

Cleverly designed and illustrated, the posted reads: "Chaperon your cigarettes. don't let them go out alone."

Get Oxygen Habit

If you were told that by an expensive method of treatment you could increase your bodily and mental efficiency by twenty per cent, you would take it. If we had to breath our oxygen out of steel sylinders as is done in cases of serious illness, we should think it a very precious substance. We forgot that oxygen is nature's cheapest commodity ready for us all. It is the best insurance against colds, bronchitis, pneumonia and other troubles. Do not call it 'fresh air'—that sounds too cheap and simple. Call it oxygen habit.

Doctors may be thankful that they are no longer expected to take all or part of their reward in old clothes, as was the rule under a system devised by Welsh monarchs, says The Manchester Guardian. At the court of the Gwynedd kings physicians and surgeons ranked 12th in order of precedence among the household officials and had their fees defined in accordance with a graduated scale. When they were concerned with war casualties it was decreed that the doctor who cured a flesh wound that was not dangerous should be awarded all such garments of the patient as were not stained with blood, while for curing "the three dangerous wounds" he was to be granted 180 pence and all the patient's clothes, whether bloodstained or not.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

MAN, HARD TO FIND

He is a most unusual man—
The rarest in the human clan.
One gifted with a gracious trait
I wish more men would emulate.
Of all the many I have known,
In one respect, he stands alone.
He does what few have learned to do:
In silence, watch a card game through.

At any card by players led,
He never sadly shakes his head.
The man deserves a laurel wreath.
He never loudly clicks his teeth
At what is done—to show disgust—
As most kibitzers feel they must.
So quietly he keeps his chair,
You'd never know that he was there.

So well what's proper he regards,
He never brags a player's cards
Or crawis across his lap to see
What in the hand he holds may be.
With neither words of praise nor blame
He sits, content to watch the game.
Oh, what a happier world 'twould be,
Were all kibitzers still as he!

Mr. T. M. Luke and his daughter left today for Cobourg where they will in future reside. Many friends regret their departure from this city.

Mrs. George Moxam is in Brockville to attend the wedding of her son, Mr. George Moxam, Jr.

At a meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of Bridge Street Methodist Church last evening, the Rev. J. P. Wilson was unanimously invited to remain as pastor for the fourth year.

The members of the choir of Holloway Street Methodist Church gave a very enjoyable social in the Sunday School rooms last evening. The proceeds of $25 will be devoted to the organ fund.

50 YEARS AGO

Nov. 22nd., 1896.

The Rev. Dr. Cade lectured before the members of the Epworth League at Holloway Street Methodist Church last evening on the subject, "The Social Life of the Middle Ages." It was an instructive and interesting address.

The following resolution will be introduced at the next meeting of the Mock Parliament at the Y.M.C.A.: "Resolved that an humble address be presented to Her Majesty the Queen, praying that in future the Governors-General of Canada be selected from native born Canadians."

Mr. L. Benmore has arrived at Riverside, California, where he will spend the winter.

Messrs. C. D. Macaulay and W. S. Morden, barristers, of this city, have returned home from Montreal where they spent several days on legal business.

Brown-Levine Cattle Cases Are Laid Over

Originally scheduled to be heard today (Friday) the Brown-Levine cattle cases have been laid over indefinitely and in all probability will not be heard until January, it has been announced by Malcolm Robb, special prosecutor in the cases.

Reason for the postponement of the trials was the death of Jack Simpson, Napanee solicitor, who had been retained to defend Dr. Brown.

Dr. Brown, Selby district veterinarian and M. Levine, Belleville district cattle buyer, stand charged with conspiracy under the Contagious Diseases of Animals Act, the charges resulting from the uncovering of irregularities in the shipment of export cattle from the Belleville district. Preliminary hearings in the two cases were heard in September.

LARRY FINALLY LOST HIS TONSILS

Larry Minossi, 10, is prepared at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md., for a tonsillectomy which was pronounced a success, but there was a bit of a "struggle." When Larry's mother, Mrs. Anne Minossi, brought the boy to the clinic for the operation, he was placed in bed. His mother patted him and left for their home. She had hardly closed the door when in popped Larry. Right back came Mrs. Minossi with Larry in tow. Again the bed, doctors and nurses were not for Larry. The second time he went A.W.O.L., he waited till well into the day and then, pajama-clad, sneaked out still owning his tonsils. Two men found him cringing in a market several blocks from the hospital. There was no escape when he was taken back to the hospital again.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Capt. Ross Snider In Germany Inquires About His Friends

Wishbaden, Germany
8 Nov., 1946

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer, Ltd.

Pleased to report that I am now receiving my paper after the change of address from Texas to Europe.

You see, I am very anxious to get the paper as I can get news of a lot of old friends through the community columns. I am a native of Frankford and Belleville. On my last visit to Belleville, in September, 1944, I met a lot of old timers who were friends of my father and myself.

Mr. Editor if you get a chance, say hello to Tim Sullivan the barber, Eddie Thomas, Bill and Harry Green, and Mr. George Tice. Tell Eddie I sure would like to have had the chance to use one of his hunting licences again. Ask George Tice why he let Ross Turley change his decision on the third heat, of the first race, at Shannonville Fair this year. If you see George Wallbridge, the cattle dealer, give him my address, as I would like to hear from him.

As you will see from my address I am with the United States Constabulary in Germany. It is a part of the Army of occupation. I have a good job here, and like the work.

Have asked a lot of favors I know, but will be in Belleville as soon as my tour here is over, and thank you in person.

Respectfully,
Ross F. Snider.

My address:
Captain Ross F. Snider—O-475300

NEVER USED OIL

"Then these stories were not true," he asked turning to Ray.

"No, they are not, I have never used coal oil to light fires," he reiterated.

Asked what he had done after lighting the fires. Ray testified that before leaving for the barn to do his chores he had first turned off the dampers in the kitchen stove and later had closed the drafts in the living room heater.

There was a clothesline hanging in the living room a foot or so behind the stove. he said. "After closing the dampers I pushed the clothes about five feet away from the stove."

After that he had gone to barn. After milking his cow, he had decided to clean the stable. Going outside to get a manure fork he saw flames shooting out of the windows of his house and also from the chimney. Dense black smoke was pouring out of the apertures.

Went Into House

"I rushed to the house and went through the door and got about halfway up the stairs when I was met by dense smoke and flames. The heat was terrific. I could not get my breath for smoke. I crawled downstairs on my hands and knees and got outside, I went around to the front of the house but could not get in there, I came back and again went in the back door but I could get no farther than a foot inside so terrific was the heat," he said.

He had then gone to the home of a neighbor, Robert Bristol who lived some 200 yards away and turned in an alarm. He did not know who arrived at the scene of the fire first.

Five Rooms In House

"The house had five rooms" Ray said, "and he and his wife and the baby slept in one room upstairs and the other five children in another room which was large and had no partitions."

Bristol testified that Ray had come to his house about 6.30 Monday morning. He lived 200 yards away. The Ray home was a blazing inferno, "and the roar of the flames could be heard for blocks." He had turned in an alarm to the fire department but by this time there was no possible way of getting in the house or even near it.

Provincial Police Constable J. H. Hatch testified that he had found the house a mass of flame when he arrived on the scene from his own home 200 yards away. He found Ray sitting at the rear of the house and had him removed to Dr. Wasserman's office for medical treatment.

Extricated Bodies

It was impossible to get near the house and efforts were concentrated on saving the outbuildings. The house eventually collapsed and the witness had ordered water poured on the hot embers to prevent the bodies from being cremated. This was successful and at 8.30 with the aid of volunteers he had been able to extricate the bodies.

The bodies had been found in practically the same position as that described by the father when they retired. This gave rise to the theory, the crown suggested, that the family had died in their beds.

The coroner's constable was Chief of Police C. Burkitt, of Madoc, members of the jury were Arthur Bird, foreman, Clarence Farrow, Percy Gunn, Lindsay Empey and Ralph Smith.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

AMBULATORY TREATMENT OF OLD AGE

Speaking of the palliative for decrepitude the other day I said that I myself feel just fine and dandy and therefore have not yet tried it on the dog, and one of my playmates, aged 87, who throws his weight about the bowling green without fear of any opponent who ventured to compete with him, has not yet felt the need of palliative. In both instances, I believe, (that accounts for it—the game of bowls (not tenpins but lawn bowls), at least in part.

I have often recommended ambulant or ambulatory treatment of hernia, hemorrhoids, infected tonsils and varicose veins. For the benefit of any reader who may not understand, ambulant or ambulatory treatment means treatment the patient receives, usually in the physician's office, without confinement to bed or hospital—that is, the patient remains at his or her usual work or activities throughout the course of treatment. Ambulant or ambulatory means literally walking or moving about.

In order to play a game of lawn bowls the man or woman must walk to and fro on the bowling green from fifteen to twenty times, covering in all perhaps one-half mile. At each end the player must bend down, pick up from two to four bowls and deliver the bowls in competition with the shots of his or her opponent. As exercise this is pretty mild stuff. As recreation, diversion and fun I do solemnly declare that in my opinion that no daily activity a mature adult can cultivate is more healthful than bowling on the green.

Activity, I said. That's the secret—the interest one takes in playing the game keeps one active, even though only in a moderate degree, but that is a vast improvement upon the way so many of you follow—sitting around listening to your arteries hardening.

Where winter stops the game for several months, the best substitute diversion, I think, is walking—a daily walk of from six blocks to six miles, according to your individual condition and requirement.

Golfers who take up lawn bowls generally neglect their golfing and some give up golf altogether, in favor of the new though historically much older game. Some golf addicts turned bowls addicts say bowling is more strenuous than golf; others say golf is more strenuous than bowling. It is a long while since I played a game of golf, but as I recollect it, there is little difference between the two games so far asphyzical activity or effort goes.

I could mention several reasons why some such moderate activity or daily exercise keeps you in the running and beyond the clutches of that relentless character who is following on your trail with the determination to creep upon you and ride you to an early finish. Never mind now. —those reasons will appear later.

The important thing to bear in mind if or when you begin to feel at all ancient or decrepit is that you must keep up some kind of physical activity as a regular daily habit, for otherwise you're on the toboggan and every day as old as you feel.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Hard Nails

Please advise how many times and how often one may apply the 5% caustic potash solution to dense hard nail to soften them enough for trimming.

(M. J.)

Answer—Scrub nails first with hot soapy water, then dry and swab nails only (keep off from skin) with the solution (Liq. Potassium Hydroxide, 5%) and let it dry. Repeat the application night and morning until the nail becomes soft enough to cut or file.

Sinus Hokum

Please give your opinion of the item inclosed. I am a member of long standing in the no-hat cult and this statement astonishes me.

—(W. C. H.)

Answer—The newspaper clipping says going without a hat is one of the quickest and surrest ways to develop sinus trouble, quotes a doctor as saying, "It has been proved that thousands of persons have been needlessly subjected to attacks of sinus by exposure of the uncovered head."

Astonishes me, too, that such absurd hokum can still get into circulation.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is the dollar so called?

"Dollar" is derived in a roundabout way from German "Thal" dale or valley.

In the 16th century the Count of Schlick established a mint at Joachimsthal (literally "the dale of Joachim") a small silver-mining town in Bohemia northwest of Prague. About 1519 this mint began to issue silver coins bearing the image of St. Joachim (Joseph, husband of the Virgin Mary), patron saint of the town of Joachimsthal, which modern Czechs called "Jachymov."

This coin, which had about the same value as the Spanish peso or "piece of eight," circulated generally in the Germanic states and was popularly known as Joachimsthaler," which in time was shortened to "Thaler". In Low German and Dutch "Thaler" became "daler," which in English became "daller," "dalor" and finally "dollar."

During the 17th and 18th centuries "dollar" became the common English name for the Spanish peso. Long before the American Revolution the West Indies trade had familiarized the American colonies with the Spanish dollar. Several of the States issued their paper currency in denominations of dollars as well as pounds a year or two before the Revolutionary war ended.

In 1782 Gouverneur Morris, assistant to Superintendent of Public Finance Robert Morris under the Articles of Confederation, prepared an elaborate report on coinage in which he suggested the decimal system and the terms "dollar" and "cent." This plan, with a few modifications by Thomas Jefferson, was adopted by Congress July 6, 1785, and became the basis of the American monetary system.

According to the Morris plan, all new coins "should be in decimal proportions to one another" and the unit should be "the 1140th part of a dollar." This unit, declared Morris, would measure all old currencies "without leaving a fraction." Jefferson approved the decimal system for the new money, but asserted that the proposed unit, while perfect in theory, was too small and complicated. He was a strong anti-Britisher and wanted to get as far away as possible from the English pound. In 1782 he wrote that the unit should be the Sapnish dollar, "a known coin, and the most familiar of all to the minds of the people." This coin, he added, "is already adopted from south to north, has identified our currency, and therefore happily offers itself as a unit already introduced."

No metal dollars were actually coined until 1794, during Washington's second administration and two years after passage of the law establishing the mint and fixing the value of the dollar as the monetary unit.

It is not uncommon for one country to borrow from another the name of its monetary unit and other countries followed the United States in adopting dollar, although the value of the coin so described varies considerably. After the German Empire was formed in 1870 the thaler was abandoned for the mark.

C.I.O. Re-elects Philip Murray

By MAX HALL

Atlantic City, N.J., Nov. 22 — (AP) — C.I.O. delegates end their five-day meeting today by re-electing president Philip Murray —the man who performed the trick of making a C.I.O. convention sound like one big happy family.

The final day, with important matters crowding the program, could produce a spout of hot words after all — but Murray managed the first four days with such a firm hand that bitter factionalism boiled only behind closed doors.

In those four days there was nothing faintly resembling a debate on the floor over anything at all.

Seldom in the C.I.O.'s history has a convention run that smoothly. Yet the most outspoken anti-Communist elements in the organization came here more bitter than ever before. And the hostility between the C.I.O.'s right and left is sharper now, perhaps, than it has ever been.

Murray kept the convention from getting out of hand because of the urgent need for unity in the face of the approaching wage struggles. He was able to do it because he has no possible rival as president — not this year — and all sides recognized his indispensability.

C.I.O. unions, regardless of the ideological leanings of their officers, seem likely to collaborate more closely in the wage fight than they ever have before.

At same time within the next three weeks the steelworkers, auto-workers and electrical workers will announce their wage demands — perhaps jointly.

Says Romanian Election Neither Fair Not Free

London, Nov. 22 — (AP) — A British Foreign Office spokesman said today Romania's parliamentary election, in which the Communists emerged the strongest party in the victorious government bloc, had been neither fair nor free, and that the question of British relations with Romania now was under consideration.

Asked whether withdrawal of British recognition from Romania would affect the signing of the peace treaty with the former Axis satellites, he told a news conference that "the British government undertook to conclude peace treaties only with a recognized government."

Viscount Alexander Visits Press Club

Toronto, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Viscount Alexander yesterday unveiled a bronze tablet in memory of Toronto newspapermen who died in the Second Great War, in a ceremony at the Toronto Men's Press Club.

The Governor-General later was made an honorary life member of the club. In acceptance he stressed the important position of the press in democracy and paid tribute to war correspondents who shared equal dangers with soldiers in covering the world's battle fronts.

The club rooms were jammed for the ceremony, attended by immediate relatives of 18 Toronto newspapermen whose names appeared on the plaque. Prayers of invocation and dedication were given by Maj. John W. Foote, V.C., of Hamilton, and a wreath was placed by John E. Fitzgerald, club president.

On the final page of the dedication service booklet was the figure "30" newspaper symbol for "the end."

Throughout the ceremony and while the Governor General met club members, photographers' bulbs flashed on all sides. Surprising the experts Viscount Alexander asked to take a "shot" of the photographers and when he found them too widely spread, he told them to move closer together.

As he was leaving members cheered and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and the Governor General turned and said: — "Remember now, I'm not a guest, I'm a member." Promptly a member replied: "Wednesday night is cribbage night."

Says Coal Strike Threatens Plans to Cut Income Taxes

Washington, Nov. 22 — (AP)— A leading Republican said today the coal strike 'gravely threatens' Republican plans to slash individual income taxes by 20 per cent.

Representative Frank Carlson (Rep.-Kas.), a House leader on tax legislation who becomes Governor of Kansas in January, told reporters that unless stability is established between labor and management, tax reduction "will go by the board."

U.N. Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 22. (CP)— Unless some formula is devised to avoid it the United Nations General Assembly is due for a significant debate which will decide, in effect if the peace organization is going to meddle with the internal affairs of a country because it doesn't like the local government.

On the agenda is a polish resolution calling not only for a break with Spain by all the United Nations but for the boycotting of that country in a manner that would stifle its external trade and communications.

The argument, heavily backed by the Soviet countries and some others, is that the Franco government is the creature of the Nazi-Fascist Axis and as such should have gone down when those enemies were defeated.

But for the U.N. to take action now would require an assumption that the Franco regime constitutes a menace to the peace of the world.

Many observers claim that assumption is absurd—that by herself Spain is no more dangerous than any small country, less than many since she possesses neither money, arms, credit, food, nor the will for an aggressive war.

But in Spain there is a well organized Communist organization, if pressure from the outside forced the Franco regime to eliminate itself, would be in a strong position to assume power.

It would appear that the democratic forces in Spain, while most numerous perhaps, are not so well organized to take over the administration.

Observers here look upon the proposed action against Franco as a dangerous precedent. Extremists see in such action the possibility that, at some future time, the present anti-Franco forces might take exception to the form of government in a capitalist country—Canada for instance—and attempt the same corrective efforts.

There is a chance that the General Assembly, now so bogged down in preliminaries that its agenda of more than 50 items has scarcely been touched, may find it possible to put off the Franco debate until the next session.

Canadian materials are much in evidence at the Lake Success headquarters of the U.N., although perhaps few of the delegates from other nations realize it. Much of the linoleum covering the acres of floors, and a large number of the typewriters used by the secretariat and correspondents, were obtained from Canada. Also, the pay rolls of the secretariat are crowded with Canadian names.

The sunken garden on the Plaza in Rockefeller Plaza, now a skating rink, is always surrounded by the idle curious watching the short-skirted figure skaters and their companions. Around the rink stand flagstaffs flying the emblems of the United Nations. But when uniformed attendants, with cameras grinding, raised the flags of Afghanistan, Iceland and Sweden this week at the moment representatives of those countries were being seated in the General Assembly at Flushing, scarcely a skater or a spectator lifted their eyes to the symbolic ceremony.

Fishermen Observe Old Maori Custom

Whangarei, N. Z. —(CP)— Three months ago a Maori was drowned off Matauri Bay in the far north of New Zealand. Following an ancient Maori custom which still survives the elders of the Maori tribes in the district placed a tapu on all fishing grounds in the vicinity, which meant that no Maori could take any fish from the area until the ban was lifted. This was a serious thing for the Maoris as many of them earned a living by fishing and the banned area was one of the richest fishing grounds off the northern New Zealand coast.

The tapu lasts for three months but if any fish are taken from the area during that time, it is extended indefinitely until a full three months is obtained with no fish being caught. Realizing the futility of trying to break a rigid tribal law the government appealed to European fishermen not to use the grounds during the period of the tapu so that the Maori fishermen would not be deprived of their livelihood longer than necessary.

The tapu was faithfully observed by all parties and a ceremonial gathering was held in at the end of the period when Maoris from all the tribes affected ate the first fish taken from the affected area. They passed a resolution of appreciation of the action of the Europeans in honoring the tribal law.

More Closed Areas For Breeding Fish Wanted by Club

Lindsay, Nov. 22 — (CP) — A resolution urging the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests to declare more closed areas in the adjacent Kawartha Lakes for the purpose of breeding fish, and employment of three full-time wardens in this district, was presented to Victoria county council here yesterday by a deputation from Bobcaygeon Kinsmen's Club.

The resolution also urged the importance of increasing the minimum fine to $50 for taking under-sized muskies. "We have come dangerously close to the bottom of the barrel in regard to maskinonge," declared Mr. Pete McGillen, outdoor editor of the Peterboro Examiner, addressing council on behalf of the deputation.

Light Snowflurries In Lakes Region

Toronto, Nov. 22 — (CP)—Ontario communities along the rim of the Great Lakes had their first taste of winter today as light snowflurries accompanied high winds. Northern Ontario had snowstorms several days ago but this was the first snow of the season in Southern and Southwestern Ontario.

Forecasters at the Public Weather Office at nearby Malton said a storm area was centred on James Bay and in northern sections of the province south and east of the bay continuous snow is expected the rest of the day and tonight.

Toronto saw its first snow this fall and snow also fell in Stratford where residents said it was a month later than last year. Wind ripped branches off trees in the London area where skifts of snow rode 30-miles-an-hour gales.

Temperatures nosedived as wintry weather struck. Weathermen predicted tonight would be still colder and that the cold spell would continue tomorrow.

The cold which spelled the end to a long autumn of unusually fine days in most parts of the province came on the heels of a dense fog which yesterday gripped the area immediately north of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario and was blamed for two deaths and numerous traffic mishaps.

Pet Deer is Shot

Truro, N.S., Nov. 22—(CP)— Mary had her little lamb, but Truro children had a deer—until some "hunter" shot him.

It all started when Harold Swanson of Highland Village found an abandoned young deer last spring in one of his fields. He took the animal to his farmhouse and cared for him. The deer lost his shyness for people and became a great pet of the local children — even following them to school.

And then last week some intrepid sportsman shot the pet in a neighbor's field.

Manuilsky Sees Political Motive In Wounding

New York, Nov. 22 (AP)—Foreign Minister Dmitri Manuilsky of the Soviet Ukraine declared, and the Moscow radio implied today, that the shooting of a Ukrainian United Nations delegate by a pair of delicatessen store robbers in New York Wednesday night had "political" significance, but New York's police commissioner said it was just "a stickup."

M. Manuilsky told reporters at Lake Success he believed the shooting of Gregory Stadnik, 42, who was shot in the right thigh, was "political" and that he intended to "take action." He declined to say, however, why he thought political motives were involved or what he intended to do.

The Moscow radio, heard in London, charged that the shooting was an attempt "on the life" of Stadnik and his colleague, A. D. Volina.

Warren R. Austin, chief of the United States United Nations delegation, expressed regrets to M. Manuilsky concerning the shooting, as did Sen. Tom Connally (Dem.-Tex.), a member of the United States delegation.

Sterling Dollar Rate Satisfactory In London View

London, Nov. 22—(Reuters)— French predictions that sterling must be raised against the dollar and franc are not taken seriously here.

Responsible London quarters say they are quite satisfied with the present sterling dollar rate of about 4.03 dollars to the pound and have no intention of changing it. London financial observers hold that since the French believe depreciation of the franc is inevitable, they prefer to describe it as appreciation of sterling.

The British official view remains that the present dollar-sterling exchange rate is the pivot of the world's economic structure and any avoidable tampering with exchange rates might be socially as well as politically disruptive.

Ivanhoe

Ivanhoe — (Special) — A very delightful evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw on Tuesday in honor of the eighth birthday of their only son Wayne. Friends present were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Mitz, Harold, Ellen and Larry, Mrs. Shaw's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thresher of Mount Pleasant, and Mr. and Mrs. William Shaw.

The court of revision for the township of Huntingdon was held in the hall here on Friday.

Among those who attended the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto were Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hagerman, Mr. and Mrs. George Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Sarles and Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy.

Mr. Ray Everingham is at present unable to assume his usual duties at the gravel pit at West Huntingdon due to some burns on his face and hands suffered a few days ago while at work.

Mr. Hugh McMillan and Malcolm and Mr. William McMillan and Gordon were successful in each returning from the hunting grounds with his alloted trophy.

Mrs. Grass of Point Anne is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Percy Downey, of White Lake.

Some thirty persons attended the meeting of the Quarterly Official Board held in Beulah United Church on Tuesday evening. The meeting was addressed by Rev. J. Fred Lane of Wellington and Rev. A. C. McCallum of Bayside. Delicious refreshments were served at the close by the Beulah ladies.

Mr. Charles Emerson has installed a new oil burner system in his home.

WEDDINGS

SHIPP—CARLSON

A quiet, but pretty, marriage ceremony was solemnized Nov 9th., when a former graduate of the Belleville General Hospital, Miss Helen Christina Carlson, Reg.N., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Carlson, was united with Mr. Joseph H. Shipp, of Russell, Man. The ceremony was performed in Trinity United Church, Toronto, with Rev. Arthur Organ officiating.

The bride made a charming picture in a street-length dress of heavenly-blue wool crepe, fashioned with shirred bodice and full-length sleeves. She wore a matching hat and veil with black accessories and a corsage of white gardenias, roses and forget-me-nots.

Miss Pearl Hamilton, Reg.N., now at Mountain View, a classmate of the bride, was the bridesmaid. She wore a salmon pink wool crepe dress with black and gold accessories. Her corsage was of roses, carnations and violets.

Mr. Warton Russell, of Manitoba, acted as groomsman.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet; to the bridesmaid a bracelet and to the groomsman, cuff links.

Following a reception at the "Hearthstone", Mr. and Mrs. Shipp left for a short motor-trip to Russell, where they will reside.

For approximately three years prior to her marriage the bride was on the staff of Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, and has been the recipient of many useful and beautiful gifts from both patients and staff at that institution. Showers in her honor were also held at Oshawa and Toronto.

On Wednesday afternoon, the nurses of Class '47 entertained Mrs. Raymond Pringle, (nee Mary Thompson) at afternoon tea, in the Ritchie residence.

After a short address Mrs. Pringle was presented with silver candlesticks, by Miss Christine Mabush, on behalf of the Class, in honor of her first wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Mary Ferguson presided at the silver tea service, and an enjoyable social hour spent.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

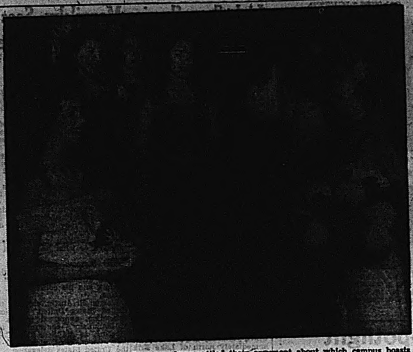
The regular meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Nurses' residence. The officers' reports were all very encouraging and the conveners of the "Ways and Means" committee gave their report of a very lovely and successful tea held at Mrs. Stobie's last week.

Other items of interest and new work for the Auxiliary to undertake were also discussed and a committee composed of Mrs. Galloway and Mrs. McCabe was appointed to take charge of the Christmas baskets.

The most interesting event of the meeting was the very splendid and comprehensive report given by Mrs. Langlois, the Auxiliary representative to the Ontario Hospital Aides' Convention held last month in the Royal York hotel.

KITCHEN SUPERSTITION

Medieval housewives put crosses on buns to prevent the devil from spoiling the baking.



Universities of the Western Provinces have settled their argument about which campus boasts the most beautiful girl with the crowning of Marion Albert, 17, as their beauty queen. Marion, here receiving the crown from master of ceremonies Buz Sawyer, is a University of British Columbia girl, brunette, 5 feet, 9 inches tall, and obviously beautiful. Another U.B.C. lovely is Tina Howard, 20, (left). Other finalists, from left to right are Marie Blondal of Regina; Lee Armstrong, Morris, Man.; Rosalie McHaffie, Edmonton.

Russia Will Endure Hard Life For Ten to 30 Years Longer Louis Alber Tells Club Members

"Inside the Iron Curtain", was the subject of an address to the large audience assembled on Thursday evening in the auditorium of the B.C.I. & V.S., by Mr. Louis J. Alber was told of a meeting with Honorable Winston Churchill and when he asked the English gentleman, "Why do you think there is an iron curtain?" To which Mr. Churchill replied, "I'm sure it isn't there for decorative purposes."

Mrs. B. C. Sisler, president of the Women's Canadian Club, introduced Mr. Alber as a well-known newspaper correspondent, a feature writer and a world traveller, who, during the last Summer, spent four months studying conditions in fourteen European countries.

After thanking the Club for the kind introduction, the speaker said—"Asked when Russia intends to raise the iron curtain, Stalin replied, 'we will raise the curtain when the standard of living east of it is equal to the standard of living west of it', and", predicted the speaker, "that will not be for a very long while.

"People in the so-called Western World cannot conceive of conditions in Russia. The German army left nothing behind that they could destroy,—even to the small peasant homes were burned. Now, work done on the collective farms is done by hand. These conditions affect the thinking of the Russians. They are a weary people, living on a mere subsistence level—subsistence from the Russian viewpoint which is vastly different from the viewpoint of American or Canadian subsistence. They will endure a hard life from ten to thirty years longer.

Neither Statement True

"Last February," continued Mr. Alber, "Stalin made his blood, toil, sweat and tears speech to the Russian people, preparing them for another five-year plan, which means unceasing toil, unending hardship. Americans believe that this low level of living is due to Communism. Russians say that improvement in their living conditions, (since the passing of the Czarist regime) is due to Communism. Neither is true. The masses have lived on this subsistence level for centuries, because of an antique system of agriculture, and now industry must be developed to improve their agriculture in order to change their economic condition.

"Whether or not Russians will be able to continue living under the tension of war, as they have been doing since 1919, is a question. Already there have been some revolts. The average monthly wage is from three hundred to three hundred and fifty rubles, about thirty buying dollars in Canadian currency."

"If we of the Western nations", said the speaker, "wish to better understand what happens in Russia now, we should know something of Russian history, remembering that Russians never had a taste of democratic government, and would not know what to do with it, if they had it. They have always had rulers who were harsh, arbitrary, incompetent, and at the time of the revolution eighty-five per cent of the people were illiterate."

Answers Some Questions

Mr. Alber tried to make his meaning clearer by answering some questions relative to present day conditions, such as—"What is Communism?" "Communism is the oldest economic system, which still exists in family life everywhere, for example, the North American Indians were governed by a chief or dictator, with the hunters supplying the same amount of food for all members of the tribe. The communist party in Russia has four million select members. If a man is lazy or dishonest, he does not get into it; if he drinks too much vodka he does not get in; if he is accepted he begins an educational course lasting from three to five years, and then tries a rigid examination on the Marxist creeds. If ever he deviates from these he is expelled. All members are selected carefully, trained thoroughly, and disciplined rigidly."

"Do we need to fear Communism?" The answer to that is, "Real Communism will never come to a democratic country.

Not Bent On Revolution

"Why does Russia act as she does? "Russia is not bent on world revolution. Russia will not be in a position to fight in less than fifteen years, probably not in less than twenty-five. The people are suspicious, have an inferiority complex, because in Russia the oriental influence is dominant.

"Russia is a level country with no long barriers to keep out invaders, and since 1800 fourteen foreign armies conquered large territories, one city being occupied one hundred and one times.

"Governments of other countries are recognized, whether or not they are democratic, but the Soviet has never been recognized by the democratic nations. This," said the speaker, "is not fair treatment."

In closing Mr. Alber suggested that the democracies treat Russia with patience, courage, sincerity and "no threats". In return they will receive security and peace, so far as Russia is concerned. He said—"There is democracy behind the iron curtain, inside the Communist party, and democracy is contagious. Already it is seeping through and spreading over the country."

"Let us be firm; let us be generous; let us have hope and patience; and, if we (the American peoples and the Britishers) succeed in forming an economic system that will pervade the world, we shall become the most important peoples in the world."

Mrs. Sisler voiced the appreciation for this instructive address, and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Life in France During Occupation Told to Club

The November meeting of "The University Women's Club" was held on Wednesday evening, at the home of Miss Harriet Cronk, 1 Catharine Street.

The guest speaker was Mrs. Villetort from Stirling. Mrs. Villetort, who lived in France from 1938 until last Spring, gave an enlightening account of life in France during that period. She held her audience spellbound as she spoke of France, stunned and bewildered after the Armistice, but nevertheless pinning her hopes on the saying, "England loses every battle but the last one". In connection with the German occupation, she related many incidents, harrowing for the most part, but at times amusing. She also told something of the political situation in France, and in conclusion spoke of the high cost of living and of the black market which is in existence everywhere.

Bridge, Euchre And Dance Held At Parish House

St. Thomas' A.Y.P.A., was host at a gala bridge, euchre and dance held in the Parish House, on Wednesday evening.

The ladies' bridge prize, donated by the Georgia Salon, was won by Mrs. J. White; the men's prize, donated by Schwab's Gift Shop, was won by Les Shiels. The ladies' euchre prize, donated by Geen's Drug Store, was won by Mrs. R. Dunlop, and the men's prize, donated by "Bill Cook", was won by Mr. H. Mills.

Delicious refreshments were served, followed by dancing to music supplied by Mr. Bill Navin. Dance prizes donated by The McCarthy Theatre and Lattimer's Drug Store, were won by Mr. Bob Kidd and Miss Ruth Muir. Miss Jean Wannamaker was the recipient of a special Birthday prize donated by Clarke and Miles.

HOLLOWAY ST. CHURCH W.A.

The November meeting of Holloway Street Church Woman's Association was held at the home of Mrs. H. McKee, 7 Wareham Street, Thursday afternoon with a good attendance.

Mrs. L. Buck had charge of the meeting, in the absence of the President, Mrs. E. Shortt. During a lengthy business session all secretaries presented reports. The meeting was further conducted by Mrs. M. Denton, who was acting for Mrs. Nigswander, the group leader, with Mrs. R. E. Kilbank in charge of the "Devotional Period" taking as her topic the one word "Peace". Mrs. C. Walters assisted by reading portions of Scripture on this subject, and Mrs. Kilbank continued with a short address and concluded with prayer.

Mrs. R. G. Bell contributed a solo, "My Task", and Mrs. A. E. Downey, a piano solo, both of which were greatly appreciated by the ladies present.

Mrs. E. Hubbs read a letter concerning gifts of furnishing for the new home of our missionaries in the North Country.

Appreciation for her hospitality was expressed to Mrs. McKee and dainty refreshments were served before the meeting adjourned.

OPTI.—MRS. CLUB

Mrs. Ray Reid was hostess to the members of the Opti—Mrs. Club on Wednesday evening for their semi-monthly meeting.

Secretary Mary Kidd read the minutes of the last meeting and President Pat Sharland welcomed the new members.

The girls have agreed to operate the canteen at the Armouries on the nights of the Sea Cadets' meetings and a schedule was drawn up so that two girls would be on duty each night. The canteen is furnished with chocolate bars and soft drinks for the Cadets during their rest period.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess.

Novel Pajamas

By ALICE ALDEN

CELANESE RAYON jersey of a heavy quality that drapes well is used by Tina Leser for a collection of lingerie that is really new and novel. It is as radical in design as has been seen for some time. There are such delectable items as a slip in day or evening length, with a strapless, lightly-feather-boned bodice. And if you don't think that novelty is really rampant in this group, just take a fast look at the dhoti pajamas depicted here. This is a two-piece affair, the shirt blouse with its tie and cuffs in duo-color, the wrap-around pajama skirt in one color. The blouse has fly-front fastening.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall He Tell his Parents He is The Father of a Baby Overseas?

Even with the greatest desire in the world to be honest, it is not always easy to know when to confess, and when not to confess, that one has done a wrong thing.

Many people believe that one should always confess. But I feel quite certain that there are times when "making a clean breast of it" is far from advisable. The fact that should tip the scales to one side or the other, in making a decision of this kind, it seems to me, is what the confession would accomplish, as well as the motives that prompt it. When it serves to right a wrong, to clarify a muddled situation, or to establish a new relationship of understanding and trust for the future between people who have been at odds, then it is the thing to do. But if it serves only to hurt someone, while accomplishing nothing more than easing the conscience of the one who has been guilty of the wrong-doing and making life simpler for him, then I doubt if it is the course to follow.

On this basis, I think the young man who writes the following letter should examine his own motives very carefully before deciding whether or not to tell his parents that he is the father of a baby born out of wedlock.

Here is his problem:

"About two years ago, while I was stationed in England, I fell in love with an English girl. Unfortunately she was married. But, after she told me that she had been trying to obtain a divorce, my conscience was appeased and I dated her steadily.

"Three months after we met, I went to bid her goodby on what was rumored to be our last pass. That was the first time that we had been intimate. The next morning I left for France. Five months later, her mail caught up with me at a hospital where I was recuperating. She was going to be a mother at 21.

"My problem is not a moral one. It is how to keep my family from being deeply hurt. I realize that my first duty is to make a home for the girl I love and a son who must have a fair chance in life. But, by English law, it will be three years before the divorce is granted and we will be able to marry. My college education will be completed in two years and then I can start from scratch to make some money to support a wife and child.

"How can I tell my folks the truth? Should I tell them or let them believe that the baby's father was the girl's former husband? Dad would probably disown me, but my greatest concern is how my mother would take the news. The sudden shock might have disastrous results."

In this particular case, I can't see anything to be gained by hurting your parents with a confession of the truth, unless the question of supporting the child is involved and you need financial aid from them to enable you to do it. And it would certainly be a sad state of affairs if you have to ask them to assume the responsibility for your misdeed. That would indeed be piling one burden on top of another on their shoulders.

If you don't have to support this girl and her child, then what reason would there be for telling your parents, aside from the fact that you probably would be distressed to carry this secret in silence while knowing that your mother and father believed you to be a "perfect son?" As I look at it, the distress you would bear over this would be the penalty you must pay for making a serious mistake. You would have to go through the rest of your life feeling that your parents' complete confidence in you was not justified. But, on the other hand, if it makes you resolve always to live up to their confidence in the future, you could make amends that way.

I am wondering, however, if during the three years that you must wait before you and this girl can be married, your love is going to last, and if through so long a period of not seeing this girl, her memory may not grow dimmer year by year until you gradually lose interest in her and your sense of responsibility to her. I am afraid you have a very involved situation here altogether, and one that will not be easy to untangle.

You have to begin somewhere, however, and the starting point would seem to be the question of your financial responsibility.

If no financial responsibility is involved, then I do not think your parents should be told the circumstances. If you tell them anything at all at this point, let them think, as you suggest, that this girl in whom you are interested already has a child by her former husband.

If, on the other hand, you feel you must provide money for her and her child, and are not able to do it out of your own pocket, it is a difficult matter. Then I see nothing to do but tell the whole story and accept the consequences.

And one last word: If you don't call this a moral problem, what would your idea of a moral problem be?

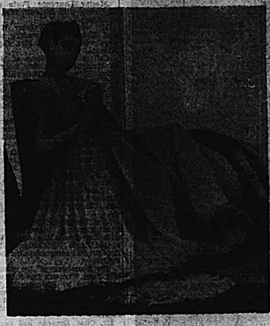
Youthful dress for daytime wear

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

MULTICOLORED striped wool jersey, with purplish tones predominating, is used for this young looking daytime dress, nice for wear on its own now and under a coat later. The design cleverly compromises between the high and the low waistline, a section of the fabric used vertically forming a moulded midriff. The skirt is gathered front and back and is straight at the sides. The sleeves are full, and of the push-up type. It is a fine example of the wonderful wool frocks designed for cool weather wear.

Wonderful Trousseau



By PRUNELLA WOOD

THAT magic nylon yarn is back in other fashion items than stockings, as this dreamy nile green negligee demonstrates. In such delicious models for trousseau, or any other wardrobe, it is just as hardy and washable, just as lasting and wearable, as it is in hose . . . . ready for landering and quick drying.

This boudoir design is nile green, made with a flowing skirt over a bodice slip, its top a sleeveless panel of sheer revealing arms and under lace trimmings.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Imprinted or Hand-written?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to send out quite a few Christmas cards this year, and I am wondering whether to have my name imprinted on them. Do you think that, in general, friends prefer to receive a card with the signature hand-written or with the name printed on them?

Sally

My answer to this must be personal, and I infinitely prefer a card signed with the sender's handwriting. To me it seems more in keeping with the friendly, personal Christmas spirit than a card, no matter how magnificent and costly, with an impersonal greeting and an engraved or printed name. I like handwritings, and "my heart leaps up when I behold" the familiar handwriting of a friend! Immediately the hand written signature makes the greeting deeply and warmly personal, like a cordial handshake.

Also, and happily, I've noticed that when friends sign their cards they are tempted to add a sentence or two of greeting or a news-message, and this too is always welcome. Nothing perfunctory or impersonal about such Christmas greeting-cards—they are endearing, heart-warming!

Bridal Shower Given Before Second Marriage?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine, whom I have known since grammar school days, has asked me to be her only attendant at her house wedding the first of December. It will be the second marriage for bride and groom, both having been divorced. My question is this: Am I expected to give a shower for her? I am inclined to think that bridal showers are not in good taste when it is a second marriage, but since I want to do the right thing I would appreciate your advice.

M.

There isn't any rule about this, but my advice is that, under the circumstances, it would be best taste for you not to give a bridal shower.

For Her Baby's Name

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to have a baby very soon, and I want very much to have my baby have a family name for its middle name. Would it be proper for us to choose the maiden name of my husband's grandmother? I have always understood that a baby's name, if a family name, should come from its mother's side of the family. But my maiden name is most unattractively and I'd prefer to have the baby have the name of its paternal great-grandmother—that is, if this is correct.

A. B.

It is entirely correct for you to choose, for your baby's middle name, your husband's grandmother's maiden name.

Pamphlet on "Wedding Expenses" Lists Responsibilities

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a prospective bridegroom, and to be married toward the last of December. I haven't the slightest idea what I am supposed to pay for, as far as the wedding expenses are concerned, and since my fiancee is planning to have a formal wedding and reception, I would like to be sure of my "financial responsibilities," as well as the bride's family provide. Will you tell me, please?

Bob

My pamphlet on "Wedding Expenses" lists in detail the bridegroom's expenses and the expenses of the bride's family. I shall gladly mail this to you if you will send me an addressed, stamped envelope.

Fashion Flashes

NEW HANDLING gives added charm to snowy ermine. A new evening coat of this regal fur has a fitted line in front and closes with double-breasted pearl buttons. The fitted front is in contrast to the free-swinging back which forms a sort of background for the nipped-in waist.

HERE AND THERE one notes a superlatively handled turban. A beautiful hat is of silver lame fashioned into a turban with a contour that somewhat resembles a snail shell. High in front, it dips low and rounded over the ears; the top section is banded with narrow black velvet ribbon.

FINE HANDWORK marks some of the new blouses. Heavy white satin is used for a blouse of soft, full shirtwaist style. The simple collar, front-buttoned panel and the cuffs are all encrusted with a hand embroidered self-eyelet leaf motif bordered in fine cord embroidery.

EASY WAY to give a lift to a simple suit for afternoon-into-evening wear, is via a good-looking scarf. Black satin is used for a collared ascot bright with a flower and border design in glittering gold and pearl beads on sequins.

POINT A GOLDEN ARROW in the direction of smartness. Beige felt makes a simple off-the-face cloche trimmed with a crown band and golden arrow in tawny gold mesh. Tiny gold mesh veil.

WONDERFUL for blustery weather wear is the shoulder-strap bag. Black or red calf makes a new number styled with a flat back and a rounded barrel front with soft folds for fullness. Rounded flat top with a gilt metal frame. Nice for tailored or dress wear.

WALL 1,400 MILES LONG

The Great Wall of China winds for 1,400 miles over mountain, valley and river. It has an average height of 20 feet, and its top forms a roadway 13 feet wide. It was built about 228-210 B.C.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Lost, Strayed or Stolen?

Due to the fact that the modern woman is interested in matters pertaining to health and hygiene, goes in for the balanced diet, enjoys outdoor sports and bathes daily, she has a better complexion than her grandmother had. The texture is good. Premature wrinkles are not a common curse. But those home-grown, pristine blushes—whatever has become of them? The sisterhood seems to find it necessary to rely on the rouge compact.

Life was more leisurely, less exciting, in grandmother's day. We are referring now to the grandmothers of middle-aged women, not those gay, dancing grannies who look for all the world like carbon copies of their daughters. They have fallen into cosmetic line.

Lovely ladies of the old days took afternoon naps. An all night party was an unheard-of event. A big spree, we are told, was an oyster supper. Women got more sleep. They kept regular hours. They didn't shoot through life like so many skyrockets.

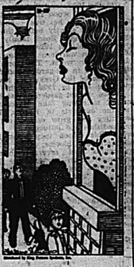
Hurry, fatigue and tension are enemies of apple-red cheeks. The tired woman has a pale skin. When every nerve in the body is crying out for rest and peace, the capillaries go on strike. Circulation is sluggish.

If girls had complexions like ice cream and roses there wouldn't be a rouge compact sold throughout the land. A bit of rosy pigment freshens the face, puts more shine in the eyes. Make-up, cleverly applied, boosts morale. It not only makes a woman look younger, but also makes her feel younger, and that, my little chickadees, is something! If she has been dwelling upon lost illusions, it gives her courage. There's life in the old gal yet.

Getting back to the question, "Why has the natural blush vanished?" we wonder if it is due to overactivity and not enough sleep. No doubt, lack of fresh air and exercise is a factor. Young girls who go in for outdoor sports all the year round have good skin coloring. Their blood streams are racing, their muscles are strong. Outdoor life creates appetite and brings restful sleep.

A quick, cold shower after the soapy bath does wonders for the complexion because it sends the circulatory system about its business. Deep breathing before an open window will bring color to the cheeks. Five minutes of deep breathing will bring a glow all over the body. Shallow breathers are usually pale.

The reason for the popularity of make-up is that Nature lets us down. Wouldn't it be nice if she could have given us a color guarantee, prolonged the fresh rosiness of youth?



Deep breathing, done before an open window, will bring color to the cheeks

New Soapless VEL
Outcleans, Outlasts Suds

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

As a result of constant home tests, my enthusiasm for soapless VEL is mounting daily. At first, like you perhaps, I thought VEL was strangely different. But now that I understand it, I think it's wonderful.

MAKES SUDS UNNECESSARY "FROTH"

Soapless VEL is a fine white granulated powder which acts quite differently from soap flakes or soap powders. The big difference is in the suds. VEL makes plenty of frothy suds, even in cool or hard water, but these suds are quite unlike soap suds. Actually suds are unnecessary to Vel's cleaning action. With soap, heavy suds are essential for cleaning, but not so with VEL.

MAKES THE WATER WORK

When VEL'S frothy suds subside it's extraordinary cleaning power continues in the almost clear water. You'll actually see particles of dirt in your clear water which VEL has so ably removed from your clothes or dishes.

VEL IS NEW—MODERN

So let's get away from the old-fashioned idea that lasting suds are necessary. Now that soapless VEL is here, this modern cleanser quickly cuts grease and makes china and glassware sparkle because it leaves no soapy film. VEL is such a gentle cleanser that it can be used with perfect safety for delicate lingerie, woolens, baby clothes and nylons—and it is very kind to the hands.

NOT A SUBSTITUTE FOR SOAP

VEL is not a substitute for soap and should not be compared with soap. It is a so-called "detergent" which is winning widespread popularity with those who use it correctly.

16-V-40

"VEL" is a registered trademark of the COLGATE-PALMOLIVE-PEET CO. LTD.

Life is Easier Now For Blind Gardener

Regina Nov. —(CP)—Paul Vanden Bosch, totally blind market gardener, is taking things easier now that his brother Raymond is back from service with the Belgian armed forces in Europe and again helping with work on their 35 rich acres and two greenhouses on the outskirts of Regina.

Forty-four-year-old Raymond joined the Belgiam forces at recruiting camp at Joliette, Que., early in the war and went overseas where he fought at Normandy on D-Day and through Belgium, Holland and Geramny. He returned home last February in time to help put in a large selection of geraniums and mums.

Paul, 43 worked through the war years on the market garden with the help of two high school girls his wife and younger brother. None of the helpers had previous experience but "someone had to do it."

"The loss of my eyes handicapped me in some of the more delicate pruning jobs, on flowers like mums for instance, but we managed to make out fairly well," said Paul, who lost the sight of one eye in an operation in the 1920's and the other when a chip of wood flicked into his eye when he was chopping kindling shortly before the war.

The Vanden Bosch family came to Canada in 1920 when conditions in war-torn Belgium were at their worst. The sons first worked in the gardens and greenhouse of the Grey Nuns hospital here and in 1926 bought their own market garden on the banks of mile-long lake Wascana on the outskirts of Regina. There they also grow onions, carrots, radishes and lettuce.

This season they grew 14000 geranium blooms, 8,000 large mums and several thousand small mum sprays. The large flowers are just beginning to bloom and will be ready anytime between now and Christmas.

Although it wasn't too bad, I'm glad that my brother is back and can look after the really hard things," Paul said. "I'm looking forward now to taking things a little easier."

Marmora

Marmora, (Special.) — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Jenes in Marmora Township was the scene of a pleasant gathering on Tuesday evening when relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Fluke (newlyweds) assembled to tender them a miscellaneous shower. Music for dancing was furnished by Earl Lucas and Orville McGarvey. The couple received many useful and attractive gifts.

Acclaimed "Queen of the Fair" during the closing performance last evening was six-year-old Nancy Potter from Dartmouth, Mass. Nancy captured the crowded Coliseum in a canter around the ring astride one of her three horses "Queen." She's been riding more than a year.

Villagers turned out in large numbers on Wednesday evening on Forsyth Street to witness an advertised "Strongman" entertainment. The performer was Krikor Hekimian, thirty-year old Armenian, who has resided for 20 years in Canada and makes his home in Toronto. Krikor weighs 220 pounds and has been "on the road" in the winter months for ten years. He enlisted in the C.A.S.C. Active in the Second World War and spent two years in France and Holland. He stopped at Marmora en route to Madoc and Bancroft and the acts staged by him were the raising of Constable W. D. Lavender and the pulling of George Empey's 7,950 pound truck by the use of his teeth. He intends returning to Marmora during the coming winter to plunge into the Crowe River from the bridge.

Rawdon

W.M.S. Meeting

Rawdon (Special) — Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Society convened at the home of Mrs. Will Hubble on Wednesday, November 13th, with an attendance of seventeen.

The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Hoard. The vice president Mrs. Percy MacMullen occupied the chair and read a poem by Patience Strong entitled "Be Still." Eleven members answered Roll Call. Mrs. J. Mulheron conducted the worship service on the theme "In Christian Homes" and gave a splendid paper while Mrs. Kenneth Weaver added a message in song.

The hostess was thanked for her home and visitors were welcomed. The Christmas meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Phillips and mite boxes are to be brought in.

The Stewardship Secretary gave an Indian parable based on the moral "If you give nothing you can expect nothing." Miss D. Sine gathered the offering which was dedicated.

Mrs. K. Weaver synopsized the study book chapter entitled "Woman—The Bridge". This depicted the progress of India's women in modern education, social influences, public life, and lastly the place of Christian women, among others, Nora Ventura, a trained and full time worker in religious education. She said, "the mark of a Christian is the ability to see it through. Some who are not Christians do show wonderful patience, but Christians have something that makes it much easier for them to have courage and faith and joy." These Christian Indian women exemplify the creed of the Hebrew prophet, "What doth the Lord require of Thee but to do justly to love, mercy and to walk humbly with Thy God."

Splendid reports of the Sectional Rally held at Cannifton was given by the delegates. Mrs. Jeffs reported the morning session which was read by Mrs. Sidmer Demorest and Mrs. Herbert Smith reported for the afternoon session. A vote of thanks was tendered them for these comprehensive reports. It being the week of the Armistice, a special message entitled "Remembrance" was read by Mrs. Arthur Phillips. At this time Canada redidicates herself to make the future more secure for the coming generations. Special mention wsa made of the Indian hymn in the October monthly.

The plans for the 45th celebration were completed. Mrs. Hubble served a dainty lunch and was tendered a vote of thanks for her hospitality.

FARM WIFE, OVERCOME BY FLAMES, RECOVERS AND RESCUES CHILDREN

Mrs. ALCIDE SIMARD WINS Dow Award

Only a charred wall remains of the Simard farm home near Chatham, Ont. It was destroyed by a raging fire which might have ended in tragedy — but for the heroism of young Mrs. Alcide Simard.

Awakened by the smoke, she rushed for her children. Sheltering her 18-months-old baby with her night-gown and holding the arm of another child, she dashed for the kitchen door. But the smoke became overpowering and she collapsed. Aroused a few moments later by the screams of her children, she smashed her way through a pane of glass and pushed them to safety. She then climbed through the window and collapsed again! Her husband, in the barn some distance away when the fire started, arrived on the scene and completed the rescue.

Mrs. Alcide Simard, of Tilbury township, Ont., deserves sincere praise for her heroic action. We are proud to present her with The Dow Award.

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. Winners are selected by The Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Montreal daily newspapers.

Lawrence Blames Strike on Prices Board Chairman

Hamilton, Nov. 22. (CP) — Richard Page, 35, of Hagersville, died in hospital yesterday from injuries suffered when a slab of gypsum rock fell on him while he was working at the 95-foot level of the Canadian Gypsum Company mine near here.

Fred Vecero, 52, of Hagersville, another miner, is in hospital with leg injuries suffered in the same accident. Two others, Alfred Bomberry and Ervin Smith, were working with Page and Vecero when the rock weighing nearly half a ton fell.

Bomberry and Smith escaped with minor injuries but Page and Vecero were partially buried.

Just two months ago Page's 2 1-2-year-old son, William, was killed when accidentally struck by an axe while playing with another child.

70-Year Scheme To Rebuild Hull

Hull, England, Nov. 22 (Reuters)—A 70-year plan for the rebuilding of Hull, one of England's worse blitzed cities, has been announced.

The work of Sir Patrick Abercrombie, leading British town-planner, it provides for an increase from hte present 320,000 population to an ultimate 500,000, with a "green belt" around the city limiting further expansion and safe-guarding agriculture.

Highlights of Sir Patrick's plan is a 1,500-yard suspension bridge over the Humber. It will cost £5,000,000 ($25,000,000).

The plan provides 300 per cent more acreage for open spaces within the city than previously, and a shopping centre to serve 300,000 people. Slums behind the docks are to be eliminated and Sir Patrick says his plans envisions a two-storey house for everybody.

While observing that the "medieval port of Hull is still living and has been retained in the plan," Sir Patrick's report, already approved in principle by city council, recommends a "bold proposal" for damming the River Hull, increasing its connection with the Humber docks and extending its industrial frontage.

Fork-Tailed Drongo Likes Hard Liquor

Port Shepstone, South Africa, Nov. 22 (CP)—A fork-tailed drongo (or king cow) here shows a marked preference for hard liquor and can easily drink his purchase price in brandy—for he cost his present owner only threepence.

Mrs. A. C. Worthington says her bird "Blackie" prefers adult company at all times and likes a glass of "something hard" between times. His eyes glitter greedily as he hops along the table to perch on the rim of a glass of brandy and water, which he sips with relish. "Blackie" refuses to be fooled and never touches plain water in a glass.

He cannot speak but loves to irritate other birds and people by mimicking them, and manages to "shout" at a dog friend in an almost human tone.

RAILROAD STATIONS HOMES FOR STUDENTS

Athens, Nov. 22 (CP)—"Athens is swarming with a population double its 1939 size," reports Howard Reed, International Student Service representative here. "Some students find their accommodation in railroad stations. At present the canteen of the University Club feeds 3,000 students one good meal a day. These indigent students are lucky if they eat 1,000 calories per day of this U.N.R.R.A. supplied food. Nearly all students are forced to work to earn a living."

WARNING SHOT BRINGS ARREST

Toronto, Nov. 22 —(CP)— A warning shot fired in the air by police early today ended a chase through west end streets and resulted in the arrest of Harold Underkirk, 17, on a charge of breaking into the Clifton Company toilet goods factory. An officer fired the shot after a youth fled from the building.

A police search of the premises uncovered Lorne Wood, 19, hiding in a washroom. He was booked on the same charge.

"NERVES" She Called It

Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out anywhere—always too tired. "Nerves", she thought—but it was her kidneys—the filters of her blood—that needed attention. She used Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, backache, headache, lack of energy disappeared. Dodd's Kidney Pills contain essential oils and medicinal ingredients that act directly upon the kidneys—and help restore their normal action. 144

Australian Musician Makes Canadian Tour

By JACK HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 22 (CP)—Leading Australian orchestral conductor Bernard Thomas Heinze, will arrive in Canada on his first visit in December to conduct a series of broadcast symphony concerts on the invitation of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Heinze, who will be in Canada for four months and will direct the Vancouver, Montreal and Toronto symphony orchestras, is the first Australian conductor to receive an official invitation to make an overseas tour.

He received and accepted the invitation during the visit to Australia last year of Sir Ernest MacMillan, conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, who was brought out by the Australian Broadcasting Commission.

Heinze, who is 52, is musical adviser to the ABC, professor of music at Melbourne University, and conductor of the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra. Like MacMillan, he considers concerts for children are of great importance, and since 1924 has been conducting childrens' concerts broadcasted in Australia. He has played before nearly 100,000 children.

Showed Early Promise

He began his music career early. At the age of nine, he was playing the violin in the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra and critics hailed him as a "wonder boy." But Heinze himself did not like his music. He detested the long hours of practice, and delighted in avoiding his music teachers to play cricket.

At 14, his attitude toward music changed. He grew to like it and won scholarships to London. While he was in London, the First Great War broke out, and Heinze served for five years as an artillery officer. After the war, he resumed his studies in Paris and Berlin.

Heinze returned to Australia in 1923, became a professor of music, and in 1926 received his present appointment to Melbourne University. Soon afterwards, he joined the Australian Broadcasting Commission.

In 1938, he toured Europe, and received tributes from critics and audiences. The King of the Belgians decorated him, and contemporary composer Sibelius praised his rendition of Sibelius' work.

Apart from music, Heinze is interested in antiques, particularly old clocks. Scattered through his Melbourne home are several antique clocks. Each clock chimes the quarter hours and Heinze claims that none of his family, his wife and two sons, has ever been late for an appointment.

New Dundee Haven For Elderly Couples

Kitchener, Nov. 22 (CP) — Nearby New Dundee seems to have the recipe for a long and happy married life, as eight of that small village's couples are beyond the half-century mark as man and wife.

They are: Mr. and Mrs. Ephriam Hallman, married 54 years; Mr. and Mrs. Eli Rosenberger, 51 years; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Egerlee, 56 years; Mr. and Mrs. Neil Wanner, 58 years; Mr. and Mrs. Simon Weber, 60 years; Mr. and Mrs. Moses Toman, 56 years; Mr. and Mrs. John Bretz, 58 years, and Mr. and Mrs. John Coleman, 55 years.

Labor Candidate Wins in Paddington North By-Election

London, Nov. 22—(Reuters) — Labor Candidate Capt. W. J. Field has been elected member of parliament in yesterday's Paddington North by-election by a majority of 2,917 votes, it was announced today.

Capt. Field polled 13,082 votes compared with 10,165 for H. L. Turner, conservative candidate, and 286 for C. Groves, candidate for the socialist party of Great Britain.

The by-election was caused by the resignation through ill health of Lt. Gen. Sir Noel Mason-Macfarlane, labor. At the general election, Sir Noel was returned by a majority of 6,545 votes over Brendan Bracken who now is conservative member for Bournemouth.

TO INVESTIGATE JAIL CONDITIONS

London, Ont., Nov. 22—(CP)—Investigation of conditions in county jails in Western Ontario will be made by the Western Ontario branch of the Canadian Association of Social Workers, it was announced today. Maurice Cowper-Smith, acting secretary for the Council of Social Agencies, will be chairman of the probing committee.

Establishment of district committee follows the Canadian Penal Congress action in October in deploring conditions in penal institutions throughout Ontario and recommending changes.

JEWELRY STORE ROBBED

Brantford, Nov. 22 —(CP)—Wrist watches, cigarette cases, wallets, pens and pencils — valued at between $800 and $1,000—were stolen Wednesday night from William Keighley's jewelry store here during the night, police said yesterday.

CROWDED UNIVERSITIES

Universities in Prague are so over-crowded that lectures are given at night in the city's theatres.

Waterloo County Will Have County Court of Revision

Kitchener, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Waterloo County will set up a county court of revision in accordance with a suggestion from A. J. B. Gray, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, it was learned today. The court is to consist of five independent members.

Use of township councils as courts of revision will thus be eliminated.

The new court will hold assessment revision sittings in each of the county's 11 municipalities, starting shortly after the first of the year.

SAFETY GOGGLES

Workers exposed to danger of flying particles and other hazards should wear safety goggles. Statistics show that 80 per cent of eye accidents in factories were due to flying particles.

HANDY PILLOW

A plastic pillow has been marketed for use on autos, trains, busses, and at all sporting events. It folds into the size of a match pack, inflates like a balloon to 10x13 inches and is said to stand up under 250 pounds pressure.

Clergyman Scores Glamor Churches

Birmingham, England, Nov. 22 —(CP)—Nothing annoys Rev. P. L. D. Chatterton as much as people who say brighter church services would draw congregations from the Sunday movies.

"What do they expect the church to do?" he asked Birmingham's licensing justices in an appeal for later movie hours.

"Do they expect us to turn our choirs into troupes of luscious blonds? And are our vicars to be Fathers O'Malley (of the Bing Crosby film) and croon our congregations to sleep?"

The church, he said, sees boys and girls as children to be guided but "the cinema trade sees them as Jack and Jill with so many shillings in their pockets."

The licensing justices decided to change Sunday movie hours in suburban areas from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. to 4 p.m. to 10 p.m.; but hours in city theatres were left unchanged after Ernest Haynes, president of Birmingham's Trades Council, said 150,000 workers opposed any alterations.

"This form of entertainment plays a vital part in the lives of our people," he said.

Makes Tough Trip But Gets No Votes

Auckland, N., Nov. 22 (CP)—Electioneering in New Zealand involves the conscientious candidate in some unconventional travelling. To enlist the support of 30 voters, mostly elderly retired people living on Pine Island, in the upper reaches of Auckland Harbor, A. M. Laing, National party candidate for Waitakere, borrowed a flat-bottomed boat to row across from the mainland.

Taking off his coat, shoes and socks, he pulled the boat out across the mud, poled it clear of the mangroves, and rowed against a strong wind and ebb tide to the island.

Outside the island's one store he held a meeting of electors seated on the communal bench which is the main gathering place for the residents. He was subjected to a constant fire of questions and interjections throughout his speech.

As he hurried off to make the return trip while the tide made it still possible, the meeting carried a vote of confidence in the Labor party his political opponents.

In the 16th century women's rings were often worn suspended from a chain.

Partial Eclipse Of Sun Saturday

Ottawa, Nov. 22. (CP)— The fourth partial solar eclipse of the year will be on view across Canada for roughly three hours Saturday, Dominion Observatory officials said today, ranging from dawn in Vancouver to early afternoon in Halifax.

At its peak, it will place the sun 70 per cent in the shadow of the moon about 12.30 p.m., E.S.T., in Labrador and Eastern Quebec. In contrast to this is the shadow of only 15 per cent, that will occur between the starting time of about 6 a.m., and the vanishing time of 9 a.m., P.S.T., in British Columbia.

Its path moving from west to east, the eclipse will be seen in Toronto from 10.42 a.m. to 1.45 p.m., E.S.T., with a peak shadow of 54 per cent at 12.13 p.m. It may be viewed by looking at the sun through smoked glass or black photo negative.

Solar eclipses are caused by the moon coming between the earth and the sun and blocking out the sun's light from the earth's view. In this particular case the moon will start to cut in at the northwest corner of the sun.

Rangers' Loss to Detroit Lends Urgency to Boucher's Search for N.H.L. Talent

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

From the sinking New York Rangers, a hurry-up call went out today to manager Frankie Boucher to grab a few straws — but quick — in his scouting tour for talent to bolster the National Hockey League tail-enders.

Rangers, beaten 3-1 by Red Wings at Detroit last night, may not have put it in words but the urgency was written in their record. That loss marked their 8th winless game in a row — a record for consistency unsurpassed even by the winning ways of the leading Toronto Maple Leafs.

"What can you do? Nobody will even sell you players," was Boucher's oft-repeated complaint before leaving New York early in the week to look over potential candidates in American League cities.

That complaint drew retorts from Manhattan sportswriters in particular, that the Rangers appeared a little shy with the dollar.

For too long, it was charged, Rangers fattened on their farm empire. When the talent pool drained low, the Rangers lacked the knowledge or inclination to make deals that might lift them from the depths.

Whether some liberal spending by Boucher on this trip will refute the charge remains to be seen, but at least the scouting tour kept him away from another beating last night.

Neil Colville, veteran defenceman, was bench manager at Detroit as Blueshirts gave goalie Harry Lumley of Wings a soft touch with only 15 shots to handle. At the opposite end, goalie Chuck Rayner was kept hopping by 28 Detroit thrusts.

For the first period, Rangers looked good when Church Russell fired them into a goal - lead but Roy Conacher got this back in the second. The final period saw Adam Brown notch a pair of tallies that decided the issue.

The victory, enabling Detroit to close in on third place, came in the only game of the night. The clubs swing back into full-scale action at the weekend.

STANLEY MUSIAL MOST VALUABLE PLAYER IN N.L.

Brilliant First Baseman of St. Louis Cardinals Has Won Award Twice

BY JOE REICHLER

New York, Nov. 22 —(AP)— Stanley Frank Musial, stellar first baseman of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals and his league's batting king with a .365 average today was named the National League's most valuable player in 1946.

In winning baseball's most coveted prize for the second time in his brief four-year Major League career, the Donora, Pa., clouter who only yesterday celebrated his 26th birthday, received the highest total of points ever accorded any player since the present rating was adopted in 1938.

Musial, who also was voted most valuable in 1943 with 267 points polled a total of 319 points in the balloting by a 24-man committee of the baseball writers' Association of America.

The previous high received by any player was 305, garnered by Jimmy Foxx in 1938 while a member of the Boston Red Sox. The previous National League high was earned by Bucky Walters of the Cincinnati Reds who polled 303 in 1939.

Musial received 22 of the 24 first place votes of the two remaining writers, one placed him second and the other ninth.

Lefty Oscar Judd of Ingersoll Ont., Philadelphia Phillies' star hurler, received one vote for 10th place.

Dixie Walker Second

Second place went to Brooklyn's Dixie Walker, the "People's Cherce," whose 159 points made him the poorest runner-up in the last nine years. The Dodger's popular veteran rightfielder, whose batting average and 116 runs batted in almost brought Brooklyn its first pennant since 1941, did not receive a first place vote, but was second choice on nine ballots.

Outfield Enos Slaughter and southpaw pitcher Howie Pollet, both members of the Cards, were third and fourth respectively. Slaughter, whose spectacular dash from first all the way home in the seventh and final game won the World Series for the Cards, received the only two first place votes not allotted to Musial. The stockily-built rightfielder received 144 points. He batted an even .300 during the regular season and was the runs batted in king with 128.

Pollet, whose 21 victories made him the "winningest" pitcher in the league, was the only other player to get more than 100 points. He received 116. Fifth place went to righthander pitcher Johnny Sain of the Boston Braves, only other 20-game winner in the circuit.

BEACHES DEPEND ON HUSKY NEGRO TO BEAT ARGOS

George Edwards Playing Fine Ball Since Moving Over From Alouettes

Toronto Nov. 22. (CP)— To the record-conscious, seeking to rate these two Toronto teams that will contest the Eastern Canada football crown Saturday, one key figure stood out today as a man who may overcome the odds between the under-dog Balmy Beach and the Dominion Champion Argonauts.

Dominating every discussion and the major reason the Argos are quoted 2-1 favorite and higher—is the name of big Joe Krol, but some times there is mention of a dusky giant, one of those unsung linemen, who may prove his nemesis.

He is George Edwards, the husky, speedy Negro from Kentucky State University who came to the Ontario Rugby Football Union team via Montreal Alouettes.

Edwards burst into the Beach lineup late in the season, and since his coming nothing seems to have gone wrong for Toronto's Cinderella boys.

A third-place team in the regular schedule, they upset Toronto Indians 12-7 in the opening play-off round and repeated 13-6 over Hamilton Wildcats. Both these teams, who finished tied for the top, had trounced the Beach mercilessly twice in early scheduled matches.

Taper Off Training

If Krol were discounted, the tendency would be to rate these two teams about evenly. The big triple-threat halfback threw the two touchdown passes that beat the Beach, 14-2, when the same two clubs clashed in the 1945 final. If anything, the Beach appeared to have added the most strength since then.

Both teams tapered off training last night—no scrimmages but some signal drills and throwing the ball around. The Beach stressed forward pass defence, time and again running through the same sequences as they sought to line up protection against the slingshot arm of Joe Krol.

That workout emphasized the Challengers expect the major threat to come through the air and from Krol. Throughout the tough big four season, no team proved able to stop the big halfback from Windsor. When the chips were down and there was little to indicate the Beach could.

But if they do, and if any one player does it, the logical man seems the burly, hard-charging Edwards.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 22 (CP)—Now that most of Major League baseball's managerial problems are settled, the big player deals are coming up. Despite glowing promises in the spring, last season was a disappointment in many respects and the old, prewar quality sometimes failed to materialize...At present, most clubs in the National and American leagues are figuring on strengthening their lineups with trades ...The New York Daily News report that the Yankees are in the market for a first baseman and are casting covetous glances toward Mickey Vernon of Washington, top A.L. batsman, Washington Manager Clark Griffith told the News, however, that Vernon was not for sale.

Rose Bowl Blues

The Rose Bowl classic is still the most puzzling tangle of the autumn sports picture...First Army's great football team, unbeaten in 27 starts, was touted for the big New Year's Day contest in Pasadena...then a deal was made with the Big Nine and Illinois is said to be favored.

Old Perpetual Motion

Local pro football supporters finally are getting around to recognizing Ken Strong, dubbed by the New York Times "the grand old man of the gridiron".. Next Sunday will be Ken Strong Day at the Polo Grounds when New York Giants meet Pittsburgh Steelers...Strong, an all-time great, still is active at 39...He's been in football for 24 years and started the professional game in 1929...Although his black hair is sprinkled with gray he's still one of the best placement kickers in the United States...That reminds us that a few years back Johnny Blood, then with Kenosha Cardinals, played against Winnipeg Blue Bombers...Blood had played 16 years of pro football and before that several years of college football. But he still could kick that ball as well as anyone we ever saw.

Chips Off The Sports Block

Shapely Vic Christie (he's six feet two and streamlined, girls) takes on Karl Krippler Davis (of the "Dash - his - head - into - the - ropes" Davises of old Texas) in the main bout in the Arena mat program on Friday night.

Christie and Davis should make one of those unforgettable wrestling encounters that happen once in a long time. The tall beautifully built Vic is a perfect contrast to the burly bruising Davis who likes (he says) to "get my hands on just such white-meat as that cutie-boy Christie." However, even Davis should admit that Vigorous Vic is not the set-up he might be considered if you judged him only by his handsome face.

The bigger of the two famous Christie boys is one of the best of all the heavyweights when it comes to mat science. The California Comet was not called that nick-name for his good looks. Maybe it will be too fast for the heavier but slower Krippler. But watch out for that "shoulder-smash" Vic old boy, because it has ruined quite a few nice young fellows in the mat sport.

Olaf Olson the huge Swede meets another tall man in Ben Sharpe and Ben's younger but still larger brother Mike takes on long Henry Piers to complete the wrestling program.

Bob Hope, one of radio's funniest men, and now part owner of the Cleveland Indians, is as witty off the air and screen as he is on them. The irresponsible Hope visited the Tribe's manager Bill Veeck, who recently had a leg amputated because of war wounds, as he lay in his hospital bed in Cleveland.

• • •

Hope moved with professional ease past the "Do Not Disturb" sign on Bill Veeck's door and shook hands warmly with his fellow-stockholder in the Indians.

"Hiya, fella," was his greeting.

The comedian's big eyes swept the circle of reporters and photographers crowded along the walls.

"Secret meeting, eh?" he grinned.

A young woman in white squeezed her way through the jam and stood uncertainly until Veeck invited her to move in.

"Are you Bill's nurse?" asked Bob.

"I'm a doctor," she replied.

Hope signed her autograph book, meantime mumbling to Veeck that he certainly knew how to pick his hospitals.

"A doctor like that," he observed later, "could break down your health and build it up in the same day."

A Cleveland friend reached Hope by way of Veeck's bedside telephone.

"I'll be here for some time yet," Bob told him. "I haven't decided whether to keep Veeck next year or not. He'll have to start showing some pep around this town. Meanwhile, he has promised to let me polish the bats at training camp."

The photographers were a flashing phalanx, slightly handicapped by the trapeze arrangements which Bill used to pull himself into a sitting position. The gadget always seemed to be in front of the faces of the principals.

"Will you sit on the side of the bed, Bob?" asked one lensman.

Hope accommodated, telling Veeck that he probably needed the rest more than Bill did. He wasn't kidding. He had flown from New York the morning before for a book department—he displayed his ink-stained fingers — and was scheduled to return to the big town the same evening. He looked tired.

"Where are we training next spring?" he asked Veeck.

"Tuscon," Bill replied. "We will spend a lot of time on the Coast."

"Great", Hope exclaimed. "We have to finish at least three positions ahead of Pittsburgh, or I won't be able to walk onto the same lot with that Crosby."

A tardy photographer asked for a picture, and when his shutter clicked without the accompanying flash, he said: "Just a minute, please."

"Yes," Hope agreed. "Try a bulb this time. That was a great rehearsal."

Seems as if the former middleweight champion Kid McCoy was mixed up in all sorts of boxing double crosses. After this pillar published the yarn re the Kid and Peter Maher, Harry Robinson, local boxing fan and referee comes up with this one. Harry knows his fights and apparently has a memory a mile long.

"The worst double cross in the history of boxing," Harry pens, "was when Kid McCoy tricked Tommy Ryan for the middleweight championship of the world. The Kid had been a sparring partner for Ryan once and he came to the Irishman with the hard-luck story that he was out of shape, not in training and needed the mazuma.

"But when they met," Harry recalls, "McCoy the younger of the two, fooled Ryan with his cleverness and took the decision for the title." Thanks Harry m'lad for the info.

There were high hockey jinks down Montreal way the other night when the old boys of the Canadiens, augmented with a couple of wrestlers and the famous King Clancy took on the current edition of Les Habs in a charity ice brawl.

But the aging limbs and creaking joints couldn't take it. Gone was that flashing speed, stickhandling wizardry and bumptious bruising body checks of yesteryer as the boys of the old brigade fought valiantly for two periods to match the stuff of the modern stars.

After the game, the King cracked "Every time I look up a Canadien was skating past me so fast I nearly got pneumonia from the breeze." "And they went by us pretty fast coming back," moaned Pit Lepine. "The way they were going I never caught up with them," groaned Sylvia Mantha.

"It was the first time in my life as a hockey player that I was ever so mixed up" chortled the Clancy. "In the old days I used to yell at the coach, 'Let me go on.' Last night I was screaming "get me outa here." In any event the modern edition of the colorful Habitants led by Rocket Richard, Lach and Blake nudged the oldtimers out 9-4 in a two-period brawl.

U.A.W. Head Calls For $12,000,000 Common War Chest

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 21—(AP) — Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, called for a $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 C.I.O. "common war chest" to back any single union in a fight for higher wages.

Mr. Reuther, supporting a wage resolution at the eighth C. I. O. convention, indicated his union would seek a 20-per-cent pay increase from General Motors Corporation.

"The average earnings in the nation have depreciated 20 per cent from January, 1945," Mr. Reuther declared.

He said it was the duty of the C.I.O. to "defeat the myth that you've got to have higher prices to give higher wages."

St. Mikes Hold Scoring Limelight In Junior Series

Toronto, Nov. 22—(CP) — Undefeated in eight starts, St. Michael's Majors also hold the scoring limelight in the Ontario Hockey Association's junior "A" series with four players sharing the top positions.

Fleming Mackell, fiery St. Mike winger, is the current point leader with 11 goals and eight assists for 19 points. Rudy Migay is second with 17 points while Eddie Sandford and Bobby Paul are tied in third position with 16 points.

The leaders:	G	A	P

PRO BASKETBALL TAKING HOLD IN MANY CITIES

Crowds in Toronto Average 5,000 and Moguls Satisfied Game Will Draw More

By JAN MACNEIL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 22 (CP)—Doc Naismith would stand aghast these nights could he only see how the game he started with peach baskets has come along until now, as a new professional sport in his own Dominion, Basketball seems assured of a permanent place on the nation's Big Time sports calendar.

Showing now in Maple Leaf Gardens under professional auspices for the first time in Canada, basketball is drawing crowds of 5,000 or so. Moguls of the game say they're satisfied the game will draw still more fans.

And Dr. James A. Naismith of Carleton Place, Ont., who started basketball in the gymnasium of a Springfield, Mass., Y.M.C.A. to keep his youthful students in trim, would never know the game now. Its adoption in the United States and development into a pro sport drawing more than 90,000,000 spectators a year, has brought changes aplenty since those peach crate days of 1891.

Toronto Huskies, only Canadian entry in the Basketball Association of America, is responsible for pulling the hardwood sport out of the Community Gym class.

Tronto's average of 5,000 fans a game compares favorably with unofficial averages for single games in larger United States cities. Chicago is averaging 15,000 a game followed by New York with 10,000. Providence, St. Louis and Cleveland are slightly outdrawing Toronto play before larger crowds than teams in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia or Boston.

Meanwhile preparations are underway on the Pacific Coast for the opening of another pro league with Vancouver the only Canadian entry. Promoters are watching the experiment in the east with keen interest. The coast loop will include teams from Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, Yakima, Bellingham, Salem, Spokane and Vancouver.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

First and second place in the National Hockey League scoring race became an all-Detroit affair after last night's game. Billy (The Kid) Taylor notched an assist to boost his total to seven goals and 14 assists for 21 points while clubmate Roy Conacher popped in a goal to break a tie with Maurice Richard, Montreal, and move into sole possession of second berth with eight goals and nine assists. The only other change was made by Adam Brown, Detroit, whose two goals lifted him into a four-way tie for fourth place with 13 points.

The leaders:	G.	A.	Pts.
Taylor, Detroit	7	14	21
Conacher, Detroit	8	9	17
Richard, Montreal ..	10	6	16
Abel, Detroit	8	5	13
Brown, Detroit	8	5	13

Toronto, Nov. 22 — (CP)—At Stanley Stadium up Copper Cliff way in Northern Ontario they've got this midget N.H.L. business operating all-out this year, patterned after hockey's Big Time to the extent of having leading midget performers and then farm teams and also minor farm teams.

Eighteen-year-old Yves Le Borgne, a graduate of five years' play in the Cliff Kids' League himself, is in charge of the set-up this season, a set-up now in its 10th year of operation.

This winter he has four major league names in use — Rangers, Canadiens, Maple Leafs and Red Wings. What with the farm and minor teams for each of the "name" entries it means a total of 12 teams to play once a week.

So you can find kids streaming to Stanley Stadium every Saturday morning from before sun-up until it's time for lunch. And not only is it good for the kids but the midget league functions too as a training pool for likely recruits for Copper Cliff's Red Men in the Northern Ontario Junior hockey League.

Councillor Ralph McCreath, figure skating champion himself, gives the following reasons to Bobbie (Toronto Globe and Mail) Rosenfeld for the Canadian Amateur figure skating Association choosing Barbara Ann Scott of Ottawa to represent Canada in the world championships in Sweden next February:

"The executive council selected Miss Scott for two reasons, (1) because of the time element and (2) her blue ribbon record."

McCreath, who kept in skating form while he was in the Army by taking occasional vigorous workouts on the ice in London, added: "We couldn't wait until after the Canadian championships to make our choice. It would be most unfair to the skater because . . . the world classic is skated outdoors . . . it would take maybe three, maybe four weeks to become accustomed to the change from indoors."

SPORTS DIRECTOR HURT

Toronto, Nov. 21 — (CP) — George Duthie, sports director of the Canadian National Exhibition, received the most serious injuries in an accident today involving four vehicles at the downtown intersection of Church and Shuter Streets.

Duthie was taken to hospital with back injuries. Less seriously hurt were David and Arnon Burt of Toronto.

Duthie told police that a bus struck his car and in attempting to miss the bus his car struck an automobile in which were the two Burts. The Burt vehicle in turn struck a parked taxi.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When Mix R. Abel raises his bridge partner, he is apt to raise Cain. His method of determining tricks is not accurate. Never is he sure whether his boost is too high or not enough.

What he needs is the Horse Sense count; its basis for the first bid by either partner; the requirement for each raise. He would then hit the head on the nail every time.

Each high card (ace or king or queen) is a trick. Each short card (each card short of three in any suit) is a trick. Add these in your hand to know how many tricks you have. That's all, brother.

Opening one bidder promises (among other things))five tricks. For each trick he has an excess of five, he can later raise once; an increase over the last partnership number.

Partner of the opening one bidder is assumed to have (among other things) two tricks. For each trick in excess of two, such a partner can raise once; an increase over the last pair number.

You are sitting north in this pair:

North	South
♠ 6 5	♠ Q 7 4
♥ 10 6 2	♥ A Q J 7 4
♦ Q 9 5 2	♦ A K 3
♣ A K 7 4	♣ 9 6

Your partner has six tricks; five high cards and one short club. You have four tricks; three high cards and one short spade. With a total of ten tricks, your pair should reach a four contract.

Find out your best combined trump suit. Tell each other exactly how many tricks you have. Reach the contract that calls for a total of that many tricks. What could be sweeter?

South opens with a heart; five tricks. Respond with two clubs; nine raise that shows three tricks. Partner then bids two hearts; no raise. He still shows no more than five tricks.

Your second bid is three hearts; a raise to show your fourth trick. He then bids four hearts; a raise that shows his sixth trick.

It works like clockwork, precision made.

Montreal's film company, Quebec Productions, headed by Paul L'Anglais, has signed Walter Huston for two pictures scheduled to go before the cameras as soon as the company's previous picture, "The Stronghold" with Paul Lukas and Helmut Dantine, is finished. Toronto-born Huston has recently appeared in "Mission to Moscow" and the controversial Jane Russel film, "The Outlaw."

"The Outlaw," which has been playing to luke-warm reviews in some Canadian cities, is still having tough sledding in New York. The legal see-saw between Producer Howard Hughes and the New York City licence commissioner, Benjamin Fielding, has taken another tilt with Mr. Hughes seeking Supreme Court action to prevent interference with showing of the five-year-old film.

Mr. Fielding and Police Commissioner Arthur W. Wallander both have described the picture as obscene, indecent and immoral and declared that anyone exhibiting it would be arrested.

Frank Sinatra will check into the Wedgewood Room of New York's Waldorf-Astoria for a limited engagement starting Nov. 29.

Producer Samuel Goldwyn's immediate production schedule of three movies includes a technicolor screen version of Gwethalyn Graham's best-selling novel, "Earth and High Heaven," set in Montreal. Gregory Peck and Joan Fontaine will be co-starred.

New York's main stem has had its face lifted by means of what is reputed to be the world's biggest neon sign set up on Broadway at 43rd St., to advertise the glittering 20th Century-Fox production of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Razor's Edge."

The world premiere of the picture was complete with stars: Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney, John Payne; celebrities: United Nations delegates, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, and a crowd estimated at 30,000 handled by 56 policemen, six of them mounted.

Major Baseball Moguls Gunning For W. Branham

(By The Canadian Press)

Major baseball league moguls are obviously gunning for William G. Bramham, president of the Association of Minor Baseball Leagues, although his term does not expire until the end of 1948. In New York last night it was stated that George Trautman, general manager of Detroit Tigers, was being groomed for the position because the majors wanted an executive of their choice. Considerable retirement pressure is being applied to the minors' chief.

Prime movers, who insist that Trautman would be available for the job, suggest a cash-retirement allowance for Bramham.

The balance of the football schedule was called off at Brewton-Parker College, Mount Vernon, Ga., yesterday when 10 members of the squad demanded promised "scholarships." Coach F. R. Jones was also discharged and the players were expelled.

Washington University at St. Louis, Mo., announced yesterday the school would revive football next year, after a war lapse, but on a strictly amateur basis next time.

Champion jockey of the English turf for the 19th time, Gordon Richards said in London yesterday he would visit the United States next year and might ride if an important race were arranged.

The International Federation of Football Associations announced at Paris yesterday that the membership of the Soviet Football Federation had been received by the world-governing body.

Ronnie James, lightweight champion of Britain, yesterday started training in Australia for his fight with Vic Patrick, Australian titleholder, at Sydney, Dec. 14.

Gambut, five-year-old champion of the South African turf, is to be shipped from Capetown to England in January to race there next season. He won his 19th race Saturday at Johannesburg.

Joe Baksi, Pennsylvanian heavyweight, is scheduled to return to England early in the year for a match with Bruce Woodcock, British champion. Baksi recently knocked out Freddie Mills there.

Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., led yesterday's opening round of the Invitation Golf tournament at Atlanta, Ga., with a five-under-par 67. Seven strokes behind was Stan Horne of Montreal, being tied for sixth place with Dai Rees, British star.

Because the trip would keep the players away from studies, Queen's University, Kingston, yesterday cancelled basketball dates with Canisius College at Buffalo and at Niagara University Dec. 4 and 5.

Prices dropped sharply yesterday at the Keeneland fall sales, Lexington, Ky., with 137 thoroughbreds selling for $351,950, an average of $2,532 each.

In three games last night of the Basketball Association of America, St. Louis Bombers trounced the Celtics 65-53 at Boston, Washington Capitols handed a 66-58 defeat to the Steamrollers at Providence while Chicago edged the Warriors 65-63 at Philadelphia.

RAMBLERS CLOSE TOHERSHEYBEARS IN LOOP RACE

Team Being Broken Up in Order to Help Parent Club, N. Y. Rangers

(By The Canadian Press)

New Haven Ramblers were breathing down the necks of the front-running Hershey Bears in the Eastern Division race of the American Hockey League today.

Ramblers' 3-2 verdict over St. Louis Flyers at New Haven last night leaves them only three points behind the divisional leaders. Flyers share the western half's basement with Buffalo.

Ramblers are doing so well in the junior circuit that the management of the parent club, the last-place New York Rangers of the National League, has gone to New Haven for help.

In an effort to provide some scoring spark for Rangers, New York manager Frank Boucher announced after last night's game that he was taking New Haven wingman Joe Bell and defenceman Bill Juzda to the parent club. They will play for Rangers against Montreal tomorrow night.

Bell, who scored the winning goal last night, has a record for 13 games of 10 goals and four assists. Juzda in 16 games has scored two goals and four assists.

Ramblers had to come from behind to subdue Flyers after St. Louis had taken 2-1 lead early in the last period. Rudy Kampman's goal had given their visitors their brief lead but Ramblers' Alex Shibicky tied the score on a pass from Norm Burns. Two minutes later Bell took Joe Levandoski's pass and beat Hec Highton, St. Louis goalie, to the net.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma made an engagement over the telephone this afternoon to go out with pop and play bridge tonight, and she hung up saying, Oh dear, I couldn't very well say no under the circumstances.

What circumstances were they, ma? I said, and ma said, Oh, just circumstances. Your father swore a sollem oath he wouldn't play any more bridge this week, but maybe if he thoroughly injoys his dinner the memory may linger on and he wont sit through the evening looking like a condemmed man at Nurremberg. I think I'll make him a batch of devilled eggs to serve with the salad. Nothing makes his face light up like the site of devilled eggs, she said.

And she sent me around to the market for a dozen eggs so she could put some on to boil, and while I was bringing them home the end of my nose started to itch all by itself, and I quick put up my hand to scratch it and I made a mistake and started to put up the hand with the box of eggs in it, and it dropped on the sidewalk with a squash, and I thought Oh boy, I'm afraid to open it and look.

Which just then some loose egg started to leek through the bottom of the box, proving there was no use looking, and I quick terned the box upside down to help the eggs run back in their shells, and when I got home I said, Hay ma, I bet pop would injoy a chickin liver omlett even more than devilled eggs.

I believe he might, but it would be impossible to find chickin livers this late in the day, ma said, and I said, I bet it wouldn't be any more impossible than hard boiling some of these eggs, ma.

The result being ma quick looked in the box and only 8 eggs were broke, hardly being more than half, and ma made devilled eggs with the other 4 and pop ate them all with an injoyable expression on account of nobody else saying they wanted any, especially me.

CHAPTER 2.

Upon Betty this first marital venture with a man thirty-seven years her senior had not made much of an impression. She had told Jennifer that "Dr." Richie was an inventor, and when Jennifer had asked her what inventors did, Betty had answered crisply that she didn't know, but she knew they didn't ever have any money. Whatever its flaws, this phase of her life had lasted less than a year; then Betty had found herself widowed, with a tawny-headed, square-shouldered, firm-jawed little stepdaughter to raise, and had promptly married again, keeping Jennifer with her, partly from affection and partly because the ten-thousand-dollar life insurance policy had been made out in Jennifer's name. Betty had assumed a guardianship, and ever since Jennifer had lived with Betty.

Clinton Slade, the second husband, had been a somewhat unsatisfactory character; life had occasionaly been uncomfortable for them all during his last few years with the family. He had not given Betty enough money, he had disappeared for long periods, had come home demanding the care and meals and consideration due to the most exemplary of husbands. After little "Elna's" birth he had deserted his wife and children, stating that he was finished with the whole lot of them. Betty had had to go to court to claim support for her daughters. There had been an alimony allotment, too, which Clint sometimes overlooked. But to Jennifer's little-girl surprise a certain friendship continued to exist between the divorced couple; Clint occasionally took Betty to dinner, Betty often quoted him and might bring the girls home presents from "Papa."

"This'll give you a fine idea of men and marriage!" she would say to Jennifer. "It isn't my fault, it's just the way men act!" But at heart she was a good-natured, hard-working little woman, and she liked her independence. An aged and homeless woman had lived with her for years, helping with the children; now Nanny Sooky had been transferred to the poorhouse, hopelessly invalided and somewhat senile, and Jennifer and Betty handled the domestic problems with only what help Frances and Elinor could give them.

The flat to which Jennifer returned after the day's work was on a long straight street that ran in shabby three-storied mediocrity from Market Street to Golden Gate Park. On the corners were stores, small one-story groceries or drug stores; the mid-blocks showed lines of gray wooden buildings with steps rising to the parlor floors, basements outside of which obscure tailors, furriers, secondhand book dealers, dressmakers put out modern signs. Teachers of music and languages often occupied the first floors; most of the houses made microscopic bids for trade with cards bearing the words "Home Table," "Furnished Rooms," or "Modes." All about, for many blocks on the long slope that rose toward the old cemeteries, the houses and stores were just alike; no matter what route Jennifer chose for her walk home she saw the same uniform grayness, the same battered little homemade signs, the same chaff and straws and papers blown idly by the inevitable late afternoon winds against the steps and down into the areaways.

Betty Slade's apartment was on the top, third floor. Jennifer had a key. Casual callers rang a bell and were admitted by the operation of an iron handle, far upstairs in the Slade hallway; the door clicked convulsively, allowing visitors to enter. But with her key Jennifer need make no sound and sometimes, if she was very tired, could reach her small front bedroom and lie blissfully still for half an hour before the children discovered that she was at home.

Sharing the street front of the flat with this narrow slice of bedroom was the parlor with Betty's best furniture in it; a big armchair with a split leather back that had belonged to Jennifer's father, a dignified desk that she remembered from baby days too and many a smaller article, so that the room was well filled with lamps and pictures, plaster kewpies from beach expeditions, tidied and painted china plates, fringed chairs and tufted chairs, cushions and plaques, Clint's old banjo, a complete set of Bulwer-Lytton in shabby chocolate-colored cloth, book ends and radio, victrola, and an onyx column with a statue of a Neapolitan girl standing upon it. There was a dusty fern in the bay window; the curtains were of white mesh dotted with pink chenille. Some sheet music and some old books of songs that had belonged to Jennifer's mother were piled on the lowest shelf of a small glass-doored bookcase. "Mary Jennifer Richie, 1915," was written in a strong clear handwriting on more than one of the songs.

Elna slept on the couch in this room; Frances, whose name had been shortened by herself in some adenoidal period of babyhood to "Faddy," slept in the bedroom back of the parlor with her mother. Beyond that bedroom was another room, cold and unfurnished, with odds and ends of household articles in it, a trunk, the stepladder, heaps of magazines and newspapers, a fine microscope mounted on a stand, the ice-cream freezer. Beyond this room was the bathroom, then the kitchen with an outlying tangle of laundry and platform and passage to long outside steps, and next to the kitchen the dining room where the family did most of its living.

Everything in these rear rooms had been cheap and tawdry from the start, and was now chipped, stained, worn, shabby beyond all repairing or refurnishing. But neither Jennifer nor Betty ever thought of the place as anything but adequate, complete, infinitely comforting and comfortable. They had each a favorite upholstered chair and a favorite lamp; there were radio programs to discuss; there were familiar dishes to concoct in the kitchen. That the dining-room walls wore a dreary red paper paneled in black wood, that the kitchen walls were spattered and stained, that the stove plates were loose and the floor dark with grease, that the windows gave upon a dreary vista of dilapidated back yards and kitchen windows—these facts disturbed Betty and Jennifer not at all because they were unchangeable. Changes meant money, and they had never had more than just enough for daily necessities, and sometimes not quite that. To consider any changes at all would have been to consider drastic revolutions; no such upheaval ever occurred to Betty and Jennifer.

Jennifer could come home, sink at once into the familiar routine of cooking, cleaning, table-setting, gossiping without ever seeing her surroundings at all. To pick up a worn dish towel or fling a limp, spotted tablecloth into place was second nature; Jennifer would glance at the grimed and spotted stove, the littered table and disorderly sink. Pork chops for dinner, and baked sweets and bakery doughnuts and tea; good enough.

"Mind if I heat up the cabbage too, Betty?"

"Nope. Go ahead. I'll finish this program in a minute and get strated. Shut up for just a minute, will you, everybody?"

Faddy and Elna had homework to do, or they crawled about on the floor choo-chooing trains around on tracks. Sometimes Jennifer did the little girls' compositions for them or shamelessly worked out their mathematical problems. They were a rather silent, watchful pair with blue eyes and dark hair just alike. They lived a mysterious life of their own in which school, Donald Duck, newspaper funnies, ten-cent comic magazines, chocolate malted milks, root-beer floats, and charm bracelets played the most important roles. Sometimes Betty curled their hair with irons and dressed them up elaborately for Sunday School; most of the time they amused and occupied themselves with scant supervision.

On the evening of the day upon which she had her farewell talk with Sidney Borrows, Jennifer was very quiet. After supper the little girls finished their lessons and went to bed, and Betty sat listening to the radio, yawning and working out a crossword puzzle. She and Jennifer were in the dining room, which was warm and pleasant on this cold winter night; Jennifer was at the table, absent-mindedly playing solitaire, with her gaze now and then leaving the cards to fix itself on space. The four homely walls enclosed them in privacy and peace; Betty often said that they were lucky, and Jennifer had never found any good reason to disagree with her. All up and down the long gray streets other little groups of two and three were shut into evening solitude and silence, feeling themselves fortunate over their dinners of sausages and fried potatoes, coffee and bakery cakes, content with an evening of radio music, newspapers, and idle talk, close, warm air, stained and distempered walls. They were like the others.

"Jen," said Betty unexpectedly on this particular evening, "Connor said you were the prettiest girl in the neighborhood. Said so today."

Jennifer looked up with a surprised smile lighting her sober little face. Connor was the groceryman at the corner; he was a great one for blarney.

"That new hair wave you've got and your figure being so good," Betty said, watching her stepdaughter thoughtfully, "I've noticed it myself."

"Thanks," Jennifer said, slightly embarrassed, her thoughts dragged with difficulty from the direction they always took nowadays.

"I'll tell you," Betty began and paused. "Look," she went on, "boys will begin to notice you; they do already. Look at Rob Younger."

"Oh, him," Jennifer murmured scornfully. A white-eyelashed boy, Rob, a morderline mental case who had shambled about miserably in her neighborhood during her last weeks of high school. "He's gone to his uncle's place in Sonoma," she said.

"There'll be others," Betty predicted. "Look," she added again. "Boys down at the office make passes at you?"

Jennifer's throat was thick.

"Nope," she answered, playing her cards attentively.

"Well, they will," resumed Betty; "and looky, Jen, you've got to hold your own with them. Be friendly; I don't mind a movie now and then, you know that. But the minute a boy gets fresh you give him the air. There's nothing in it. I'll tell you—the minute a boy gets what he wants. . . ." She paused. Jennifer moved a sheaf of cards, frowned at her game. "You know what I mean? You hear the girls talking?" Betty interrupted herself to ask.

"Oh sure," Jennifer answered, looking at her and feeling the blood crawl up into her cheeks.

"Yep, I know you don't like to talk about it; you've always been a touch-me-not," Betty said; "but here's the thing. Listen. A boy likes you; he thinks the world of you; he respects you. All right, you give in because you're going to be married, and he's crazy about you and all that. Well. The minute you give in it's' all up. He has no more use for you. You think ten thousand times as much of him because you've let him have his way. But he's finished. Now get that through your head, Jen. I know you're all right because I know the kind of girl you are. But it's' different when you fall in love. You get dizzy; nothing seems to be the way it was. All you want is just to hold on to your man. That's when you make your big mistake."

MANY RIVERS

Brenjord and Chiswick.

The air ministry forecast heavy rain at times during the day but fine weather at night with moderating winds. Latest reports said the Channel gale, which rose during the night to 80-miles-an-hour, was blowing itself out. However, British troops on leave still were held upon the English and Continental coasts as the English Channel remained rough.

The south-coast gale left a trail of damaged telephone lines, trees, fences and roofs. Along with screaming winds rain and hail added to swollen rivers.

Many Rivers Overflow.

In addition to the Thames and Waveny floods, the Avon, Severn, Soar and Trent rivers have overflowed their banks.

The gale hit the Cornish coast hardest but Dover also had one of its roughest nights of the year with some gusts reaching 80-miles-an-hour and channel steamships remaining in port.

Sixty tons to the acre have fallen during the last 36 hours on all of southeast England.

London was hit yesterday by a heavy thunderstorm accompanied by hailstones which shattered many windows in the city and suburbs.

All-night guards were posted in Yorkshire where the River Soar was near flooding. Small boats were held in readiness to reach isolated houses.

Emergency Plans.

Emergency plans based on last winter's disastrous floods in these areas are ready to go into operation at a moment's notice.

At Seaford, Sussex, motorists took refuge when 30-foot waves broke over the sea wall.

In Worcestshire, the River Avon, already six feet above normal, still is rising flooding large areas of riverside fruit plantations and meadow land.

With the River Trent rising an inch every hour, villagers of Wilford, Nottinghamshire, took food, water, and fuel to their bedrooms, lifted carpets and put armchairs on tables. Early today the Trent was reported nine feet above normal.

HOGS

Toronto, Nov. 22 (CP) — Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Brantford $20.50 delivered, unchanged at Hull $20.50 delivered, unchanged at Stratford, to farmers $20.25, to truckers $20.40, delivered, at markets reporting early today.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Nov. 22 — (CP)—The stock market worked downward in quiet trading through the early session, led by the golds with a point decline. Turnover was small at 434,000 shares for the first 3 hours.

The price tone was soft for the liquor and utility issues. Distillers-Seagram, Hiram Walker and Industrial Alcohol A were off 1/4 and 1/2 and in the utilities Bell Telephone, Consumers Gas and the Winnipeg Electric issues were the weak spots. Fanny Farmer dropped 1/2.

Most of the golds were in light trade with a sizable spread showing between the bid and the asked prices. Three new junior golds were listed today. Cheskirk mines Limited sold around 22 1/2 cents; Chimo Gold Mines Limited at 57 cents and Winchester Larder Mines Limited at 36 cents.

In the base metals Labrador, Nickel and Falconbridge were down and Noranda held firm despite the start of the strike at the mine today. Home and Pacific Pete were moderately weak issues in the western oil group.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Nov. 22 —(AP)— The stock market tried for a selective comeback today, despite pessimism over the national coal walkout, but most leaders eventually resumed the retreat.

Opening declines running to a point or so soon were reduced or converted into modest advances. Dealings tapered, though, and many plus signs failed to hold. Losses of fractions to more than a point predominated near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues were unchanged to easy in mid-day dealings. Distillers Seagram and Dome Mines each slipped ⅛ and Hiram Walker ⅛. Canadian Pacific and McIntyre were unchanged.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, Nov. 22 (CP)—Produce prices in the spot market here today were reported as follows:

Pity the Poor Radio Engineer

By EDGAR SIMON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Some of the best scientific brains in the world are focused on the radio industry, constantly designing improved devices for transmission and reception. But occasionally in the life of a radio engineer something comes up that leaves him helpless, his intricate system of wire, steel and glass hopelessly snarled by circumstances over which he has no control.

These circumstances vary. A small boy with an air rifle may take a shot at a steel box atop a telephone pole. A blackbird may build its nest on the cross-arm of a pole and weave a piece of wire into the fabric. The wires may be snagged by the falling branch of a tree, or they may snap under their load of snow and ice in mid-winter.

The remedy in these cases is still relatively simple. An inspection patrol scans a few hundred miles of wire, spots the break and fixes it. But when it comes to aurora borealis, the linemen too are powerless.

To the layman, aurora borealis is the picturesque greenish glow that lights up the northern sky. To the radio engineer, telegrapher or telephone operator it is the work of the devil incarnate who apparently takes a particular delight in playing hob with Canada's communications.

For one of the most devilish aspects of aurora is its tendency to affect wires running east and west far more than north-south hookups. And Canadian communications, including both main CBC networks, run mainly east and west.

Scientists explain that aurora is the work of sunspots which appear intermittently and inexplicably in 11-year cycles and transmit weird and unpredictable electrical impulses. They add that the present bout of celestial measles is in its second year and that things will presumably get worse before they get better. This summer's manifestations were described by veteran radio engineers as the worst in 25 years and the peak of the cycle is promised sometime in 1949.

It may be a little early to pass judgment, but the first program in a new radio series of quiz shows indicates that advertising, while it may have some effect on the general public, doesn't seem to sink in too well with the men in the advertising business.

Entitled "Ad Quiz," the Wednesday night show on Toronto's CKEY features a panel of experts including three advertising men and a layman who answer queries on advertising slogans submitted by listeners.

The experts missed eight out of thirteen the first week, with orchestra leader Bobby Gimby coming up with more answers than his three advertising colleagues — Jim Knox of Ruthrauff and Ryan, Inc., Alec Phare of R. C. Smith and Son, Ltd., and Bill Edington of Dickson and Edington. Doc Lindsay produces the show and fires the questions.

PLANS LECTURE TOUR

Clad in the garb that never saw the pages of men's fashion magazines, Raymond Duncan, brother of the late Isadora Duncan, famous dancer, is shown as he walked the deck of the Ile de France on arrival in New York. Duncan is scheduled to begin a lecture tour of the U. S. with several of his followers.

RENEWS PLEA

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 22 — (AP)—In a renewed plea for universal military training, Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commanding officer of United States army ground forces, said in an address last night that if a third great war came, "it would take an eventual army of between 12,000,000 and 16,000,000 men to win it."

WRESTLING BOARD

London, Nov. 22 (Reuters) — A British wrestling Board of Control, to have the same functions in professional wrestling as the British Board of Control has in boxing, was established last night at a meeting over which Maurice Webb, Labor member of parliament, presided.

First president of the Board is Lord Mountevans (better known as Admiral "Evans of the Broke").

It is hoped the Board will be in full operation in six months.

Bulk Purchases Of Turkeys Must Not Exceed Ceiling

Ottawa, Nov. 22 — All bulk purchases of Christmas turkeys by industrial concerns or service clubs for distribution among employees or other persons must not exceed the wholesale ceiling prices W. G. Masson, Prices and Supply Representative for the Ottawa-Brockville region of the Prices Board said today.

Mr. Masson went on to say that in many cases industrial companies have been willing to pay the retail price demanded by some suppliers in order to obtain a sufficient supply of Christmas turkeys. "This practice of supplying bulk purchasers with turkeys at higher than ceiling prices has resulted in a serious shortage in retail stores where the retailer cannot, by-law, pay more than the wholesale ceiling price," Mr. Masson said.

He also explained that when a company bulk purchases turkeys for resale to the employees the wholesale ceiling price still applies and this price must not be exceeded. "This applies in all such cases", Mr. Masson said, "irrespective of the distribution by the bulk purchaser after delivery to him."

"A fair distribution of turkeys during the Christmas season must be maintained," he said, "arrangements have been made to check transactions of this nature carefully and prompt action will be taken against the seller and the buyer, if any infractions are revealed."

Here and There in P. E. County

Melville — These beautiful November days remind us of the lines by the late Susanna Moodie on "Indian Summer."

"By the purple haze that lies
On the distant rocky height,
By the deep-blue of the skies,
By the smoky amber light
Through the forest arches streaming,
Where nature on her throne sits dreaming
And the sun is scarcely gleaming
Through the cloudless snowy white—
Winter's lovely herald greets us
Ere the ice-bound giant meets us."

Hillier Bazaar

The members of the guild of Christ Church, Hillier, held their annual bazaar in Hillier town hall on Friday afternoon. Ladies were busy at the various tables selling a variety of articles. There was a good attendance, guests coming from Trenton, Wellington and Melville. Unexpected but welcome visitors were Mr. G. Tustin M.P., and Mrs. Tustin, who called and joined friends at tea hour. They were enjoying a drive through the county having called to view the new Anglican Church, now nearing completion.

Post Nuptial Reception

A reception was held on Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Palmer, Consecon Lake, for his brother Mr. Howard Palmer and bride (nee Miss Goldie Wannamaker) on their return from their wedding trip to New Liskeard. Some twenty guests enjoyed a delicious supper with the newlyweds.

On Monday night they were serenaded by a charivari party, who were invited in the home and treated to lavish refreshments.

Mr. Ralph Margetson, a veteran of the recent war, went to Kingston for medical treatment. He was accompanied by Mrs. Margetson. His many friends hope his health may be improved.

Mrs. Arthur Kinnear Entertains at Afternoon Tea

Under the auspices of Melville Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Arthur Kinnear opened her home for an afternoon tea on Monday, Nov. 18, honoring Mrs. Garfield French who with Mr. French, will soon be leaving to reside in Belleville. An address of appreciation was read by Mrs. Kinnear, and Mrs. A. Carley on behalf of the Aid made the presentation of a pitcher vase. Mrs. French expressed her thanks and all joined hands in singing Auld Lang Syne. Refreshments were enjoyed, Miss Muriel Carley and Miss June Garbutt serving, while Mrs. J. Root poured tea.

President Heads Back From Florida To Battle Lewis

Christmas Tree Lighting In 21 States Discontinued

By NORMAN WALKER

Washington, Nov. 23 (AP). — Amid trastic moves by the United States government to east tightening soft coal shortages President Truman headed back from Florida today to resume personal command of his "finish fight" with John L. Lewis. Meanwhile it was reported the big and little inch pipelines, wartime conveyors of oil, may be put to work carrying natural gas from Texas to the east for the emergency fuel.

A bright dimout was ordered to halt unnecessary use of electricity —even Christmas tree lighting— in 21 states and the District of Columbia as attorneys for the Department of Justice and the United Mine Workers prepared their arguments for the court contempt proceedings Monday which might put Lewis in jail.

The government contends Lewis is in contempt of Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, who ordered him to call off his contract "termination" which led 400,000 workers to leave the 3,300 government-held mines. Lewis has said nothing since the injunction was issued Monday.

Mr. Truman was due back in Washington by mid-afternoon along with his chief labor advisor, Reconversion Director John R. Steelman.

Dimout Orders Issued.

The civivlian production administration issued effective Monday, Nov. 25, a dimout order more far-reaching than those of wartime. Administrator John D. Small said that because of greater industrial consumption now "the situation confronting the American people today is much more serious than that brought about by the coal strike last spring.

He added that electric utilities have an average 60-day coal supply, gas utilities "considerably less", and many in both categories already are low on fuel.

Effective at 6 p.m. E.S.T. Monday, the order bans use of electricity for lighting store windows or advertising signs and for air conditioning and refrigeration except where essential.

It requires a 25 per cent cut in electricity used for street lighting, building except homes, and for running passenger elevators and escalators. All Christmas lighting displays are out.

The government has frozen all coal stocks outside the hands of consumers. The navy also ordered its district commanlers to sell any excess coal to essential consumers and yive use of spare power generators.

STREETS SLIPPERY DURING MORNING

Streets and highways in the city and district were in an extremely slippery condition early Saturday morning as a light fall of snow became packed onto the pavements turning the surfaces into a sheet of ice.

No reports of serious accidents were received, although farmers attending the local produce market stated that several autos on the provincial highways had gone into ditches or turned around on the road.

In the city motorists had difficulty in negotiating the grades, as these and street intersections were extremely slippery. The city public works department were out early applying sand, but before the noon hour the sun had done much to melt away the snow.

WAXING PLANT AFIRE

Shakespeare, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP).—The Stovell Co. turnip waxing plant at easterly end of this village six miles east of Stratford, was enveloped in flames this morning and firemen from Stratford, who were assisting in the losing battle to fight flames, said the building could not be saved. Loss might be about $10,000.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, November 23 (CP)— Synopsis: A strong northwesterly flow of cold air continued over Ontario and adjacent areas causing considerable cloudiness and scattered snowflurries particularly in the lee of the Great Lakes. The gale force winds which swept the province on Friday have moderated in southwestern Ontario and will decrease throughout Saturday in the remainder of the province. Temperatures throughout the province will continue below freezing on Saturday falling below zero in the northern sections Saturday night, but will moderate on Sunday.

Two-Way Fight For Mayoralty Is Indicated

Indications at eleven o'clock this morning point to a two-way mayoralty fight between Mayor Frank Follwell and Alderman Harold Woodley.

Ex-mayor Glencoe Thompson, who was nominated yesterday had not qualified up to this hour and refused to comment on his stand. He did intimate, however, that he might withdraw from the field.

At eleven a.m. Mayor Follwell and Alderman Woodley had qualified as candidates for the mayoralty as did eight aspirants for aldermanic honors. These included Alderman Harold Armstrong, Ald. H. J. Clarke, Angus B. Duffy, Ald. Edward E. Follwell, Harry Hill, Clare Ridley, George Brown, Arthur Keegan.

The following have qualified for school trustees: Mrs. Violet Camken, Enos David, Geo. Wishart, Arthur L. Burke, E. A. Geen, Alex. Nathan, Frank Creeggan.

Apples Feature Outside Market, Chickens at 40c lb.

Prices for all lines of produce held firm on the local farmers' market with eggs being quoted at 50 cents the dozen for firsts, 45 cents for mediums and 40 cents for pullets.

Apples were again featured on the outside market with 1st grade McIntosh bringing 65 cents the small basket. Talman Sweets 75 cents the basket, with McIntosn and Delicious fetching $3 the hamper. Starks were 50 cents the basket and Scarlet Pippins 45 cents.

Chickens sold generally at 40 cents the pound with a few ducks being offered at 50 cents the pound.

On the vegetable market potatoes held at $1.50 the bag, while carrots, beets and turnips brought the usual prices.

Whitefish sold at from 30 to 35 cents the pound, while piko sold at 20 cents.

Several loads of stovewood were offered, one farmer quoting $31 for 2½ cords of dry soft wood while hardwood brought around $15 the cord. Young pigs were quoted at the customary $6.50 to $7 each.

BRITAIN, U.S. FACE SHOWDOWN ON VETO ISSUE

Russia Wants to Limit Use of Veto in U.N. Security Council; Peace Progress Slow

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Nov. 23 —(AP)— Great Britain and the United States faced a showdown with Russia today over their efforts to limit use of the veto in the United Nations Security Council, and new difficulties hindered progress on the drafting of European peace settlements.

As the Big Four Foreign Ministers Council wound up its third week of peace-making sessions, this was the tangled diplomatic situation:

1. France served notice she is standing firm on her demand for internationalization of the German Ruhr and believes that, contrary to the United States view, the political future of Germany should be mapped before its economic problems are solved. German discussions are still to be undertaken by the foreign ministers.

2. The veto issue, which the foreign ministers have lifted out of U. N. debate temporarily, was slated for discussion at 3:30 p.m. E.S.T. Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia was expected to respond at that time to British and U. S. proposals for big power agreements voluntarily to limit use of the veto. Most diplomats foresaw Soviet disapproval in view of Russia's hard and fast opposition to any veto modifications.

3. Following the veto talks, in which China joins with the Big Four — Mr. Bevin, M. Molotov, Mr. Byrnes and M. Couve de Murville — were slated to resume their arguments over the kind of government to set up for the proposed free territory of Trieste.

This is the central issue with which they have struggled since they first met three weeks ago. Until they agree there can be no Italian peace treaty — and beyond the Italian treaty lie pacts for the Balkan States and Finland, and the whole problem of the German peace settlement.

While plans for a Trieste government are slowly being whipped into shape, the single most controversial question left appears to be M. Molotov's demand for an agreement that British, U. S. and Yugoslav troops will be withdrawn from Trieste three months after the Italian treaty is signed.

Mr. Bevin and Mr. Byrnes flatly oppose this claiming it might leave Trieste without security forces at a critical juncture. Mr. Byrnes offered a compromise formula last night to guarantee withdrawal of troops when the governor of Trieste notified the U. N. Security Council that he no longer needed them. M. Molotov, holding out for a flat deadline, said this was unacceptable.

Atomic Warfare Would Bring Wholesale Death to Canadians

Ottawa, Nov. 23 — (CP)—Canada's future in the world of the atom began to emerge today, and the one firm prospect appeared to be wholesale death for Canadian civilians in any new war.

From the top research expert of the armed forces came the grim warning that atomic bombs will destroy Canadian cities and kill non-combatant Canadians by the thousands if war comes.

Simultaneously, officials disclosed some operations of Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board, which under Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton is working not only to control but to develop the mighty atom for purposes of both war and peace.

The prediction of the atom's destructive potential for the Dominion came from Dr. O. M. Solandt of Toronto, director-general of defence research for the armed forces. Before the Defence Medical Association of Canada here, he said yesterday that the only defence against the atom is the outlawing of war.

But if war should come, he declared, "we must face the fact that . . . we will be bombed and people killed." There would be "terrific destruction."

If a bomb such as hit Hiroshima were dropped on a big Canadian city, said Dr. Solandt, 50,000 people would be killed in the attack. Another 50,000 would need prolonged treatment. Many more would require first aid.

This same city would lose 3,000 houses outright. About 35,000 would need extensive repairs. Another 40,000 to 50,000 would be uninhabitable for a short time.

In the dead of a Canadian winter, the director-general said, the effect of such an attack could well be imagined.

Even the unborn would suffer, for Dr. Solandt said in Hiroshima all pregnant women within 3,300 feet of the bomb blast had miscarriages; no children born to pregnant women within a mile survived, men in the area developed sterility.

Against this backdrop of death and havoc, it was disclosed yesterday, the Dominion's Atomic Energy Control Board is working quietly but vigorously to correlate and advance all information on the atom for the benefit of Canada and the world in general.

Under the man who organized and trained the 1st Canadian Army, it has almost unlimited powers. It controls all materials relating to atomic energy, and may order researches and investigations or acquire any new discoveries connected with nuclear fission.

In a week, the Board is to take over the atomic pilot plant at Chalk River, Ont. Later, it is to assume control of the Crown-owned Eldorado Mining and Refining Company in the Northwest Territory, one of the world's great sources of uranium.

With Reasonable Good Coal Supply, Canada Hopes U.S. Strikes Will Not be Prolonged

(By The Canadian Press)

Anxiety, tinged with hope the strike would not be prolonged, was the Canadian reaction today to the continued walkout of United States coal miners demanding higher wages. While supplies for the moment, and possibly for some few weeks were adequate coal men said it was the future of which they were apprehensive.

First official word to preserve the naion's coal came Thursday from Ottawa when coal controller E. J. Brunning ruled that commercial dock operators must not deliver more than a day's supply to industrial consumers with stockpiles or more than 20 day's supply. In some cases the order will mean no deliveries can be made until stockpiles are reduced.

In the Maritimes officials of the Dominion Coal Company, the largest coal-distributing company in eastern Canada, said the United States strike would have little efect in the three provinces

Might Last Till Spring

Coal dealers in Montreal said home owners have little to worry about. Large accumulations of soft coal on hand, they said, should be enough to last until spring if necessary.

Although antracite coal is in good supply in Ottawa, coal dealers describe the bituminous situation as potentially serious.

In Toronto coal officials said the effect on domestic consumers would depend on whether the strike was prolonged. If it should last for any length of time, they said, any means of heating probably will have to be pooled and antracite coal would probably have to be averted to essential industries which would use that type.

The fuel situation in North Bay is probably as serious as any in the country. Coal companies report in most cases that there is only enough coal on hand to last about one month.

"We are in for a bad time this winter," said a Timmins dealer commenting on the United States strike.

Coal reserves built up by shipping companies, working overtime to transport fuel across Lake Erie indicates London residents are facing a fairly bright situation. Stock piles are well filled.

In St. Catharines industry is already conserving fuel but reports indicate the domestic supply is good.

The big steel plant at Sault Ste. Marie has several months supplies. However, most other public buildings report less than a month's supply on hand.

Curtailed Service.

Curtailed service by the Toronto-Hamilton-Buffalo Railway was the first repercussion of the strike in Hamilton. The curtailment affects two runs to Buffalo and one to Welland. Coal dealers refused to comment on the supply situation until next week. The majority felt the strike would end Monday.

Winnipeg residents are optimistic that an ample supply of coal at the lakehead will assure enough fuel, sufficient to meet all requirements.

Saskatchewan dealers said the only way the strike would affect the province would be when the East dipped into supplies by calling for Western coal.

Edmonton coal operators indicate there are ample stocks for all demands.

On the Pacific coast fuel officials said the strike will not affect British Columbia unless shipments from Alberta have to be diverted to the East.

WINTER COMES WITH SUDDENNESS TO OLD ONTARIO

Eighty Ships Huddle in Ports to Ride Out Heavy Gales on Lakes

(By The Canadian Press)

Southern Ontario lay under chill, overcast skies today with some areas covered by several inches of snow and at least three deaths were attributed to winter's sudden onslaught.

Strong winds and snow flurries kept ears tingling despite a promise of clearing weather by nightfall.

On the Great Lakes some 80 ships huddled in ports to which they ran yesterday when gale warnings presaged winds which blew up to 60 miles an hour and whipped the lakes to fury. The shipping season was nearing its end after an autumn so mild that few but the oldest inhabitants recalled anything similar.

Heaviest snow — four to six inches — was reported along the east shore of Lake Simcoe, extending into the Kawartha Lake area and about six inches fell in the Sault Ste. Marie district. Snowplows were at work in these two districts and highway crews were sanding along slippery roads in the Georgian Bay-Muskoka area where one to three inches of snow had rendered the roads slippery. Most other roads were reported clear.

Two duck hunters were believed to have drowned in heavy waves off Burgess Point near Dunnville yesterday when the boat in which they pursued a broken-away decoy capsized. No trace has since been found of Sam Mungo, Port Colborne, and Arthur Laws, Dunnville.

The disappearance of Ronald Bigras, 20, when his canoe overturned in the Ottawa River at Arnprior as he ventured onto the river to retrieve a wounded duck was laid to the choppy condition of the water, wind-whipped and sullen at the time.

Elsewhere there were no reports of injuries.

At the head of the lakes grain carriers continued loading, ready for sailing when conditions moderated but it appeared they might be the last vessels downbound this season.

Heavy Fog Precedes Snow

Several "overdue" ships were sheltering in the eastern end of Lake Superior. Seventy-nine vessels were known to have sought shelter on the lake, the St. Mary's River and at Sault Ste. Marie lock piers.

Across southern Ontario a day of heavy fog preceded winter's advent. It hung low until driven off by the gale-like winds which brought driving snow.

FIRM PICKET LINE BARS ALL COMERS ATNORANDAMINES

Reinforcements of Provincial Police Reported to Have Arrived

Noranda, Nov. 23 (CP) — A blizzard blew across this northwestern Quebec mining town today at the end of the first day of the Noranda strike — a day that saw a firm picket line bar all comers.

Reinforcements of Provincial Police were reported to have arrived and union workers met twice during the evening. Picket members shuffled to their feet and moved around in the wind-driven snow were relieved immediately after the first meeting to permit them to attend the second.

But while entrance to the big copper and gold producer was barred from the outside, Noranda Mines Limited had a crew working the big customs smelter inside the mine area and company officials reiterated their determination to attempt continued operations throughout the Noranda properties.

Mayor James A. Carter, of Noranda, who is also chief accountant at the mine, said he thought the police would be better organized by today to let inside the mine property those who wish to enter.

Gen. Manager Turned Back.

One of the first turned back by the pickets following the official start of the strike at 7 o'clock yesterday was the assistant general manager of the Noranda Company, R. V. Porrit, who appealed in vain to Noranda Police Chief J. H. Leblanc for an escort through the lines.

The Provincial Police reinforcements were not in evidence, but reliable information pointed to their presence. The lieutenant of the regular provincial police detachment here would only say that reinforcements were on their way from Montreal to Amos, the district headquarters 60 miles northeast of here.

Raoul Trepanier, Federal Industrial Relations Officer, for Quebec province, continued his efforts to conciliate the dispute, but Mayor P. M. Kuddihs of the neighboring town of Rouyn said the prospects for an early settlement were poor.

The strike was called by Local 688, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (CIO) which demands a wage increase of 16 cents an hour, a union checkoff, and wage differentials The company offer of 10 cents an hour, with no union checkoff, was rejected.

POSTPONE U. N. TALKS ON WORLD TROOP INVENTORY

Private Consultations Will Be Attempted To Reconcile British And Russian Views

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 23 — (AP)— The United States today obtained a 48-hour postponement of United Nations discussion on world troop inventory and disarmament proposals in an attempt through private consultations to reconcile British and Russian views on the two issues.

The move caught delegates by surprise, creating obvious disappointment within the British delegation since Great Britain had felt assured of United States support against a Russian proposal to discuss the two issues separately.

Authoritative sources said the United States requested and obtained postponement of today's session of the 54-member U. N. political committee late last night.

The manoeuvre, these sources said, was aimed at effecting British and Russian agreement during the weekend through private consultations with their representatives.

It was learned the talks, expected to start late today, would not be held with Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia and Foreign Secretary Bevin, but probably with Andrei Gromyko and Philip Noel-Baker, permanent U. N. delegates of Russia and Britain, respectively.

Nominations In the District

Prince Edward Nominations

Picton, Nov. 23.—There was keen interest in municipal nominations in the county yesterday. New regulations this year caused a little confusion and a great deal of extra work for the clerks. Prince Edward results are rather confused due to several municipalities holding their nominations on different days. Hallowell Township reverted to January voting. North Marysburg and Hillier townships and Wellington village do not have nominations until Monday.

In Athol township, nominees for reeve were Earl Brummell, present County Warden, and Councillor Elmer Vader. The latter qualified at the meeting. The Warden decided to make up his mind today. Forty in all were nominated in Athol.

In South Marysburgh Township, all members of this year's council were the only ones nominated. They are—Reeve, Donald Thompson Councillors, Maurice Clapp, Gerard Kavanagh, Carson Scott,, Stewart York.

Ameliasburg

Reeve—N. E. Whitney .
Deputy Reeve—Thos. Walker
Councillors— Melvin Pulver, Gordon Waterhouse, Clifford Barber.

PEDESTRIAN INJURED WHEN HIT BY CAR

Percy Berry, 67 Dundas Street, sustained bruises to his face and a cut over the eye when he was knocked to the pavement by an auto while walking across Church Street near the C.P.R. crossing early Friday evening.

Driver of the auto, Mr. Arthur Keegan, stated to police that he had been driving south on Church Street when the lights of a truck temporarily blinded him at the railroad crossing. He stated that he did not see the man crossing the street and did not know his car had struck anything until he felt a slight bump.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS ON STREET

Windsor, Nov. 23 —(CP)— Found lying on a street, unconscious from a head injury, and admitted to hospital early yesterday, Frank Allen of Windsor died today. Police are trying to determine how he was injured.

Trainer in Animal Cage Survives Jungle Battle of 7 Lions, 2 Tigers

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 23 (AP) — A cage full of roaring, clawing, snarling wild animals — nine lions and two tigers—ignoring their veteran trainer, engaged in a free-for-all five-minute fight yesterday resulting in the death of two lions.

The beasts battled until exhausted and trainer Dick Clemens had only a chair and a stick to defend himself. Clemens, soaking wet from what he described the most harrowing experience in 20 years of training animals, escaped without a scratch.

"I've never seen such a fight in 20 years of animal training," said Clemens, who is about 47. "They were all in it. I was in the middle and I was scared. The young lions (four two-year olds) on one side of me and the old ones and tigers on the other. Then all hell broke loose."

Rescuers Reach Wrecked Plane, Find 11 Alive

Report Eight Survivors Either Sick or Injured

Meiringen, Switzerland, Nov. 23 (CP) — Two members of an Alpine rescue party, plowing through glacial snowdrifts, reached the wreckage of a United States army plane shortly after noon today.

Gen. Ralph Saavely, directing rescue operations for the U. S. Army, said no immediate information was available as to the exact injuries which the 11 persons aboard the ship suffered. The transport crash-landed Tuesday in a glacial bowl some 8,000 feet sea level.

Brig.-Gen. Ralph Tate said he talked by radio with his son, Capt. Ralph Tate, Jr., pilot of the plane, who told him all 11 persons had survived their four-day ordeal. The captain said eight were either sick or injured.

The scene of the crash is near Strahlegg Peak, 13 miles southeast of Interlaken and just north east of the mighty Jungrau in the Swiss Alps.

Swiss guides and military alpinists started bringing down the occupants of the plane,

The rescued party will be taken to the village of Rosenlaui down the glacier of the same name.

The successful conclusion of the search for seven men, three women and an 11-year-old girl came after days had been spent searching the mountains on the French-Italian frontier, 130 miles from the actual site of the crash.

Expert Guides Used

A start was made organizing the rescue only a few minutes after the location of the wreck was determined and expert Swiss guides climbed through the night in an attempt to reach the plane before its occupants succumbed to exposure.

Improved weather was helping the rescue party of about 65 members, retarded last night by rain and snow. The rescuers carried a dozen collapsible stretchers. By tonight they hoped to move the injured to a ski hut about half way down the tortuous descent to a valley.

Brig.-Gen. Ralph Snavely, United States airforce chief in Austria who flew over the spot yesterday, said 12 persons had been aboard the plane and that eight of them were severely injured.

(Gen. Snavely's headquarters in Vienna Wednesday listed 11 persons as having been aboard the plane.)

Fire Rockets.

Crew members of the stranded plane were said to be firing rockets into the skies to guide their rescuers, who, roped together, were scaling a treacherous 30-degree slope of the Rosenlau Glacier.

The rockets were dropped over the scene yesterday by search planes after the ship was found nosed up against a mountaintop 10,000 feet high.

'We know there are survivors—I actually saw them with my own eyes," Gen. Snavely said.

The plane, Gen. Snavely said, had ploughed into a snowbank about three feet deep in a glacial "bowl" 800 to 1,000 feet deep and about 2,000 feet wide.

Still in One Piece

Interrupted radio signals from the crew indicated the plane, which crash-landed Tuesday en route from Munich to Pisa, still was in one piece. This led to the conclusion here that most of the passengers may have found shelter inside the plane cabin.

British and American planes found the wrecked aircraft perched some 8,000 feet above sea level on the slope of a glacial wetterloch — "weather hole" — near the base of Strahlegg Peak, in the climax to a search by some 100 aircraft from six countries. Shuttling transports dropped food, medicine and rescue equipment.

The rescue squad reached Interlaken, 15 miles west of here, by special train from Udine, Italy, via Milan last night.

Orly field radio operators said a plane in direct communication with the wrecked transport reported all the high ranking passengers and their families—including an 11-year-old girl—and the crew still alive.

Blast Furnaces Closed

Pittsburg, Nov. 23 —(CP)— First effects of the United States soft coal strike on the steel industry were felt today when five blast furnaces of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., largest of the U. S. steel corporation subsidiaries, were shut down.

Two other furnaces, in the Edgar Thompson and Duquesne Works were banked wyesterday for repairs and will not be reincreases.

Westover Field, Mass., Nov. 23 —(AP)—A helicopter will be placed aboard a large transport plane and flown to Europe, probably tonight to aid in the rescue of survivors of an United States Army transport plane which crash landed in the Alps four days' ago, a transportation operations officer said today.

Many Ontario Mayors Receive Acclamations

(By The Canadian Press)

Late returns from nominations for municipal year-end elections in Ontario added to the growing list of towns, townships and villages where reeves went into office by acclamation and well over a score of centres where nobody opposed a lone candidate for mayor.

These were nominations for elections Dec. 9 embracing most of Ontario with a few exceptions where voting is just after the year's end.

By midnight last night returns showed some 20 mayors had gained a year's tenure of office through lack of opposition.

Among them were W. C. Nelson of Sarnia, J. H. Mathews of Brantford, S. J. Crawford of Kingston, Irvin Lobsinsinger in Walkerton, H. B. Cheshire in Wiarton, Charles M. Vent in Midland, F. T. Pickering in Amherstburg, Harry Stockfish in Preston, B. W. Anderson in Simcoe, and H. H. Talbot in Leaside.

The list of reeves elected unopposed moved well beyond the 60 mark on the basis of midnight returns.

Mayoralty battles shaped up at Hamilton, Windsor, Brockville, North Bay, Waterloo, Kitchener.

Typical of a place with heavy nominations, even through electing the mayor by acclamation was Kingston, which votes Dec. 2. There 55 nominees sought aldermanic office in seven wards each of which returns three men in city council.

Hamilton faced a two-way fight between Mayor Sam Lawrence and controller Don Clarke while 39 came out for the 16 aldermanic seats.

In Guelph Mayor Gordon L. Rife came out for his third consecutive office, opposed by William G. Taylor a former mayor and Ald. Lenard Owen, member of the council three years. Kitchener nominated John Brown and C. Mortimer Bezzeau.

At Galt Mayor R. K. Serviss received a fifth term by acclamation. Port Colborne sent H. H. Knoll into office unopposed as Mayor and gave James P. Green the reeve's post.

SIX-YEAR-OLD BOY SAVES LITTLE COUSIN FROM DROWNING

Quick thinking on the part of Dale Burley, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Burley, 188 Charles Street, of Belleville, averted what might have been a drowning accident recently in Georgetown. With his parents he was visiting with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Ray, Elgin Street, Georgetown and and was playing with his five-year-old cousin Karla. Although she had been warned not to play around the swimming pool at the rear of Victor Diggins' home, the children in their enthusiasm did so, and little Karla slipped and fell head first into the deep end of the pool where the water was over her head. As she rose to the surface, Dale had presence of mind instead of running home as children are apt to do grabbed his cousin by the arms and shouted for help.

The screams of the child attracted Mrs. Ray, who rushed to the scene and got Karla out. It is understood that application for the Dawes' award will be made for the Belleville child.

BANCROFT COUNCIL GIVES $1,500 GRANT

The Bancroft village council the other day gave a grant of $1,500 to the local branch of the Canadian Legion to assist that body in the erection of a Memorial Centre.

The grant was given, a councillor said "in appreciation of what our veterans did for us."

SUMMER WEATHER PREVAILS IN NORTH

'Tis summer weather, even back in the vicinity of L'Amable where usually at this time of the year, ice sheathes the lakes and the woods are knee-deep in snow.

The other day the L'Amable lads played a softball game with a Bancroft team in balmy weather losing to the village crew by a 17-16 score.

J. EDWARD SHORTT WILL BE CANDIDATE FOR SCHOOL TRUSTEE

In the nominations for school trustee held in this city on Friday the name of J. Edward Shortt was inadvertently omitted. Mr. Shortt has been a member of the Board of Education for past two years and today stated he was going to qualify for that office and would be a candidate in the coming municipal election.

Fruit Machinery Increases Its Shop Capacity

One of the oldest foundries in Ontario which has seen continuous operation since its inauguration, the old established Fruit Machinery Company Ltd., Front Street, has recently increased its shop capacity and installed modern equipment to look after vastly increased and specialized business.

One of the most recent additions to the machine shop equipment is a late model heavy duty Lincoln portable electric welder, their shop now being completely equipped for both electric and acetylene welding.

The capacity of the foundry has been increased by additional floor space and Mr. F. B. Foley, president and manager, states that production capacity of the machine shop and foundry has been increased more than 100 per cent. The number of employees has been doubled and now stands at 25 workers.

With the building site having been erected approximately 85 years ago, a foundry and machine shop business has been carried on continuously for the past 80 years. Originally the business was known as the Walker Foundry, with the present owners, the Fruit Machinery Company Ltd., taking over in July, 1917.

Holstein Club Banquet Held At Bonarlaw

Over 180 Hastings county Holstein breeders, their families and friends, attended the annual Holstein Club banquet at Bonarlaw Thursday evening with the women of St. Mark's Anglican Church, catering to the banquet.

President of the Holstein club, Mr. Herbert Watt of Foxboro, was chairman for the evening's program.

Secretary treasurer of the Holstein-Friesian Association, G. M. Clemons, gave an illustrated address on his trip to South America in 1945, while F. Roy Ormiston, fieldman for the Holstein breeders of the Quinte district, gave an interesting talk and announced that the new book recently published by the association was now available.

John Tamblyn, salesman, spoke briefly on his activities in buying cattle during the year, while H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative, and secretary treasurer of the club, gave a report on the year's activities and presented the prize money won at the championship Black and White show at Peterborough.

Rev. J. M. Brownlie, Mrs. Rundle, Mrs. A. B. McComb, Mr. J. F. Baker and Delbert McComb, all took part in the program and provided a number of interesting and entertaining numbers.

Wm. Distin, 61, Returns to Home After Being Lost

Bancroft (Special) — Mr. William Distin, 61-year-old resident farmer of Turriff of the Fourman Farms, east of Bancroft, turned up early Friday morning at a neighboring farm after having been lost in the woods all night. Mr. Distin during the past week has been in the bush each day restaking out his property but usually arrives home about four each afternoon. When he did not return yesterday afternoon Mrs. Colborne became alarmed as she knew the elderly gentleman was subjected to heart attacks. The farmers in the neighborhood set out and lit fires trying to draw his attention. Later the services of the Provincial Officer S. W. Palmateer were brought onto the scene but all to no avail. This morning Mr. Distin seems none the worse for weathering the night in the woods. He said the fog settled down early and knowing he was unable to get out of the woods he built himself a good fire and settled down in a sheltered spot for the night. He according to his description of the locality in which he spent the night, would be about a mile and a half from where the searchers were looking for him.

LEGLESS PRISONER ESCAPES

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 23 (AP). —The escape of a legless prisoner, who travevls on a hip platform with roller-skate wheels, was admitted by a red-faced police department today. Officers said the 27-year-old fugitive, who was servivng a 30-day sentence for intoxication, fled from the police pistol range where he had been assigned to a cleaning up job.

300 Students Take Advantage Of Night Classes

Approximately three hundred students in the Belleville and district area are taking advantage of night school classes at the Belleville Collegiate, according to the October report of Principal G. E. Currie, to the Board of Education.

Vocational day studies are also popular with a total of 338 students, including 150 boys and 188 girls attending these classes. Vocational students represent 39.9 per cent of the total composite school enrolment.

In the evening classes typing is by far the most popular subject with a total of 50 students taking this type of training on Tuesday and Thursday evenings under the direction of Miss H. Burley. Bookkeeping classes are next in line of popularity with 38 students attending these classes under the direction of Mr. A. Archibald.

The art class is next in line with 27 attending while domestic science courses such as cooking and sewing are also popular with the girls with 26 learning the art of culinary and 24 being taught sewing.

Motor mechanics and welding classes have proved so popular among the boys that it has been necessary to form two classes, one attending on Monday and Wednesday evenings, and the other on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Machine shop class has an enrolment of 19, while woodworking has attracted a total of 27 students. There are 13 in the draughting class.

A new departure in night school work was inaugurated during November when a vocational agriculture course was begun on the 13th. This class is being held each Wednesday evening from eight until ten p.m.

TRENTON

William J. Potts, Town Treasurer, Proposes to Retire

Trenton — William J. Potts, who has been in the municipal service for the past 28 years, will retire early in 1947.

Mr. Potts started his service for the town as clerk of the waterworks department, and in 1918 was appointed assistant clerk and treasurer of the town. In 1920 he was appointed treasurer, a position he has held ever since. Mr. Potts has witnessed a great development in the town of Trenton, with the population almost doubled. This has involved added duties and responsibilities in the office which he has carried on efficiently.

Before entering the town's employ Mr. Potts was telegraph operator on the old Grand Trunk Railway, and an outstanding event in his railway career was the famous Murray Hill wreck, November 15, 1898, in which 13 or 14 were killed. He came to Trenton from Port Union.

The genial clerk and treasurer has found time to devote to church, fraternal and community interests. He was treasurer at King Street United Church for ten years and is now treasurer of the session. Prominent in Masonic craftsmanship, Mr. Potts is a past district deputy of Prince Edward District and has occupied all the chairs in Trent Lodge.

Narrow Escape

Stanley Bacon, formerly of 215 Bayfield Street, Barrie, and now with No. 1 Air Command, Trenton, had a miraculous escape early Friday morning while driving his car east on No. 2 highway in the vicinity of the airport.

Bacon told police that he had applied his brakes with the intention of picking up a hitch hiker when his car skidded on the wet pavement struck a soft shoulder and overturned in a deep ditch on the south side of the highway. The driver escaped with a shaking up but his car was damaged on the top and left side.

Division of Retail Merchants Within Chamber of Commerce Proposed at Weekly Dinner

Formation of an active division of the retail merchants within the Chamber of Commerce was recommended at the regular weekly dinner meeting of the retail merchants' committee at the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday.

Establishment of the new division within the The present Chamber of Commerce was proposed by Harold Seldon, chairman of the present retail merchants committee with his being seconded by T. A. Tucker, chairman of the membership committee.

Heretofore merchants in the city have been represented in the Chamber of Commerce only by a special committee set up by the regular membership.

"Merchants of the city are continuously being canvassed for projects which could be undertaken in co-operation with a strong retail merchants' division in the Chamber of Commerce," stated Mr. Seldon by way of opening discussion on the subject.

Great Interest Shown

He stated that the retail merchants committee has completed a survey of the merchants and a great deal of interest had been shown in the formation of such a division within the Chamber. He assured directors that if a proper budget was set up, the merchants would be glad to support such a proposal as through this body many projects such as closing hours, parking and rural relations could be accomplished without the continual call for merchants' subscriptions.

Mr. Tucker pointed out that he was chairman of the Chamber of Commerce membership committee and was also on the retail merchants' committee. He felt that the formation of a merchants' division would contribute much to projects which would benefit merchants as a whole.

He referred to the interest which merchants had shown at recent meetings and pointed out what projects are being undertaken by retail merchants divisions of the Chamber of Commerce in other centres. Sales of merchandize to rural communities, and relations between the city and country had been improved, he said.

President of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Lorne McDougall assured that the Chamber would welcome the formation of a retail merchants' division in the city and pointed out that the Chamber was now in progress of reorganization. The new schedule of fees and the projects to be undertaken by the Chamber during the coming year would shortly be publicized, he said.

The matter of colored street lighting for the Christmas season came up for discussion at the meeting with reference being made to the current electric power shortage. Following discussion it was decided to present a motion to city council asking that the colored street lights be illuminated only during the ten day period prior to Christmas.

CHRISTMAS SEAL FUNDS TO BE SPENT LOCALLY

Residents of Belleville and district, today, received through the mail, the 1946 Tuberculosis Christmas Seals, the sale of which is being sponsored locally by the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association. This is part of an annual nation-wide campaign to raise funds for tuberculosis control work throughout Canada and will continue through Christmas. The money raised locally will be spent entirely in this community.

Mr. D. L. Storey, chairman of the local campaign committee, expressed complete confidence that the project here will be an overwhelming success.

"Christmas seals are not new to the people of Hastings County nor is the work which Christmas Seal money accomplishes. With funds raised by this method in the past it has been possible to ably assist in the relentless fight against this disease. We have one of the lowest death rates from tuberculosis made possible through free case-finding and consequent early teratmentwhich speeds the cure and return to normal living conditions of those who become effected. This is attributable to services that Christmas Seal money has helped to make possible," he said.

Mr. Storey pointed out, however that although the fight against TB has achieved considerable success, it would be folly to ease up in any way. "There is still too much tuberculosis in this area," he stated, "and because of the highly communicable nature of the disease, it is essential that we find every case. When and only when, every case is discovered will it be possible to feel that any victory has been achieved. And even after that goal has been reached, it is important that health education and preventative measures be carried on. Knowing these facts I feel confident that the 1946 Christmas Seal sale which will finance these efforts, will be enthusiastically supported by everyone.

Campaign headquarters are at 51 Highland Avenue where a staff of voluntary workers is on the job from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. daily. The telephone number is 1985.

Byron Lott, 91, Gets His Deer

Byron Lott, Hastings County's grand old man, who hasn't missed a deer hunting season since he was knee high to a grasshopper, eased himself into town the other day with a handsome buck in tow, just another annual trophy of the chase.

The 91-year-old youngster whose shooting eye is just as deadly today as it was 40 years ago, made the annual trek to the north woods with his old pals some six in all and a week later the party emerged with their full quota of deer.

"Deer were plentiful," said the more or less youthful Byron, his eyes sparkling with reminiscence, "but so were the game wardens. Shucks, every time I laid my sights on a deer one of those pesky guys who work for the government, popped up from nowhere. Not that we were breaking any laws, but those dratted fellas should stay out of sight—well for a time at least."

Mr. Lott and his party hunted in Hastings County in the vicinity of Millbridge."

Obituary

Mrs. EDITH S. AVERY
(Edmonton—Wooler)

Wooler, Nov. 23 (Special)—Mrs. Edith Samanatha Avery, wife of Mr. Harry Avery, and a former resident of Wooler and Frankford, died in hospital at Edmonton, Alberta, on Oct. 19th., after an illness of about one year's duration. She was a patient in the hospital for about two months.

Born at Frankford 61 years ago the late Mrs. Avery was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sharp of Wooler. About thirty-two years ago she left here to join her husband in Wainwright, Alberta, where he was in the service of the C.P.R. During her residence in this district she held a high place in the regard of many friends to whom her death has brought sincere feelings of regret. For the past ten years she made her home in Edmonton.

Surviving her are her husband; one daughter, Mrs. Jack (Alice) Cowie, Edmonton; one son, Fred Avery, Rosevear, Alberta; one sister, Mrs. Farley (Alice) Montgomery, Wooler; four brothers, Arthur Sharp, Wainwright, Alberta; George Sharp, Bowmanville; Ernest Sharp and Roy Sharp, both of Wooler; one aunt, Mrs. Emma Vandervoort, and one uncle, Alfred Bamber, both of Trenton; eight grandchildren.

The funeral took place at Edmonton on Oct. 21st.

CHARLES H. LLOYD

Charles H. Lloyd, 31 West Bridge Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Saturday morning. He was in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Lloyd was born in this city and was a son of the late John and Bella Lloyd. All his life was passed here and he was well known and highly esteemed by many friends to whom his death has brought much regret. At one time he was a member of Belleville Fire Department and for 29 years he served as a mail carrier at the Belleville Post Office. Five years ago he retired from the service and since that time he lived retired. He was a member of Christ Church and fraternally he was a life member of Eureka Lodge No. 283 A.F. and A.M. He joined the lodge June 23, 1920.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Florence Kellaway; one son, Charles E. Lloyd, Windsor, Ont.; one daughter, Mrs. A. Gertrude Lloyd, New Westminster, B.C.; one sister, Mrs. John Gerhardt, Syracuse, N.Y.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

WINTER COMES

The weather bureau reported: "An intensifying disturbance in northern Ontario caused very cold air to rush across Ontario accompanied by gale westerly winds and rapidly falling temperatures.

Temperatures forecast for today: fall over the weekend."

Tempeatures forecast for today: Toronto 18 minimum, 25 maximum; Windsor 15 and 23; London 16 and 23; Hamilton 18 and 25; St. Thomas, 15 and 23; Trenton 19 and 24; St. Catharines 17 and 24.

Snowflurries Promised

Overcast and with snowflurries was the promise for today over virtually the whole province with colder temperatures in the north and a two below zero reading forecast for White River.

Ontario generally was ready for winter with a small army of men and $3,500,000 worth of equipment and materials ready. Yesterday's slight snow did not even ruffle the department of highways.

Canadian Legion Zone Rally Will Be Held in City

Due to the resignation of Comrade Thomas Mason as Zone Commander of the Canadian Legion, another Zone rally will be held in Belleville on Dec. 1st and the Branch 99 of the Canadian Legion in this city at their regular meeting on Thursday night nominated Comrade John Badgley of the Chamber of Commerce as their candidate for that office. Nominations were also held for the various offices of the Legion, the election to be held on the next regular meeting night.

This year the list of names of those nominated will be put on a board in the club rooms and on election night, the one receiving the highest number of votes will be elected President for the ensuing year. His name will be then taken from the list abd the members will vote for the office of vice presidents and so on down the line until the entire slate is elected. Those who were nominated at the meeting were Angus Duffy, E. Cliff-Phillips, Dave Batchelor, Ernie Dainard, Charles Lundy, Everett Liddle, E. Nuesbitt, Max Porrittt, Max Mathews, Walter Harden, Dr. Russel Scott, M. Young, A Newton, Gavin Scott, Ingram, Eddie Lee, Irvine, Charles Jeffs, and George Shaw. Allan Sprague was also nominated but withdrew as he wished to devote his full time as solicitor for the Legion branch. The members passed a vote of sincere thanks to Mr. Sprague for the work that he has already accomplished for the branch.

To Dispense Christmas Cheer

It was decided at the meeting to appoint Ernie Dainard as chairman of the Christmas tree, when all veterans in hospitals, the widows and children of veterans will be honored at the festive season. This committee of the Legion will not work independently, but will work with all the veteran organizations in the city in order to bring cheer and comfort to those less fortunate. The children will be the special care of the whole committee and something worthwhile is being planned. Appreciation was expressed that this effort will be a community one with respect to the veteran societies of the city.

Eight new members were accepted into membership of the Legion and at the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served by Comrade Dainard and his energetic committee.

75 Cents Pound Estimated Price For Butter to Pay Farmers Profit, Says Ontario Federation Secretary

Toronto, Nov. 23 —(CP)— Seventy-five cents a pound for butter is the price Ontario farmers estimate the consumer should pay if the farmers are to make a profit, V. S. Milburne, secretary of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, said yesterday in an interview.

A survey by economists appointed by the federation showed that increased labor and other costs had jumped the farmer's cost of production to 74 cents a pound, said Mr. Milburne, whereas the farmer now receives 45 cents a pound plus a government subsidy of 10 cents a pound.

Processors can make a profit at the present retail price as butter contains about 16 cents moisture and salt, he continued.

"The only way to get more butter in this country is to pay the farmer a price that will make him feel like producing it. Under present prices, production has dropped 13 per cent compared with a year ago. I don't think there is any doubt that people will be willing to pay even 75 cents a pound to get enough butter."

Later a prices board official said suggesting a 75-cent butter price was equivalent to asking a 30 to 35-cent tariff on butter.

"The contract price for the sale of butter from New Zealand and Australia to the United Kingdom is 22 to 32 cents a pound F.O.B. Auckland," the official said. "If there were a free market at the present time, that butter would be laid down here, at full duty, at less than forty cents."

KILLED BY CAR

Listowel, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Donald Fritz, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fritz, died last night in hospital several hours after he was struck by an automobile. He suffered a fractured skull. Police said the boy was struck by a car driven by Donald Cleland on the highway near here.

CANOE OVERTURNS

Arnprior, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Roland Bigras, 20, of this town, disappeared into the chill waters of the Ottawa River yesterday after his canoe overturned, and searchers last night feared he had drowned. On a hunting trip, Bigras had set out on the wind-roughened river to retrieve a shot duck when the accident happened.

PICTON

Advises Women To Take Part In Public Life

Picton, Nov. 23. —The importance of women exercising their franchise as well as taking part in public life, was stressed by Mrs. W. Keyes, of Wolfe Island, addressing Women's Institute members here Wednesday. Previously, she had spoken at Hillier and Centre Ameliasburg at Conferences on Citizenship sponsored by the W.I. Department.

Mrs. Keyes felt that women are particularly suited to sit on school boards and was pleased to find them well represented on Prince Edward County boards. Women as mothers possess under vision and greater interest, the speaker felt.

Good homes build good citizens and they in turn mean sound citizenship, said the speaker in a plea for better home life. Delinquent parents contribute to juvenile delinquency, she said. Good citizenship must be thought of in terms of what one can do for one's country, not what one can get out of it. Home making is the greatest job on earth.

Don't be afraid of doing things because of possible criticism, the speaker urged, pointing out that the W.I. founder, Mrs. A. Hoodless had been true to her ideals regardless of criticism and the benefits of the W.I. had resulted.

The three I.'s of the Women's Institutes are intelligence, integrity and industry, said Mrs. Keyes in urging members to not rest on their laurels but to look to and build for the future.

Mrs. H. R. MacDonald, County President, was in the charge. Members of branches in this area were in attendance.

Taxes Well Paid

According to the provincial statement to be presented at town nomination meeting Friday night, taxes have been well paid. With $100,821.36 on the tax rolls, $94,494.38 has been paid, leaving a balance of $6,326.98. The financial statement also shows a balance of liabilities over assets of $7,996.26.

Arena Fund

The Kinsmen Community Arena Fund is being well supported, it was revealed today with the announcement that the first 23 donations received total $2,252.50. As part of the drive to raise $35,000, the Club has placed models of the arena in stores and other business ,where employees will make regular weekly contributions

Interested in Boxing

That the boys of the town are keenly interested in boxing was revealed this week when instruction classes were started in charge of Recreational Director Reg. Fox. Eighty boys, of all ages, turned out the first night. Rooms over the fire hall have been fitted up and all kinds of equipment supplied by the Rotary Club.

Lack Radio Licenses

A second group of Picton residents will pay fines for not having radio licenses as a result of a visit to town this week of A. G. E. Argue, district radio license inspector. Up to yesterday, 17 had been charged and the checkup is continuing.

Gets Six Months

Pleading guilty to a charge of "joy riding", Edward Williams was sentenced to six months determinate and six months indeterminate when he appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills here, Wednesday. He was charged with taking a car owned by Leonard Robinson, later overturning it in a ditch. Lawrence Ward, who had been picked up on the highway and given a ride, suffered facial injuries.

Bazaar and Tea

The Evening Auxiliary of Picton United Church realized $181, as a result of a bazaar and tea held Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. C. C. Spencer, president, and Mrs. H. D. Huff, vice president, received the guests. Bronze and yellow 'mums centred the tables and Christmas motifs decorated the hall.

Bancroft

HIGH SCHOOL CONCERT

Bancroft. (Special.) — The pupils of Bancroft High School held a concert in the Community Hall, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings with a capacity attendance. Mr. J. W. Hahn ,chairman of the Board of Education, gave a short address on the advancement being made towards the erection of a new High School which, he anticipated, would be ready for occupancy next September. The first calculated attendance was estimated at 90 pupils but on the first day's enrollment this Fall the number greatly exceeded their calculations totalling 180.

Mr. Robinson, principal of the High School, acted as chairman for the evening's performance and he introduced all members of Grade 9, who took part in a puppet show, which put on several scenes. The children deserve a great deal of credit for their splendid work in preparing suitable scenery, and for the cunning way they manipulated the life-like puppets. This work was all done by the children under the able supervision of Miss Margaret Mitchell, the Art teacher.

During the intermission Misses Donaldson and Bronson entertained with piano and guitar music.

A one-act play entitled "Whodunnit" was then presented with the following cast of players chosen from the high school pupils—Meryle Burlanyett, Marie Kuno, Bessie Davis, Dorothy Switzer, Reg. Peters, Bill Slater and Gregg Anderson. This was a comic skit and held the attention of the audience throughout. This act was under the supervision of Misses Margaret Kellar and Marion Laundry, High School pupils.

During the second intermission Mr. William Morrison, one of the High School teaching staff, presented the winners of the Track and Field Day events with cups and medals as follows: :

Boys' Sr. Champ—Norman Brough

Runner-up—Bill Slater

Boys' Intermediate Champ — Eugene Tanner

Runnerup—Cameron Price.

Boys' Jr. Champ—Stanley Metcalfe.

Runner-up —Wayne Whyte.

Girls' Sr. Champ—Eleanor Scott.

Runner-up—Rita Leveque

Girls' Intermediate champ—Bessie Davis.

Runner-up —Phyllis Leveque

Girls' Jr. Champ—Marion Sprackett

Runner-up—Mabel Hart

Another one-act play entitled "High School Daze", under the supervision of Miss B. Smith, was presented with the following cast of players: Misses Florence Tryon, Elsie Fisher, Aileen Palmateer, Annabelle Donaldson, Messrs. Reg. Churcher, Robert Moore and Floyd Twa. This play depicting teen age love was well acted and kept the audience fully alert.

The evening's program was drawn to a close with all talent on stage for the singing of the National Anthem.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hahn and Mrs. S. W. Palmateer were business vistiors in Peterborough, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wiggins, Mr. W. E. Wiggins, and Mrs. R. W. Blatherwick were business visitors in Belleville on Thursday.

Mr. George Thomson of the village received the sad news from Belleville Thursday morning of the passing away of his father, who has been in ill health for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Maxwell left Thursday morning for Ottawa on a business mission.

Mrs. Jack Walker, of Kingston is spending a holiday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wiggins of town.

6th Sidney

6th Sidney — Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dafoe spent a few days last week in Toronto and attended the Royal Winter Fair.

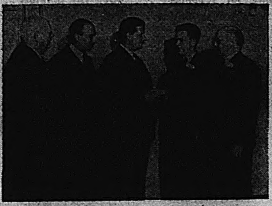
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moon were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dafoe.

On Wednesday evening a number of neighbors and friends gathered at the homee of Mr. Geo. Halsall to honor Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Foster (nee Vera Holden) with a miscellaneous shower. Rev. H. H. Hillis acted as chairman for a short program of music and readings. The address was read by Mrs. Morley Sine. The bride and groom graciously thanked their friends for the lovely gifts. Serving of refreshments brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

LOST HIS WAY

Johannesburg, Nov. 23—(Reuters) — On his way home after a lusty ring workout, Laurie Stevens, South African welterweight champion, suffered an attack of "amnesia" and lost his way on Johannesburg's streets.

Yesterday Stevens announced his retirement from the ring.



In appreciation of the outstanding contribution he has made to Canadian advertising an award was made posthumously to the late W. Howard Batten, who, at the time of his death was president of Rapid Grip and Batten, Limited, Toronto, by the Association of Canadian Advertisers while recently assembled in convention in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto. Here L. E. Phenner, centre, retiring president of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, makes the presentation to A. Campbell Batten, a son of the late W. Howard Batten. Other award winners, left to right, are H. S. Van Scoyoc, recently retired from the position of advertising manager with the Canada Cement Company, Montreal, Emile Jean, managing director of the Nouvelliste, Three Rivers, Quebec, and right T. L. Anderson, vice-president of Cockfield Brown and Company, Limited, Toronto.

Municipal Nominations

It is an encouraging sign that the attendance of citizens at the municipal nominations on Friday was the largest in years. There have been occasions when only a very few were present at such important meetings but here is seen an increased interest in matters of municipal importance.

This is encouraging for those who have borne the duties of office during the past year and for those who are contemplating becoming candidates in the approaching civic elections.

Citizens of the community can never know their home town too well. It means much to them for there they are spending their lives, they are raising their families, they are meeting fellow citizens, they go about their daily tasks. Their community is where they go to church, where their children go to school, where they attend functions, public gatherings and entertainments. Their community is a unit with its government by council, school board, and other civic bodies and to it citizens owe a loyalty that should mean much to all residents. Their city reflects themselves.

The attendance of so large a number at nominations, is, it is hoped, the sign that the voters will turn out in large numbers on the day of election and exercise their franchise.

Toll of Disease

In the four years from 1938 to 1941 there were 57,436 babies in Canada under one year of age who died and 3,806 mothers who died in childbirth, says the monthly letter of the Royal Bank of Canada which notes that this "is a greater toll than was suffered by Canada in her fighting forces in all four years of the First World War."

While reduction in infant deaths has been from 102 per thousand live births in 1921 to 55 in 1944, this figure should be compared, the letter says, with the record of other countries, Sweden 29, New Zealand 29; Switzerland 38; Australia 40; United States 40; England and Wales 49; Canada 55. There is a variation in the death rate in Canada by provinces which is marked: British Columbia 40; Ontario 43; Prince Edward Island 44; Alberta 46; Saskatchewan 47; Manitoba 49; Nova Scotia 53; Quebec 68; New Brunswick 78.

The report of the Advisory Committee on Health Insurance issued in 1943 remarked that "it is considered that by the adoption of adequate maternal services the death rate (of mothers) could be more than cut in half."

It is noted that there is expected in the next ten years an increase in the number of persons sixty years of age and over by some 20 per cent. Question of health is therefore important.

Warning in regard to whooping cough is given; it causes more deaths under two years of age than diphtheria, measles and scarlet fever together. Success in Quebec with the combining of whooping cough vaccine with diphtheria toxoid has been marked. Diphtheria has been wiped out where children are protected by toxoid.

The "seven deadly killers" of adult life are heart disease, cancer, nephritis, brain hemorrhage, accidents, pneumonia, tuberculosis, claiming a total of 80,000 Canadians a year. Tuberculosis cannot be beaten until every citizen realizes the obligation he has to safeguard himself by frequent medical inspections. Early diagnosis is urged where cancer is suspected.

Figures of medical examinations for the armed services in Canada in the late war are given:

"Of 1,260,952 men examined, 357,634 were placed in category E: 'Unsuited for army service anywhere in any capacity.' Fewer than half qualified for the highest classification. In between the few with the highest category and those rejected were scores of thousands, who could be 'fixed up' by medical surgery and dental attention but they were not top-notch specimens."

There was another examination on discharge. The letter closes, "Thousands of men know they would have gone through life handicapped and disabled but for the collective skill of the medical officers, of whom there were more than 5,000 in the Canadian forces and suggests that "every ex-serviceman should give himself every chance for continued good health by calling upon doctors and dentists for thorough examination every birthday or oftener and says "it would be well if everyone did the same."

Lights on Bicycles

Persons riding bicycles in the dark without light and reflector take big chances of becoming involved in accident with possible injury to themselves and others.

In the dark a rider and his bicycle become almost invisible if the bicycle is not lighted for together they form so small a mark that it is difficult to pick them out of a shadow or dark spot.

The thoughtful and careful rider will protect himself as well as the public by carrying light and reflector for safety of all.

Bad News for Moby Dick

A new British whaling ship, the Balaena, now is on her way to the Antarctic, freighted with little but bad news for Moby Dick. In a special hangar built on her afterdeck are three amphibians from which aviators will spot whales and keep an eye on capricious Antarctic weather. Her stern has a large port through which the whales can be slid into the cutting room, there to be popped into kettles with a speed that Captain Ahab and his crew of the Pequod never would have believed possible, says New York Sun.

In fact there is little from bow to stern of the 15,000-ton Balaena which Captain Ahab would have believed possible. To him, the killing of each whale was a thrilling duel in which man risked life and limb in a battle with the biggest of mammals. The Balaena is the epitome of the modern whaling industry. She even is carrying a group of scientists who will study the possibilities of whale meat as food.

Her voyage is likely to prove highly profitable — whales have multiplied with little molestation during the war years — but it never will provide the romance associated with every spar and rope of the Pequod and the other ships which hunted the whale a century ago.

War-Shy Birds

The war affected our birds in many ways, not least, it appears, in the Channel Islands. A dweller in Alderney, who fled without any possessions to speak of, returned to his island this last Summer and finds, surprisingly, that there is a complete dearth of the house sparrow and a remarkable decrease, almost an absence, of the starling.

The theory is that the Germans, who exclusively inhabited the island, were after D-Day reduced to a state of semi-starvation, and in consequence ate any bird that was at all edible and destructible. The starling is so migratory that it may be expected to return this winter. The sparrow is in a different class.

Will it be wise to keep the bird down? Islanders will not feel sure, for the absence of birds has synchronized, it seemed, with a lamentable increase in noxious insects. Thrushes and blackbirds are few, but greenfinches are present in unusually large numbers.

An offer to Edinburgh Corporation of Mussolini's sword, captured in Italy, as a museum piece, has been declined by the Lord Provost's Committee. A letter by the 78th (Lowland) Field Regiment R. A. Association suggested that the Corporation should accept it for safe custody and for display in a museum or elsewhere, though it would remain the property of the Regiment, who would be entitled to the use of it for regimental and other functions.

The Committee decided to refuse the offer on the ground that the individual concerned was not one to whom they wished to pay the compliment of preserving a souvenir.

THE SURE WAY

So simple the rules, and so hard to obey,
And the whole world upset,
Because, though told over and over the way,
Human beings forget.

As you would be done by, so labor to do!
The poorest befriend!
Forgive as you pray will the Lord forgive you
When His court you attend.

So simple the code, down the ages retold,
And taught even yet.
Still clinging to passions and hatreds of old,
Men, the sure way, forget.

Messrs. C. V. F. Meagher and George H. Meagher, formerly of Napanee, will open an up-to-date clothing and men's furnishing store here in the near future. A large store in the Anglo-American Hotel Block is being arranged for them.

At a meeting of the civic committees, the fire committee under the chairmanship of Ald. St. Charles, decided to recommend to the city council that dating from Dec. 1st., 1916, the scale of wages paid to the permanent firemen be set as follows: Chief, $90.00 per month; Assistant Chief, $70.00 per month; firemen, $60.00 per month. The firemen will be called upon to do the flushing of Front and Bridge Streets, the flushing of all hydrants of the waterworks system and such other duties as may be decided upon by the council from time to time.

Mary Pickford in "Rags" will be the attraction at the Griffin Opera House Monday and Tuesday evenings.

NOV. 23RD., 1896.

The thanks of the officers and members of the physical department of the Y.M.C.A. are extended to Mr. Hope McGinnis for the gift of a striking bag and to Mr. Robert Marshall and Mr. Herbert Allen for making the drum and setting it up.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen held its 16th annual assembly in the Oddfellows' Hall last evening and it was an unqualified success. There were over 100 couples present. Chalaupka's orchestra, under the leadership of Prof. Wily, furnished excellent music and Mr. James Gerow acted as master of ceremonies in his usual capable and pleasing manner. At midnight a most enjoyable supper was served. During the evening Mr. Harry Milne sang two solos in fine voice. The following composed the committee in charge of the affair: George Collins, chairman; J. W. Barlow, Secretary; J. Murray, J. Reid, T. Gorman and M. Bonisteel. The following composed the floor committee: P. Tallon, A. Kennedy and Thomas Marshall.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

THE INCINERATOR BY-LAW AND YOUR NOSE

The incinerator by-law—scheduled for December 9th is as personal to you as your nose.

With your nose you can smell the fragrance of lilac and apple blossom. You find them good. They add to the joy of living in Belleville.

With your nose you can also smell the odors and smoke which the breeze, if it is right, brings from the garbage dump on the shore of the Bay of Quinte.

The unpleasant odors do not have to spoil the joy of living in Belleville. They come from raw, untreated garbage which is being dumped on the shores of our once sparkling waters that surround Belleville. They can be removed by building a modern system for the disposal of garbage. It is as simple as that.

The incinerator by-law — the by-law that will make possible this modern system for the disposal of garbage — is as personal to you as your eyes.

With your eyes you can delight in the sheen of water of the Bay of Quinte with the slanting morning sun on it. With your eyes you can delight in the beautiful shore line of our bay. You find this prospect good. It, too, adds savor to life as it is lived — rather, as it could be lived — in Belleville.

With your eyes you can also see, and sicken at the sight of, the foul garbage-filled water lapping the shoreline of the bay. With your eyes you can see rats, flies, and mounds of rotting refuse at the very entrance to our city — via the waterfront.

These sights spoil the savor of life as it is lived in Belleville. Yet they were not put here by nature; they are symbols of carelessness of a community that is supposed to be modern and civilized. They can be removed, in the course of time, by the building of a modern system for the disposal of garbage in Belleville.

There are many reasons why it is essential to have the new incinerator. Some of these are more important than the esthetic reasons about which we have been writing. We shall write about these in the days between now and December 9th, which is election day.

But when you make up your mind whether the new garbage disposal system is worth the trouble of going to the polls next December 9th and voting for the by-law, remember that you have a personal stake in the outcome.

The incinerator by-law is as personal to you as your nose, as your eyes, as any messages which your sensory nerves send up to your brain as you live and move and breathe and gaze about you in the city in which you have chosen to live, in your Belleville.

Capital Closeups

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 23. (CP)—This is the story of the birth and development of the humble Canadian egg—the eating kind, of course— which is gradually moving into the heavyweight class.

That means, just in case it skipped your notice, that the egg you ate for breakfast this morning was heavier, healthier and better looking than those you had five, 10 or 20 years ago.

Chances are that it had a tougher shell, though it wouldn't actually bounce if you dropped it, and that the "white" was thicker, too, which means tastier-looking eggs for those who like them poached.

And, to top it off, there are more of the new variety because the Canadian hen is laying them faster.

Credit for this achievement in bringing a better egg to the Canadian breakfast table goes to the men of the poultry production service of the Federal Agriculture department and a flock of hens known as the blue-bloods of the barnyard.

The experts are the men who administer the departments "record of production" policy, which aims at the improvement of Canada's poultry industry by placing stress on the use of approved, thoroughbred family stock as laying flocks.

The service keeps tab on the production of selected flocks of certified birds and has proved over the years that an average production of 250 eggs and more per bird is possible with the use of selected hens.

The figures show, for instance, that while the estimated annual average production of all Canadian hens was placed at 116 eggs in 1944-45, the average reached by Canadian R.O.P. breeders registered with the service was 182 eggs. One selected group of birds reached an all-time high average of 225 eggs.

The statistics of one breeder alone show the results of good stock. In 1920-21 he entered 300 hens in the service's annual survey and they produced an average of 155 eggs. In 1944-45, 625 hens from the same farm laid an average of 236.

The grand champion among all the hens under the service's statistical eye is one which laid 354 eggs in a single year. This was beaten out by a common barnyard hen which produced 356 in a year but proved to be only a freak and of little use in the plan of breeding improved stock.

There's one thing the service has to guard against. They have to make sure the hens don't produce eggs that are too heavy and too large because, they say, some hens have reached the point where they are laying eggs that are so big they won't fit into standard-sized egg boxes.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

ASPIRIN

Almost as famous as Harley Street, where all great doctors in England must have offices if they are to shine in fiction, is the London Lancet. This old and distinguished medical journal recently reported that of the 735 deaths due to poison in the year 1938 in England, 65 were caused by aspirin.

Commenting on this the Lancet considered it curious that the drug is not classified as a poison.

Well, now, (with apologies to the Sunnidale druggist) I wouldn't say that. Here in Yankeeland we sanction indiscriminate and irresponsible dosing with far more dangerous sense-deadening, pain killing drugs than aspirin, namely, acetanilid and phenacetin (sometimes called acetophenetidin), both being dirt cheap but deadly coaltar derivatives that benumb sense of pain distress or worry and are therefore the main ingrediants of scores of proprietary nostrums purporting to be good remedies for neuralgia, headache, fatigue, "cold", grip, rheumatism, neuritis or what have you.

The official name for this drug is acetylsalicylic acid. Aspirin was formerly a proprietary name for it—but both the name and the right to make and sell the drug became public property years ago and anybody may manufacture and sell aspirin under this or its official name now.

I wish I knew a safer drug that would be as efficient as aspirin is in relieving ache or pain, but I must say that five or possibly ten grains of aspirin is the only pain-killer I'd be willing to take on my own if I were unable to endure an ache or pain without an analgesic. At that I'd want to keep pretty quiet for at least an hour after the dose—lying or sitting at rest.

I have never encountered a case of aspirin poisoning. I have seen grave cases of acetanilid poisoning in children and adults and two instances of fatal poisoning from nostrums containing acetanilid.

A representative textbook of Therapeutics (Bastedo) gives this information in regard to the poisonous effects of aspirin:

"Aspirin has the disadvantage that, even in small doses, it produces nausea and heartburn in certain people, particularly in those with highly acid gastric conditions" (or as the radio boys interminably din in our ears, excess stomach acidity). "From idiosyncrasy" (peculiar susceptibility) "there are many reports of feelings of weakness, collapse angioneurotic swellings of face and throat" (giant hives), "skin rashes, major urticaria" (severe hives) "and rarely death."

There you have it. Goodness knows I'm not at all fond of ache pain or distress of any kind myself, but unless it is too much to endure I'd rather cry it out than resort to any such unpredictable sense-deadening drug even if only one out of a hundred persons taking the stuff suffers untoward effects.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Girdles Gone

While ago some women wrote about exercises which make a girdle unnecessary. I missed your reply. If you can tell me what exercise to take I'll be grateful. Particularly for waist, hips and back of hips. (S. A.)

Answer—Send twenty-five cents and stamped envelop bearing your address. Take the exercises described and pictured in booklet "The Seven Keys to Vite".

Fattening Or Thinning

Are vitamin B complex capsules taken three times a day fattening? (Mrs. H.W.C.)

Answer—In some cases of underweight. In most cases of overweight they help to reduce weight. They certainly will not make an overweight person any fatter or make a person of normal weight any fatter.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is a laughing jackass?

"Laughing jackass" is the literal meaning of "Cacelo gigas," the scientific name of a strange and interesting Australian bird belonging to the kingfisher family and related to the common American kingfisher.

The native name of this bird is "kookaburra," which is probably of imitative origin. It received its popular and scientific names from the fact that it utters a loud, prolonged, raucous, cackling, laughlike call suggesting the braying of a donkey.

The laughing jackass, which is about the size of an ordinary crow, has a white head, a dark body and a huge bill. It lives on dry land far from the water and feeds chiefly on snakes and other reptiles. Birds of this species make good pets and are favorites in zoos. They are protected by law in Australia.

How did "above the salt" originate?

This phrase is believed to date from feudal days when master and men, lord and retainers, all ate with their guests at one table in a great dining hall and a large saltcellar, called a "saltfoot," was placed near the middle of the board to mark the division between the high and low classes.

Places at the upper end of the table, that is, "above the salt," were assigned to lords, gentlemen, masters, honored guests and others of distinction, while places at the lower end of the table, that is, "below the salt," were assigned to inferiors, dependents, retainers and poor relations. Thus "above the salt" came to signify a position of honor and "below the salt" a place of inferiority. In those days, before refrigeration and other methods of preserving and seasoning foods, salt was a much more important article on the table than it is now.

Even in early Colonial days in America it was customary in the better class homes to have a large, metal, three-legged saltcellar, known as "the standing salt," on the family dining table, but by that time the social distinction between those who sat above and below the salt had disappeared, and "above the salt" and "below the salt" survived only in their figurative senses. In Westward Ho (1855) Charles Kingsley wrote: "We took him above the salt and made much of him."

LEAKS IN STATE HOUSE ROOF

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 23 —(AP)—"There are more leaks in the State House," Budget Director Walter N. Kirkman told a meeting of Maryland officials ominously. "What kind of leaks?" came the anxious response through the cigar smoke. Officials relaxed when Kirkman replied that the State Capitol's roof needed repairs.

TO TEST SUPERSONIC PLANE

Washington, Nov. 23. (AP)—A rocket-propelled airplane which the United States army believes has potential maximum speed of 1,700 m.p.h., will be tested in California soon.

Known as the XSI, the plane is described as a non-military craft and will be used as a flying research laboratory to test the effects of super-speed on planes.

At top speed heat caused by friction would melt the craft's present windshield. Consequently, the first test flight will be restricted to about 600 m.p.h. Later a more heat-resistant shield will be installed.

Back in London Families Wait For New Sailing

London, Nov. 22 — (CP Cable) — Back in London after an ill-starred embarkation for Canada interrupted when their ship, the Empire Brent, collided with the cattle steamship Stormont Wednesday in Liverpool harbor, approximately 900 wives and children of former Canadian servicemen today awaited word on prospects for a new sailing, likely within eight days.

Disembarked at Liverpool where the Empire Brent went into dry dock for repairs, the dependents returned here last night in special trains and will spend the interval before the next sailing either in a London hostel or in their own homes.

Reactions among the arrivals ranged from philosophical resignation to suspicious bitterness.

As they were transferred to fleets of buses waiting at stations here, the wives ran the gamut from tears to laughter. Those with children — some had as many as four — were most fatigued, but managed smiles as Canadian soldiers and Canadian Red Cross Society personnel gathered around to help.

Hostels Take Over

Hot meals awaited the wives and children at two hostels hastily taken over to provide temporary accommodation. Those without the responsibility of babies took a lighter view of the collision. Said youthful, attractive Mrs. Harmona Sargent of Utrecht, Holland:

"We've had a lot of fun but it's too bad it will be a longer time before I see my husband and Kenneth in Vancouver."

Mrs. Rene Francon, Montreal-bound, said her baby was just over the age limit for the first train, which carried children under 15 months, and as a result hadn't eaten for seven hours.

Mrs. Irene Day and her 9½-year-old daughter Shirley, bound for Toronto, regretted having to leave "the super boat and super food."

All agreed that the collision was "practically imperceptible." "Nobody thought anything about it," said Mrs. Margaret Chalkounsky, whose husband George is in Montreal. Lt.-Col. V. N. Gill, commanding the Canadian Wives Bureau in London, said doctors and nurses will be on call around the clock.

The Empire Brent is the former hospital ship Letitia.

Northern Spies Best for Pies

(Port Arthur News—Chronicle)

Port Arthur shops are again advertising—and selling the Northern Spy apple, foremost product of Ontario's orchards because it superior to all other apples in the making of pies.

Fortunate is the family where the head of the household knows how to make the batter and the filling and especially where there is the shortening and more important still, the sugar that will form a light syrup to flow between the succulent crusts. When the apples are spys there can be nothing finer on the tables of this or any other country.

Also there is the good, old plain applesauce, so often mentioned in derogatory terms. It is, notwithstanding, a tasty and valuable food. Among other things it makes pork taste not merely good but better—but be sure to cook the pork; all pork; thoroughly.

Incidentally new processes in the factories have given new values to the country's crop of apples. Much of the fruit that formerly went to waste or was used as feed for livestock goes to the factories to be converted into apple juice. Canned applesauce is also a new product. Some of the apples, too, are dehydrated in the factories, which is nothing more nor less than what happened to them in the old days when, cut in slices, they were held on strings across the kitchen as near the stoves and stovepipes as possible. Many children of the recent day have not seen the domestic dried apples made in that way. It is only one of the things the moderns have missed.

Lonely Among City's Millions

(Brandon Man., Sun)

Insular residents of populous cities look with a sort of sympathy at those who live on the wide prairies, in the Arctic or even in the scattered villages. They think the fine areas with nature's own flagrant wealth and lavish beauty around them must be lonely. That is big city ignorance. Thousands of men and women are more lonely and less happy among dense cities than with kindly nature as a companion. Nothing is so dreary as a lonely being in a place where there is no neighborliness and little fraternization among the citizens Numbers mean nothing in the continuous processions of strange faces in any city such as New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Paris or London. The loneliness of masses or among masses is the worst form of torture humans with feelings and sensibilities can endure.

There was reported an instance of being desperately alone among millions of strangers quite recently in London. A telephone operator arrived at her work at the headquarters of the BBC, sat down at her switchboard to take an incoming call and discovered that she could not speak. Chided with not staying at home and reporting herself sick, the girl said until she sat at the switchboard she did not know there was anything wrong. She lived alone had made her breakfast and left her lodging for work, put her fare in an automatic machine on the underground railway, got her ticket and boarded the train, later walking from the station to Broadcasting House—all without speaking a single word to another soul.

It sounds rather pathetic to most Canadians, but it could happen in Toronto or Montreal and we hope not in Winnipeg which we doubt. In fact there does seem too little effort on the part of humanity to interest itself warmly in the hundreds of thousands lonely souls' strangers within the gates of the teaming cities of the world.

SEARCH FOR AGED MAN

Pembroke, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Provincial Police last night were searching for 77-year-old Adolph Hubert of this town, missing from his home since Thursday afternoon. Relatives said he had left home to go for a walk and had last been seen near a cemetery on the outskirts of Pembroke.

Tidal Wave Is Hatched in Nest

(T. A. Jaggar in Natural History Magazine)

There are six places around the rim of the Pacific where sea bottom earthquakes capable of causing serious tidal waves can occur periodically. In the order of their importance, these are the deep trenches off the Aleutian Islands, Japan Chile, Kamchatka, Mexico and the Solomon islands. Each one is backed by a line of active volcanoes.

When a seaquake produces a tidal wave, the configuration of the ocean bottom governs its forces to some extent. Seaquakes waves from the Tonga deep and the Philippines deep are not known to reach Hawaii, perhaps because of the obstructing island ridges. And Hawaii itself is a gigantic ridge protecting the Carolines and the Marshalls.

It must be remembered that we are not thinking of the island themselves but of the ocean bottom from which they project, and that in relation to the underlying rock globe the ocean is a mere film of water.

42 Villagers Reported Slain In N. Thessaly

Athens, Nov. 23—(AP)—Forty-two villagers who signed a petition disavowing Communism have been killed, 30 others wounded and 45 houses burned by a guerilla band in the village of Xerovrisi, about three miles north of Kilkis in Northern Thessaly, a Greek press disptach said Friday.

The village, which has a population of 270, was the third on the east side of the Vargar river to be attacked since the outbreak of fighting near the Yugoslav border at Skra last week.

A Kilkis military court sentenced four men to death and two to life imprisonment after their conviction on charges of harboring and organizing Communist bands.

Increasing disorder in Western Macedonia was reflected in reports of fighting in the Flambouri Mountains south of Kozane and east of Grevena where four guerillas were reported killed, 3 wounded and three captured.

Greek army headquarters reported a new battle in the Mount Tzena area of Northern Macedonia where they claimed yesterday that operations were "virtually concluded" and that the "last rebel nucleus" had been machine-gunned from the air.

Artillery and fighter planes were thrown into action in the new drive against the insurgents, who were stated to have tried to cut government communication lines through the hills.

Other serious clashes occurred last night in the Deskati and Thessaly areas of Central Greece.

In Athens, all shops and public offices decided to close for an hour today in protest against the disorders, and to send resolutions to the United Nations seeking assistance in quelling the disturbances.

DINNER MEETING and OPEN FORUM
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25th AT 6.30 p.m.
AT MASONIC TEMPLE — 399 FRONT ST.
ALL MEMBERS, THEIR FRIENDS AND PROSPECTIVE NEW MEMBERS ARE URGED TO ATTEND!

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. W. M. Leslie of this city, and Mrs. C. F. Anderson of Carroll, Man., are leaving tonight for Lariviere, Man., to see their sister, Mrs. W. S. Fargey, who is seriously ill.

On Friday afternoon and evening, Mrs. Foltz, 42 Grove Street, who was celebrating her 91st birthday, was pleasurably surprised when several friends called to offer their felicitations and good wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCumber have sold their home on Bleecker Avenue, to Mr. Stuart Riley, of Montreal, and have taken up residence in Toronto. They plan on going to Florida for part of the winter months. Many friends entertained for them before their leaving the city and they received some beautiful gifts in token of their popularity.

WEDDINGS

HAZELTON—LAMORRE

Trenton — St. Peter-in-Chains Church, Trenton, was the scene of a lovely double ring ceremony on Monday, November 11, at 9 a.m., when the Rev. Father Lamarche united in marriage Audrey Marie LaMorre, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis LaMorre, to Jack Edward Hazelton, of Fort Erie, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hazelton, of Huntsville, Ont. It was the first double-ring ceremony to take place in St. Peter's Church.

The lovely fair-haired bride was gowned in white slipper satin, made on princess lines, with fingertip sleeves, and circular train. Her headdress was a three-quarter length veil of misty white tulle, caught in a halo, edged in pearls. Her only ornament was a necklace of pearls, and her bouquet was a cascade of Sweetheart roses. She was escorted to the altar by her father.

The bridesmaid was Miss Maisie Kelly, who was charming in soft pink chiffon, edged in gold. Her headdress was a halo of baby 'mums and shoulder-length veil of pale pink tulle. She carried a cascade bouquet of giant 'mums.

The groom was attended by Mr. Robert LaMorre, only brother of the bride.

Two tiny flower girls were cousins of the bride, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert LaMorre, Miss Nancy and Miss Marjorie LaMorre. They were quaint and so lovely, one in pink and one in blue taffeta, with flower wreaths and carried nosegay bouquets.

The ushers were Mr. Joffre LaFleur and Mr. Gerald LaLonde.

Mr. Jack McHendry assisted Father Lamarche in serving the Mass and Miss Shirley LaMorre, sister of the bride, sang during the Holy Communion. Mr. Kenneth Ryan also sang the "Ave Maria", very beautifully.

The gifts to the attendants were a necklace of pearls to the bridesmaid, a lighter to the best man and tiny golden crosses to the flower girls.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Covers were laid for 85 guests, who were received by the bride's mother dressed in dove grey crepe and lace, black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by Mrs. R. H. LaLonde, grandmother of the bride, who was charmingly gowned in black with a shoulder corsage of rosebuds. The groom's parents were unable to attend on account of illness.

The bride's table was beautiful with its three-tiered cake, flanked by tall ivory tapers in silver holders and crystal vases of white baby 'mums in fern. The crystal and silver appointments were carried out at all the tables. Assisting in serving were Miss C. O'Ray, Miss Jean LaMorre, Miss Rose Marie LaMorre, Mr. Douglas Matson of Sarnia, Mr. Harry LaMorre and Mr. Kenneth Ryan. Music was supplied by Mr. Claude Copeland.

An honored guest was present in the person of Rev. Dean Cullinane, who has recently been appointed to St. Peter's Church and the Rev. Father Lamarche. The dean proposed a toast to the young couple and wished them success and happiness in their new life. Other toasts were successfully proposed by Mr. Robert LaMorre, and ably responded to by Rev. Father Lamarche, Mr. Robert LaMorre, Mr. Joffre LaFleur and Mr. Louis LaMorre.

Telegrams of congratulations were received from Montreal, Fort Erie, Huntsville, Toronto, Brockville, and St. Catharines.

For the wedding trip by automobile to points in the United States and Montreal, the bride donned a suit of grey with brown accessories, corsage of red roses and a beautiful tuxedo style Muskrat coat, the gift of the groom to his bride.

The happy couple departed on their trip showered with confetti. On their return they will reside in Fort Erie. A charming gesture of the bride and her bridesmaid, was in the presentation of their bouquets to Mrs. R. H. LaLonde, grandmother of the bride.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

The annual meeting of the Ivanhoe W.M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. Rollins, with the president in charge. After the opening hymn a short business period was conducted during which Mrs. F. Palmer gave a short talk on the word "Do".

The program was in charge of Group No. 3 with Mrs. Palmer as leader. A hymn was followed with silent prayer and oral prayer by Mrs. Mitz. Psalm 23 was repeated in unison, and Mrs. E. McMaster delighted all present with a reading.

Mrs. J. F. Everson reviewed the study book chapter, "Women of India", assisted by Mrs. Mitz. With Mrs. Arthur Wood as accompanist Mrs. G. Wood and Mrs. E. Wood contributed a suitbale duet. The meeting closed with the benediction. Following is the slate of officers for the year 1947:

President, Mrs. G. Wood; 1st Vice President, Mrs. Clifford Mitz; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. E. McMaster; Secretary, Mrs. S. Prest; Treasurer, Mrs. A. Wood; Cor. Sec., Mrs. M. Ray; Christian Stewardship Sec, Mrs. J. F. Everson; Temperance Sec., Mrs. S. Twiddy; Strangers' Sec., Mrs. N. Thomlinson, Mrs. C. Mitz, Mrs. H. Reid; Associated Helpers' Sec., Mrs. Jessie Cooney; Missionary Monthly Sec., Mrs. N. Thomlinson; Supply Sec., Mrs. E. Wood; Press Sec., Miss Doris Twiddy; Peace Sec, Mrs. S. Kilpatrick; Pianist, Mrs. D. Fleming; Baby Band Pres., Mrs. E. Rollins; Assistant, Mrs. E. Benson; Mission Band Pres., Mrs. C. Mitz; Watch Tower, Mrs. H. McMillan.

Group Leaders: No. 1 Miss Cora Prest; No. 2, Mrs. E. Benson and Mrs. E. Twiddy; No. 3, Mrs. H. Lovibond and Mrs. F. Palmer; No. 4, Mrs. Murray Reid.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and a hearty vote of thanks was extended to her for her kind hospitality.

Ladies' Guild St. Thomas' Parish Holds Bazaar

Cold winds, snow flurries, lowering clouds and grey skies, on Friday afternoon, were a strong contrast to the warmth and cheer of Christmas spirit pervading St. Thomas' Church Parish House, where ladies from all sections of Belleville, gathered to attend the annual bazaar and afternoon tea under the auspices of the Ladies Guild of St. Thomas' Parish. Receiving the guests were Mrs. A. Smith and Mrs. Wilson, president of the Guild.

One half of the large cheerful room was given over to the tea table, covered with a beautiful lace-edged linen cloth with intricate cut-work design, and centred with a cut-glass bowl of pure white baby 'mums, which were flanked by tall silver candelabra holding red and white candles, whose rosy glow was reflected in the silver sheen of the tea services.

The tearoom was convened by Mrs. Feather. Pouring from three to four-thirty o'clock were Mrs. Tattley and Mrs. Howard; and from four-thirty till six p.m., Mrs. F. Potter and Mrs. R. McBrian. Ladies assisting with the serving were Mesdames, Bolus, VanTassel, Keel, Abrams, Jeffrey, Henn, McKenna, N. C. Fisher, Kayser, and Keller, while Mesdames Hutchison, Tilley, Brunton and Saunders were kept busy replenishing the plates.

At the front of the room was a large Christmas tree with twinkling lights and all the usual colorful trappings, beneath whose branches the "Touch and Take" parcels in gay wrappings were attracting a great deal of attention; while next door, costume jewelry was displayed against a background of the Christmas colors of red and green. These tables were convened by Mrs. J. F. Murray with Mrs. H. P. Holway and by Mrs. N. Nicholson with Mrs. W. D. Johnston, respectively.

The "goods" in the fancy work booth, in charge of Mrs. L. Fozard and Mrs. Milton Davidson, included beautifully knit children's garments in the traditional shades of pastel pink and blue.

Novelties and useful articles too numerous to mention were on a table convened by Mrs. Carl Fisher; while the Apron booth, convened by Mrs. F. Patterson and Mrs. E. Martin boasted the additional attraction of two well-made colorful quilts, which were the cause of considerable wishful thinking on the part of some of the "mothers" present.

The doll booth, with its "Two Little Girls in Blue" and its line of dainty doll dresses offered many "pretty" suggestions for little "Mary's" Christmas gift. This display was in charge of Mrs. G. F. Smith and Mrs. A. Geen.

Eventually every lady visited the home-baking table, made doubly attractive with Yuletide decorations, and a large fruit-filled plate as a centrepiece. Here were featured Christmas cakes and plum puddings, as well as several varieties of salads and delicatessen dishes. This table was convened by Mesdames Wilkinson and Digby.

Near the entrance to the tea room was a table decorated with red bands and white scalloped edgings against a cover of olive green, effectively arranged with its offerings of many species of potted plants, and a smattering of foods in brightly hued containers.

The treasurer for the afternoon, Mrs. S. J. Gilmore, reports that the proceeds of this pre-Christmas social event were very gratifying to the ladies sponsoring it.

DR. H. A. FOLGER DIES AT KINGSTON

Board Will Assist Home And School Clubs in Providing Hot Meals for the Children

The Board of Education will assist again this season in the provision of hot meals by the Home and School Association for pupils of King George School and at Queen Mary School, it was decided at the regular meeting of the board held Friday evening.

The matter of hot meals was brought up for discussion following the report of a special committee which had interviewed parents in the West Hill section regarding the provision of transportation for pupils who because of crowded conditions had been transferred from Queen Mary to King George School. At the last meeting of the board in October, it had been decided to discontinue providing bus transportation for the children transferred.

"The delegation of parents we interviewed considered that one bus ticket per day should be provided for the three winter months," stated board member Miss Josephine Tickell. "Also they felt that a hot meal should be provided at noon."

"I thought that at our last meeting we made it clear we had decided that there would be no more bus tickets," stated Mr. E. A. Geen.

Financial Assistance.

Mr. Robert McCulloch felt that consideration should be given to the hot meals suggestion and pointed out that in the past the board had contributed in some measure to the Home and School Clubs undertaking this responsibility. Mr. Wishart stated it was quite a job for the Home and School Clubs to undertake giving hot meals, but chairman of the board Mr. William Finkle pointed out they had been doing this in the past.

The motion that the board give some financial assistance to the Home and School Clubs in this matter was put by Mr. B. C. Sisler and was carried unanimously.

Public school inspector L. A. Kells reported there had been a slight upward trend in public school enrolment since the opening of the school term with there being a present total of 1754 for all schools. Chief increase in the enrolment had been at Queen Victoria School, although this had not been attributable to the special girls' class in that school.

Change Admission Time

In view of experience during the past three years it was recommended by Mr. Kells that consideration might be given to admission of pupils who reach the fifth birthday by Dec. 31st, following instead of Oct. 31st, as at present.

The special girls handicraft had opened at Queen Victoria School on October 21st with an enrolment of 18 girls of 13 and 14 years of age. Approval of the selection of pupils, and of the teacher assigned to the class had been received and a proposed equipment for the class is receiving consideration, it was stated by Mr. Kells in his report.

The largest group of student teachers from the Ontario Normal School at Peterboro, ever to request training in Belleville public schools has been assigned to 13 teachers on the local staffs who have volunteered for this purpose.

Request Guidance

The fact that seven teachers in training out of a total enrolment of about eighty at the normal school, have elected to request guidance by Belleville public school teachers was considered by the inspector to reflect very favorably on local schools. It was felt that more than chances had entered into the picture and that the efforts of principals and teachers to provide these young people with worthwhile experience, had, in a great measure been responsible.

Student teachers who, during December and next March will come to Belleville are Miss Marie Badgley, Miss Jean Conklin, Miss Georgina Huffman, Miss Betty McLeod, Miss Jean Nugent, Miss Ruth Palmer and Vincent Sagriff.

Resignation Accepted.

The resignation of Miss Eleanor Plumsteal, B.A., Collegiate teacher who became ill on October 26th, was accepted by the Advisory-Vocational Committee with the matter to be left in the hands of Principal Currie with power to act.

The matter of students leaving school to accept work for the Christmas season was also left in the hands of the Collegiate principal, the board expressing itself as being anxious that the school remain in full operation with full attendance until the end of the term. Total composite school enrolment at present was reported by Principal Currie to be 861 with enrolment in Collegiate being 523.

In committee of the whole the board received the playground report from J. E. Shortt with a resume of the season's activities being given. The fact that full time supervisors had been retained during the past season had made for greater efficiency. A total of 368 different children from eight to 14 years had been registered during the season, it was stated.

Recommends Supervisors.

Fencing of the playgrounds as a protection against vandalism and making for easier supervision was recommended by Mr. Shortt, while a continuity of supervisors was also urged.

Later in the meeting it was recommended by the board that families using the playground dressing rooms as living accommodation, be asked to vacate as to prevent freezing it was necessary that the water services be turned off.

The board went on record as approving of the action of the Home and School Associations holding a pre-election meeting at which time aspirants to the board of education office for the next year are invited to speak. Fullest co-operation of the board in this matter was promised.

Toxoid Administered.

The first treatment of diphtheria and whooping cough toxoid had been given to 130 children in the four schools on Oct. 22 and 23 by Dr. G. S. Cronk, M.O.H., it was stated in the school nurse's monthly report.

Consent slips have been sent to parents of 375 children in the Queen Alexandra School for reinforcing inoculation, for diphtheria and whooping cough. All children who have not had diphtheria toxoid within the last three years were recommended inoculated. Just one treatment would be necessary if the full toxoid treatment had been received before.

Approximately 80 pupils of grade VII in the four schools have had a special physical inspection, including vision and hearing. Parents of children with defects have been contacted and the importance of having these corrected has been pointed out. Some parents were reported to be very cooperative, others are resentful and still others neglectful.

HAZZARD'S W.M.S.

The November meeting of the Hazzard's W.M.S. Auxiliary was held on Thursday with 15 members present.

Mrs. F. Gunsolus led the worship service using the Monthly Magazine as a guide.

The Chapter of the Study Book on "India at the Threshold", was taken by Mrs. McCreary.

Mrs. N. Broad read a poem "Myself", and gave a few of the highlights from the Sectional Rally recently held at Tweed.

It was decided to make up a bale for Korea in reply to a request for aid by Dr. Florence Murray, returned missionary from that country.

It was also decided to serve refreshments at the next picture display and to charge 25c a plate.

Mrs. Geo. Patten conducted the election of officers. A slate was presented and accepted as follows:

Past President—Mrs. M. Howard.

President—Mrs. N. Broad

Vice President — Mrs. P. Harris.

Recording and Corresponding Secretary—Miss F. Harris

Treasurer—Mrs. A. Ketcheson

His Excellency Sees 'Serenity and Beauty' Belonging to Canada

Toronto, Nov. 23. (CP)—The Governor General opened the 67th annual exhibition of The Royal Canadian Academy at the Art Gallery here last night and admitted that he too was a painter "of sorts".

He asked what could do more to develop the real interpretation of Canada than the growth of a truly representative school of Canadian painting, and said that what had struck him was the definite Canadian atmosphere even though the country had many very different divisions.

"This Canadian atmosphere needs describing and I will try to do so," His Excellency said.

"To my mind many Canadian artists have captured the obvious characteristics of virility but too few have succeeded in capturing the less obvious—that serenity, majesty and delicate beauty which belongs to this enchanting land."

V.O.N. News

War brides of Belleville servicemen who have come to this city to make their homes are welcomed to their new community by many agencies, one of which is the Victorian Order Nurse. Some of the newcomers have been married several years overseas and brought to the city their tiny tots. They were most anxious to avail themselves of the many opportunities open to learn how to give their children proper care and health supervision. For this reason the "get-acquainted" visit of the nurse was greatly appreciated and when informed of the well baby conferences held weekly at the Kiwanis Centre, these new citizens have become some of most regular attendants.

Recently Miss Dorothy Connor of the V.O.N. staff attended a tea at the Y.M.C.A. for "war brides" and was able to answer many questions which the young mothers asked her concerning health matters and the services available through the V.O.N.

525,000 Cases of Tomatoes From 8,000 Acres Packed In Two Counties This Year

Hastings and Prince Edward Counties from an acreage of 8,000 packed 525,000 cases of tomatoes in the 1946 season, Department of Agriculture officials here announced today.

In addition, 1,000,000 cases of tomato juice were packed which is approximately 25 per cent of the total output of the Dominion.

Commenting on the yield, Department inspectors stated that the yield was considerably below normal although juice production was 20 per cent above that of last year. Black rot and cracks were prevalent in most cases while the mould count in juice was the highest in history.

Farmers of the two counties produced pumpkin sufficient to fill 40,000 cases, a slight decrease from the 1945 production.

Overall production of canning foodstuffs, the inspectors said, was over two acres per capita in Prince Edward County which has a population of 16,000.

Close Supervision on Butter Manufacturing is Maintained, Dairy Director Tells Commissioner

Toronto, Nov. 23 —(CP)—The Ontario Department of Agriculture maintains a close supervision on butter manufacturing by employing a staff of 10 inspector-instructors, C. E. Lackner, director of dairying, Friday told the royal commission on milk.

The commission, investigating the milk industry in Ontario, was told that each inspector-instructor visit approximately 25 creameries, checking on sanitary conditions, manufacturing methods and quality.

Mr. Lackner said a producer subsidy is paid by the Dominion Department of Agriculture on the basis of the cream butter fat content which amounts to about eight cents a pound of butter.

"If a producer is not shipping up to standard or not meeting sanitary requirements, we have power to shut him off and refuse to allow his cream to be sold to a creamery," Mr. Lackner said.

"The witness added that butter production due to the farm labor shortage and climatic conditions decreased 1.3 per cent for the first nine months of this year compared with the same period in 1945. Decrease in cheese production was 19.9 per cent.

"Very little Ontario butter is exported as the production is not sufficient to supply the domestic market," said Mr. Lackner.

The diversion of milk for the manufacture of higher priced dairy products and the dissatisfaction of producers with the price of milk for butter and cheese manufacture also contributed to the drop in butter production.

"When a man is a fairly large producer he usually likes to sell fluid milk, rather than cream for butter, because he gets a better return," Mr. Lackner continued.

He replied in the affirmative to a question by Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, commissioner, whether he thought if there was no price control on butter would the price rise.

Mr. Lackner declared that the producer is receiving between $2 and $2.10 a hundredweight for his milk and is not satisfied. "The price is the reason for the decreased amount of milk going into cheese, with a result Canada will not be able to export its quota this year."

Figures for Ontario, said the witness, show that 38.5 per cent of all milk goes into butter, 28.9 per cent into cheese, 26.5 per cent into fluid milk and cream and 8.07 per cent into concentrates.

To obtain the maximum results in production and breeding Mr. Lackner recommended that an education program for farmers be instituted and that they be paid a higher price for their milk to compensate them for their investment.

"I expect unless there is a change in the ceiling price conditions will be worse next year," he said.

TRAGEDY OF WAR GRIMLY DEPICTED BY NOTED WRITER

"Our Share of Night" by Drew Middleton is Personal Narrative of Six Years of War

By R. J. ANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, (CP)—Drew Middleton saw at first hand more of the agony of Europe than most of the correspondents who covered the Second Great War. He covered it from its beginning to its end in a flaming Germany. Now, at last, he has written about it. And he is bitter.

"Our Share of Night", published this month, is not a history of the European phase of the greatest conflict fought by man. It is, as its jacket attests, strictly a personal narrative of six years of war. It is largely a story of people in a war-torn world, scenes and experiences too casual—sometimes too brutal—for the cables. Its pessimistic ending is set in a crumbling Germany with the writer making a plea for one, united world—or none.

Mr. Middleton first wrote for The Associated Press and in September, 1942, joined the New York Times as a member of its London bureau. Now stationed in Moscow, he began "Our Share of Night" in March, 1945, in Paris wrote new chapters in such places as Frankfurt and the Welsh village of Dinas Powis and finally completed it in Nuernberg. Its impact is not lessened by its belated publication.

By its very nature "Our Share of Night" is a well-written autobiography of Drew Middleton during the war years. He has left to others the arguments of grand strategy and comparative merits of commanders, confining himself strictly to what he saw. Scores of brave men receive their due but only one, Dwight D. Eisenhower, is given a reference of note.

In Many War Areas

Mr. Middleton writes with great humanness of the six-week war in the West in which Germany knocked out France, the Battle of Britain, the blitz, the occupation of Iceland, the invasion of North Africa, the bitter fighting in the hedgerows of Normandy and the war's wind-up in Germany. To the end, he dislikes the Germans and warns that in the nation that now is prostrate, there burns an unquenchable wish for 'a new, stronger Germany that would not make the mistakes the Nazis made.'

Mr. Middleton, accredited for much of the war to the British forces, saw the tragedy of Dieppe from a Royal Navy motor launch off the beaches. That day of Aug. 19, 1942, he saw many a Canadian soldier die and of his feelings that night as his battered launch crept back to Newhaven, England, he writes:

"Another failure. Whatever the generals and admirals might say, I felt that it had been a failure. . . All these good men dead or captured. For what?"

"Our Share of Night" also is a tribute to the courage and sacrifice, the "selflessness, tolerance and humility," of the men who fought the war. But it also expresses frank remarks on the corruption and brutalization of character that is a part of war. Of this phase, Mr. Middleton is especially critical of American soldiers, brave and excellent troops, but too often, after victory, poor citizens who disgraced their country.

Mr. Middleton came out of the war seeing no hope for mankind outside of an international federation. He concludes; "Mankind cannot be cured of this scourge of war until . . .a man looks upon himself not as a citizen of Uruguay or Germany of the United States but as a citizen of the world. But there is no hope of that. . . "

LACK OF HIGHWAYS SLOWS EXPANSION OF TOURIST TRADE

Newfoundland to Start Big Road-Building Program to Open New Areas for Visitors

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Port Aux Basques, Nfld.—(CP)—Newfoundland is beginning to make a bid for the tourist dollar and officials expect that more and more visitors from North America and elsewhere will pass through this and other ports of entry as accommodation and communications generally improve.

With lakes and rivers abounding in a variety of fish, with tracts of virgin forests teeming with wild game and 6,000 miles of striking beautiful rugged coastline, Newfoundland has much to attract the tourist, but so far limited roads and accommodation have prevented development of the industry to the full.

However, a $13,000,000 road-building program now is on paper and when completed it is expected to open up large new areas to the tourist trade. As yet there is no transinsular highway and the only way to travel across the Island is by air or rail.

Good accommodation now is available at St. John's, Corner Brook, Grand Falls, and a few of the other centres on the island, but in the smaller places the accommodation is mainly of the boarding house variety.

The Island has an efficiently operated tourist bureau in St. John's staffed by Cyril Duley, Peg Godden and Margaret Armstrong. American and Canadian newspapermen who have visited St. John's and Canadian servicemen who have been stationed in the city can vouch for the ability of the trio to do things which make travelling easier for the visitor.

Miss Godden, veteran of the staff, will be remembered by servicemen whom she helped to place in St. John's homes at the start of the war when accommodation for the forces was under construction.

Omitted From Manifesto

Criticism is sometimes heard that the bureau is not receiving all the co-operation it should from the present commission government. For instance, some point to the fact that in a recent 10-year manifesto on post-war reconstruciton plans the commission government made no mention of the tourist trade.

This little town, situated near the tip of Cape Ray, is one of five points of entry into Newfoundland. The others are St. John's, Gander, Corner Brook and Botwood.

To this port come the visitors who travel by train to North Sydney, N.S. From these they cross in steamers the 100-mile wide Cabot Strait which separates Canada from Newfoundland. Here the visitors embark on the Newfoundland railway which makes a 550-mile roundabout trip to St. John's.

The railway was built to service as many communities as possible and instead of following a direct line it curves and swings through places which in some cases have no other communication with the outside world.

En route the visitor alternately sees, coastline, isolated communities, trappers' shacks, fairly large settlements, farming areas, Virgin forests fishing vllages and finally St. John's the Island's capital which has a population of some 60,000.

This correspondent recently made the train journey and among the game seen during the trip were four large bull moose. The Island's emblem is the head of a cariboo and hunting for the rangy animals is one of the popular sports of the country. In some districts there are bear and in all districts there is a variety of fish.

Giraffes Are Very Friendly

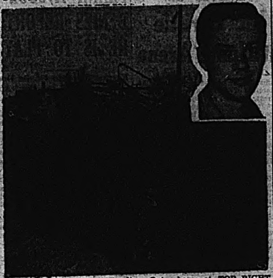
(Manchester Guardian)

The business of unloading a cargo of animals at London docks for the Zoo was not quite the final hazard in the journey. It is no small task to transport six giraffes through London. The difficulties arose entirely from the shape, and especially the height of the giraffe, which entails the use of unweildly crates, and not at all from the temperment of the animals. A more confiding collection it would have been difficult to find.

Whoever, in the course of lifting hauling, and slewing the great crates, was nearest to the head of the occupant was nuzzled as if he were a long lost friend. When a man was climbing over the side of the crate to attach a sling rope to the hook of a crane, the giraffe instead of panicking as might have been expected, brushed its neck against him.

All these giraffes seem quite free of nervousness of man, and the tamest of them all was captured only a fortnight before the ship sailed.

POWER SERVICE CRIPPLED IN 6 ONTARIO CITIES



Leonard Kipp, 21, of Freelton, Ont., shown at TOP RIGHT, escaped unhurt when his car sheared off two legs of a hydro tower near Freelton and caused a brown-out in half a dozen Western Ontario cities. Photo shows the hydro tower which crippled service in Preston, Galt, Kitchener, Guelph, Stratford and St. Mary's.

Giant Atom Gun

(New York Times)

The great 184-inch cyclotron of the University of California was about 70 per cent completed when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. By that time work on the atomic bomb had begun. There was only one way of obtaining in a reasonable time the quantity of uranium 235 needed for experimentation, and that was to use the enormous magnet which constituted the heart of the cyclotron. It must have cost many a qualm to dismantle the instrument, but dismantled it was. The magnet is in place again and the cyclotron of which it is so essential a part is ready to begin the bombardment of matter.

Nothing seems simpler in principle than to pound a bit of matter down to its ultimate components. However, ordinary power hammers are useless. The particles obtained with their aid are still larger than atoms. Bombarding an atom is more like battering a citadel far stronger than any that man has yet devised. What can hammers do against shells of electric energy that surround the nucleous of an atom? Somehow those shells must be penetrated if the nucleous is to be reached, and the only way to penetrate them is to use electric energy itself in the form of what are know as ionized particles. Even then there is only a small chance of scoring a direct hit after firing millions of particles. So we have the paradox of a physicist using a machine which weighs hundreds of tons to reach something so small that it cannot be seen under a microscope. Because they deal with energy the physicists talk of energy. The emphasis is not on the size of the battering machine but on the energy of its blows. And the great cyclotron of California is a 200,000,000-volt machine.

Even Prof. E. O. Lawrence is not satisfied with the cyclotron as it stands. He wants more than 200,000,000 volts now at his disposal. The short-lived mesotrons of the cosmic rays have energies even higher. Not until machines are built which can match the atom-smashing power of the cosmic rays will Lawrence and other physicists be content. But how are such energies to be produced directly and then controlled? There is nothing for it but to improve the cyclotron and other atom-guns step by step and thus approach the ideal contrivance. Invention of the highest order is demanded.

No one can predict what new discoveries will be made with this new cyclotron. More light will undoubtedly be thrown on the structure of the nucleous. For all We know, new ways of releasing atomic energy may come out of research and even more destructive bombs. More pleasant to contemplate is the production of radioactive isotopes, which have undetermined possibilities in the treatment of various types of cancer as well as in the study of phsicology and nutrition.

It's One World For Influenza

(Newsweek Magazine)

Although influenza has not yet been whipped, at least "something similar to a truce has been declared between the two known viruses (A and B) and human beings," Dr. Thomas M. Rivers of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research told National Academy of Science members in Philadelphia Wednesday.

Because of this truce the disease may come back in "mild and moderate" epidemics but not with such killing force as it did in 1918—unless, Rivers amended "a variant (or strain) to which a large proportion of the people of the world is susceptible suddenly originates from one of the known viruses."

While Dr. Rivers commented favorably on the Army flu vaccine taken from egg culture, which was 75 per cent successful in the armed forces, he added that "even the most ardent advocates of influenza vaccines admit that the prevention of an epidemic during the second world war did not depend on their use."

River's own conclusion is this: "Between the two world wars, rapid transportation of all kinds developed by leaps and bounds, making the world one community as far as influenza is concerned. In view of this, all populations of the world are probably seeded (exposed, and hence made resistant) with these two viruses."

Life on Crutches Can be Fun

(From Time Magazine, New York)

The breezy, 37-year-old, best-selling author of Party Line, a story of small-town small talk has used crutches since she was eight, when she lost her right leg in a bicycle accident. To Louise Baker life on crutches is not funny, but it can be fun. She argues her case persuasively in a witty autobiography: "Out on a Limb."

Mrs. Baker's book is a gold mind of hints to the legless (of whom there are some 128,000 in the U. S.) . Samples: (1) watch out for dogs— they are liable to get a paw caught in your crutch; (2) the most efficient and attractive crutch position is dead vertical; (3) a legless person can always make a sucker of a carnival weight guesser; (4) a good way to relieve the boredom of answering who want to know how it happened is to tell whoppers (a favorite Baker whopper: her leg got frozen stiff in skiing and was chipped off with an ice pick.)

Louise, finding an artificial leg cumbersome (her leg was cut off above the knee), grew up mostly on crutches, which became "almost anatomical." She permits herself "one immodest, extravagant vanity the convention that none in the world can handle a pair of crutches better than I". On crutches, she learned to play tennis well enough to beat some of her boy friends and compete in junior tournaments. She also danced (on one crutch), skated skied hiked. At Pomona College, she became a skilled horse-woman, captained her class swimming team.

Mrs. Baker's handicap has not prevented her from marrying twice or making good as a newspaper reporter press agent (for Chicago's Century of Progress), teacher, editor. She observes cheerfully that, besides an asset in making friends, one-leggedness has many minor compensations:e.g. a pair of nylons lasts twice as long.

Among the handicapped there is a bond of ready friendship; they "flaunt their fraternity badges, fraternize wherever they meet. Some members of the fraternity: Actor Herbert Marshall, Playwright Laurence Stallings, Singer Connee Boswell, Planemaker Major Alexander de Seversky, American Veterans Committee's Charles Bolte.

BIG FOUR ARGOS GIVEN THE NOD FOR EAST TITLE

Beaches and Double Blue Ready for Supreme Test of Season

Toronto, Nov. 23. (CP)—In the heavy gloom that settles when hope goes, a football coach sat with his players today and they tried to shut their ears to the distance-softened, but undeniable rejoicing from a similar group in a room similar to this one, yet different as light from dark.

The gathering autumnal dusk had been another Eastern Canada football final written into the records. Played in the usual late-season cold and with the usual crushing finality, it would leave much the same aches and bruises to be nursed—tomorrow, when bodies thawed out.

The picture, repeated so often, was easy to forecast. But it lacked essential detail. There remained yet the features of these big men and little men in heavily-padded clothes to be filled in and that remained for the scoreboard at Varsity Stadium to do.

It could be Toronto Balmy Beach, a team hungry to go on for for a crack at Winnipeg Blue Bombers and a chance at their first Dominion title since 1930, or it could be Toronto Argonauts, a team saturated with successes yet eager just the same. The odds, as the betting men quoted them, favored the Dominion Champion Argos.

(By The Associated Press)

Little remained to be said about these two teams as they took the field. Both tapered off with the lightest of light workouts last night following a week in which neither introduced bodily contact into practices for fear a quirk of fate might see a key man injured. Both started at full strength.

The weatherman still may have a word to add, though. Already he had promised snappy cold weather and, if this should be accompanied by blustery winds, it might enhance the chances of the heavy Beach team against the slingshot arm of big Joe Krol.

The Beach went into the battle on their Ontario Rugby Football playoff record as a team that "can't be beaten," but whether this would hold up against the seemingly invincible big four champions remained to be decided.

The betting men were wagering 2-1 and higher it wouldn't although there seemed strangely little of this money around for those seeking the long chance on the Beach. The experts, fearless as usual, would forecast the score of this game for you even before it started.

Nothing to nothing—before the game started, that is.

HOCKEY RULES

Interpreted

By BILL GRAY

"OFF-SIDES"

Rules 69, Sec. (a)

The position of the player's skates and NOT THAT OF HIS STICK shall be the determining factor in all instances in deciding an "off-side". A player is "off-side" when BOTH SKATES ARE COMPLETELY OVER THE OUTER EDGE OF THE LINE.

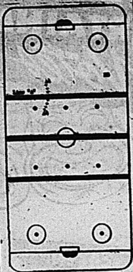
Rule 72, Sec. (a)

Players of an attacking team must not precede the puck into the Attacking Zone.

Special Exception

Rule 72, Sec. (d)

If further, however, a player legally carries the puck from the Neutral Zone into his own Defending Zone, while a player of the opposing team is in such Defending Zone, the "off-side" shall be ignored and play permitted to continue.



CUT HERE

Illustration:

Player B5 is trapped in the Defending Zone of team "A" before the puck has crossed line "A", but defending player A4 carries the puck back from the Neutral Zone into his own Defending Zone while player B5 is still in that zone, because player A4 has carried the puck back into his Defending Zone player B5 is NOT off-side and play shall not be stopped.

Karl "Krippler" Davis Is Too Good for Vic Christie In Main Bout at Hume Arena

Ernie Powers, Hamilton referee, one of the most popular wrestling arbiters around these parts, has a sense of humor. But, in case you are a wrestler, don't impose on the Powerian good nature too far.

After all, you, if you are a wrestler, can sock the opposition to a fare-thee-well, providing you're not caught but when you turn and bop the official on the beazer—well that just isn't being done. That is, if you want to go home with the laurels of victory around your neck.

And that is what happened to Karl 'Krippler' Davis last night. The big Texan, after practically wiping the mat with Vic Christie, highly-touted glamor boy of Hollywood through two-thirds of the main bout, went temporarily berserk, socked M'sieu Powers on the jaw and was promptly disqualified.

The Krippler subjected Christie to terrific punishment in the first fall dominating the show with spasmodic Christy comeback to win the first fall in eleven minutes.

There was a bit of savagery in the Texan's tactics throughout the match. He let loose with all his villainous bag of tricks and won the first fall with more or less ease.

But there were times when the lithe Californian showed flashes of power. He resorted to elbow smashes and body slams spasmodically, that had the congregation in an uproar.

But the Krippler using his body smash, met by the sudden similar tactics of Christie in the third heat, after all was even, went punch-crazy and smashed his elbows and fists (see the rulebook?) is Christie's good looking face and figure.

Incensed by referee Power's warning, the Texan suddenly let go a swift uppercut that caught Powers flush on the puss.

That was the answer. Powers promptly disqualified the Texas longhorn and a much beaten Christie rollicked to the dressing room an unexpected winner.

But the Ben Sharpe-Olaf Olsen bout nearly stole the show.

It proved to be a brother act with the semi final ending in favor of Olsen, after brother Ben, in "civies" came to the rescue of his paternal pal.

It was the highlight of the evening, as far as the boos were concerned. Seeing that brother Ben was getting the worst of the fracas, Mike stepped into the picture and also the ring and between the two they gave the well-known "works" to Olaf and also one Clifford Fox who was the referee.

That, as has been said before, is not according to the non-existant book of pro wrestling rules, so accordingly Mr. Fox ruled both the Sharpe boys out of order and awarded the match to the swivelling Swede.

In the preliminary, Mike Sharpe turned back the Dutch threat of Henry Piers, after some fairly good action with what is dubbed the "Sharpe Stretch".

Chips Off The Sports Block

Back in the bucks again is the Ike of the Italian Ozarks, Prime Carnera. Also, the so-and-so is back in the feed-bag again after several years absence and as a result of American bucks and bologna is feeling and looking like a new man.

A far cry from the pathetic glandular giant who retired to his native Italy nine years ago partially paralyzed and minus his title of world heavyweight boxing champion, not to mention the neat roll of Yankee greenbacks he collected. Da Preem, is now a nattily dressed exuberant pachyderm who is touring the U.S.A. as a wrestler in an effort to recuperate his lost fortune.

Maybe he smiles when he thinks of the good old days when numberless unknowns toppled before his mythical blows as he swung slowly upwards to the heavyweight title. For this time the Preem is travelling alone, with the exception of a manager and not with the retinue of handlers, managers, and hangers-on who finally fleeced him and left him in a Gotham hospital.

In Cleveland the other day where he was greeted by newspapermen, he was the same docile good-natured giant who was the victim of one of the biggest hoaxes in fight history. He made up for his still noticeable lack of intelligible English by a friendly cuffing and mauling of the newsmen.

According to one of the press slaves present, Da Preem's sharp, uneven snaggle teeth are missing. The dental Alps which sometimes momentarily frightened opponents until his first pawing punches were delivered, is the only physical change. Somebody did a capping job somewhere along the line.

During the war years when the man mountain was reported to have been a Fascist and then a guerilla sniper, he dropped down to a mere shadow of 220 pounds. Now, after several injections and transfusions of American spaghetti and other nourishing foods, plus nightly calisthenics on the wrestling mat, he has rounded back to a normal 270.

For his war activities, the beetle-browed Italian has just one word. "Neutral — no underground, no above ground, no nothing — just neutral."

More loquacious in Cleveland the other night, when Carnera met the big Jules Strongbow (remember) was Jack Sharkey, who is still doing a spot of refereeing. The last time Sharkey looked at Carnera, he was viewing the stars from a horizontal spot on the canvas minus his heavyweight title. That was in June, 1933.

Da Preem and Sharkey, 'tis said, went through the usual pawings and manoeuvrings that go for handshakes in boxing circles.

One problem, however is knitting the mighty brow of the former heavy weight titlist That is United States citizenship and permits for Signora Carnera, an eight-year-old son and a four-year-old daughter. As far as finances go, the man mountain is enjoying plenty of box office homage. He is reaping a merry profit as crowds flock to his matches.

FRANK McCOOL DENIES REPORT HE IS TO PLAY

Former Toronto Goalie Does Not Want to Play Any More Hockey

Calgary, Nov. 23 (CP)—Frank McCool of Calgary last night denied a Vancouver dispatch saying that he was en route to Oakland Oaks of the Pacific Coast Hockey League's Southern Division.

"I haven't signed a contract with Oakland—I haven't left for California—I really don't want to play hockey," the former Toronto Maple Leaf net minder said.

Earlier yesterday Mel Harwood, former N.H.L. referee and now coach of the Oakland sextet, said McCool was taking over the netminding chores for Oaks.

"I've got an Oakland contract in my pocket, but I haven't signed it," McCool said. "Right now I really don't think I'm going to sign it but I won't know for sure until the weekend."

"He seemed to figure it was all the goalie's fault the team was losing but I tried to tell him he must be wrong," McCool said. "A goalkeeper can't stop all the shots and Oakland's defence must be letting an awful lot of opposing forwards get through to be losing like they are.

"I doubt if I could do any better than the goalkeeper they have now. After all, Oakland has lost some pretty close overtime games —you can't blame the goalie for that all the time. I told Harwood he'd do better if he gave his present goalie more support."

Girls' House Loop Gets Under Way

The opening games in the Girls' House League Basketball at the Y.M.C.A. were played on Thursday evening. In the opener, Jo Lepore's Royals ran through Dorothy Wonnacott's Queens for a 45-20 score, and in the second game Arlie Gilbert's Aces staged a second half drive to beat Doris Mansfield's Jokers by 28-18, after trailing 9-8 at the half way mark. The fact that both losing teams were minus one of their more experienced forwards just about made the difference in the teams.

In the opener, Shirley Marinoff showed a lot of her last season form to run up 20 of her team's points, while Betty Holway , of the junior team scored 16 for the losers. Doris Mansfield was high scorer in the second game with 9, while two of the winning team, A. Gilbert and Peewee Lepore got 8 apiece.

Play in both games was fairly fast for girls, and with a couple of games under their belts, these teams are going to give a fine show each Thursday night.

Next Thursday will see the Queens take on the Aces at 7.30 while at 8.15 the Jokers will tangle with the Royals.

The teams:

Royals: Jo Lepore 4, Shirley Bunnett 9, Mary Tomaso 4, Shirley Marinoff 20, Ruth Roblin 6, Rena Williamson, Leola Burkholder 2. Total 45.

Queens: Dorothy Wonnacott, Betty Holway 16, Joan Wright, 2, Donna Davidson 2, Agnes Wright, Chrissie Grant. Total 20.

Aces: Arlie Gilbert 8, Peewee Lepore 8, J. Matthews 4, Doreen Bell, Clara Kikes 2, Victoria Ketcheson 4. Total 26.

Jokers: Doris Mansfield 9, Doreen Barton 2, Dorothy Cooke, Dena Pappas, Joan Newman 1, Helen Flindall 6, Ileen Palmer. Total 18.

Referee: Ed Shortt.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 23 — (CP)—Always ready to stir up a little good-natured furore, and (Toronto Star) Lytle happily harps on the possibility of the Quebec Senior Hockey League jumping from beneath the aegis of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to an independent status — in order that players banned by the National Hockey League from regaining amateur status may turn out in the uniforms of Q. S. H. L. teams.

"There, is a growing cloud arising on this hockey horizon indicating that open rebellion against these strictures . . . may be just around the nearest corner," writes fun-loving Andy.

What's the rumpus all about? Andy explains it this way:

"The specific case of two young French Canadian residents of Quebec City (Andy doesn't name them) will serve to illustrate a situation that is not confined to any particular area or province in Canada. The C.H.A. some time ago tied its string to the N. H. L. kite. That is to say, the C.H.A. and the N.H.L. . . approved a joint agreement.

"By its terms, the C.H.A. . . . okayed player agreements by which the N.H.L., once it pays a buck to a player, get his John Hancock on a document, has him, apparently, to have and to hold until death, or joint C.H.A. and N.H.L. approval of release gives him the freedom that the average citizen enjoys as his birthright...

"The Quebec city pair . . . signed to play professionally, and did so with a minor league club for a time. They then became homesick and returned to Quebec, where they secured jobs. That was two years ago. They still have the jobs. But they can't play senior hockey because of the tie-up between the amateur (so-called) and the N.H.L.

"Quebec club management argument is that the boys won't play professionally away from home, so why should they be barred from play in their city or permanent residence? Other clubs in the Quebec League, notably Ottawa, confront similar player difficulty . . .

"The picture is complicated by the appearance in this league of Montreal Royals, which is a group financed by the Forum and operated in Montreal so profitably on Sundays that the Canadiens' management, hard pressed for players, is afraid to move in on Royals' talent for fear of disturbing a very comfortable situation..."

"Clubs which have to compete against the strongly fortified Royals feel they could do better if they were permitted to use players who have decanted themselves from professional clubs . . . yet are hamstrung by earlier commitments."

Andy tossed the responsibility for resolving the dilemma into the lap of N.H.L. president Clarence Campbell:

"One of the avowed duties of the new N.H.L. president is to iron out policy wrinkles. He is the man to move because he represents the high authority of the professionals who for some time now have been directing Canadian hockey traffic down a one-way street . . . Hockey overlords . . . cannot legally maintain the right to traffic in men as traders do with horses and cattle . . . The case of the two Quebec boys . . . seems to require official examination. Otherwise let hockey's brass admit that the dollar is almighty and stop prating about the game's ethics and exposing the odorous herring of the continuing interest they take in general improvement of the Canadian youth breed."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Let me ask you. Ever raise when you did not have enough? Ever pass when you had enough for another raise? Then you have not been paying attention to my pearls of raisedom.

An opening one bidder promises five tricks. Partner is assumed to have two. Either may raise once for each additional trick. It is a raise only when the last partnership number is increased.

Get this straight. Only a raise in number needs another trick. A bid without a raise does not. If the number is not increased, either player may bid and bid without showing an additional trick.

Take this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A K 7 5	♠9
♥K Q 10 6	♥J 7 5 3
♦9 8	♦A J 6 2
♣10 7 3	♣A K J 4

The bidding flounces like this:

South	North
1 S	2 D
2 H	3 C
3 NT	4 H

The opening bid by south is a promise of five tricks. He has exactly five tricks. Despite his lack of additional tricks, he was able to make two more bids. Why?

His second bid was two hearts. This was not an increase of the number in the last pair bid of two in diamonds. Consequently, he did not consume another trick. He simply changed suits.

His third bid was three notrump. This was not an increase of the number in the last pair bid in clubs. Therefore, he did not consume another trick. He simply changed denomination.

North showed three (one more than two) tricks by his raise to two diamonds; another trick by his raise to three clubs; another by his raise to four hearts. Total, five tricks.

Learn this and you will not raise the dickens.

U.S. COLLEGE FOOTBALL RIFE WITH TRADITION

1946 Campaign Running Out With Army Still the Top Team

New York, Nov. 23 —(AP)— With Army definitely removed from the post-season bowl picture, United States College football today gets down to the business at hand—the choosing of New Year's day Bowl contestants and the naming of conference champions.

With the 1946 campaign running out across the United States the program is rife with tradition, including such rivalries as the Yale-Harvard clasic, down for its 63rd renewal at the stadium in Cambridge, Mass.

Army closed the door on post-season game speculation yesterday when the Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., announced that the unbeaten leaders of the American gridirons for the past three years will call it a campaign by playing Navy next Saturday.

In the afternoon's big game, University of California at Los Angeles goes against its big inter-city rival, Southern California, in the battle before more than 100,000 fans that will decide the Pacific Coast champion and coast contestant in the Rose Bowl. U. C. L. A. is a seven-point favorite.

The eastern states Rose Bowl domination hinges on the outcome of two big nine games—Michigan vs Ohio State, and Illinois vs Northwestern. An Illinois triumph would clinch the New Year's trip to the tournament of roses at Pasedena, Calif. regardless of how second-place Michigan fares against third-place Ohio State.

Notre Dame, ranking just a shade below Army in the latest National ratings, goes to New Orleans for its traditional intersectional joust with Tulane.

Sports Roundup

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 23—(CP) — Army's decision to disband after the navy game solves one of the most awkward problems ever to face United States college football . . . Rose Bowl officials decided not to invite the outstanding Army team out to Pasadena for the New Year's Day classic but Sugar Bowl sponsors in New Orleans were quick to extend the glad hand and the city of Los Angeles invited Army to play off the scoreless tie with Notre Dame in the California metropolis . . . However, these two plans were far from a solution . . . Army and Notre Dame were the class of this season's teams and as the Rose Bowl is regarded as the classic post-season spectacle, acceptance of a lesser invitation might give the impression that Army was second best to the eastern Rose Bowl entry, probably Illinois . . . The U. S. Military Academy cut through the whole tangle by declining to take part in any post-season encounter . . . It was just about the only thing possible under the circumstances . . .

War and Peace

Biggest feud of the year was between the long-established National Professional Football League and the newly-established All-America Conference . . . but in pro basketball two circuits are operating with smiles for each other . . . Carl Bennett, president of the National Basketball League's Board of Control, says: "We are not interested in a so-called war with the newly-formed basketball Association of America and we don't anticipate one. The time has come for two leagues and we are certain there are enough players to go around.."

Odds 'n Ends

Wesley Mouzon is a 6½ to five favorite to win the New York - Pennsylvania world's lightweight title from Bob Montgomery in Philadelphia next Tuesday . . . Lightweight champion Gus Lesnevich will receive 42½ per cent of the gate for his title fight Feb. 28 against Billy Fox . . . Fox will get 17½ per cent . . . French middleweight Marcel Cerdan, scheduled to fight Georgia Abrams here Dec. 6, may run into legal difficulties. Armand Vincent, Montreal promoter, claims he has a previous commitment with the North African battler.

CHAPTER 4

Jennifer looked at the other woman steadily.

"I know you don't like this kind of talk," continued Betty, "and you can't say I bother you with much of it. But listen, you'll thank me all the days of your life if you just let the boys alone until you're older, until you're ready to get married. Seely," Betty went on, referring to her closest woman friend, "said to me last year that she thought I ought to talk to you about it, but you always have seemed such an innocent little thing that I kinda hated to shock you. But I tell you, for a girl in your position, without any father or brother to look out for you, men are bad," Betty finished solemnly.

"I know," Jennifer managed to enunciate.

"That's just what you don't know—oh, shut up!" Betty said. The last words were addressed to the radio, from which a chorus of weak little female voices was singing a commercial interlude. Betty snapped off the music, addressed herself seriously to Jennifer. "There was a girl I knew years ago, after your father died," she went on. "I wasn't but about nineteen, a year older than you are now, but I was a widow—I had some sense. This girl—Eda her name was, Eda Rogers—she fell in love with the office boss. Well, I know you won't do that—too many girls and no chance to talk to any of the bosses in your office. But she fell in love with her boss, and for about a year there was nothing too good for the girl: theatre tickets—I and her used to go nearly every week—there was no limit. And mind you, perfume, gloves, a fur scarf—he had a wife and three little boys. But he told her the usual story of not being understood at home and all that, and she believed it. At first she wouldn't have anything to do with him because he was married and she was a decent girl and she knew what it was all about, and so on. But at last he rented a little apartment and he used to spend some nights there—his family lived in Oakland—and finally she gave in.

"She told me she loved him and trusted him and what was the use of being alive at all if you couldn't trust the people you loved, and she went down there and stayed a couple of nights and then another couple of nights and he gave her the handsomest traveling bag you ever saw. And that was the finish. She knew it. We boarded at the same place, and she hadn't any sooner given in to him that she began to walk the floor nights, and I'd hear her say, 'You fool! You big fool!' She knew she hadn't any way of holding him then. He began to cool off, he didn't telephone, he got her moved into another office where she never saw him, and she got mad and gave up her job; she thought that would get him, but it didn't. He wrote her a long letter about his boys growing up and needing the influence of a father, and after that he didn't answer her letters. She bundled up everything he had given her into the travelling case and sent it to his wife with some of his notes. But I never heard that it made any difference; I guess the wife knew who won out. Anyway, Eda killed herself. She drank something in the bathroom and we found her on the floor. And she was a pretty girl, too. Blonde—fairer than you are. She was part Swede."

"Killed herself?" Jennifer whispered.

"Sure she did. But he went right on the way men do, probably telling his wife that she was hysterical or something and had misunderstood him. I tell you, once you give in you've not got any argument left," Betty said severely. "The only thing to do is act like a little lady, let the boys see right from the start that there isn't any nonsense about you. I could have had it a lot easier all these years," Betty finished with a little virtuous toss of her head, "If I hadn't been too proud to go on my knees to any man and cry and ask him what I'd done to make him mad!"

Jennifer had to swallow to make her voice heard.

"I should think—I should think some men would—would really fall in love with—with a girl," she ventured. "They wouldn't be all alike, I should think."

"They're all alike about that," Betty pronounced confidently. "I always thought," she added after a pause on a dreamy note, "that Eda was an awful fool to send back her fur scarf and her purse and the travelling bag and everything. I'll bet there was several hundred dollars' worth in what she sent back. She might as well have kept all that and maybe braced up and fallen in love with someone else someday. . . . Eight-thirty. I'll get the historical crimes program and then go to bed," she said, busy with the dials again. Jennifer played on steadily but she tasted salt water in her mouth and her head hurt.

She did not want to go to bed tonight. When she was alone she would start thinking and thinking; remembering was what she must not do. Remembering was torture.

Only this morning she had been excited and hopeful. earful too, but most of the feeling was hope. She had at last gotten up her courage sufficiently to write Sid, asking for a talk, and he had telephoned in return, saying, "How about lunch? All right, meet me at the Kentucky Kitchen." So she was positively going to see him, no doubt about that, and after all, they had loved each other, they had exchanged all sorts of promises and vows—some of it must be left with which to start afresh into the kingdom of joy and faith and hope.

Tonight no hope was left, nothing was left. She had seen Sid, she had tried with a tenacity that had exhausted her, mind and soul, to bend the conversation her way, to make him answer her, to win him to confidence and interest again. It had all been of no use. Sid had escaped again and again from the net; his twenty-six-year-old male sagacity had been more than a match for her fluttered, anxious, little-girl lures. He had been quite natural, easy, kindly, and more utterly charming than ever with his shabby fine greatcoat and the worn gloves he wore so carelessly, the wallet as always stuffed with bills, the broad smile, the pleasant deep voice. But Jennifer had felt herself at her least attractive, stammering and nervous, pale from unwonted worry and shame, not pretty at all. No one had ever thought her pretty while she was growing up; her tawny hair had been thick, straight and unmanageable, her teeth too big in her wide mouth, her cheeks under prominent cheek bones thin and colorless, and her slightly tipped nose spattered with freckles. She had been an odd-looking child. Betty had first recognized possibilities of beauty in her on an occasion when Jennifer had played herald in a medieval school play. In the square-cut coat, slashed sleeves, puffed brief smallclothes, tights, and plumed cap, with her bright mane curled, Jennifer had suddenly blossomed into quite amazing loveliness. She herself had loved the costume and had hated to see it go back to Goldstein's after the play was over.

But then she had relapsed into the rather pale, gawky, tousle-headed plainness again, her brief emergence over. She had not really captured her beauty, Betty thought; it was always going to be only an occasional thing with her. Faddy and Elna never would be as pretty, but they were always "stylish-looking young ones," as Betty put it; their lack of vanity would never give their mother any concern.

Just lately, just in the last few months, Jennifer had improved. She had had the thick mane trimmed; office confinement had done away with the freckles; there had been new animation in her face, new light in her eyes—always her best feature. Betty did not know why the change had come; gave it little thought.

Lying flat in bed, Jennifer let her mind go back to the past. It was like the incisions of a scalpel into living flesh to remember, but it might free some of the poison of tonight's agonies, it might east the pain to make herself think about it.

Only a few weeks ago this lying awake had been ecstasy. Life had been too short then to give her time to think of Sid. She had taken out of the inmost chambers of her heart every word he had spoken, every touch of his hand, every glance from those splendid, confident, smiling eyes, every intonation of the voice he could drop to such heart-stirring, such perilous depths.

She had met him on a drenching November afternoon when she had been standing on a dripping street corner shivering in her rain coat, rubbers, soaked gloves, trying to hold her twisting umbrella steady. He had slid a great low car to the curb, had smiled at her as he reached sideways to open the door, had said more in command than request, "Hop in. I'll take you home."

No girl of eighteen could possibly have resisted the smile, the friendly voice, the comfort of the big car. Jennifer had been won at once to complete confidence. She had tucked herself in beside him with a laugh of pure delight in unexpected adventure, had rewarded him with her most radiant smile.

"Where to?"

"Well—Page Street. But first I have to stop at the grocery for bread."

"Oh, you have to stop at the grocery for bread! Here's a fine market; how about this one?"

"Well, no, because I'm going to charge it. We'll have to go to my corner."

"I'll treat you to it. Come on."

They had been some blocks away from the crowded downtown streets by this time and it had been easy to find a parking place against the curb. Together they had entered a shining great market. Ah, that had been fun, that had been fun, said Jennifer's aching heart, remembering it. Wandering between the piles of apples and oranges, the great frames stacked with wrapped loaves of bread of all sorts, the ranged bright cans on the shelves, the refrigerator with its ranks of milk bottles and boxes of butter, the market with steaks and chops overlapping each other in scarlet rows, how she and Sid had laughed and talked! And Jennifer, catching a glimpse of herself in the mirrors behind the soda fountain, had seen a transformed girl, a girl with rain-curled haid blown up against her sober old hat, with glowing cheeks and starry big eyes whose black lashes were pearled with mist.

She had reached home a few minutes later in that mood of felicity that comes only once in a lifetime — deep, excited ecstasy, unexpected and indeed indefinable fear, hope, pride, dreams. After that life had been all dreams, the hours when she was not with Sid almost as satisfying as those they spent together.

It was some weeks later, when they had seen each other, if only for a few minutes, every day or twice a day, that Sid had told her that his cousin, who had a small apartment in one of the quiet family hotels, was going to take his girl there for dinner.

"Cass thinks he's a cook," Sid had said with a smile. "He was buying eggs and garlic and I don't know what. I said I'd get some rhum babas or something and take 'em up. Coming along?"

Coming along! What prospect could have been more thrilling in Christmas week, with the shops all glittering with tinsel and red berries, lights blazing everywhere, holidays just ahead? Sid's big hand had been under her elbow as she crossed the street from the office.

"Anyone you ought to telephone?"

"Betty. I'll say—what'll I say?"

"That you're delayed at the office. Christmas rush."

"There really is a Christmas rush on; some of the girls are staying to work tonight. Miss Tilton and I stayed until twelve last night," Jennifer had said. She had laughed mischievously. "I'll tell Betty I may be late."

It was his nickel that she dropped into the slot; her dancing eyes were upon him as she repeated the words. Betty had apparently made no objection, merely saying, "You'll come home with Miss Tilton?"

"Miss Tilton lives downstairs in our house," Jennifer had explained as they walked away together.

"And Betty's your mother?"

SUSTAINS SERIOUS BURNS

Fort William, Nov. 23—(CP)—John Meitz, chief engineer aboard the steamship John B. Richards, suffered serious burns yesterday when fire destroyed his living quarters on board the vessel. Hospital authorities said he was in "poor condition." The fire which destroyed everything in the cabin, was started by a radiator coming in contact with oily clothes. It is believed that Meitz was sleeping at the time.

BUILDING BETTER WORLD BIGGEST BUSINESS TODAY

St. Catharines, Nov. 23 —(CP) —"The building of a better world is the biggest business of the world today," said Rev. Dr. T. W. Jones, moderator of the United Church in Canada, speaking last night at a crusaders cavalcade meeting. His was a message of the urgency of church folk to go out and live worthy of those who served and died in the recent war, of the tremendous obligation which we owe to make this a land worthy of freedom.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night on account of today being Sunday, and after supper we made up a good one to play on pop and ma, me saying Hay Artie, we've sure got some kids with funny names at our school, haven't we?

Oh, sure, do you mean like Hightop Zimple, the guy with part red hair and part white? Artie said, and I said, Yes, and that kid he runs around with, too. I mean Sidebern Sawface, the little gink that uses pins instead of buttons, I said.

Goodness, such strange children with such peculiar names, ma said and pop said, Well, they say it takes all sorts of people to make a werld, and no doubt that includes kids with two-tone hair and held together by pins.

Proving the joke was werking, and I winked at Artie, saying, Eggside Doghair is a funny kid, the way he always has his pockits inside out and wears his shoes backwerds.

I think he just does it to show off, Artie said, and I said, I dont, I think he dont know any better. Do you know Skimple Teeby? I said.

Sure, he's the dubble jointed kid than can make his eyebrows stand up straight, Artie said, and pop said, Come to think of it, there used to be an odd caracter in my class in school. His name was Tittat Toe and he could sharpen pencils with his fingernales and make his knee caps shoot up and down like jack in the boxes.

Now that I remember, it's a small werld after all, ma said. I mean there was a little gerl named Haha Giggle in my class in kindegarden, and she bounced when she sat down because she was born on a rubber plantation, she said.

Being a good one on me and Artie and proving it's possible to grow up and still know what's funny.

New Light on Man's Life

The Kenya archaeologist, Dr. L. S. B. Leaky in London Calling gives an account of recent discoveries that suggest East Africa may well have been the real cradle of man. Near Nairobi, also camps are being unearthed of Stone Age men who, with primitive weapons, hunted animals of unusually large size.

The available evidence points to the fact that man, as we know him today, was derived, by slow stages, from a much humbler ancestor, millions of years ago. Men monkeys, and the great apes, such as gorilla, chimpanzee, orang-utan, and gibbon, are all believed to have come from a common stock which can be traced back—though with many gaps missing in the chain—to an early tree shrew.

My story will not take you back to the very beginning of evolution of men and apes and monkeys, but it does go back as as about 6,000,0000 years ago. That chapter in the earth's history, which the geologists call Lower Miocene, opens at a time when the main stem of the tree of evolution of the primates had already formed. In other words it was a time when the monkeys the great apes, and probably even proto-man, had come into existence.

Many Gaps In Our Chain Of Evidence

Naturally, when one is searching for ancestral types of animals and humans in fossil form, it is inevitable that there will be many gaps in our chain of evidence, although each year sees more of these gaps filled. The earliest-known well-defined members of the great family to which men, monkeys, and apes belong were found many years ago in Egypt, in deposits which belong to that chapter of the earth's history which the geologists call Oligocene.

Considerably later members of this stock have been found in various parts of Europe, and also in the Siwalik Hills in India, and these fossils belonged to the second half of the long chapter in the sequence, the Pliocene.

But there was a big gap. We did not know any part of the story so far as the early part of the Miocene chapter was concerned. Now, it is just that very gap that we have begun to fill in our work in east Africa. It is a very important gap, one which must be filled, if possible, because that was about the time, as I told you earlier, when the main stems which gave rise to men, monkeys, and apes, had come into existence as separate entities, and it was very important to know more about the beginnings of these various branches of the primate family.

Now I am going to try to tell you how that gap is gradually being filled by evidence from East Africa. In 1931, Dr. A. T. Hopwood, of the Natural History Museum, South Kensington, was in Kenya Colony with me, and he found some very interesting but fragmentary, fossilized remains of apes, at a place called Koru. By studying the other fossil remain of better-known animals found in the same deposits, the geologists and palaeontologists were able to establish that these new fossils of the ape group did, in fact, belong to that time-gap in which we are so interested. Not long afterwards in 1932 and again in 1933, I and some of my colleagues, found deposits of the same period on an island called Rusinga, in Lake Victoria, as well as in some other places not far from Koru itself.

The most recent of these valuable discoveries was that of an unusually well-preserved jaw of an ape-like creature, which Dr. Hopwood had named Proconsul and, at the same time, we found in another part of another jaw belonging to the genus of fossil apes which Dr. Hopwood named Xenopithecus.

Now, these two new finds, and especially the first one, are of special interest, for several reasons. Dr. Hopwood, basing his view on the rather fragmentary material which he had in 1931, believed the Proconsul was very closely related to the chimpanzee, possiblly even an ancestor of theirs. But the new jaw of Proconsul, which, remember, is about 6,000,000 years old exhibits a number of characteristics which tend to suggest that instead of being an ancestral chimpanzee, it belongs to a creature not very far removed from the ancestral stock from which man himself has been derived.

That, bl itself, would be a matter of very special interest. But there is something very interesting still to tell you about the fossils from these Lower Miocene deposits in Kenya. For years, scientists have been speculating as to the place were the evolution of man and man-like apes took place. Remember that, today, two representatives of the great apes, the gorilla and the chimpanzee, are found only in Africa, while the other two kinds of great ape, the gibbon and the orang-utan, are found in the far east—in Burma, Malaya, Sumatra, Borneo, and Java.

The strange distribution of the living apes, coupled with the fact that a lot of fossil-ape material had been found in Northern India, led many scientists to believe that, perhaps, the Central Asian region lying midway between Africa on the one side, and the Far East on the other, might prove to be the centre of ancient human evolution.

Now I tell you that we had recently got a better-preserved example of the fossil ape which Hopwood calls Xenopithecus, and Dr. C. G. Simpson of New York, in a recent new classification of the mammals of the world, places this creature as belonging probably to the same stock as orang-utans. We have also got quite a lot of fossil jaw-fragments of a little ape called Limnopithecus, which is almost certainly closely related to the gibbons.

Now do you see what this means? The finding in Kenya of very early members of the stock of great apes which are now confined to the Far East shifts the whole focus back to Africa. When you consider, too, that the new jaw of Proconsul has so many characteristics linking it with man exciting new possibilit-are opened up, and it becomes more than possible, it becomes in fact probable, that we may have the real centre of evolution of the great apes and of man in East and Central Africa.

A great deal more work remains to be done before we can claim this positively, but I am certain that the next few years will see discoveries which will throw great light on the obscure chapters of the story of man's evolution.

In passing I must mention that South Africa, too, has in recent years contributed evidence which points in the same direction. There have been found in South Africa several important fossil remains of ape-like creatures (which have recently been described in detail by Professor Broom of Pretoria), and although these belong to a much later chapter of the earth's history than the one I have been talking about, they, too, strongly suggest that Africa holds many of the clues to the problem of man's origin.

I have been talking about the time before true man came into existence and now I want to turn to a much later period in the story of man's past, to the last complete chapter of the earth's history (called by geologists the Pleistocene) which starts about 1,000,000 years ago. By this time, true man had come into existence, and this is the period of the Stone Age.

A very great deal is already known from many parts of the world about Stone Age man. But even in the field there are still exciting discoveries to be made, and new facts learned, and in 1942 my wife and I had the good fortune to make a discovery which has thrown fresh light on one particular part of the Stone Age, the period of the men of the great Hand Axe culture.

Let us leave Africa for a moment, and briefly consider what has been known hitherto about this culture. The Hand Axe culture was first recognized in England, and then in France. Very many thousands of Hand Axes of flint and other types of rock have been found in England and South-western Europe, as well as over large parts of Africa and India and in the Near East. In point of time, the Hand Axe culture dates back to 250,000 years ago, and it is probably in many ways the best known and certainly the most widespread of all Stone Age cultures.

'These Ancient Stone Age Hunters'

Yet, until recently, no true living sites of the makers of this culture had been unearthed. And now at last in Kenya, we have found a whole series of the actual camp sites of these ancient Stone Age hunters. The new discoveries were made at a site called Olorgaisillie, only forty-three miles from Nairobi, the capital of Kenya. The site is in an area which is now completely waterless, but at the time when Stone Age man was there it was on the shores of a great lake.

The waters of the lake were fluctuating, the level sometimes rising considerably, and at other times falling. Stone Age man of the Hand Axe culture was living by the shores of the lake, and thus, from time to time, when the lake level rose, he had to abandon his camps hurriedly leaving hundreds of weapons strewn about. These abandoned camp sites were then covered over and sealed in by clays and silts deposited by the rising waters. After a time, the lake level would drop again and man would return to camp on the new shore line, and eventually the same process was repeated, not once but several times.

And so we have been able to find and partially excavate a number of these old camp sites, and have learned some new and interesting things about Hand Axe man. It has always been a puzzle how Hand Axe man succeeded in hunting and killing animals which formed a large part of his food. The commonest type of Stone Age tool which he had was the hand axe, after which the culture is named. But many of us felt certain that that was only a domestic tool, and not a hunting weapon. As long ago as 1929, it has been suggested that possibly Hand Axe man may have used a weapon as the bolas, but there was no positive evidence in support of this idea.

The Bolas

The bolas by the way, is a weapon still used in hunting by the Patagonians in South America, and by certain groups of Eskimo in the North, and it consists of a combination of three or more round balls of stone fastened in little leather bags to long leather thongs which are joined together. This contraption is thrown by the hunter at the legs of a running animal, and the stone weights cause the thongs to wind around and entangle the legs of the hunted beast and bring it helpless to the ground at the mercy of the hunter.

Now, at Olorgaisillie, on these old camp sites of Hand Axe man we found a number of groups of round stone balls, so arranger that they strongly suggest that they were used as bolas, and it becomes highly probable that this was, in fact, the weapon used by Hand Axe man, at any rate in East Africa to hunt with.

Let me tell you here, very briefly, something about the animals which he hunted, because we have found fossiled bones of a good many of these animals on these old camp site and so we have a very good idea of what animals he was hunting. The strange thing is that many of them, were creatures of unusually large size. There was a giant pig about the size of a present day rhinoceros; giant baboons nearly as big as a man; a huge member of the giraffe family, more heavily built than the giraffes of today, and with strong antlers growing from his head; there were little three-toed horses, and a variety of extinct antelope, as well as a very large member of the horse family.

These fossil bones of the animals upon which he fed throw further light upon the Hand Axe man's ways of living. It has always been a matter of speculation whether a Stone Age man of the Hand Axe period used fire. Scattered over the camp sites, as I have told you, we found the fossil remains of the animals he fed upon. The bones had always been broken open to get at the marrow, the skulls smashed to get at the brain, but not one of the bones shows any signs of burning, nor have we found any signs of hearths, or any signs of charcoal or ash, on these camp sites. In other words although it is only negative evidence, these facts sugget when Hand Axe man ate his meat raw and had no knowledge of cooking by fire.

I expect you will be wondering whether we have found any remains of the men who made this Hand Axe culture at this new site. We have not yet. The site was only found during the war, and relatively little work has so far been possible there. I think that there is every prospect that when we do continue our work on a bigger scale, as we hope to do next year. we shall find fossilised remains of the men themselves.

WOMAN GREETS PASSING SHIPS

Launceston, Australia, (CP)—Miss Kathleen Cushion, 28, who lives at East Arm on the River Tamar, 25 miles from the port of Launceston, in the island State of Tasmania, is known to seamen all over the world. With flags by day and lamps by night, she sends greetings to the Australian and foreign ships which pass her home on their way to Launceston.

She has been sending these messages as a hobby for 10 years, and has become such an institution among seamen that she never fails to get a reply. The Australian Navy gave her official recogntion during the war when it allowed her to continue sending the messages when such shore signals were normally banned.

Miss Cushion took up her hobby during illness. She started by waving to passing ships, and ships' officers and crews waved back. They started sending messages in Morse to her with flags, and Miss Cushion learned Morse so she could answer.

She sent her messages during the day at first but later decided to send them at the night as well. She fixed up a bed on her verandah facing the river, installed lamp-signalling equipment, and now maintains her message-sending service from an early hour in the morning until late at night. Her mother, Mrs. J. V. A. Cushion, fills in for her when Miss Cushion is away from home.

Miss Cushion's hobby has brought her many invitations to afternoon tea and lunch with officers and crews on board ship at Launceston, and many letters and presents from seamen all over the world.

LEWIS TO STAND TRIAL ON CONTEMPT CHARGES

Two Freighters Collide 30 Miles South of Miami

Lifeboat, Raft Sighted With 16 Men Aboard

Miami, Fla., Nov. 25 —(AP)— Two small freighters sank in a pre-dawn collision 30 miles south of Miami early today and eight hours later a lifeboat and raft were sighted drifting in the Gulf Stream with about 16 men on board.

A Coast Guard plane spotted the survivors well offshore and some 32 miles north of the spot where the boats went down. A crash boat sped to the spot from the Coast Guard base.

A dozen airplanes, the cutter Tampa and other surface craft searched for crews of the two craft after a weak radio message told of the collision.

First word of the accident came from the Caribbean Trader Evangelos, which flashed a distress call a few hours after leaving Miami for Haiti.

The craft reported she was in collision with the freighter Arsidee, from Nassau, and was sinking.

Coast Guard rescue craft sped to the scene in the Straits of Florida about 30 miles south of Miami, but discovered no survivors immediately.

Coast Guardsmen said first reports were that the Evangelos carried a crew of 10, and the Marsidee a crew of seven.

Strikers Prepare To Receive Back Wages at Plant

Noranda, Que., Nov. 25 —(CP) —The strike at Noranda mine in this northwest Quebec mining town entered its fourth day today with strikers prepared to receive back wages as picket lines quietly moved around the main gate.

Local 688, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), called the strike for an hourly wage increase of 16 cents, shift wage differentials and a union checkoff.

In return, the company has offered a 10 cent increase but no union checkoff.

Both the company and the union, which claims a membership of 597 of the mine's 1,147 employees, are prepared for what is expected to be a lengthy walkout.

Other mines in the district, which had been shipping ore to the Noranda custom smelter and concentrator, have made other arrangements.

The company's office staff was permitted to pass the picket line into the premises Saturday and received their cheques.

Negotiations are continuing for a smoothing out of a working agreement necessary for the expected long strike.

Conferences were held during the weekend between union officials and Provincial Police officers to straighten out the question of who may enter the plant.

Storm Again Lashes Britain

London, Nov. 25. (AP)—Gales and rain lashed British coasts today for the third successive day and the Thames, Severn and Medway rivers rose to flood stage.

A 733-ton coastal vessel, the Ayrshire coast, was towed into Weymouth Bay, her engine and boiler rooms flooded, after a day and night battle against high seas in the English Channel.

Floods and landslides halted motor and rail traffic in many southern sections.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP).—Synopsis: The strong southerly flow which brought mild weather to Southern Ontario Sunday will be replaced today by a northerly flow of much colder air. As the cold air pushes eastward its leading edge is accompanied by a brief period of rain followed by snowflurries. Below zero temperatures prevail in northwestern Ontario.

Follwell And Woodley Qualify For Mayoralty

Two candidates for mayor; thirteen for aldermanic honors and twelve for the seats vacant on the Board of Education, qualified to run for election here on December the 9th over the weekend, City Clerk Wilfred Holmes announced today. Qualification hour deadline was at nine o'clock Saturday night.

In the two-way fight for the mayoralty will be Mayor Frank Follwell seeking his third term and Alderman Harold G. Woodley.

Contesting the seven aldermanic seats are Alderman Harold Harold Armstrong; Geo. C. Brown; Ald. H. J. Clarke; Angus B. Duffy; Ald. Edward E. Follwell; Harry Hill; Thomas Jeffrey Arthur Keegan; Bruce Lattimer; J. H. Lazenby; Clare Ridley; Ted E. Schwab and Mark J. Vanner.

In the field for the five seats on the Board of Education are A. L. Burke; Mrs. Violet Camken Frank Creeggan; Enos David; W. H. Finkle; E. A. Geen; R. W. Hart; Alex Nathan; J. Edward Shortt; R. W. Tennent; Lewis Watson and George Wishart.

The commissionership of the Public Utilities will not be contested this year. Mr. Morley P. Duff was given acclamation at the nominations held here on Friday morning.

1,185 Polish Veterans Arrive In Halifax

Halifax, Nov. 25 — (CP)—On the second leg of their journey to new homes in Canada, 1,185 Polish veterans who arrived in Halifax early yesterday on the transport Sea Snipe, today were on special trains bearing them to distributing centres across the country from which they will be allocated to Canadian farms.

Of the 4,000 hand-picked farmer veterans, who fought beside Canadians in the British 8th Army, about 2,900 now have arrived in Canada. The remaining 1,100, who will leave from Britain, are not expected to arrive until next spring. Most of the 1,700, who made up the first contingent which arrived in Halifax about two weeks ago, already have been placed on farms.

Lt.-Col. J. P. Castle, officer commanding the Polish soldiers on the Sea Snipe, said this about Canada's new immigrants:

"They have had the reputation for fearlessness and courage during battle and throughout the 11 days' trip from Naples they behaved themselves as real soldiers. Canada is getting men who, I am sure, will become excellent citizens."

Quietly, the Sea Snipe slid into her berth early Sunday morning and 12 hours later all but 100 of the Poles had left Halifax on west-bound trains. The 100 left behind are to go to Nova Scotia farms within the next day or two.

As the men, most of them carrying musical instruments, came down the 7,942-ton Sea Snipe's gangplank, they were met by Canadian Army and Labor Department officials and by members of the Halifax Knights of Columbus, who distributed cigarets and Polish newspapers and pamphlets.

Anastazy Gilczewski, an official of the Canadian Polish Congress, mixed with the veterans of General Anders' Polish 2nd Corps and distributed circulars among them expressing official greetings on behalf of the 180,000 Canadians of Polish origin. Department of Labor officials said they had denied Mr. Gilczewski's request to speak to the Poles over the ship's public address system.

TWELVE RESCUED OFF ALPINE PERCH AFTER FIVE DAYS

Nine Shuttle Flights Required to Take The Survivors From Their Cozy Snow Shelter

By REMBERT JAMES

Interlaken, Switzerland, Nov. 25 (AP)—Twelve persons who survived five days on an Alpine glacier 12,000 feet above sea level were safe on a United States army hospital train en route to Vienna today, rescued from their plight by the same route they got into it—through the air.

Swiss army officers in ski-equipped, three-place Fieseler Storch planes brought them and their baggage out yesterday in nine shuttle flights over the 10 miles between the airport of Meiringen, some 15 miles east of Interlaken, and their snowy perch on Guali glacier.

The 12—an 11-year-old girl, four women, four U.S. army officers, two U.S. non-commissioned officers and a male civilian—had been in a sheltered hole in the glacier, 13 miles southeast of Interlaken, since the crash landing last Tuesday of a U.S. army C-53 Dakota transport plane en route from Vienna to Pisa by way of Munich.

They had lived on box lunches for three days and, after those gave out, on candy bars doled out one a day to each. They drank snow melted over fires of gasoline, oil and parts of the plane, and had slept on blankets and the plane's seats and upholstery. Swiss mountain guides reported a three-foot snowfall had converted the cabin of the slightly damaged plane into a cozy "igloo" for them.

Not till Friday was the wreck located. British and United States planes among the more than 100 searching spotted the group. Saturday, 70 Swiss civilian and soldier mountain climbers in eight hours struggled from Beiringen out to the plane survivors, carrying letters.

Before the rescue party essayed the even more tortuous dscent to safety, Maj. Pista Hitz and Capt. Victor Hug of the Swiss army landed their tiny planes on the glacier and began the rescue by air.

Staff Sgt. Wayne G. Folsom of Postville, Ia., was the only stretcher came among the 12. He had frostbite, a knee injury and foot bruises.

Thirty Ordered Deported to Isle Of Cyclades

Athens, Nov. 25 (AP)—The government announced today that Alcibiades Louis, a member of the left-wing E.A.M. (National Liberation Front) Central Committee, had been arrested with 29 other persons on charges of "supplying arms and recruiting for guerilla bands."

The 30 were ordered deported to the Island of Cyclades, but all filed notice of appeal.

Announcement of the arrests was accompanied by reports of continued fighting in northern Greece between left-wing guerilla bands and government troops.

Woman Stabbed In Movie Theatre

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 25 (AP). —A piercing scream startled several hundred persons in a movie theatre yesterday as they watched Jose Iturbi in a piano-playing sequence.

When the house lights went on, the screaming woman was found to have been stabbed. She was identified as Lettie Louise Raikes, 19.

Meanwhile police collared her alleged assailant who brandished a hunting knife as he clambered hastily over theatre seats towards the exit. He told police he was Raymond L. Ferguson, 24, of Clifton Forge, Va.

Ferguson was booked on a charge of felonious assault. Miss Raikes was taken to a hospital for treatment of deep shoulder wounds.

British Make Proposal All Troop Figures be Verified By U.N. Inspection Unit

(By MAX HARRELSON)

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 25. (AP) — The big-power battle over conflicting proposals for a United Nations troops inventory was complicted further today by a British proposal that all troop figures be subject to verification by a U.N. inspection unit.

The British position was disclosed by Philip J. Noel-Baker, British Air Minister, shortly after it was learned that the United States delegation had decided to oppose any move to inject an inspection provision into the troop inquiry. Russia also is known to be opposed to such a plan.

Speaking before the 54-member political committee of the General Assembly, Mr. Noel-Baker rejected the Soviet proposal as "inadequate" and substituted what amounted virtually to a new resolution for the one Foreign Secretary Bevin had offered previously.

He announced that he was withdrawing the proposal to combine the troop inventory plan with the committe's scheduled debate on disarmament, and then proposed:

1. That the inquiry be broadened to include troops at home, as well as those abroad.
2. That the U.N. set up a unit to verify any information reported on troops by member countries.

The most controversial issue appeared to be the proposal for verification of information reported.

Great Britain was ready for any commission to verify "on the spot" any information submitted by the British government, because "this would give the world confidence in the United Nations."

"What objection could there be against verification" he asked. "None of us wants to hide the facts."

Turning to his proposal that facts be submitted on troops at home, Mr. Noel-Baker said this information "is nothing to be ashamed of and always was published previously."

He suggested that the date of the information submitted should be Jan. 1, 1947, instead of Nov. 1, 1946, as proposed by Russia.

Declaring that the Soviet resolution in its present form would apply only to the big powers, Mr. Noel-Baker said that for this reason alone it was "seriously defective."

As the committee went into session, it was reported that Australian delegate Paul Hasluck was ready with a resolution calling on the U.N. assembly to censure Russia for her stand against limiting use of the Big Five veto.

BRITISH TROOPS LEAVING JAVA ON THURSDAY

Indonesian and Dutch Leaders Initial Agreement for Indonesian Union

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

London, Nov. 25 (AP).—Britain will end her 14-months, bitterly-contested assignment in Java on Thursday when the last of her fighting forces board transports in Batavia's harbor.

In that period, amid hard shooting by independence-seeking Indonesians, Dutch and Indonesian leaders have initialed a tentative agreement to transform Indonesia from a colony to an Indonesian union.

This week the Dutch parliament at The Hague will debate the draft agreement, approved by Indonesian Premied Sutan Sjahrir and The Netherlands negotiator, ex-Premier Willem Schermerhorn, earlier this month.

A spokesman for The Netherlands Embassy here said if the Dutch parliament accepts the projected union, a new general election will take place in Holland because of several constitutional changes involved in the settlement.

In September, 1945, the first British troops landed in Java.

About a month before the British landed, Dr. Soekarno, accused by the Dutch of having collaborated with the Japanese, proclaimed an Indonesian republic. His followers resisted the landings of British, Indian, Australian and a few Dutch troops.

The Dutch announced they could not deal with Soekarno, a "collaborator".

Indonesian extremists declared a "holy Moslem war" against Holland Oct. 13. Skirmishing and guerilla activity followed.

A battle for Sourabaya was won by the British forces after a month's costly campaigning. The war office said today casualty figures for Indonesia were "not available".

Sjahrir, an intellectual who had written a blueprint for a new Indonesia entitled "our struggle", became Indonesian prime minister Nov. 13, 1945.

Largely through the influence of Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, lieutenant governor-general of the Indies, the Dutch agreed to negotiate with Sjahrir.

Throughout the negotiations until the draft agreement was signed a year later, Indonesia's "ghost war" went on.

71ST WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Brantford, Nov. 25 (CP)—Congratulations from Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Premier Drew of Ontario were among the many messages of tribute received by Mr. and Mrs. Elon Hoover of neaby Forestville, who Saturday celebrated their 71st wedding anniversary.

THREE ARMED MEN HOLD UP INN AND TAKE $4,000

Enter Bedroom of Woman Proprietor by Ladder, Cut Telephone Wires

Windsor, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Three armed men who early today held up Mrs. Bertha Thomas' Edgewater Inn in Riverside, five miles east of here, escaped with $4,000.

When they entered Mrs. Thomas' bedroom by a ladder, one of the men was carrying a sawed-off shotgun. The others had revolvers. Mrs. Thomas told police a fourth man, waiting in a car outside, took the robbers and their loot east on Riverside Drive after the holdup.

Mrs. Thomas said she applied recently for a permit to keep a gun in her room, but Provincial Police in Toronto turned it down. She said the three men wore black gloves and masks, and one of them wore a hood.

She tried to fight them off with a chair but was unable to prevent their entering the building. In addition to the $4,000 they took two bottles of whisky. Before the holdup, telephone lines to the inn and to the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Thomas, next door, had been cut.

Windsor and Riverside police were checking today to determine if the trio was the same which visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Cousins here and took $30 and a wrist watch from an upstairs safe. At the Cousins' home three young men, all armed, tied up Mr. Cousins, 73, and his wife before leaving.

Teachers' Strike Closes Schools

Minneapolis, Nov. 25. (AP)— A strike of union teachers closed St. Paul's public schools today a few hours after an eleventh hour offer of higher salaries had averted a similar walkout in Minneapolis.

Picket lines were established at each of St. Paul's 74 grade and high schools. A minimum of two pickets patrolled entrances at smaller buildings while three or more were on the line at the larger ones.

The temperature was at three above zero when picketing started at 7.30 a.m. The teachers, bundled in heavy winter clothing, stepped along gingerly. Reliefs were arranged at hourly intervals.

GRAIN CARRIER SAFE

Goderich, Nov. 25 (CP)—The grain carrier Quedoc, overdue 24 hours and unreported, steamed through a heavy sea into port here Saturday night with its cargo of flour. The ship was caught in the heavy gale last Friday and had taken shelter behind Thunder Bay Island at the head of the lake.

FOUR MEMBERS OF TRAIN CREWS KILLED IN WRECK

C.N.R. Passenger And Freight Trains Collide Head-on 50 Miles East of Saskatoon

Saskatoon Nov. 25 —(CP)— Four men—all members of the train crews—were killed last night when two Canadian National Railways trains collided head-on at Young, Sask., about 50 miles east of here.

The dead are: Engineer J. Roy Lyons of Melville, Sask., and Fireman H. N. Currie of Duncan B. C., both on a Winnipeg-bound express; engineer J. O. Logan of Biggar, Sask., and head brakeman J. Malec, also of Biggar, who were on a west-bound

Seven other persons—Frank Rehwald, editor of Der Nordwesten, a Winnipeg German-language weekly; Sterling Toles, Porter; Marcel Compayre, dining car steward; George Kendall, an engineer from Melville, Sask.; P. S. Dooley, an operator at Saskatoon, and two others whose names were not available— were taken to the hospital at Watrous, Melville and Saskatoon. They are suffering from what were described as minor injuries.

A number of passengers suffered bruises and a shaking up but none was said to have been injured seriously.

Railway officials said an investigation into the cause of the collision was underway.

The scene, about 1 1-4 miles west of the tiny village of Young was one of wild confusion and havoc. The cab of one engine had been torn completely away and lay on one side of the track, the engine itself on the other.

Three passenger coaches were derailed and seven freight cars piled up or telescoped.

Alvin Bright, fireman on the freight train, escaped miraculously. He jumped from the locomotive when he heard the hiss of the air brakes being applied and landed beside the track uninjured.

But the three others in the locomotives were trapped where they stood.

A coroner's jury viewed three of the bodies last night and adjourned. The fourth body—that of Logan—was jammed under a wheel and workmen awaited daylight before attempting to remove it.

Railway officials said they did not know when the track would be cleared and traffic resumed.

Wins Scholarship In Memory of Col. John McCrae

Guelph, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Established in memory of the author of "In Flanders Fields" the Col. John McCrae Memorial Scholarship has been won by George Slinger, Guelph Collegiate-Vocational Institute student. Valued at $1,200, the scholarship is awarded by the local Canadian Legion branch for general excellence in departmental examinations by a student graduating from the Collegiate. If no Guelph student makes a sufficiently high standing, any high school student in Ontario can apply for the award.

Yet 'Unborn' New French Regime Already Called 'Save Franc' Govt.

Paris, Nov. 25 (Reuters).—The as-yet-unborn new French government already is being talked about as the "save the franc" government.

Periodically, the ministry of finance denies there is any intention to devaluate the franc again. But the weekly balance sheet of the Bank of France, with its recent all time high for the note circulation at over 400,000,000 francs, the rapidly rising prices for many staple foodstuffs, and a new series of higher wage demands by various trade unions, appear to tell a different tale.

Production has made great strides in the last two years, usually under great difficulties.

Pre-war levels have been reached in several important industries, including textiles, but further progress is hindered by the coal bottleneck.

Most French financial and monetary experts consider the franc can hold at the present rate of exchange of 119 to the dollar, provided production goes ahead sufficiently rapidly.

Lack of coal threatens, however, to hold up production and undermine the franc. Coal today is more important to France than gold—it seems also to be more difficult to get than gold.

The "underground" circulation gold in France is estimated at 3,000 tons. The Bank of France owns only about 700 tons. Tens of thousands of peasants trade their produce in gold only.

The black market rate for gold is roughly seven times the official rate fixed by the authorities.

The French government is relying on increased production and on economies in the next budget to hold the franc.

A well-known French Liberal economist, Rene Sedillot, has suggested that the Bank of France mint offer to buy or sell at a price somewhere between the official rate and the current black market rate.

Goldsborough Sets Next Wednesday As Date of Trial

Judge Overrules Objection Court Lacks Jurisdiction

Washington, Nov. 25. (AP)— Judge T. Alan Goldsborough declared today that John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers "undertook to decide the law for themselves" and ordered them to trial Wednesday for contempt in the United States' soft coal shutdown.

The trial probably will run into next week while industrial paralysis tightens from the diminishing coal supply.

Welly K. Hopkins, counsel for Mr. Lewis and the Union, sought a delay to permit Joseph A. Padway, general counsel of the American Federation of Labor, to join in the defence but Judge Goldsborough refused the request, commenting that the "public interest" requires as speedy a settlement as possible in view of the mine walkout now in its 5th day.

Judge Goldsborough also expressed the hope that labor unions would not "do something that might influence Congress" to pass legislation which might "see the labor movements back for years."

"I don't know whether I was justified in making that statement," he commented afterwards. "It was extra-judicial."

White House Silent

The White House meanwhile maintained silence.

Judge Goldsborough set Wednesday's trial after ruling that Mr. Lewis had not purged himself of the contempt charges directed against him Nov. 21 for failure to withdraw a no-contract notice to the government. It was Mr. Lewis' cancellation of the work agreement that touched off the walkout of 400,000 soft coal miners.

Mr. Lewis sat silently in the crowded courtroom during the 40-minute session while Mr. Hopkins argued that the court lacked jurisdiction either to issue an order requiring Mr. Lewis to rescind the notice or to issue the contempt citation that followed.

Attempts by government counsel to argue that point immediately were cut off by Judge Goldsborough.

Then Mr. Hopkins announced that Mr. Lewis and the union had taken no action to comply with the court's order that the no-contract notice be withdrawn and were ready to go to a trial which might result in punishment of the union chief if convicted of contempt.

Attempts to Delay Date

Mr. Hopkins attempted, however, to delay the trial date. He said the union has had no opportunity to read the government's argument. A bulky brief was presented at the start of the session by John F. Sonnett, Assistant Attorney General.

Mr. Hopkins declared also that some union counsel were out of town and would not be ready.

Mr. Sonnett told Judge Goldsborough the government would object to any delay in view of the strike emergency. Judge Goldsborough affirmed the Wednesday date and directed both sides to be on hand in the same courtroom at 10 a.m. E.S.T. two days hence, declared the matter concluded for the day, and recessed his court.

Contrary to the government's position, Mr. Hopkins argued that Mr. Lewis' notice to Interior Secretary Krug terminating the U.M.W. contract was "both legal and proper." He said also that neither Mr. Lewis nor the union had taken any action in compliance with the court's order to withdraw the cancellation notice.

Goldsborough hailed Mr. Lewis into court to answer a contempt citation for refusal to withdraw the notice, which signalled a country-wide strike in the soft coal fields.

Coal Strike Headlines

Boston, Nov. 25 (AP). — Soft coal deliveries to stores and office buildings were halted and 46 scheduled trains were cancelled today as five New England States prepared for the fuel-conserving dimout ordered into effect at 6 p.m. E.S.T. tonight. Maine, which generates its electricity by water power instead of coal, will not be affected by the order.

* * *

Harrisburg, Pa. (AP). — Central Pennsylvania may escape a dimout, ordered for Pennsylvania and 20 other states, if United States authorities grant a request for exemption filed by the Pennsylvania Power and Light Company. President Charles E. Oakes said the request had been submitted after a survey disclosed the company had a six-month supply of anthracite.

* * *

New York (AP). — The gay white way — Broadway — made ready today to dim its brilliance because of the coal stoppage. Mayor William O'Dwyer proclaimed a state of emergency and ordered a dimout of city buildings effectivel at 6 p.m. E.S.T. today. Although the brownout is on a voluntary basis police were instructed to admonish violators.

Adamsville, Ala. (AP). — Rev. Autry F. Powell, pastor of the Baptist Church in this little mine community in the heart of the Alabama coal field, proposes that mine operators "put God as the great umpire" of their efforts for a settlement of the mine controversy. At the conclusion of his Sunday sermon, miners and their wives knelt before the pulpit and prayed for a quick settlement of the work stoppage.

The speaker will be a prominent out-of-town orator whose identity has not been released as yet. The Kiwanis Club will be the host organization.

HUNTERS HAVE LAST CHANCE AT DEER

A number of local hunters trekked to the north country over the weekend for their last chance of the year at the elusive deer. The season closes tonight at sundown but hunters have a period of a few bays to bring their bags to the "outside". According to a majority of nimrods, the deer have been fairly plentiful in the main although it has been reported they were scarce in some sections of the county. The season in Peterboro-Haliburton counties closed last Tuesday.

THEFT OF FOUR HAMMERS FROM BLACKSMITH SHOP

Theft of four hammers from the Adam Palmer blacksmith shop at the rear of Walker Hardware on Front Street, was reported to police Monday morning. According to the complaint the shop had been entered over the weekend with a sledge hammer and three ball head hammers being taken.

TEN DIVORCE ACTIONS

A total of ten divorce actions as well as two other civil cases and fifteen divorce motions are entered for trial at the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court which opened this afternoon at the county court buildings. The cases are being heard before Mr. Justice McFarland of Toronto.

Aside from the divorce cases and motions to be heard, the only cases scheduled are that of the D. and G. Transport vs. Trudeau, and that of Plummer vs. the Town of Trenton.

PROVINCIAL POLICE TO CRACK DOWN ON 'ONE EYED' CARS

Following increasing complaints of numerous "one eyed" automobiles being operated on rural roads after night, Provincial police will inaugurate an intensive campaign to remedy the situation, it was announced today by Inspector Harry Thompson of the provincial police office here.

"During the past few weeks we have had several complaints of cars being driven with one light" stated the Inspector. "This is particularly annoying to other drivers and is extremely dangerous as well as being strictly against highway regulations."

Dealers Report Soft Coal Supply As Not Critical

Despite the fact that strikes have virtually paralyzed work in the United States soft coal mines, the production stoppage is not expected to affect industrial plants and other users of soft coal in Belleville unless the strike is prolonged, according to local fuel dealers.

Dealers stated they have a fair supply of soft coal on hand and expected there would be sufficient to supply customers in the event that work in the mines was not stopped for too lengthy a period.

"The situation is certainly not serious yet," commented one local fuel dealer. "We have adequate stocks on hand to take care of our customers, although in the case of certain grades of high grade coal which is brought in by rail there may develop a scarcity."

This firm's representative stated that his company had received all shipments expected by boat this season. One more boatload of coal was expected to arrive before the close of navigation and his firm had not received notice that this would not arrive.

Another fuel firm also indicated it could take care of customers as it had a "nice supply" of Alberta and other soft coal grades on hand.

Two weeks' supply of coal is on hand at the local gas works, according to O. H. Scott, public utilities manager. "We have been in touch with our suppliers and expect to be able to secure sufficient quantities to carry on. We were able to get through previous strikes," he said.

Several of the larger industrial plants in the city, as well as many of the public buildings, such as schools, are supplied through local dealers who intimated they would be able to take care of their customers.

SELLS STOLEN CAR

London, Ont., Nov. 25—(CP)—Police are hunting a smooth-talking stranger who Saturday 'sold' a local car dealer for $1,000 a 1946 auto which, it was discovered later, had been stolen in Hamilton. The seller told the dealer he had bought the car in St. Thomas. Worried about his bargain, the dealer checked with police.

Bank of Montreal Sets New Record In Deposits, Assets

Montreal — Maintaining the modern trend in bank statements which it initiated a year ago, the Bank of Montreal today published its annual report covering financial transactions with more than 1,500,000 customers in the form of a well-illustrated and readily-understandable story of 1946 operations.

The story, told simply and clearly, is one of record-breaking deposit figures, all-time high resources and an indication of the general prosperity of Canadians during the year. As the B of M puts it, the annual statement shows the "Human Facts Behind the Figures" in examples of individual transactions that make up the statistics of a record year of financial operation.

In many ways, this report of Canada's senior financial institution reflects conditions as they exist in Canada today. Deposits in the B of M, for instance now stand at $1,736,000,000, the highest in its history and more than $100,000,000 above the figure of last year. While indicating that Canadians generally are better off financially than they have been for a number of years, the same increase provides reassuring proof that the citizens of the nation are themselves wisely safeguarding against runaway inflation through their personal financing.

Assets at Peak

Total assets, or "What the B of M has in resources to meet its obligations" now stand at $1,843,000,000—the largest assets figure in the 129-year history of the bank. Included with the figures contained under this heading are explanations, in simple language, of the various items of the B of M's balance sheet.

Two items contained in the total resources are of particular interest just now, since they indicate a trend away from wartime financing measures towards more standard financial arrangements of peacetime operation. For one thing, commercial and other loans have jumped from $220,264,000 up to $301,659,000 during the year; while, at the same time, holdings of bonds, debentures and stocks — other than government and other public securities — are shown at $56,022,000. This figure represents to some extent the extension of credit to industrial enterprises for reconversion from wartime to peacetime production, and for expansion of productive facilities in established fields. The bank's main investments are, of course, still in high-grade government bonds and other public securities which now stand at well over a billion dollars.

These figures clearly demonstrate the trend away from conditions which existed during the war when much of the financing of industrial projects was done through the use of government funds, and the swing towards normal conditions in which private business financing is done through the facilities of the chartered banks.

The statement shows that the greater proportion of all the bank's assets is in the form of "liquid resources" —cash and call loans, or securities which can be converted into cash quickly and easily. Total liquid resources of the B. of M. now stand at $1,506,188,000, as compared with $1,464,326,000 a year ago.

Wide Use Of Facilities

Illustrations accompanying the annual statement show how business firms, private citizens and governments use the many facilities of the bank not only to deposit their money for safekeeping, but to borrow for the financing of new enterprises, the repair and construction of homes, and for municipal and farm improvements.

As might be expected, with the largely expanded operations of the bank during the past year, the profit figures are substantially above those of a year ago and it is understood that, in addition to the increased volume of business, a factor affecting profits is certain abnormal revenues accruing during the period under review.

The statement shows profits after taxes at $4,487,782, as compared with $2,934,681 last year. After payment of dividends to those who have invested their money in B of M shares, an amount of $1,067,782 was added to the balance in profit and loss account. This made a balance of $4,256,285, from which a transfer of $3,000,000 was made to the Reserve Fund which now stands at $42,000,000—a part of the shareholders' funds amounting to $79,256,285. This figure is made up of money subscribed by the shareholders who own the bank, and, to some extent, of profits which from time to time—as this year—have been ploughed back into the business to strengthen the bank's position and to provide added protection for the depositors.

Noted Kingston Physician Dies

Kingston, Nov. 25 — Dr. Howard Price Folger, 50, of 1 Emily St., eye, ear, nose and throat specialist and professor of ophthalmology at Queen's University, died in the Kingston General Hospital following a severe heart attack which he suffered Friday. Dr. Folger, who had been in ill health for about two months, did not rally from the heart seizure.

Born in Kingston, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Howard Folger of this city, he was educated in the public schools and Kingston Collegiate Institute. He graduated in arts from Queen's University in 1917 and in medicine in 1922. Following his graduation he interned at St. John's Hospital, New York City, and also at Brooklyn, N.Y., Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital for two years. He spent two years studying at Vienna, and returned to this city, where he opened practice about 20 years ago.

The late Dr. Folger was recognized as one of the outstanding specialists on diseases of the eyes. He was vice-president of the Canadian Ophthalmology Society and took an active interest in the activities of that organization.

Deceased was a member of Ancient St. John Lodge No. 3, A. F. & A. M., the Kingston Yacht Club and the Cataraqui Golf and Country Club, also St. George's Cathedral and the Scottish Rite.

He is survived by his widow, the former Harriette Gardiner; one daughter, Dorothy, editor of the K.C.V.I. Times, and two sisters, Mrs. Reid Rankin and Mrs. Nelson Sprintsteen, both of Forest Hills, L.I., N.Y.

The funeral, which will be private, will take place Monday afternoon from the family residence to Cataraqui Cemetery.

GOLDSBOROUGH

Deny Jurisdiction.

"The defendants, and each of them, respectfully deny the jurisdiction of this honorable court to issue a restraining order," Mr. Hopkins said of Judge Goldsborough's order.

The union also challenge the court's right to order the contempt hearing, Mr. Hopkins added, and was prepared to let the case go to trial with an advisory jury.

Such a trial on Wednesday had been set by Judge Goldsborough in the event Mr. Lewis failed to "purge" himself of the alleged contempt.

John Sonnett, chief government counsel, immediately offered to argue against the union's position, but Judge Goldsborough cut him short.

"This complaint was filed by the sovereign power by society itself," the judge said.

Did Not Obey Order.

"I don't think any thinking person wants to see anything happen to labor unions insofar as their raising their standards of living is concerned.

"The defendants say they have done nothing. That amounts to saying they did not obey the restraining order.

"But they say they did not have to obey the order because it was not legal. That's their position."

Mr. Hopkins then asked that the trial date be set later than Wednesday, pleading that the union only this morning had seen the government's argument. An adjournment should be ordered "in the public interest", he asserted.

Mr. Sonnett objected, citing the urgency of the strike situation.

Two Issues Before Court.

The government's brief declared two issues were before the court in today's hearing:

1. Whether a contempt was alleged;
2. If so, whether it had been sufficiently purged.

"There is clearly alleged contempt of the judicial power of this court," the brief declared, adding that this did not involve the question whether the Norris-La Guardia Anti-Injunction Act forbids the use of restraining orders in the coal dispute.

"If the defendants question the court's jurisdiction because they erroneously contend that that act is applicable, such an objection would at best be only an arguable contention which would pose an issue for decision by the court.

"Pending a decision of that very issue, the court was and is clearly impowered to protect its jurisdiction to pass on the question."

In other words, the government argument ran, no matter what final disposition is made of the case, Judge Goldsborough was clearly within his jurisdiction in issuing the order against Mr. Lewis and has the power and jurisdiction to compel its enforcement and punish anyone "who willfully fails and refuses to comply".

The late Mrs. McCutcheon, who was in her 82nd. year, was born in the 9th concession of Sidney township, her parents being the late William Meggison and his wife the late Elizabeth Perkins. All her life was passed in this district. She was a member of the United Church and when age and health permitted she took part in the work of the Women's Missionary Society and the Women's Aid.

Surviving her are one son, Harry E. McCutcheon, Saginaw, Mich.; two sisters, Mrs. Earl H. (May) Cumming, Pomona, California, and Mrs. Archie (Maude) McGee of Stirling; two brothers, William Meggison, Arlington, California, and Joseph Meggison, Trenton.

The funeral announcement is made in this edition.

Says Cheese Industry On Way Out Unless Something is Done

Kingston, Nov. 25—(CP)—Wilfred Cooper, cheese factory owner, told a meeting of cheese makers and suppliers here Saturday that 27 cheese factories in Eastern Ontario had closed their doors this year and unless someone did something about it the cheese industry was "on its way out." He blamed low returns to the producers. Omer Menard of Kingston Mills received an award of $10 for the highest cheese rating in 1946 — a rating of 98.7 per cent.

PICTON

Lance Nethery Acclaimed As Mayor of Picton

Picton, Nov. 25 — Lancelot Nethery, local barrister, is mayor-elect of Picton; having been tendered an acclamation. There will be contests for reeve, deputy reeve and councillors. Those qualifying were:

Reeve: Horace S. Colliver and J. C. Cooper.

Deputy Reeve: Clealan Blakely and Robert Cockburn.

Councillors: Harry Bowers, Harry Carter, Oscar Grimmon, Ralph Gibson, William Henley, Russell Attersley, Nesbitt McKibbon, Charles McGibbon, Roscoe McConnell, Albert Grindrod, Frank Dunning. Six to be elected.

Public Utilities Commissioner: M. E. Knox (re-elected).

Public School Trustees: (Acc.), Hallowell Ward, Colin Carter; Tecumseh Ward, John Maher; Quinte Ward, Dr. C. E. Goodwin with Dr. C. R. Richmond completing J. C. Cooper's remaining year; Brock Ward, Dr. J. H. Walmsley.

Mayor-elect Nethery succeeds Ralph Warren who left town four months ago and since that time, former Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon has been acting mayor. Mr. Nethery served as councillor, deputy reeve before enlisting with the 1st Bn., Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1939. He went overseas that year and returned to Canada in August 1945. In England he was with the Ministry of Information for a time and later with the Military Government served in France, Belgium and Germany. He graduted from Osgoode hall in 1929 and one year later came to Picton to practise. He is a native of Hillier, Prince Edward County. His wife is the daughter of James deC. Hepburn, M.P.P. and Mrs. Hepburn.

Members of this year's council not seeking re-election are Mayor R. Warren, now of Barrie; Deputy Reeve Ross Pearsoll, Councillors Bruce Moore, John Vestervelt. Councillors C. Blakely and R. Cockburn are contesting the deputy-reeveship with a real battle predicted. Ex-Mayor H. S. Colliver, also an ex-M.P.P., is being opposed in the reeveship by J. C. (Buff) Cooper, for some years a member of the school board. Of coucillor candidates, only Grindrod, McGibbon, McKibbon, Carter and Henley have had previous experience.

Boycott Public Meeting

Members of this year's council boycotted a public meeting held after nominations Friday night. Only Councillor Robert Cockburn was on hand to defend his record. The nominations had been advertised for Shire Hall, but a group arranged for the larger Parish Hall for a public meeting and council members did not favor this action and stayed away. The hall was packed with nearly 300 persons.

Former Mayor R. A. Norman, who is ninety, was elected chairman and in an address lasting more than an hour strongly criticized council. He compared present expenditures with those as far back as 1883 when he was first in council.

"The town councils of the past ten years have been incompetent 'yes, yes' men", Mr. Norman declared adding that members of this year's council were 'a bunch of nit-wits.' He said that there was no visible signs of where money had been spent and declared council had staged a raid on the treasury, and said he had earlier threatened to impeach council for diverting funds from current account to waterworks.

Mr. Norman charged breaches of the fire by-laws said the town auditor 'isn't worth a five-cent piece', and declared there had been no progress in Picton in 15 years past. He stressed the need for vigorous leadership. Many personalities were included in a vigorous address which saw many leave the hall before its completion.

H. S. Colliver said he was not against sewerage but did not like the way council went at it. With costs for the system having advanced from $250,000 to $450,000, I am decidedly against it at this time, he said. He launched an attack against the building bylaws, and urged its repeal. He further urged positions held by men who did not need the money be vacated and given to veterans.

Those speaking briefly were W. Henley, Harry Bowers, Frank Dunning, Oscar Grimmon, Ralph Gibson, R. Cockburn.

Chief issues in the campaign are the costs of sewerage for which all contracts have been let and debentures sold; building bylaws which restrict several enterprises, and the engaging of a street foreman.

Athol Township

Picton, Nov. 25—Seeking re-election as reeve of Athol township, County Warden Earl Brummell is being opposed by Councillor Elmer Vader. For the first time in many years this township is having a contest for councillors. Contestants are, Floyd Carnahan, Clinton Greene, George Quaiff, Sam Dodds, Clifford Beckwith and Malcolm Dulmage. Four to be elected.

Reeve Harold Cleave was given an acclamation in the village of Bloomfield. There is a contest for councillors, those qualifying being Fireman Cockburn, James Gough, Charles Howard, Bernard May, M.M., George Pike, Henry Leavens, Thomas Jackson. Four to be elected.

Several other Prince Edward municipalities hold nominations today.

Reg. Elliott Completes Underwriters' Course

The T. Eaton Life Assurance Company has announced that Mr. Reginald J. Elliott of the Toronto agency staff, and formerly of Belleville, has successfully completed the third and final year of the Chartered Life Underwriters' Course and has been awarded the title and designation C.L.U.

This course, prescribed by the Institute of Chartered Life Underwriters and taken through the Department of Extension, University of Toronto, comprises a thorough study of life insurance fundamentals, life insurance law, estate planning and analysis and estate administration and Taxation.

A native of this city, Mr. Elliott is the son of the late John Elliott, former manager of the Standard Bank in this city.

CHINESE PAY BAIL BONDS

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP). — A Chinese with a big roll of bills peeled off $1,850 in bail money for 36 Chinese arrested in a weekend gambling raid. Police said they broke down rear doors of a building on Elizabeth street in Toronto's Chinatown after trying unsuccessfully to force heavily-barricaded front doors.

DEATHS

545-Foot-Long Admiralty Floating Dock Being Moved From Bermuda To Montevideo, 6,000 Miles Away

BY FORD BAXTER
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 23 — (CP)—It's just about a case of moving the mountain to Mahomet with the towing of the huge 545-foot-long Admiralty floating dock from Bermuda, where she has been solidly placed since 1902, to Montevideo, Uruguay 6,000 miles away.

And a small, powerful Dutch tug of 3,000 horsepower is doing the job alone. Today the gigantic dry dock which has a lifting capacity of some 17,000 tons and performed outstanding repair service for allied shipping in the two great wars, is at sea somewhere south of Bermuda.

Two British tugs assisted the Dutch tug Thames in manoeuvering the ponderous and clumsy dock through the channel amid Bermuda's reefs and shoals that was as far as they went.

When the German pocket battleship Graf Spee limped into the borbor of Montevideo early in the last war, she sought repairs at the dry dock there but the Uruguayans flatly refused to co-operate. As a result when British borrowed their drydock later a promise was made that it would be replaced after the war. The Uruguayans now are getting the No. 1 dock while Bermuda has been given No. 5 dock which was formerly at Alexandria Egypt.

100 Miles a Day

The Thames was in command of Capt. Jan Kalkman, 54, a Dutchman who escaped to Britain in 1940 and served with the British Navy. He hoped to reach Montevideo in 60 days, or at the rate of about 100 miles a day.

The Dutch skipper did not think it was unusual that one tug would do the towing. He pointed out that while two tugs were used in 1902 to bring No. 1 to Bermuda, they were steam operated. He felt his 3,000-horsepower job was the equal of the two steam tugs.

Steam, however, will play a part in the 1946 towing of the drydock which will be the largest one in South America when it reaches its destination. There are four boiler in the floating dock. Two of them will be kept going throughout the trip to supply power for any pumping.

Thirty men will be used for the towing operation 10 of whom will remain aboard the drydock for the entire voyage while the other 20 will be in the tug.

November was chosen as the best month of the year to escape any hurricanes around Bermuda and to head quickly for the South American summer.

The towing line approximated about 5,000 yards in length and was comprised of 5 3-4-inch wire and 20-inch manila rope in different parts of the tow line. It never sank much below 20 feet under the water. "We will need binoculars to see each other," commented the skipper.

Must Not Happen

Capt. Kalkman did not anticipate that there was any danger of a third vessel coming in between the tug and the drydock during the voyage. "That would cut our line," he said. "It must not happen and it will not. We shall certainly make a lot of noise if anything like this is threatened."

It was possible, of course, he said, that the towing line might part for other reasons. If that happened he said efforts would immediately be made to get the line fast again.

The drydock was fitted out like an ordinary ship for the trip. There was foc's'le in the side walls for the crew and a separate cabin on top of the dock for the master and engineer. About 70 to 80 days' food supply would be aboard the drydock with stocks for about four months in the tug.

The tug, which is about 183 feet in length and 32 feet beam, has a draught of 17 feet, six inches. The floating dock draws only about six to seven feet. Communications will be continuously maintained between the two with the use of portable sending and receiving sets or, as Capt. Kalkman described them, "Walkie Talkies."

Aboard the floating dock were lifebelts, rafts and belts. "I hope we won't need them," commented Capt. Kalkman.

Junior Farmers Sponsoring Course In Agriculture

The November meeting of the Thurlow Junior Farmers will be held in the township hall, Cannifton, on Monday, November 25th, at 8.30 sharp.

The guest speaker will be Mr. George Pollard, Dairy Instructor for South Hastings.

Mr. Harry W. Burns, Assistant Agricultural Representative will show a set of slides on types and breeds of farm animals.

A lunch will be served at the close of the meeting.

The Read Junior Farmers are sponsoring a short course in Agriculture. The course will be held in the Parish Hall at Read and will start on Monday, November 25th, at 9.00 a.m. The short course will continue for three weeks and will consist of lectures and demonstrations on general agriculture. A number of special speakers will attend the course and lecture on different subjects of interest.

Mr. W. E. Edwards, District Zone Forester will speak on reforestation, he will also speak on the care and management of the Farm Wood Lot. Mr. A. B. Baird, Dominion Entomology Lab., Belleville, is arranging for one of his staff to speak on the control of insects common on most farms. Mr. W. B. George, Agricultural School, Kemptville, will speak on soils and fertilizers. Dr. R. B. Murray, V. Sc., Stirling, will deal with livestock diseases and their control. Mr. Jas. Turnbull, Dominion Swine Grader, Peterborough, will speak on the feeding and management of swine. Mr. Ken Fallis, Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Department of Agriculture, Toronto, will talk on weeds and their control; chemical weed killers etc. Mr. George Pollard, Dairy Instructor for South Hastings, will have for his subject "Producing High Quality Milk." Mr. Jack Fraser, Agricultural School, Kemptville, will speak on "The Care and Management of the Laying Flock." He will also deal with the common diseases that affect poultry.

It is expected that a large number of farmers and farmers' sons in the Read district will attend the course.

The short course will be under the direction of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Mr. H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative, and Mr. Harry W. Burns, Assistant Agricultural Representative, for Hastings County, will be in charge.

Pleads Guilty To Mercy Slaying Of His Daughter

Maidstone, Eng., Nov. 25 — (AP)— Gordon Richard Long pleaded guilty Friday to a murder charge in the mercy slaying of his seven-year-old deformed and imbecile daughter Jessie, and received with stoic calm a sentence of death on the gallows.

Eric Neve, his lawyer, said the 46-year-old father was fully aware that the charge to which he pleaded meant a mandatory sentence of death by hanging and briefly sketched the poignant story contained in Long's written statement to the police.

The statement said Long went home last July 4 from the paper mill where he was employed resolved to do "the hardest thing I have ever done."

"I sent my wife in the garden after tea," the statement said. "I locked the back door, shut the windows and placed Jessie in the corner by the gas copper (jet). I gave her a piece of chocolate to suck. I laid my home guard respirator beside me and turned on the gas tap. I played with Jessie and kissed her, and then had to put on my respirator . . . then I kissed her good-bye. She closed her eyes and then went limp.

"I loved my daughter very much — more so than if she had been normal—and bringing about her death in this way is the hardest thing I have ever done."

Only a successful appeal or commutation of his sentence now can save Long from the gallows.

Hot Iron on Wrist Woman's Greeting For Holdup Man

New York, Nov. 25—(AP)— Nancy Nuyens, shoe store proprietor, put a would-be robber to flight today with a hastily improvised version of the hot foot. She gave him the hot wrist. The man walked into the store and asked for all the money "and be quick about it'.' Miss Buyens was quick, all right, but with a hot shoe-stretching iron, which she applied to the man's bare wrist. He screamed and departed, in a hurry

Congress President Tells Delegates Freedom in Sight

Meerut, India, Nov. 25—(Reuters) — Addressing the Indian National Congress Saturday, J. B. Kripalani, congress president, told delegates Indian freedom was "in sight."

"In a short time we shall be assembling to form a new constitution for India," he said. "Freedom is in sight, the British can no longer deny it to us whatever their intentions. If today we miss our goal the fault will be ours."

Establishment of Pakistan as a separate state for Moslem areas in India would be a "terrible solution" to "India's communal problems. It would be detrimental in the long run to Moslem as well as Hindu interests, but a logical consequence of communalism.

Speaking of the communal riots in Bengal and Bihar he declared if the present "orgies" continued the Moslem League and even congress might lose control of their followers.

"If that happens then India will be divided into two armed camps of communal fanatics, the British will stand guard over them both with their bayonets and the day of India's freedom will be indefinitely postponed."

Communal differences were at present India's greatest danger. Mr. Kripalani added. He said foreigners had taken "the fullest advantage of these in the past." India needed unity, the "greatest and most important of all political virtues."

"We have no past commitments, no imperialist ambitions for the future and we have no enemies. We would like to forget even the wrongs Great Britain has done us, once she has made amends and withdrawn her yoke from our necks."

Alcohol Prescribed For Smoker Who Has Heart Condition

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 25 (AP) —A heart specialist today prescribed alcoholic drinks for persons addicted to the use of tobacco if they suffer from diseases of the heart.

Dr. William D. Stroud, professor of cardiology at the graduate school of medicine, University of Pennsylvania, uttered his prescription before the mid-south regional meeting of the American College of Physicians.

"Tobacco has a bad effect on heart disease," the doctor said, "if the person is sentitive to nicotine.

"The best antidote is alcohol which dilates the arteries."

Position of Govt. Not Weakened By the 'Revolt'

By FRASER WIGHTON

London, Nov. 25 (Reuters) — The "revolt" of a section of Labor members of parliament on foreign policy this week has weakened neither the position of the government nor the authority which Foreign Secretary Bevin has won in international affairs, Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, said.

In an exclusive interview, the stocky, good-humored and aggressive Mr. Morrison said the recent party split was "unfortunate". The split had its climax when about 100 government supporters refrained from voting for the government's foreign policy last Monday.

"It was not a happy day either for the parliamentary Labor party or the government, and I regret it," he said. "But let us get the incident in its proper setting. It was a demonstration, even if an unhappy one, of the freedom with which British parliamentary institutions work."

What did he think the effect was upon the prestige of Britain overseas?

"In my view, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, who has a great place in the hearts of the British people and of the Labor movement, still occupies the great position of authority which he has won in international affairs," he replied.

"To use a phrase of the blitz period, the British democratic system can take it."

SAYS PLOT ENGINEERED FROM LONDON

London, Nov. 25 (CP) — The Warsaw radio, as quoted in a Moscow broadcast asserted Friday night that the Polish treasures which vanished from wartime hiding places in Canada were seized in the Dominion in a plot engineered from London. The broadcast asserted that "some circles of the Canadian clergy" had assisted in concealing the "historic Polish valuables".

Creamery Butter, Cheddar Cheese Oct. Output Down

Toronto, Nov. 25 — (CP)—Production of both creamery butter and cheddar cheese fell off last month compared with output in October, 1945, the Ontario Department of Agriculture announced.

October's make of creamery butter stood at 5,366,900 pounds, as against 5,763,200 pounds in October, 1945 — a drop of 6.8 per cent. Cheddar cheese output, down 15.4 per cent, was 9,013,100 pounds compared with 10,651,200 in the same month last year.

★ We will sell all New and Used Cars and Trucks at not more than the authorized prices.

★ We will do our best, under present conditions, to allocate all the New Passenger Cars and Trucks we receive, on the fairest possible basis, with special consideration to any Veteran of World War II who may require a car with special controls; to practising Physicians and Surgeons, and others whose urgent need is apparent.

★ We will make allowances based on an honest appraisal and a fair valuation to purchasers who have cars or trucks to trade.

★ We will give purchasers the benefit of those accessories which are available, but delivery of a new car or truck will not be conditional upon the acceptance of accessories other than those desired.

★ We will charge only equitable prices for parts, accessories and services, and when requested will gladly provide advance estimates for the benefit of the customer.

★ We will, at all times, strive to serve our customers' needs — with efficiency, fairness and courtesy.

1946 Touring in Ontario

Some figures have been issued of the volume of travellers' vehicle permits issued for Ontario, September showing 108,765 as compared with 92,511 for September of last year. This was the greatest September volume since 1937 when 120,387 permits were issued. Non-permit traffic for the month amounted to 269,851 cars.

For the first nine months of this year there were 784,323 permits issued for Ontario, a new ten-year high.

Figures for Ontario motorists travelling in the United States are also given. In September 8,138 cars from Ontario remained abroad for more than 24 hours. This is 94.4 per cent over the total for September 1945. For the first nine months of this year 50,838 toured in the United States or 171.2 per cent over the same period last year.

The Information Bulletin of the Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity in its editorial for the month says in regard to the appeal to the United States tourist, one of the crying needs of the tourist industry in Ontario is attractive and informative literature designed to do a selling job for regions and communities.

"During the next year—commencing about the middle of March—there will be a tremendous demand for material of this kind. The Department of Travel and Publicity will of course, produce booklets and folders concerning the province as a whole but it is still the job of local organizations to put across the story of their tourist assets by making available for distribution carefully prepared and well illustrated printed matter."

The information should be informative: "It must tell the prospective visitor what the community and its environment have to offer for his or her entertainment; where fishing, golf, tennis and other sports are to be found; what type of accommodation is to be expected, what highways, railways, steamships and airline facilities exist; what the distances are to the border or the nearest large American center of population.

"A map showing the city or district in relation to the rest of the Province and the international border is a 'must'."

"Illustrations are important and visitors are interested in local history, particularly where it touches upon the common historic background of Canada and the United States. Photos and brief sketches of historic events are important."

Causes of Industrial Accidents

"It is now generally agreed that improper human behaviour is the principal cause of accidents," states a memorandum just issued by the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations.

"Most of our actions are habitual," the memo says, "Regardless of opinion to the contrary, all our habits are not safe ones. Some of them, like smoking in bed, are dangerous and often cause injury to others."

Pointing out that the cause of an accident can usually be traced to improper actions of persons, the memo says, "Until they 'unlearn' their unsafe habits and acquire safe ones in their stead, or their safety training is started early enough so they will acquire the habits of thinking and acting safely, the improper behaviour of many well-meaning people will continue to cause accidents. Safe habits are not acquired instinctively."

In conclusion the memo urges that people in all lines of endeavour be encouraged to accept their responsibilities for preventing accidents, and safety training so that their acts will not cause accidents.

In the current memorandum to industry, the Associations have an article dealing with injuries caused by weight lifting. Pointing out that most lifting injuries are the result of undue strain, the statement lists causes that are correctable.

Here are some of the causes:

Lack of lifting and conveying equipment.

Lifting the wrong way, which results in undue strain on certain muscles and ligaments—notably in the back and groin.

Lifting by those note physically capable of handling the job.

In team lifting—lifting by two or more workers—the unco-ordinated efforts of the team members resulting on too heavy a burden on one or more.

Poor housekeeping, resulting in insecure footing, and tripping and slipping hazards.

Winter Comes

Snow on sidewalks and roadways Saturday though it was very little required pedestrians and motorists to exercise much more than usual care to avoid a fall or skid especially on hills. It was an apt warning to everyone who goes on the streets that the season of winter which calls for wary walking and driving has come, though long delayed by the mildness of middle and late autumn.

Motorists travelling some distance across the Province will be cautious, watching the weather conditions because snow in volume has at times come quite early in the winter. Everyone recalls the storm which a couple of years ago struck Ontario and in some parts buried streets under a depth of snow which took days to clear. So the driver who is going far takes every precautionary step possible to guard against being caught in a snow blockade. He is also on his guard against the possibility of patches of ice on the roadways and highways to avoid the risk of mishap.

U. K.'s Iron Steel Production

The figures of Britain's iron and steel output during October, which have just been released, show a considerable production achievement in view of the fuel difficulties and limitations of transport.

Both in iron and steel in October the output was well above the average of the three preceding quarters of this year. The weekly average for pig iron was 155,800 tons compared with 147,300 tons in September and the 130,000 tons weekly average in 1938. Steel production in the same month was 254,300 tons weekly average compared with 238,500 tons in September and 200,000 tons in 1938.

The annual rate of pig iron output now stands at rather more than 8,100,000 tons compared with 7,600,000 tons in the same month last year. For steel, the figure is 13,320,000 tons compared with 12,700,000 tons in October 1945.

Exports, although still below the prewar average, have attained a volume more than twofold that of 1945. The October figures are not yet available, but the September returns show that shipments overseas, both of iron and steel, totalled 143,200 tons compared with the 163,300 and 54,200 monthly averages in 1938 and 1945 respectively.

12,120,044 ration books were distributed in 1946 in Canada, according to a statement of the Prices Board. That indicates an increase in the population of 613,369 since the 1941 book was issued. The figure for 1945 was 11,658,933 ration books issued. Such an increase in population as indicated for 1946 over 1945 is of moment to all Canadians who have heard and read considerable about the rate of population's future growth. Ration book total therefore yields important information.

HOSPITAL

In they come, as doctors' cases,
Dreading hours on beds of pain.
Out they go, with smiling faces,
Well and fit for life again.

Troops of visitors come bringing
Flowers to comfort and to cheer.
Soon or late, as time goes winging,
They, as patients, will appear.

Wives come in, their travail starting,
Leaving husbands in the hall.
Out they go, with smiles departing,
Happy with their babies small.

Death and birth and joy and sorrow,
Fear and hope are hosteled here.
Pain today and peace tomorrow;
So it goes from year to year.

Employment and ennui are simply incompatible.—Mad. Deluzy.

Hardy Islanders Give Up Struggle Against Atlantic

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sligo, Eire, Nov. 25 (CP)—The Atlantic has won its centuries-old battle against the people of Innishmurray Island in Donegal Bay.

Finally convinced they cannot make a living on the rocky outpost, exposed to the full fury of the ocean and often isolated for many weeks at a time, the ten families of Innishmurray have appealed to the Irish Land Commission for removal to new homes.

Lack of fuel, failure of the fisheries, absence of any communication with the outside world and poor crops on the island's 25 acres of stony arable land have combined to end an occupation of 700 years.

Surrounded by treacherous rocks and reefs, approach to Innishmurray is dangerous even in a moderate wind. When a ground sea rises, the island is cut off.

Dependent entirely on communication by sea, Innishmurray has never had a pier or harbor facilities. Landings are by small boats which must be moored to solid rock.

Now the burden of supporting the 59 islanders falls on seven or eight young men. Even an improved harbor, as a measure of relief would come too late to guarantee a livelihood and security.

Even the absence of income and land taxation — a concession granted first by Britain and now by Eire because so little has been done for Innishmurray — is insufficient attraction to overcome the lack of social services and amenities.

Rigorous Existence

"Life has been hard for us always," says 82-year-old Dominick Harte, the oldest resident. "I hope the children now growing up will be spared the same rigors."

Eleven of Innishmurray's inhabitants are more than 60 years old and 25 others are under 14. Most of the families are very poor though their low, thatched cottages—all on the landward side, are invariably neat.

For three months each year the main means of livelihood is lobster fishing. After that the poorest people must depend on their small fields of grain and potatoes and on the small income from old-age pensions and relief.

Now most of the bread winners have left and young people leave the island every year. Michael Waters, 72-year-old acknowledged leader of the community, has sent all his family to jobs on the mainland.

A goverment decision on the migration appeal is expected soon. Irish Land Commission experts recently completed an intensive survey of conditions on Innishmurray with a view to drafting a satisfactory scheme.

Nineteen Fatalities In East Canada During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Fifteen of the 19 weekend fatalities in Eastern Canada occurred in Ontario, a Canadian Press survey showed today. One was in Quebec, one in New Brunswick and two in Nova Scotia.

Street and highway accidents accounted for 10 of the deaths. Two were drowned and the other seven died from a variety of mishaps.

Ontario traffic accidents resulted in the deaths of seven-year-old John Wigginton and 57-year-old Leon Cyrka at Hamilton; Norman Humphrey, 30, in Scarboro township east of Toronto; Maurice Pietracupa, 37, whose car was hit by a trolley near Thorold; D'Arcy Lennox, 56, and his 20-year-old daughter Kathleen, whose car collided with a truck near Barrie, and seven-year-old Robert Hester, struck by a car at Oshawa.

Doris Sealey of Windsor died in a Toronto hospital from injuries received in a car collision two weeks previously.

The two other traffic deaths were those of six-year-old Lize Lapierre, who fell from a taxicab travelling to the Santa Claus parade at Montreal, and Mrs. Ellen Jewett, who died in hospital at Fredericton from injuries received when hit by a car Wednesday.

Fell From Boat

Drowned were Charles F. White, Toronto expert on installation of church chimes, who apparently suffered an attack and fell from a motorboat near Napanee, and Ernest Christie, 30, whose body was recovered from the Black River near Cornwall.

Frank Annel died Saturday in a Windsor hospital from injuries of unknown origin. He had been found on the road near Windsor Friday. The body of Adolph Humbert, missing since Thursday, was found Saturday hanging from a tree near Pembroke.

The body of Richard Henderson, missing since Nov. 14, was found Sunday on the shore of Sydenham Lake near Kingston. At Toronto the body of Clarence Whitton was found near the Sunnyside bathing pavilion.

Arve Halliläinen, trapper, was accidentally shot and killed with his own gun while hunting near Sudbury.

The two other deaths were those of Jeff Leonard, mines inspector killed in a colliery by a blasting mishap near New Waterford, N. S., and Irving Gates, fatally injured in a fall from a wagon at Halifax Saturday.

Contests Loom In Number Of Ontario Centres

(By The Canadian Press)

Acclamations were frequent as candidates for municipal office qualified Saturday for elections Dec. 9 at most Ontario Points but interesting contests loomed in a number of centres.

Incumbent mayors of the two largest cities going to the polls two weeks from today faced opposition as Controller Don Clarke challenged Mayor Sam Lawrence in Hamilton and Windsor's mayor Arthur J. Reaume was confronted by three opponents.

London, where nominations were held a week ago, has a 3-way contest for the mayoralty Dec. 9 but the other two Ontario cities with more than 50,000 population vote later — Toronto Jan. 1 and Ottawa Jan. 6. Across the province Dec. 9 is the most popular civic voting day with Jan. 1 and Jan. 6 ranking next.

A three-cornered battle for the mayoralty was promised in North Bay as Arthur Beattie, John F. Granger and J. L. Shaw qualified. In Guelph Alderman Leonard Owen and William J. Taylor, a former mayor, will challenge Mayor Gordon L. Rife.

In Woodstock, where Mayor Charles Burston is not a candidate for re-election, Donald A. Thompson, W. A. McLeod and Charles Hayball will contest the office. Wilfred Rutledge opposes Mayor Garfield Anderson in Fort William.

Elsewhere the acclamations piled up. Among mayors acclaimed were John Brown of Kitchener, J. Stuart Crawford of Kingston, J. M. King of Stratford, William Owens of Peterboro and John H. Matthews of Brantford.

Also elected without a contest were Bruce Caldwell in St. Thomas, K. Serviss in Galt, W.H. C. Brien in Sault Ste. Marie and W. S. Beaton in Sudbury.

More than 75 reeves were named by acclamation as the qualifications closed.

One of the tightest mayoralty races was promised in Mimico, where Mayor A. D. Norris and former Mayor Amos Waites, separated by the town clerk's deciding vote last year, are again in the field.

Three candidates stood for the mayoralty in Waterloo but acclamations were common in other towns. However, Preston Gerhart opposed J. Frank Kelly in Huntsville and Herbert Bagshaw and William Watson were candidates in Kincardine.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

NEUTRALIZATION OF STOMACH ACIDITY

During digestion the gastric juice and digesting food in the stomach of a healthy person is always highly acid, sour, due to the hydrochloric (muriatic), acid in the gastric juice. If any of it happens to return to the esophagus or gullet it produces the burning sensation commonly known as "heartburn" or "waterbrash," the latter term referring to the irritation of the pharynx or throat if any gastric juice gets all the way up through the esophagus.

Due to this normal acidity of the stomach contents a dose of bicarbonate of soda, sodium bicarbonate, baking soda, saleratus, as it is variously called and it is practically the same by any name, always produces considerable gas in the stomach, carbonic acid gas, carbon dioxide, the same gas that produces the sparkle or bubbles in soda water and other "carbonated" beverages or the "fuzz" in champagne or the head of collar or foam on beer. A lot of poor geeks take straight soda or various nostrums containing bicarbonate of soda, generate their own gas, belch some of the gas, and imagine the medicine is driving off something that might otherwise cause serious trouble —"press on the heart," for example.

We can't turn aside here to explain how ridiculous that notion is—"gas pressing on the heart" — except to state that there is no reason to imagine it ever happens.

Besides generating gas in the stomach, soda is objectionable as an antacid because it not only neutralizes acid in the stomach but also disturbs the normal acid-alkali balance in blood and organs—habitual use of soda brings an alkalosis, kidney injury, diminished nitrogen excretion, even uremia.

Experience indicates that pure calcium carbonate (prepared chalk) is most satisfactory for routine use as an antacid. It neutralizes excessive acidity in the stomach without appreciably disturbing systemic acid-alkali balance. Whether the patient has ulcer or just hyperchlorhydria without ulcer, there is no good reason why he or she may not use three or four doses of this antacid daily with advantage. As explained in the booklet "So You Have Indigestion" (for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope) addition of a small quantity of the absorbent magnesium trisilicate to the pure calcium carbonate enhances the remedial value of the antacid for "heartburn", "waterbrash," "hunger pain," "empty pain," "gas" or other distress or discomfort due to excessive stomach acidity. This combination is convenient and nearly tasteless in the form of discs containing approximately two-thirds calcium carbonate and one-third magnesium trisilicate.

Where the antacid is taken three or four times daily the best time is either one-half hour before each meal or one hour after each meal and last thing before retiring—one disk three or four daily, thit is. Or seven grains of calcium carbonate (prepared chalk) and three grains of magnesium trisilicate in powder. If the combination in disc form is used it is better to chew the disc, or if your dare not risk your store teeth, like that, crush or crumble the disk to coarse powder and wash it down with water.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who was elected to Congress while a prisoner of war?

John Pollard Gaines (1795-1857) was elected a Representative in Congress while a prisoner of war in Mexico.

Gaines was born in what is now West Virginia and became a lawyer at Walton, Boone County, Kentucky. He served as a private during the War of 1812 and fought in the battle of Thames in Canada.

Upon the outbreak of the Mexican War he was commissioned a major in a Kentucky cavalry brigade commanded by Captain Thomas F. Marshall, a nephew of Chief Justice John Marshall. In January, 1847, Major Gaines was captured by the Mexicans at Incarnacion and was held a prisoner of war for several months. While in prison in Mexico City he was elected without his knowledge a Wing member of Congress from his home district in Kentucky.

Major Gaines escaped from prison and served as an aide-de-camp on General Winfield Scott's staff for a short time before assuming his duties as a Congressman in Washington.

After the expiration of his term (1847-1849) President Taylor appointed him governor of Oregon Territory after another Whig Congressman, Abraham Lincoln, had declined the post.

As governor of Oregon Territory Gaines' career was unhappy both politically and personally. On the voyage to the coast his two daughters died of yellow fever, and before his term as governor expired his wife was killed and his son died.

Several men have served in Congress after serving prison sentences. Calef Powers served eight years in Congress (1911-1919) after he had served about the same period in prison. He was tried and convicted on charges of complicity in the assassination of Governor William Goebel of Kentucky in 1900 and was sentenced to life imprisonment, but he was pardoned after he had served more than eight years.

Build $5,400 Road To Aid Legless Vet

Capetown, Nov. 25 (CP) — A legless soldier is to have a road in suburban Wetton specially surfaced for him so that he can walk home safely. He is Sgt. Billy Conradie, a six-foot-four-inch infantry platoon sergeant who trod on a German mine when leading his men into action in the closing stages of the Italian campaign. His injuries were so severe that both legs had to be amputated at the knees.

Sgt. Conradie is in a military hospital in Johannesburg where artificial legs are being made for him. He will be able to walk with practice, but only on a hard surface. His parents, with whom he will stay when he returns to Capetown, live in Roath Road in Wetton, which is an uneven sandy track about 100 yards long. It would be quite impossible for the wounded soldier to go to and from his home unless he was carried or wheeled in a bath chair.

Because of his predicament, his mother approached G. H. Pierce, provincial secretary, who appealed to Mayor A. Bloomberg.

"It may seem a lot to ask that a road should be specially made up for one man, but it is little compared with the great sacrifice which Sgt. Conradie has made on our behalf," he wrote.

The mayor sent the appeal to the street committee with a strong recommendation that the road be built. The cost will be £1,350 ($5,400) but the committee has agreed to it.

When Sgt. Conradie comes home for Christmas work will have started.

Govt. to Clamp Down on Border Traffic in Children

By KAY REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)—Canadian and United States welfare authorities soon will take steps to limit the number of Canadian children being placed in American foster homes, Nora Lea, assistant executive director of the Canadian Welfare Council, told The Canadian Press.

Declaring "many" children were involved in trans-border adoptions, Miss Lea said Canadian institutions were violating American adoption practices in placing children from this country in U.S. homes.

The practice in "certain" provinces of allowing Americans to adopt Canadian children "is frowned upon by both sides of the line." It had created a situation that was not contributing to good international relations.

While there has never been any objection to children here being adopted by blood relatives in the United States, or even by close family friends there, at the same time Americans have many of their children for whom they must find homes, she said. They feel so many Canadian children being put with American foster parents are taking places which rightfully belong to their own young.

When for one reason or another a Canadian child is to be placed in the U.S., she held, due consideration should be given not only to the welfare of the child but also to the legal and administrative procedures in existence in the place where it is proposed to take the child.

U.S. requirements with respect to immigration and naturalization should be observed, for a Canadian child doesn't automatically become a citizen of the U.S. merely through adoption. For the adoptive parents to have the child naturalized, adoption must take place in the U.S. before 16 years of age and the child be adopted must have been in the legal custody of the adoptive parents for at least two years prior to the filing of petition for the child's naturalization.

Wells' Estate Totals $250,000

London, Nov. 25 (CP)—George P. and Frank Wells—the two sons of the late H. G. Wells—were bequeathed most of their author father's fortune and the world rights to his books, probate of Mr. Well's will showed.

Mr. Wells left a fortune of £59,811. Maria Baroness Budberg, Russian refugee, described as "my very dear friend" in the will, received an annuity to be purchased with £4,000.

George Wells received rights to "The Science of Life" and "The Outline of History," while rights to Mr. Wells' other works, more than 80 books, went to Frank Wells and his wife, Marjorie.

Marjorie Wells also was appointed an executor "because she is specially acquainted as my confidential secretary with the conduct of my affairs.

Small bequests totalled £20,070.

In addition to Mr. Wells' will, others filed today included those of:

James Maxton, late Independent Labor Party member of parliament, £1,614 and Most Rev. Thomas Leighton Williams late Roman Catholi- Archbishop of Birmingham £444.

Heroines of War Meet at Luncheon

London, Nov. 25 (CP) —Three of the bravest women of Britain met for lunch recently, sorry because another heroine, Cpl. Joan Pearson of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force, had to stay at home with her sick mother. All four hold the George Cross for valor.

Cpl. Pearson won her award for freeing a pilot from a blazing, bomb-laden aircraft. At the luncheon were Odette Sanson, tortured by the Gestapo because she refused to betray a catastrophe after an explosion in the main theatre of Middlesex Hospital; and Emam Townsend, who tried to save a boy patient from an attack by his father in hospital

PROVIDE 24-HOUR NURSERY SERVICE

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 25 (CP) — This city now has its first 24-hour nursery service. The building of a night nursery at the Footscray creche has just been completed, making it the first in Victoria to provide mothers with an all-round-the-clock nursery service.

The scheme was largely financed by Footscray Local Council. Twelve babies will be accommodated, and the staff will work in shifts.

SCOTTISH PILGRIMAGE

Dunfermline, Scotland (CP)—Hundreds of Scottish Roman Catholics domiciled in America will make a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Margaret in 1948. A liner will be chartered for the trip.

Praises Danish Social Program

Montreal, Nov. 25 (CP)—There is much to be adjusted in our economic situation and "it will be adjusted only when the ordinary men and women take time to understand the basic laws which govern society and are easily understood," Margaret E. Bateman, international director of the Henry George School of Social Science, New York City, said here recently after completing an 11,000-mile automobile trip through Canada and the United States.

Miss Bateman, Canadian-born, in 1945 wrote a pamphlet entitled "Whose World" dealing with facts leading to "prosperity or chaos" in world affairs.

Referring to the social system of Denmark which she studied in 1936, Miss Bateman said:

"They were more than 100 years ahead of this continent in their social program. The country had minimized unemployment through making the national resources of the country available to the people."

Her review of economic situations was:

"Labor precipitates a strike to obtain higher wages. Production stops and when an increase in wages is obtained, prices go up and the laborers' dollars buy a smaller amount of goods. When we have more and more dollars and less and less goods, we soon reach a serious impasse.

"Inflation is the result and that is one of the worst diseases of society. One need only recall how little value our dollar had in China when servicemen could not buy a fountain pen for a hundred dollars. In other words, money is not so important as the production of goods and services."

Miss Bateman recently visited Henry George School branches at Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal.

Housing Relief Gets New Twist

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 25 — (CP) — The first of more than 100 navy barges which an engineering firm is converting into houseboats to help relieve the housing shortage has appeared on Sydney harbor. Occupant of the $3,500 floating home is Mrs. Anne Nugent, 36-year-old war widow.

The little house set on the steel barge, 40 feet by 14 feet wide, has a hardwood frame and sound-proofed asbestos walls. It is divided into small living room, two bedrooms, bathroom, dressing room and kitchen. Its flat roof serves as a sun deck.

A 500-gallon tank within the hull of the barge holds the water supply and Mrs. Nugent intends to instal an electricity generator. At the moment oil lamps provide lighting.

Mrs. Nugent who is alone on the houseboat with her 11-year-old daughter, rows 25 feet to shore when she has shopping to do but the boat-builders hope eventually to organize delivery service and garbage collection for purchasers of their converted barges.

Mrs. Nugent says her home is steady even in windy weather. Turning on its moorings, it provides her with a variety of scenery when ordinary currents are at work.

The only rate Mrs. Nugent has to pay is $3.20 a year for a Maritime Services Board mooring licence.

HUMAN FACTS BEHIND THE FIGURES

BANKING is not the mysterious business some people are inclined to think it. In its fundamentals, it is no more complex than any other type of business.

The chief difference is that, instead of dealing in goods, your bank deals in money . . . money which belongs mainly to you and to the many other Canadians who deposit their funds with the bank.

At the B of M, for instance, well over a million people have placed on deposit close to one and three-quarter billion dollars.

This money doesn't stand idle . . . it works to earn its keep.

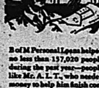
This is why, as you will see here, some of the dollars left at the B of M are lent to merchants, businessmen and manufacturers to assist them in their operations, while others are used to finance the needs of governments. Some enable farmers to improve their farms, buy machinery and market crops. Many others go out to help citizens in their day-to-day financing — in meeting emergencies and in taking advantage of opportunities.

The sum total of all these transactions makes interesting reading, not so much on account of the figures themselves, but because of the human stories behind them.

At the close of the B of M's business year, it seems a good thing for these dollars to show what they have been doing and for the Bank to report on the transactions which it has undertaken for its customers from coast to coast.

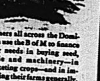
Merchants, businessmen and people in every sort of enterprise borrow a lot of money from the B of M. One of these was Mr. P. R. B., an expert baker, who, after service with the Forces, wanted to own a small wholesale bakery again. Lacking the ready cash, he came to the B of M, obtained a $500 loan, and is now running a profitable little business.

Thousands of business men—with big enterprises and little ones—use B of M loans to help them in their financing. The dollars they borrow oil the wheels of commerce and industry, facilitate production and create employment.



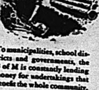
B of M Personal Loans helped no less than 157,020 people during the past year—people like Mr. A. L. T., who needed money to help him finish constructing his own home. He got three B of M Personal Loans, totalling more than $600, over a period of 18 months, and he has paid them off regularly in monthly instalments. Now his home is in fine shape and the loans are repaid. Interest cost of loans: $32.53.

Over 500 people from every walk of life come to the B of M every business day to borrow for personal needs.



Farmers all across the Dominion use the B of M to finance their needs in buying seed, cattle and machinery—in marketing crops—and in improving their farms generally. This means more prosperous farming communities — and bigger agricultural production to meet the urgent needs of a hungry world.

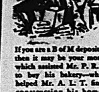
Typical of these go-ahead farmers is Mr. R. B. L., who wanted to clear and break 50 acres on his farm. The job would cost $325, but his ready cash amounted to only $125. With the aid of a B of M farm improvement loan of $300, he completed the job and has considerably increased the production and profits from his farm.



To municipalities, school districts and governments, the B of M is constantly lending money for undertakings that benefit the whole community.

Take the case of an Ontario town, which—to pay for a new sewage system—was selling debentures amounting to $305,000. The Bank of Montreal bought 44% of the issue, a total of $134,000, which is now being used by the town to complete the undertaking.

Many municipalities use the B of M's facilities to finance community improvements and to handle their financial transactions generally.



If you are a B of M depositor, then it may be your money which assisted Mr. P. R. B. to buy his bakery—which helped Mr. A. L. T. finish constructing his home—which enabled Farmer R. B. L. to make his farm more profitable—and which helped finance the new sewage system for the Ontario town. That working money of yours is part of $1,700,000,000 which well over a million Canadians have deposited at 498 B of M branches from coast to coast. Each one of the 1,531,658 B of M deposit accounts is an expression of trust in Canada's first-established bank, which has been working with Canadians in every walk of life for 129 years.

Miss Helen McLean, of Toronto, spent the weekend at her home 152 George Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey, 2nd of Sidney, and daughter, Miss Jewel Bailey, student-nurse at the Belleville General Hospital, spent a day recently in Peterborough with Mrs. Bailey's sisters, Mrs. Bowerman and Mrs. George Green, Gilmour Stret.

Mr. Jack Farley, Grand Coulee, Sask., is visiting his mother, Mrs. N. Farley, Church Street.

Mrs. George H. Stobie has returned after spending a few days in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Thomas, of Bancroft, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Morrow, Bridge Street.

Weekend guests of Col and Mrs. Roscoe Vanderwater, Foxboro, were Misses Mary MacDonald, Reg.N., Ruth Scott, Reg.N., and Alison Vanderwater, Reg.N., of Toronto.

WEDDINGS

OTT—ASELTYNE

On Saturday afternoon, a marriage of considerable local interest was quietly solemnized at the Bridge Street United Church Manse, when Miss Phyllis Aselstine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Aselstine, Toronto, (formerly of Belleville), was united with Mr. Wm. J. Ott, son of Mrs. Lewis A. Ott, of Port Hope, and the late Mr. L. J. Ott, the Rev. D. C. Amos officiating.

The only attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Brennan.

Later a reception was held at 340 1-2 Front Street, where afternoon tea was served to about 25 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Ott are travelling to Toronto, Niagara Falls and other western cities. They will later reside in the city, where Mr. Ott is the owner of the well-known "Quinte Dry Beverages".

BOWERS—ROYLE

At eight o'clock on the evening of Nov. 23rd., Christ Church, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Jennie Irene Royle, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Royle, Coleman Street, became the bride of Mr. Clayton Gordon Bowers, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Bowers, Wellington, Ont., with the Rev. J. Grant Sparling officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the strains of wedding music played by Mr. Alfred Evans, making a charming picture in an attractive draped model gown of the new arcadian-blue shade in silk crepe, with a matching hat, and wearing a corsage of tea roses and baby's breath.

Miss Lillian Barriage as bridesmaid, was gowned in laurentian-blue crepe with a small sequin-trimmed Juliet hat, and wore a corsage of tea roses.

Mr. John Royle, Jr., ably performed the duties of groomsman, and the ushers were Messrs. Stanley and McKenzie (Mac) Royle.

During the ceremony Mr. Douglas Warham sang "Because" and during the signing of the register "O Promise Me'.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the tastefully decorated home of the bride's parents, where the bride's mother received the guests in a gown of Eden-blue matelasse crepe with corsage of American Beauty roses.

Abouty sixty guests enjoyed a delectable buffet supper, when Alderman Claude Tice proposed the toast to the bride.

For a journey to Oshawa, Brockville and Montreal, the bride donned a gown in the new creme de cocoa shade, with gold embroidery, and a muskrat coat, with matching accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowers will take up residence in Belleville, where Mr. Bowers has his headquarters as a brakeman on the C.N.R.

The Experts Say

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Nov. 22 (CP)—Breakfast in haste and dine at leisure is the mode of life in Canada these days as many families tend to settle for a toast-and-coffee morning snack rather than take time to consume a more nourishing meal.

Home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggest the easy-going supper meal should include dishes made from the whole cereals, such as cracked wheat or oatmeal, which the family missed at breakfast.

Oat Cheese Croquettes is one good supper dish which has rolled oats as a base.

The recipe: one and one-third cups rolled oats; one and two-thirds cups boiling water; three-quarters teapsoon salt; half cup grated cheese; one teaspoon chopped parsley; one tea spoon grated onion; few grains pepper; two chopped hard-cooked eggs; one-third cup dry bread crumbs or oatmeal.

Gradually stir rolled oats into boiling salted water stirring constantly for five minutes. Add cheese and stir until melted. Remove from heat and beat thoroughly until smooth. Add chopped parsley, onion, pepper and eggs. Chill mixture one hour. Shape into flat patties, roll in dry bread crumbs or oatmeal and pan-fry until nicely browned on both sides. Serve hot with sauce or relish. Six servings.

Health experts say in Canada about one-third of the energy supply of the diet comes from cereal products. The wheat berry supplies starch, germ, aleurone cells and bran.

The latter three are rich in iron and B vitamins, which aid digestion, appetite, steady the nerves, and assist in the proper use of energy foods by the body. Whole grain cereals, such as oatmeal, rolled oats and rolled wheat, retain a large percentage of these nutriments. Consequently they should be used more frequently than refined products such as ordinary white flour, macaroni and polished rice. Canadian meals generally have been found low in the B vitamins.

Cereal cookies are another method of tricking the younger members into getting that necessary nourishment. Junior just won't be able to keep his hands away from the cookie-jar if mother has it filled with Cocoa Oatmeal Cookies.

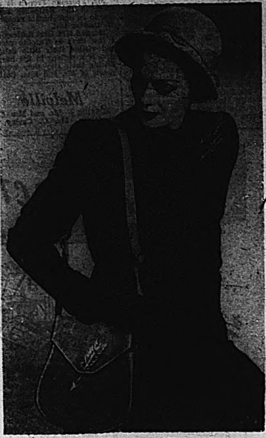
The recipe: one and one-half cups sifted pastry flour; one-half teaspoon baking powder; one-half teaspoon salt; six tablespoons cocoa; one and one-quarter cups granulated sugar; one egg; one-half cup milk; one and one-half teaspoons vanilla; two-thirds cup shortening (or equivalent) two cups rolled oats.

Sift first five ingredients into a bowl; beat egg well, then add milk ingredients. Mix in rolled oats. Drop by teapsoons on a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a moderate oven.

ROBBERS GET $25

Merritton, Nov. 25 —(CP)—Adding insult to injury, safecrackers over the weekend used acetylene torches and tanks from the Clark Machine Company, to smash the company's safe. The robbers, however, got only $25 for their efforts.

Golden Flight of Fashions



By PRUNELLA WOOD

Golden arrow is a new color in fashion, a warm, flattering honey-beige that takes the glow of Indian summer on into the hard gray days of winter. Incidentally, it is a swell accessory color with gray....also black, green, brown, red.

The fashion picture shows a big golden arrow suede mail-pouch handbag, pierced by a metal arrow which matches the two thrust through the dark brown suit. The felt cloche matches the bag, and has a gilt veil trim.

2nd Thurlow

2nd Thurlow. —A large number of friends, neighbors and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. F. Haight gathered at their home on Friday night in honor of their daughter, Mrs. George Ashley, and Mr. Ashley and presented them with a miscellaneous shower. Mrs. A. Mitchell acted as chairman for the occasion and after a few remarks asked the bride and groom to seats of honor. The maid of honor, Miss Mary Chambers and the bridesmaid, Miss Marjorie Wright, were present. All wore their bridal party gowns. Mr. and Mrs. Manley Mitchell favored with a cornet and piano selection. Miss Lola Dent sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. M. Mitchell. Mrs. F. Mitchell read an appropriate poem. Miss Edith Sprackett read the address and after unwrapping the many lovely and useful gifts, Lorena and George thanked their many friends for the gifts and invited all to come and see them in their home at West Huntingdon. Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed by all present.

New Soapless VEL Cleans Without Suds

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Most women have always looked to the suds in soap for its cleaning power. Now, however, a new and revolutionary soapless cleaner has been discovered which cleans without depending upon suds. At the cost of over one million dollars soapless VEL has been perfected.

NO SUDS REQUIRED

Soapless VEL makes plenty of suds, but the suds are unnecessary to the cleaning action. In fact VEL cleaning power continues long after the suds dissolve. Another noticeable difference from soap is in the action of VEL on water. Soap combines with water to make a cloudy milky-white solution. When VEL suds dissolve, the water is left as clear as soft water in a rain barrel. VEL makes the water act soft, too. As a result you plainly see how much grease and grime VEL removes.

SURPRISINGLY LITTLE VEL NEEDED

Using too much VEL may give you disappointing results. It's surprising how little you need. A teaspoonful or two of VEL is usually plenty for a dishpanful of water. You'll be delighted to see how sparkling clean VEL leaves glassware and dishes ... and how VEL leaves no soap scum on your dishpan.

"VEL" is a registered trademark of the COLGATE-PALMOLIVE-PEET CO. LTD.

ST. MIKES STILL RULE THE O.H.A. JUNIOR ROOST

Win Nine Straight Games, Their Latest Victims Being Young Rangers

They're still looking for the team in the Ontario Hockey Association's junior "A" loop that can give St. Michael's College a battle.

In nine starts this season, the Irish have finished two or more goals ahead of their opposition every time, with the scores usually mounting in loop-sided figures.

Toronto's Young Rangers got a taste of the Collegians' power Saturday afternoon and finished on the short end of an 11-1 score that left the Majors a comfortable eight points in front of the league standings.

The Irish coasted to victory with a seven-goal splurge in the third period after the Rangers had spoted them three in the first frame and held them even with a goal apiece in the second.

Fleming MacKell paced the winners with four goals. Ed Harrison and Warren Winslow got two each and Migay, Costello and Wolt bagged the others. Wally Samanski was the lone Ranger scorer.

Toronto Marlboros boosted themselves into a contending position by trouncing St. Catharines Falcons 11-1 in the second game of the Maple Leaf Gardens doubleheader. The win over the Dukes into a fourth-place tie with the idle Stratford Kroehlers.

Oshawa In Second Place

Ray Timgren Johnny Sullivan and Clay Raglan clicked for two Marlboro goals apiece with Hassard, Ford, Church, Kent and Naylor adding singletons. Pat Unger scored for the losers.

Oshawa Generals moved into a second-place tie with Barrie by walloping Windsor Spitfires 10-4 in a four point tussle at Oshawa while the Flyers bowed to Galt Red Wings for the second time in as many nights, dropping a 10-2 decision at Galt.

Scholes, Ceresino and Lowe banged home two apiece for the Generals who accumulated 23 scoring points against the last-place Spitfires. Blair, Dunn, Bauer and Hildebrand completed the Oshawa scoring list. Captain Paul Montforton netted three of the Windsor goals to take individual scoring honors. Spitfire goal-getter.

Jimmy Uniac and Bert Giesbrecht scored two goals each for Galt to pace the Red Wings to victory over Barrie. Bert Giesbrecht, Mineault, Wiseman, Glover Pavelich and Tkachuk got the others. Fife and LaFrance scored the slumping Flyers.

Stratford Kroehlers travel to Hamilton tonight in an effort to join Barrie and Oshawa in second place.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 25 —(CP)— Moroccan-born Marcel Cerdan, a jaunty "Johnny Frenchman" by way of Casablanca, Barcelona, Paris and Algiers, makes his long-deferred North American debut Dec. 6 and thereby seals one of the most unusual managerial and promotional partnerships in prizering history . . . when the 30-year-old former De Gaullist sailor climbs through the ropes at Madison Square Garden against George Abrams of Washington, D.C., his appearance will be partly by grace of a Parisian promoter's flair for baby-sitting, a talent which helped crystallize a friendship between two oddly-assorted characters who met for the first time in New York 22 years ago.

Small World.

The alliance started when Joe Longmans, London-born French seaman, jumped ship at New York and met Lew Bunston, an up-and-coming East Side manager then handling a Belgian boxer named Rene DeVos . . . Haunted by homesickness, Longmans spent long hours chatting in French at the gym where DeVos trained . . . When Bunston sailed for Paris, Longmans went along as interpreter-secretary and became practically part of the family by acting as "sitter" for Bunston's infant daughter . . . Years passed and Bunston returned to New York, but Longmans built a chain of arenas in Paris and formed a liaison with Lucien Roupp, Cerdan's manager, based on nothing more substantial than a hand-shake and mutual experiences in the French Resistance at Morocco.

Seeking on Shore Leave.

Meanwhile Cerdan, when he wasn't serving aboard a French ship, established himself as Europe's top middleweight with a string of 96 fights marred only by two disqualifications and distinguished by 53 knockouts . . . Never outpointed and never knocked out in his ten-year career, the black, slick-haired Moroccan mauler with the massive shoulders defended his championship in a command performance against the Spanish champ, Ferrer, and floored his German-sponsored rival in 82 seconds — North American interests, including Promoter Arm and Vincent of Montreal, sought to coil a contract around Cerdan but Manager Roupp wouldn't talk business until Bunston, visiting in Paris last summer, as an agent for Mike Jacobs, banished Roupp's doubts.

Times Square Tizzy.

Cerdan, whose family lives in Casablanca, arrived here last week aboard the Isle de France and promptly started training for Abrams as a prelude to a probable title bout against the winner of the Tony Zale-Rocky Graziano rematch . . . Cerdan may visit Montreal or Toronto for a couple of fights in February or March, but the man French newspapers call the Moroccan Bombardier is too busy getting his bearings in New York to ponder future commitments . . . Taken on a tour of Times Square and Broadway by boxing reporters, he confided his impressions of the tall buildings through Longmans: "It goes on and on. There is no top . . ." And of the hurry-hurry spirit of the people, he remarked in an untranslated aside: "Zut alors! Tout le monde est presse."

ARGOS RIDE INTO GREY CUP FINAL, BEAT BALMIES

Krol, Copeland and Morris Three Key Men in the 22-12 Victory

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP)—For a second straight year, Toronto Argonauts today rose heads above the east's football horde — and if there are those who deny the greatness of this team compared with other standard-bearers of eastern Canada ,none will argue the worth of three men at least.

The Dominion champions came from behind Saturday to mow down Balmy Beach 22-12, and these three wrote headlines for the hoarse crowd of some 20,000 —Joe Krol, triple threat; Royal Copeland, husky speedster; Ted Morris, field general.

Krol, whom they call the king of football, rebounded from an early hurt that he refused to let put him on the sidelines to play 60 minutes in which he did almost everything right.

Copeland, the collar-ad kid from North Bay, rose from goat ot hero as he made up for dropping two paydirt passes by scoring a pair of touchdowns—one brilliantly lifting Argos back into a 12-12 tie when they appeared on the way out.

Morris, the unassuming little coach, perhaps dropped a clue to the quality of this team in finding the other fellow's weakness when he told rival Coach Bob Cosgrove earnestly after the game:

How Game Won

"You had us on the run out there, Bob. You looked like the best club for 30 minutes. But your secondaries and tertiaries were playing out of position for a proper pass defence.

"I noticed this during the first half and my boys and I talked it over at halftime You were leaving the middle wide open and I told them if they expected to win they had to keep pasing down the gut."

Just how well the Argos followed this advice was written in a second half forward passing offensively—most of them straight down the middle—that sparked the Interprovincial Rugby Union champions to 10 points while a tightened defence held the Ontario Union challengers helpless.

Besides Copeland, bruising Byron Karrys figured in Argonaut payoff plays for one touchdown. Krol, with a third quarter placement, a rouge and converts of all three majors accounted for the others.

Bucks For Touch

For the Beach, big Johnny Lake capped some bone-crushing plunging by bucking for a touchdown. The other was scored by speedy Bob Cunningham after a drive in which the Beaches, mainly on Bobby Porter's passing arm, moved downfield from their own 34.

Both these came together in a 23-point second quarter after the Argo touchdown overcame Johnny Lake's kick for a rouge that gave the Beach the only point of the opening quarter.

Until Copeland fought off several interferers to snatch Krol's forward and tie the count with four plays to go in the first half, it seemed as if the Beach were headed for the Dominion final date next Saturday at the same Varsity stadium with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

WEEKEND STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Walter (Turk) Broda, Toronto, who scored his second shutout of the season as Leafs laced Detroit Red Wings 5-0.

Howie Meeker, Toronto, who scored twice in the same game.

Syd Abel, Detroit, with two goals and an assist as Red Wings defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2.

Bryan Hextall, Pete Leswick, Knobby Warwick and Edgar Laprade, New York, who each scored once and notched an assist as Rangers drubbed Chicago Black Hawks 5-1.

Bill Durnan, Montreal, with a brilliant netminding job as Canadiens defeated Boston Bruins 4-2.

Missions in Malaya Give Aid to Ailing

New Delhi, Nov. 25 (CP) — Two Indian medical missions, working in different areas to avoid overlapping, have aided more than 180,000 people of different nationalities in Malaya. The missions worked in the interior of the Peninsula and in districts where there was a large number of Indians.

The number of persons examined by the government of India Medical Mission to the end of July, 1946, was 64,389. Of these, 28,825 were treated for various ailments. The Congress Medical Mission, during its nine-weeks' stay in the Northern States, attended 122,880 patients of whom 82,475 were Indians.

$50,000,000 Handled In War Services Of S.A. for Canadians

Toronto, Nov. 23 (CP)—The Salvation Army War Services, which in seven years of operation handled $50,000,000 in its work on behalf of the Canadian Armed Forces in the Dominion and overseas, will wind up its activities at the end of the year, Lieut.-Col. William Dray, O.B.E. announced.

The 700 representatives of the branch served in every combat zone and from coast to coast in Canada. Services provided included meals, snacks, canteen operation, moving pictures, lectures, sports activities, religious services, recreation huts and halls, entertainments, personal advice and hostels.

Col. Dray was awarded the Order of the British Empire for his work with war services.

"Elizabeth" Aids Tired Housewives

London, Nov. 25 (CP)—Brainchild of three demobbed officers of the British women's services, "Send for Elizabeth," is proving a boon to tired housewives, businesswomen and bachelors distraught with household worries.

To earn a living Annette and Mary Birtwhistle and Mrs. Mona Corbauld, found Auxiliary Household Services, and called it "Elizabeth" for short. For 3s 6d. (65 cents) an hour they do housework for anybody—but they won't "queue for caviare, comb poodles or arrange flowers.

"It's time housewives had a break," said Mrs. Courbauld. "They have queued and cooked, washed and sewn single-handed long enough. We three are ready to give them the break they need and deserve."

And that goes, too, for business women and bachelors with toe-less socks and frayed cuffs.

Brass Quits Army For Land and Cow

London, Nov. 25 (CP) — Agriculture is claiming two of Britain's top generals.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Oliver Leese, 52-year-old veteran of more than 30 years' army service and former commander of the Eighth Army when it included 1st. Canadian Corps, is going to specialize in mushrooms, lettuce and tomatoes on his five-acre Shropshire market-garden.

Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, 59, military secretary to the cabinet and Winston Churchill's military chief of staff during the war, will give most attention to his herd of pedigree Guersney cattle in Worcestershire.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg, Nov. 25 — The annual church services conducted by the W.M.S. of this district were held in the Bethel United Church at 2.30 p.m. and in the Thomasburg United Church at 7.30 p.m., November 17. Both services were well attended. At Bethel, Mrs. Heywood and Mrs. Foster sang a beautiful duet and at Thomasburg, the choir rendered a suitable mission selection.

The guest speaker for both occasions was Miss Isobel Richardson, of Belleville, who chose as her theme, "A chain is no stronger than its weakest link." Referring to the scripture, Romans 10: 9-17, she compared a chain to our life, saying that as each link of the chain had a definite purpose, so too, each object in our life ought to have a definite purpose.

"Let us place ourselves at one end of the chain and imagine that Jesus Christ is at the other end," she said. "What is our relationship to Jesus Christ?"

Jesus said: "No one cometh unto God except by me." "Whosoever believeth in Me shall not be ashamed." "Come until Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Referring to Jesus' words, Miss Richardson delivered a thought-provoking message concluding with "Is each link between you and Christ strong and well-formed or is it weak, perhaps even broken? Only you know what your chain in life is like; you and God."

Carmel

Carmel — Mr. and Mrs. Glen Patterson and Linda spent the weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Patterson.

New York Rangers Make Clean Sweep of Weekend Games By Beating Canadiens and Hawks

Toronto Leafs Win and Lose With Detroit, While Canadians Trounce Bruins

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Weekend results in the National Hockey League baffled most sports observers, the five games producing some remarkably topsy-turvey exhibitions, but the standing today looked faintly familiar.

Toronto Maple Leafs were still on top, two points ahead of Montreal Canadiens. Detroit had vaulted into third place, another point behind, and Boston held 4th — only four points from the top.

The big surprise of the weekend was the New York Rangers.

The Gothamites scored a grand slam to vault into fifth place, 3 points ahead of Chicago Black Hawks, who now occupy Rangers' customary spot in the cellar.

Toronto absorbed a 4-2 shellacking from Detroit on Saturday night, then went to Detroit Sunday to whitewash Wings 5-0. Montreal, beaten 3-2 by Rangers Saturday, took it out on Bruins at Boston last night by a 4-2 count. The Rangers went on to Chicago to wallop Hawks 5-1 for their first win in three starts against Chicago.

Allen's goal for Montreal was matched by Leswick in the first period. Reay's counter was matched by Moe in the second. And in the third frame, the only goal, the pay-off counter, was notched by Gardper for the New Yorkers.

Abel the Star

At Toronto Saturday Abel gave Wings a 1-0 first period lead. After Ezinicki evened it up, Jackson put the Wings up 2-1 and Abel's second counter after four minutes of the third didn't help the Leafian cause. Kennedy brought it to 3-2 but Toronto couldn't get the tying marker. And fewer than three minutes from the finish Ted Lindsay scored Detroit's fourth.

In the Sunday switch-over to Detroit, largest Detroit crowd ever to witness a regular league game — 14,619 — saw the teams in a bruising scoreless tie until Howie Meeker came from nowhere to take a rebound off left-winger Lynn's hard shot and smack it past Lumley in the Detroit net.

Early in the third, centre Bud Polle beat Lumley to the puck for Toronto's second. Then Kennedy set up Meeker, and he made it 3-0. Gaye Stewart and Klukay wound up the Toronto scoring.

Bill Durnan also came up with brilliant goal-tending as Canadiens beat Bruins. The Kitchener line whipped in two fast goals to tie the count after Richard and Reay had got Canadiens away in the lead. Ken Reardon and Leger got the clinchers for Montreal in the last period.

At Chicago last night, Red Hamill's goal off Kaleta and Smith was the only one that got past Rayner. That was the first goal of the game, and it was nullified by Warwick's counter before the first period finished.

In the second it was Hextall and Laprade, and in the third Demarco and Leswick, who beat Bibeault in the Hawk nets.

Max Schmeling Found "Free Of Nazi Taint"

(By The Canadian Press)

Max Schmeling, the Black Uhlan who rose to fistic prominence with a smashing knockout victory over the great Joe Louis and was later smashed into fistic oblivion in a one-ground fisasco that saw Louis cut the German down in murderous fashion, came off the ropes again in Hamburg, Germany yesterday. It was announced a German denazification Court found Schmeling "free of Nazi taint" and he has resumed his sporting activities.

When German paratroops landed on Crete in 1941, Schmeling was in the thick of the attack and after the war was over, he was imprisoned for failure to observe building restrictions imposed in the British zone of occupation.

The Toronto Huskies, only Canadian team entered in the professional Basketball Association of America lost another game last night to Washington Capitols 74-50 at Washington.

The University of Tennessee yesterday accepted an invitation to play in the 1947 Orange Bowl Football Classic at Miami.

Signing of Del Bissonette, former Boston Braves manager and one-time Brooklyn Dodger first baseman as manager of the Portland Culls of the New England Baseball League was announced Saturday.

Stan Horne of Montreal finished out of the money in the $12,000 Druid Hills Invitation Golf tournament at Atlanta Saturday, won by Lew Worsham, 29-year-old U.S. Navy veteran.

A prisoner football squad from Southern Michigan ventured outside for a match Saturday with Jackson, Mich., all stars. Results Prisoners 0, All Stars 102.

A New York Times report Saturday said Emile Allais, for many years world's foremost Downhill-Slalom expert, will go early in December to the newly developed Valcartier Ski Centre, 19 miles north of Quebect, to head a new international school of skiing.

ARMY AND NAVY REMAINING BIG GAME OF YEAR

Games Will be Played on Thanksgiving Day and Saturday

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

New York, Nov. 25 — (AP) — With the Rose Bowl filled and several major conference races settled, the United States college football teams which haven't quite had enough will pick up the loose ends of the 1946 season this week as promoters select the opponents for other post-season games.

The final week of the campaign will divide its grid fare between United States Thanksgiving Day and Saturday with the Big Four — Army, Notre Dame, Georgia and the University of California at Los Angeles — risking their beaten records on the weekend date.

Army, shooting for its third straight season without defeat, plays Navy at Philadelphia.

Georgia will be invaded by Georgia Tech. The winner probably will go to theSugar Bowl.

Tennessee will be at Vanderbilt. Tennessee already has accepted a bid to the Orange Bowl, with an opponent expected to come from the Southwest Conference.

U.C.L.A., which won the Pacific Coast Conference title and the right to be host team in the Rose Bowl by turning back Southern California, 13-6, winds up its regular season against invading Nebraska.

Southern Cal will invade Notre Dame Saturday.

It was all over but the shouting in the Big Nine, where Illinois won the title and qualified to represent the east in the Rose Bowl by whipping Northwestern 20-0.

Rice, still trying to share the Southwest Conference title with Arkansas after trouncing Texas Christian, 13-0, entertains Baylor Saturday.

Thursday's top game in the east will send Cornell to Pennsylvania with the Ivy League title depending on the outcome. Cornell can win the championship by upsetting the Quakers. Otherwise it will go to Yale, which grabbed the Big Three title last week with a 27-14 triumph over Harvard.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Although it's still a month away from Christmas, Arena Manager Walter Gerow is planning this week to play Santa Claus to his wrestling patrons.

Today Gerow not only signed up Vic Christie and Karl Davis to a no time limit rematch but he came up with an additional main bout and a team match at that. After the mix-up here on Friday when brother Mike Sharpe jumped into the ring to lambast Olaf Olson who was hammering the daylights out of brother Ben Sharpe, not only Olson but the two big Sharpe boys were clamoring for action.

Although it will cost him plenty extra, Matchmaker Gerow decided that the only way to settle the contention was to provide Olson with a teammate and throw the whole four of them into a second main bout. And that's the way it's going to be on Friday. In one main struggle Christie and Davis will "heave at each other" while in the other feature Ben and Mike Sharpe will try to break up the unholy combination of Olaf Olsen and his partner. And that individual, Belleville fans may be thrilled to hear is none other than Strangler Bob Wagner, newly-returned from the Pacific Coast.

The combination of the giant Swede and Bulldog Bob is a tough one but the Sharpe Brothers recently beat the two Russians Kwarianni and Rasputin in Toronto in a team match. The brothers have worked out some sensational combination plays which they threw at the Russians and wholly discomfited them.

A third match will have Pat Flanagan against Al Krusher Forman. We told you Walt Gerow is trying to emulate Santa Claus.

In what was said to be one of the greatest passing games in the history of Canadian football, the Toronto Argonauts came from behind twice on Saturday to down their intra-city rivals the Balmy Beaches 22-12 to cop the Eastern Canada title. Argos now tangle with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers next Saturday for the Dominion championship.

The Beaches, champions of the Rugby Football Union, held the lead twice; the score was all even Stephen on two occasions, Argos held the lead twice, the most important time being when the final whistle blew. A total of 53 aerial heaves were tossed during the thriller diller playoff before 20,000 fans with 21 completed and five intercepted.

Again it was the mighty Joe "King Krol" who paced the big Argo machine to the victory. Again the "King" played sixty minutes of gruelling football and again his bullet-passing arm flung all 26 Argo passes, twenty-six of which were completed. Almost as good for Beaches was baseball-playing Bobby Porter who chucked all 27 of his team's forward flings over the sixty-minute route.

But the story book play of the afternoon was staged by Krol's famed running mate, Royal Copeland, with one minute to go for half time and with Argos trailing 12-6.

Copeland had made two heart-breaking boners earlier in the game when he muffed two perfect Krol passes inside the Beaches' goal area but he made it all up with the last-minute effort when Argos had fought their way up to the Beach 25. Krol faded back a full 10 yards and threw. The pigskin soared the 35 yards to the goal line and perhaps an inch or two more. From a pack of five potential Beach receivers, Copeland leapt fully five feet into the air and caught the ball tumbling into a wild somersault inside the goal line for a touchdown.

Beyond a major upset, Argos are now almost sure bets to take Winnipeg Blue Bombers next Saturday here. The answer lies in Krol whom Balmy Beach went out to stop from the very first play. Beaches kicked off and three tacklers gave Krol the works on his own 37. He limped around for a minute while time was called but stayed in the game. Beaches failed to do what Alouettes, Rough Riders and Tigers failed to do. Krol heaved, plunged, tackled and end-ran throughout the 60 torrid minutes. The big guy is terrific and as he goes so goes Argos.

The financial split for Saturday's game went as follows: All expenses including stadium rental, advertising and bands come out of the till first; the Canadian Rugby Union then collects $500 plus five per cent for its own coffers; another two per cent comes out for minor football; the remainder was divided equally between Argos and Beaches. A conservative guess would place Saturday's gross "take" at about $30,000.

• • •

Toronto's rampaging young Leafs after absorbing a 4-2 shellacking Saturday night by the Detroit Red Wings turned on the foes in the Sunday joust and plastered a 5-0 shutout on the men of Adams. Meanwhile the Canadiens nudged Boston 4-2 Saturday eventide but bowed to the Indian sign of the New York Rangers down in Montreal on Sunday by a 3-2 count.

Cobourg's Galloping Ghosts one of the best intermediate grid squads to come out of the lakeshore town won the Intermediate ORFU title on Saturday by dunking Niagara Falls 9-6. The Ghosts held a commanding lead of 22 points going into the second tilt having decisively defeated the Falls crew in their first encounter. The Ghosts proved a well-coached well-drilled squad with plenty of power in the line and the backfield and plenty of football between their collective ears.

Cleveland Browns Clinch Western Division Title

New York, Nov. 25. (AP)—Cleveland Browns clinched the Western Division title in the All-American Football Division winners, for the loop championship in Cleveland, Sunday, Dec. 22nd.

The Browns thrashed the Buffalo Bisons 42-17 ,at Cleveland while the Yanks, who sewed up their title last week, bowed 38-28 to Chicago Rockets. San Francisco's 49ers trounced Brooklyn Dodgers 30-14 in the only loop contest.

Cleveland, which has run up 323 points in winning 10 games and losing two, overcame a 10-7 Buffalo first period advantage and won going away.

Chicago's Bears captured the Western Division championship in the National Football League and New York Giants moved one notch closer to the Eastern title.

The Bears walloped Detroit Lions, 42-6 at Chicago to clinch the Western crown for the eighth time and qualify to meet the Eastern winner for the League championship Dec. 15.

CChicago Cardinals helped the Bears by stopping Green Bay Packers 24-6 and Boston Yanks crushed the defending champions, Los Angeles Rams, 40-21, eliminating what chances either of them had to overtake the Bears.

In the Eastern Division the Giants shaded Pittsburgh Steelers 7-0 while Washington Redskins downed Philadelphia 27-10.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

The National Hockey League scoring race tightened during the five weekend games and only Billy (The Kid) Taylor of Detroit Red Wings is in sole possession of a position. He notched an assist to boost his total to seven goals and 15 assists for 22 points. Taylor is followed by clubmate Roy Conacher who was held scoreless and moved over to give room to Montreal Canadiens' Maurice Richard who plunked in a goal. Each have 17 points. Ted Kennedy, Toronto and Syd Abel, Detroit, are deadlocked for third place with 16 points apiece. Five players are scrambling for fourth berth with 13 points each.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Nov. 25 —(CP)— Peeping above the battlements of Eastern Canada, it strikes this observer that it's very fortunate there isn't a Dominion-Provincial conference on sports coming up. It would be doomed to failure, and possibly bloodshed.

This past week the very foothills of the Laurentians have been shaken to their foundations by blasts against Montreal coming from Halifax that rival the great Halifax explosion, or even the hall of fame campaign.

It's ancient history now of course, and ranks in legend and lore along with the tale of the famous cow which kicked a lantern in Chicago many years ago. But in brief, it all arose when a Dalhousie University tennis squad returned from a tournament in Montreal with the word that they had been referred to as "foreigners" and treated very cavalierly in Montreal.

This, of course, if true was enough to raise the hackles on every good Downeaster, as we can testify through proud heritage and sojourn in those pearls of the Dominion, the Maritimes. After all, as any resident of those provinces knows, it's the residents of the rest of Canada who are the "foreigners."

However, it seems that Col. D. S. Forbes, McGill's athletic director, was grossly maligned as he denies saying that at all. As he explained, what he meant was that Dalhousie was not a member of the Canadian Intercollegiate Union which staged the East-West tournaments McGill won, and therefore hadn't been invited to them.

Anyway, it all seems to be dying down now, we hope, without too much damage except to the feelings of the bewildered McGill athletic director, who always had a warm spot in his heart for the Maritimes.

It led Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara to hope slyly that the matter wouldn't lead to Dal seceding from confederation, and probably caused great relief in Toronto, which usually is on the receiving end of any such barrages from the East.

The only sad part of it all is that the two cities aren't engaged in direct athletic competition so the promoters could capitalize on some of that publicity. Who knows, it might even rival in vehemence the luridly partisan feuding that keeps the good citizens of Montreal and Toronto at one another's throats.

"HUMAN JACKDAW"

London (CP) — A boarding-house keeper, called by the prosecutor "a sort of human jackdaw," was sentenced to six months' imprisonment under the rationing regulations on evidence she had an "Aladdin's Cave" of clothing, food and other rationed goods. She gave notice of appeal.

LAMINATED
HOCKEY STICKS (PATENTED)

HOCKEY GAMES are seldom won by large margins — usually it's nip and tuck with photo finishes.

That is why the boys who score on most teams pack that extra "umph" with a C.C.M. Laminated Hockey Stick — it's "The Scorer's Stick". And C.C.M. were the originators of high grade laminated hockey sticks over 12 years ago and are still the best.

Here are some of the features which make the C.C.M. Laminated such a favorite:

THE BLADE — Gets most of the rough play of hockey, is made from carefully selected and seasoned straight-grain, second growth rock elm which is noted for its tenacious fibrous structure and its ability to withstand shock and abuse.

THE HANDLE — Made of tough, straight-grain ash or of laminated hardwoods, the handle of the C.C.M. Laminated Hockey Stick is made to stand up to the slugging, checking and shooting a stick gets in any hockey game.

LAMINATED HEEL — This is where the C.C.M. gets its great strength and liveliness. The Heel is a lamination of five layers of wood bonded permanently together with moistureproof glue. Two of these laminations are the dovetail of the blade, two are the dovetail of the handle and the four are further reinforced by C.C.M.'s patented construction with hickory wedge. At this point of lamination the ice-lays of the sticks are set and cannot change.

ICE-LAY. — Hockey players vary in size, height and in their method of stick handling and so — C.C.M. Laminated Hockey Sticks are made in a choice of ice-lays.

If you are going to play hockey this winter equip yourself with C.C.M. Laminated Hockey Sticks in the ice-lay that suits you best.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

It takes a blending of good rules to make a correct system of bidding. So, first learn the few basic rules you need. Then combine them to bring the best results.

Most important is the all-purpose rule of T-A-N. This tells you the order of preference in which bids should be selected. Takeout is the first choice. Assist is second. No-trump is last.

To takeout, you must have a suit that is biddable. To assist, you need adequate support for partner's suit. With neither of these when forced to bid, all you have left is no-trump.

Another important rule is this: Each raise in number of the last partnership bid shows another trick. Thus, if you have no unshown trick or tricks, your next bid should not go to a higher level.

Comes by mail this hand:

♠ A J 3
♥ 9 7 6 3
♦ K 6
♣ A Q 8 7

The letter says: "I opened this hand with one club. My partner gave me a response of one spade. Having spade support, my second bid was an assist to two spades. Was that right?"

My answer is no. With no more takeouts, the next choice in bids is an assist with adequate support. But in this case, the second bid should have been one no-trump. I will give you the reasons.

This hand has exactly five tricks. An opening bid of one shows five tricks. With no more tricks, this hand should not make a bid that will increase the last partnership number.

A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. So, this hand must bid again. With not enough tricks that will stand a raise, what bid will not increase the number? Only one no-trump.

T-A-N tells you that an assist comes before a no-trump bid. Not to raise unless you have an additional trick may require you to waive an assist. That waves you into a no-trump bid.

HAPLESS ROCKETS DROP 16TH GAME OF THE SEASON

Team Has Had 133 Goals Scored Against Them or Average of Seven a Game

The hapless Philadelphia Rockets of the American Hockey League are continuing on their way towards establishing a circuit record for the most goals allowed in a single season.

The last place Eastern Division Rockets have been scored on 133 times for an average of seven goals a game. Rockets dropped their 16th game of the year last night 7-1 to Buffalo Bisons. Fred Hunt led the Bison assault by netting three goals.

Murray Armstrong collected a pair of goals for Bisons and Hub Macey and Joe Cooper each got one. Abby Collings bounced in Philadelphia's lone goal.

At New Haven, Ramblers moved to within three points of the Eastern Division pace-setting Hershey Bears by nosing out Springfield Indians 4-3. Norm Burns scored twice and assisted in another goal to pace the Rambler offensive. Mel Read and Jack Church were the other New Haven scorers. Bill Gooden, Harry Frost and Bill Summerhill tallied for Indians.

In the only other game, Providence Reds downed St. Louis Flyers 4-1 in a game that was highlighted by 15 penalties including two majors and a misconduct.

Johnny Chad, Bus Brayshaw, Roger Bedard and Wilson notched goals while Morey Rimstad's third period tally saved Flyers from a shutout.

Coach Ralph (Bouncer) Taylor of Flyers protested the game, claiming that the penalty time keeper admitted that one of his players had served longer than his allotted time. The time keeper denied he made the statement.

Cleveland Barons and Pittsburgh Hornets, deadlocked for the Western Division leadership, were idle along with Indianapolis Capitals and Hershey Bears.

Hollywood Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hollywood is currently in hot water with the United States Army in Germany and the State Department over the class of pictures which are being shown in occupied territories. An army survey accuses Hollywood of sending in Germany films "poor in artistic quality" which impede the coming of democracy to the country.

Gangster and violence films have made the governments of war-ravaged countries fear they may help set off the powder keg they know they are sitting on.

Celia Johnson. British movie star of Noel Coward's "Brief Encounter," which was honored at the recent international film festival at Cannes, France, is visiting Paris.

Gene Autry's fourth picture under his postwar contract with Republic will be "Twilight on the Rio Grande," following his current film, "Robin Hood of Texas."

Larry Parks, who is being seen as Al Jolson in "The Jolson Story," has donned the kilt for some fast-stepping fighting in "The Swordsman." The plot of this technicolor film involves a feud between two clans in the 18th century. Ellen Drew has the top feminine role.

The latest organization to go into the movie business is the United Nations Newsreels, which up a provisional film and visual information committee, plans to make and release monthly 16mm. Uited Nations Newsreels, wihch officials describe as "not exactly a newsreel but rather on the 'March of Time' idea."

Chairman Jean Benoit-Levy also says the new organization will make "all the films we need for our archives." The committee precedes a proposed United Nations film board for which plans are being drafted.

New York has just survived a week in which two super-colossal film premieres vied with each other in crows n,oise, stars, celebrities, screaming bobby-soxers and mounted policemen.

Top honors for openings went to Darryl F. Zanuck's production "The Razor's Edge," but Samuel Goldwyn's "The Best Year's of Our Lives" is a far better picture.

"Lives" enjoys a fine plot about the re-adjustment to civilian life of three ex-servicemen, while "Edge" has a fine assortment of stars: Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney, John Payne, Anne Baxter, Clifton Webb and Herbert Marshall, plus a degree of technical perfection which in itself is worth looking at, but it suffers from a plot which might make sense to somebody, but who?

This is not to disparage unduly "The Razor's Edge", which Variety, the movie trade paper, says realistically "will cut plenty of fancy box-office takings in all markets." The film is excellent Hollywood and it is good entertainment, but it leaves the audience nothing t6 take out of the theatre with them.

"The Best Years of Our Lives," say the New York Tices' Bosley Crowther, "is cut from the heartwood of contemporary American life and "gives off a warm glow of affection for everyday, down-to-earth folks." He adds, "Everyone gives a 'best' performance in this best film this year from Hollywood."

Others in New York's critical fraternity echo this high praise and the picture certainly deserves it.

PROVINCIAL LEAGUE

Lachine, Que., Nov. 25. (CP) Lachine Rapides trimmed Cornwall Cougars 6-3 in a Provincial Hockey League contest here Sunday.

Smiley Meronek bagged two goals for the Rapides while teammates Andy Perron, Les Ramsay, Swede Paulson and Paul Gardner sniped the other tallies. The Cougar marksmen were Cliff Maundrell, Legris and Creighton.

In the first period the Rapides took an early lead when Andy Perron broke away with Bob Morin and Bernie Vinet and after a smart passing play Perron fooled Wright in the Cornwall nets with a hard shot.

The second period was an All-Lachine affair with the Rapides adding three more scores while the battling Cougars pumped in two goals.

Meronek notched the first of his pair of goals after little more than a minute of play and Les Ramsay blinked the light again for the Rapides minute later when he converted Meronek and McCurry's passes into a score.

Maundrell then spoke up for Cornwall and Lachine came back with another goal by Paulsen this time. Legris fired another Cornwall goal at 11.27 and Paul Gardner rounded out the scoring splurge with another Lachine goal at 14.45.

In the last stanza the Cougars were able to halt the Lachine scoring machine to some extent, Meronek banged home his second goal of the game after less than three minutes of play and Creighton tried to keep the Cougars in the running by notching a tally after Brunning and Marshall had set up the play.

Verdun Trounced

Victoriaville, Que., Nov. 25—(CP) — Victoriaville Tigers trounced Verdun Eagles 8-3 in a Provincial Hockey League fixture here Saturday.

Kenny Hayden and Mallette paced the Tigers with two goals each while other Tiger scorers and Burnett. Rene Vallieres, Conrad Bourcier and Marcel Lamontagne tallied for the Eagles.

Beat League Leaders

Sherbrooke, Que., Nov. 25. — (CP)—The scrappy Victoriaville Tigers defeated the league-leading Sherbrooke Randies 4-2 in a Provincial Hockey League fixture here yesterday.

Kenny Hayden paced the Tigers to victory with a pair of goals while Vic Boyer and Thibault notched the other markers. Mannie McIntyre and Bastien sniped the Sherbrooke scores.

Go To Top

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Nov. 25 (CP) — Sherbrooke Randies squeezed out a 3-1 win over Saint Hyacinthe in the battle for the league leadership here Saturday. The win for the Sherbrooke team gave them possession of first place ahead of the pressing St. Hyachinthe squad.

Henry Hayes was the life saver for the Randies with two goals while the other goal was bagged by Tony Demers. Marcel Bouchard sniped the Saints' goal.

Saints Held To Tie

Verdun, Que, Nov. 25 (CP)—Verdun Eagles held Saint Hyacinthe to a 7-7 tie in an action-filled Provincial Hockey League game here yesterday. A win for the Saints would have pushed them into a first-place deadlock with Sherbrooke Randies who now hold a point lead over the Saints.

Paul Hebert was the big gun of the game with three goals while Polly Drouin bagged a pair for the Saints and Bernie Lauzon and Marcel Despelleau netted one apiece.

Rene Vallieres and Edgar Mott sank a pair of tallies each for Eagles and Phil Laberge, Marcel Lamontagne and Conrad Bourcier registered singles.

PLANS TO BOOST CROP OF SUGAR BEETS

Chatham, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Plans are being made to boost Southwestern Ontario's sugar beet output to the 1940 level of 400,000 tons, A. W. McIntyre of the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company told officials of the Manitoba Beet Growers' Association during their recent tour of the district. He said the area would soon regain its position as one of the leading beet producing districts in Canada, and that his company was aiming at an acreage at least equal to that of 1940, a record year.

Veterans' Lumber Pile Robbed

Port Hope, Nov. 25—(CP)—The shortage of building materials in this district is so acute that someone has been robbing the veterans' housing project lumber pile. Two 12-foot-long pieces of hardwood were stolen from the construction site and recently the storehouse was robbed of some nails.

20 ARRESTED AS FOUND - INS

Mimico, Nov. 25 — (CP)—Police claimed to have found six dozen pints of beer when they raided the home of Mrs. L. Smith in this town five miles west of Toronto early Sunday. Twenty citizens were arrested as found-ins and Mrs. Smith was charged with keeping beer for sale.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 5.

"No. My mother died when I was three and my father before I was five. Betty used to help my mother; she was just a young girl from the neighborhood. She and my father were married about a year before he died. She always," Jennifer had told him, her eyes glowing up at him like little lamps in the dark street, "she always wanted terribly to live in San Francisco; she said the name of it sort of fascinated her, long before she knew anything about it, really. So after my father died we came down here, and about ten years ago she met Clint Slade and married him."

"But you were born—where?"

"In a little town named Atterbury, not so far from here — up in the hills back of Berkeley somewhere. But the first place I remember is a mining town, Nevada City. My father was a sort of inventor or engineer or something, and we were living there when he died."

"Here we are!" Sid had said, entering a rather impressive doorway. With their bakery bundles they had crossed the vestibule, mounted in a small self-operated elevator to the fifth floor.

And here they had indeed found Cass's apartment, but no Cass. No other girl. However, beautiful dinner supplies had been in evidence in the microscopic kitchen, and Jennifer had been proud to display her culinary skill. Of course she knew how to treat frying chickens and green peas. Betty often had fryers for Sunday dinners, and Jennifer always made the cream gravy. Sid, inexperienced and laughing, had helped as far as he could, had set the table. Jennifer writhed in spirit now, remembering that he had set it for two only; she had surprisedly demanded an explanation of Cass's absence.

"They'll be along. They're probably having cocktails somewhere" Sid had said.

"Then suppose I only fry one chicken and cook half the peas?" She had been quite unsuspicious, quite unalarmed then.

"Yep. We can cook the rest when they come."

The fun of it, the intimacy and laughter, his big hand over hers as she grasped the heavy frying pan, his quick stolen kisses on her neck and temples!

Oh, it was dreadful to remember now, lying in her bed in her narrow little dark room, alone and frightened and heartsick! Jennifer twisted under the lean old blankets, stiff after many years of hard use. It was dreadful to remember happiness ....

There had been a few weeks of bliss after that night. A few weeks—or had it been only a few days?—when she had felt protected, beloved, important in the tremendous possession of his devotion. She had moved abstractedly, vaguely, through the poor pattern of her days, her heart singing a mysterious song of its own, her every sense thrilling to new and overwhelming emotions. Gladly, confidently, she had given him all she had to give, showered him with little notes, telephone messages, light little flying pressures of her hand when they lunched together, glowing devotion in her eyes whenever they could rest on him.

She had never feared tiring him, boring him, sickening him with her constancy. Were they not lovers, had they not promised their whole long lives to each other, was not every separate meeting a separate revelation in the exquisite completeness of their mutual bondage? Jennifer had lived in this dream; she wondered now how long she had lived in it. When had the first chill finger of uneasiness touched her?

He had not telephoned for three days. But then a note had come, a note that said only, "Terribly busy. Thinking about you. We'll have dinner as soon as I'm free," but still....something. After that he had gone to Palm Springs for a long week end, tennis and bathing, She visualized Palm Springs as rather like the most exotic movie she had ever seen: mosques and minarets and tiled baths, canals with lights shining over them and in them—Palm Springs!

It was after he came back that a second brief note had come, signed as always, "Yours, S." In the note he had asked her briefly not to telephone the office any more: his uncle did not like it. "Call you soon," the note had said.

Jennifer, reading the note, had felt a deadly chill strike to her very vitals; she had experienced a physical shock. But she had mastered this feeling at once; it would be ridiculous, said her trembling little eighteen-year-heart, to begin to imagine slights, to grow exacting. So she had concocted a charming, careless little note. She wouldn't telephone the office again, of course, she wrote, but if he didn't keep his word about seeing her soon she would send a man out with a bell and a full description of him.

This had fallen flat. It had elicited no response of any sort, and Jennifer's cheeks had begun to burn whenever she thought of it. Had it been fresh or silly or in bad taste? What could she do now?

Up to this time she had accepted life exactly as it had come to her, with native courage and content. It had never occurred to Jennifer that she was handicapped, that her home was less luxurious and her advantages considerably fewer than those of most girls as matter of fact most of the girls that she knew lived by her sort of pattern—taking part-time jobs in candy stores or department stores during their last year of "high," accepting regular positions as they were offered. Somebody always knew of somebody who wanted an office girl or who knew of a chance somewhere; the years of the great depression were not ended, but for pretty eighteen-year-olds there was no dearth of jobs. Jennifer had no sooner said to Betty's friend Seely that she would like to be earning some money than Seely had given her a card to someone at Tyrell, Jenks and Simons. It had been as simple as that, Jennifer went along like a sheep in a flock.

But now, with Sid's arrival in the picture, things began to change. She began to feel keenly the lack of those things that her awakening consciousess told her might help her to hold Sid's love.

Clothes, the knowledge of how to wear them, a home to which she might ask him, a mother and father, position, money, self-confidence—these were taken for granted by the girls he knew; these were what she so pitiably did not have. Jennifer grew frightened; the world was much bigger and more variegated than through all the stupid unquestioning years of childhood and girlhood she had imagined it to be.

Now when she passed a shopwindow filled with exquisite perfumes or displaying a maginificent fur coat or evening dress, these articles took on sudden life. Someone bought them; someone wore garments like this; certain women must be perfumed and fresh from the use of these fascinating oils and powders and soaps. Some lucky women must walk into bedrooms as dazzlingly, incredibly beautiful as that arranged in Sloane's window, where frail pink curtains crossed the head of a great carved wooden bed, a fat comforter of the same baby pink was folded across its foot, a chaise longue was ruffled in powder-blue taffeta, more taffeta flounces covered the mirrored dressing table, and every jar and lamp and crystal vase and silver frame spoke of luxury and beauty and wealth.

But how did they win these things? What had they done that they should have them? Jennifer had looked into shopwindows all her life long, had admired the exotic beauty that a rich port city had gathered to itself. But until Sid Borrows had awakened her to the realization that certain fortunate persons actually had and used these mircaulous treasures she had not given them a personal thought.

On one breath-taking expedition Sid had taken her to a big shop while he picked out a wedding present for his mother to send, and another to go from himself, to some girl in Hillsborough. Jennifer had stood amazed while the saleswoman hunted up a list. These were the things Miss Livingston had selected; this was her silver pattern; this was her china.

"Did she say the dinner plates were twelve dollars each?" Jennifer had breathed as they came away.

"Yep, but Mother said 'around two hundred," so that wasn't too much."

"You sent six. But you sent others too."

"Six each of three sizes—didn't you see them checked on the list? She already has eighteen of those sizes, so that makes an even two dozen."

"And your lamp—that was forty-four."

"Yes, but I charged it to Dad It was more than I meant to spend, but he may pay all the bills next month and no notice." Sid had laughed. "The worst of it is," he had complained, "Anne"ll get fifty lamps, twenty mirrors, sixty trays, more plates and spoons than she could use in fifty years, and she won't care who sent 'em!"

"I shouldn't think," Jennifer had offered after thought, "that it would be so much fun going in and saying what you want and what your friends are supposed to send you. I should rather be surprised myself."

"That's because you're a baby!" He had often laughed at her innocence and inexperience—the awe she felt when she rode in his car; her round, amazed eyes when he casually tipped a headwaiter.

Well, that had been in the first sunrise of their friendship. She was not a baby now, Jennifer thought, lying somber-eyed and wakeful in her little room. She would never laugh at wealth and luxury again—she would hate them, hate them all her life long!

Once he had left her to telephone someone. Her face burned now at the memory of her artless question when he came back: "Who'd you want to talk to?" and his easy laugh and quiet: "That, my dear, is something you must never ask anyone!"

There had been another bad moment, too, when he and she had stood in the doorway of a big hotel restaurant waiting for the headwaiter to find them a table, and Sid had turned suddenly. "Come on, we'll go out to the Cliff! Loads of time."

"But what made you change your mind so suddenly?" she had demanded, seeing his face darken and aware that he was hurrying her away with an effect of escape.

"Oh, just somebody there I didn't want to see!" he had said. And Jennifer's awakening keenness had supplied: "And someone you didn't want to see you — with me!"

They had gone to the Cliff, and Sid had been particularly charming, so that it really had not mattered. The only unpleasantness had been that Jennifer had been thirty-two minutes late getting back to the office and had received a first sharp reprimand from Miss Griggs. Not that that had mattered either!

The moonlight came in from the street and lay on her floor in four slanted oblongs; the oblongs moved and were on the wall and were gone. And still she lay awake, her heart and her cheeks burning with bewilderment and helplessness and shame, and could not sleep.

Jennifer set her alarm for quarter to seven, jumped out of bed in the winter dark, and went shuddering in her nightgown to the kitchen to put on the kettle, light the oven, take in the milk. Sometimes Betty came yawning out to join her, sometimes Betty was merely a hump in the bed with a tousled head at the top of the hump.

Faddy would appear, buttons gone from her too small tennis flannel pajamas, some string or toy in her hand. Often she was tearful for no particular reason or because she could not find her shirt or her shoestrings were knotted. Jennifer did what she could for both the little girls—tying ribbons, brushing hair, stirring oatmeal, racing back and forth between her room and the kitchen as she completed her own dressing.

Completed it all but her dress. She and Betty breakfasted in limp kimonos, still busying themselves with the children, jerking Elna about to bring her pleated skirt to the right position, pulling down Faddy's sweater. To keep the children properly dressed was a continual struggle: coats and dresses needed weekly cleaning and were rarely cleaned oftener than once a month; long slits appeared in pajamas; tapes were pulled from gathered skirts; Betty's pile of mending rose in an untidy mountain on the closet floor.

On weekdays little could be done, but on Sundays Jennifer and Betty usually attacked some especially urgent task; straightened out the forlorn and ill-assorted piles of torn sheets and hemless towels in the sideboard drawers, washed the kitchen floor or dragged everything out of the trunk that all but blocked the hallway where the little girls' clothing was kept.

For days after her talk with Sid, Jennifer went through this routine like a person in a dark dream. Anything, any minute, could bring back happiness again—a telephone call, a ring at the doorbell far below at the top of the flight of stairs that led up from the gray, grimy street, a telegram, a letter. Her heart fed itself on desperate hope; at worst Sid had not been angry at her. Sid had not terminated their friendship finally. No; he had said he would telephone, he would see her. She must live on that.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Dr Chase's Nerve Food

What a Joy
is Motherhood
When the health is good.

The story of happy motherhood is beautifully told in the illustration.

Perhaps this young mother was fortunate in having the advice of other mothers to tell her of the advantages of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food both before and after child-birth, in order to help ensure the welfare of both mother and child.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can be of real help to enable the mother to quickly regain her vigor and strength as well as to aid her during the period of lactation.

It is only natural that this experience should be a considerable strain on her vitality as well as on her nervous system, but by using this medicine to supply Vitamin B_1 and the food minerals so essential to her health as well as that of her child, she should find joy in her motherhood. This has been the experience of many happy mothers.

Ask your Druggist for the new economy size bottle of Dr. Chase's nerve Food.

MARMORA

Reeve J.A. Bell Starting Eleventh Term in Office

Marmora (Special) — Reeve John A. Bell and members of Marmora and Lake Township council were given acclamation at the nomination meeting held in Marmora town hall on Friday afternoon. Reeve Bell was thus given the eleventh consecutive term in this office.

The councillors re-elected are, Irwin McCoy ,Charles Kelly, Geo. Davidson and John Wilkes. Three school trustees were also nominated at this meeting namely Wilbert Jones, Percy Carman and John McCann. The latter was nominated to succeed Burness Johnson who has moved from the township. There was a good attendance of electors at the meeting which was presided over by Thomas J. Bateman, township clerk.

Little Prospect

There appears to be little prospect of an election in Marmora Village. At the nomination meeting held in the town hall on Friday evening Ralph E. Neal received acclamation for a second term of office as reeve and although eight were nominated for the four seats on the council, three definitely stated they would not qualify while four of the remaining five are expected to qualify. The three retiring Public School Trustees were again nominated with the names of no additional aspirants for the office of trustee being brought forward and George Forestell as Hydro Commissioner received acclamation.

Nominations

Nominations were as follows:

For Reeve, R. E. Neal (acclamation).

For Council: Manley Lavender, Warden Chrysler, Hertel Rennie, and Leslie Rundle (of this year's council), Don Marett , Ritchie Wells, Delbert Fleming and Thos. Dickson.

Three School Trustees Acclamation—J. W. Hickey, D. B. Sanderson and W. Bishop.

Hydro Commissioner — Acclamation—George Forestell.

Reeve Neal as opening speaker at the meeting following the nomination, thanked residents in general and the council also for co-operation in his first term of office. He touched briefly on what he had learned at County Council. He referred to efforts which had been made to have Madoc and Main Streets taken over by the County and this having been passed at the June session of the County Council.

To Make Survey

As a member of the Hastings Consultant Committee to deal with the matter of a larger High School area for the county, he was able to shed light on the problems facing that committee. He concluded his remarks by referring to the need for a waterworks for the village and intimated that a survey would be made as to the costs of such a scheme to be presented to the ratepayers for their consideration and action. H. Rennie, chairman of the Finance Committee, having given a statement of estimated receipts and expenditures for the year, said he had decided not to stand for another year. He appreciated the honor of having served the Council for two years, but he would not have the time to devote to such duties in the ensuing year.

Manley Lavender, who followed gave a report on the village's fire protection and also signified he would not qualify for another term of office. Warden Chrysler as chairman of the Streets Committee, gave a statement of the costs of street maintenance in the past year and said he would stay on the Council for another year if desired.

Leslie Rundle, chairman of the Property Committee and of By Law and Procedures having given his report, signified his willingness to serve another year.

Presented Report

Don Marett, nominated for Council explained that as a member of the Public School Board with another year to serve thereon, he could not qualify. As chairman of the Finance Committee of that Board, he presented a financial statement. Richie Wells said he had been asked to stand and as two former councillors were withdrawing, he thought he would decide to qualify. Thomas Dickson, while not committing himself conveyed the impressions that he would qualify by the appointed time.

Delbert Fleming also nominated for Councillor, was not present.

The final speaker was D. B. Sanderson, re-elected School trustee.

E. C. Prentice, village clerk, who presided, adjourned the meeting at 9 p.m., after it had lasted an hour. There was a fair attendance of ratepayers and the meeting was one of the quietest ever held in the village.

Nominations In the District

Napanee: Mayor: Anthony E. Holmes, George S. Chalk. Reeve: George. D. Robinson (accl.). Deputy reeve: Harry W. Vine (accl.). Council (six to be elected): Harold W. Webster, Russell F. Hunter, Clarence Milligan, Fred King, F. W. Ramsay, Arnold Rogers, Arthur S. Kimmerly. Public Utilities Commissioner: William T. Mackenzie (accl.). School Trustees (one to be elected in each ward): West Ward—Werke Poole (accl.); Centre Ward—H. L. Van Luven (accl.); East Ward—Charles N. Tonks (accl.).

Reeve West, Madoc, Given Acclamation

Madoc (Special)—Reeve George West of Madoc village was returned by acclamation for another term at nomination meeting held at the town hall here on Friday. Reeve West was the only man nominated for the reeveship.

The office of hydro commissioner was also filled by acclamation with Thos. H. Rupert being the only one named for this position.

Nine men were nominated for council with four to be elected. Nominated were John A. Kincaid, Arthur Bird, W. L. Smith, Philip Rivers, Campbell Wallbridge, J. W. Hulin, Benjamin Miller, Robert Bristol, Judson McGowan.

Nominated for school trustee were Kenneth Nical, Percy Holland, Robt. O'Riordan and Fred Fleming.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York, Nov. 25. (AP)—Many rallying stocks of Saturday failed to follow through in today's market and irregularly lower tendencies prevailed from the opening on.

While scattered favorites managed to make some progress, declines of fractions to two points or so were widely distributed near the fourth hour. Neither buying nor selling exhibited by real urgency, however, and the ticker tape frequently was at a standstill.

Canadian issues were easy at mid-day. Both Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines softened 1-8 and Hiram Walker and Distiller Seagram each slipped 1-4.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, CHRISTMAS, 1946, is the 20th. Canada-wide sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals, and

WHEREAS, TUBERCULOSIS is one of the most persistent enemies of our century, killing one person every 90 minutes and causing the death of more men and women between the ages of 15 and 45 than any other disease, and

WHEREAS, IN CANADA during 1945 more than 5,000 of our finest citizens were killed by this disease and,

WHEREAS, TUBERCULOSIS is an unnecessary disease in that, with the help of all citizens, it can be cured, prevented and even wiped out, and

WHEREAS, THE HASTINGS COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION, one of the affiliates of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, is waging an intelligent and effective battle against this disease in our community,

THEREFORE, I, THE MAYOR of Belleville, do hereby earnestly urge the people of Belleville, and the County of Hastings and district, to observe the 20th. nation-wide sale of seals by wholeheartedly supporting the 1946 Seal Campaign, to the end that the fight against this disease may go on unabated and that our own community, which has not escaped the ravages of this disease, may win an early victory over tuberculosis and continued freedom from it in the years to come.

Frank S. Follwell
MAYOR, City of Belleville.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Base metal stocks advanced nearly a point in the early session on Toronto Stock Exchange today and the industrials firmed .66 while the other groups showed little net change. Trading was dull and only 473,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

The market's sluggish tempo is said to be due to uneasiness over labor disputes in the United States. Buying was sufficient, however, to tighten prices for the food, paper, liquor and utility groups. Steel and miscellaneous issues were down.

Among the stronger golds were Donalda, Lingman Lake, Rush Lake, Akaitcho, Amalgamated Larder, Heva and Harricana. MacDonald weakened 10 cents. Louvicourt 20 and Toburn 8.

Sherritt, Steep Rock, Nickel, Noranda and Denison were higher and Falconbridge and Golden Manitou lost ground. Western oils were firm and quiet.

YOUTH LANDS IN COURT

Hamilton, Nov. 25 (CP) — Stealing someone else's automobile so that he could drive his girl to church in style yesterday landed a 16-year-old Hamilton boy in court today. By the time the service was over, police had located the car. The youth was remanded until Friday for sentence.

ASSEMBLY

Roger White, 12C

Assembly this morning developed into a scream session when our guest of honor appeared. It was that immortal hunk of manhood, that sighing, bobby-soxsending soul, it was Frank Sinatra. Perhaps even the more dignified members of the teaching staff allowed themselves to be "sent" as Frankie groaned and gasped through "The House I Live In." Sinatra's effect, however, was not lasting, because the students dismissed at noon hour with their usual alacrity. Mr. Sinatra appeared, of course, through the courtesy of the National Film Board of Canada.

Nora Ellis is still requesting perennial school yells and songs. The entries must be clean, original, and fairly civilized. Come ye students . . . write!

We eager-beaverly await the arrival of Mr. Lewis J. Alber some time this week who will address us on topics of interest.

When Sinatra's remains were cleared from the stage, the band struck up and the students struck out.

GIRLS' SPORTS

By Ruth Meades

On Monday, 18th., our Grade IX, X, XI girls played three exhibition games of volleyball against Napanee girls in our gym.

With students from both schools literally hanging from the ceiling the games commenced at 7.20 with our Grade IX starting off with a bang and scoring three points at the very first. Joan Hutchens did a great job of supporting her team with L. Fraser making good on assists. At half-time the score was 22-4 for us. Napanee put up a good fight but lost — the resulting score being 44-13 for us. This game was refereed by Doreen Bell.

Grade X.

The Grade X'ers got off to a good start with Napanee winning the volley for serve. B. Reese, B. Boyce and D. Goodier upheld their team in spiking and assists. At half-time the score was 23-11 for us. After a well-earned rest they returned to the floor. This time Napanee shot a good ball which ended in a bull's-eye for basketball. (Girls, this was supposed to be a volleyball game!) The game, which was refereed by Corinne Spring, resulted in a score of 49-25 for us.

Grade XI.

Grade XI's game came next with our girls looking very smart in their white shorts and blouses. Dorothy Bone upheld her team by gaining four points at the beginning. S. Mott, J. Geneja and B. Young excelled in assists and spiking. At half-time the score was 31-8 for us. It was a fight to the finish with good sportsmanship on both sides. The final score was 44-22 for us. (Looks like we won eh!) This game was refereed by Doreen Bell.

Napanee made a charming thank you address in the cafeteria where both teams were served with sandwiches and cookies. The speech was responded to by Marie Marinoff. After everybody had finished eating the Napanee girls went happily on the bus and I'm sure a good time was had by all.

Grade IX brought their volleyball tournaments to a close this week with two games.

Nov. 19 — IXB vs. IXCC, refereed by Miss Neal. The score was 51-16 for IXCC.

Nov. 20 — IXCC (1st team) vs. IXCC (2nd team), refereed by Mrs. Turley. The score was 21-11 for IXCC (1st team).

The winners for Grade IX this year are IXCC (1st team.)

BOYS' SPORTS

By George Ward

Winners of the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. league played Lindsay at Peterborough on Saturday Nov. 16th. The opposing team made 17 points in the first half to B.C.I.'s 0. In the latter part of the game B.C.I. put over a touchdown and a convert which was copied by Lindsay players who also scored a touchdown. The final score was Lindsay 29, Belleville 6. We salute the B.C.I. Juniors who have played a swell season.

The line-ups are:

HOUSE LEAGUE

Nov. 16 Spafford's team 16, Vaughn's team 13. Nov. 18 Garrow's team 3, Miller's team 19. Nov. 19 Watkin's team 28, Vaughn's team 8.

ALBERT COLLEGE LOSES

Incidentally Albert College lost their game in Port Hope with a score of 41-0. I was told that the team ran all the way to Port Hope to get into condition and they were too tired to play. (Frankly I don't believe it!)

Junior practice started on Wednesday night when about thirty players turned out. There were lots of potential players out to practice so the teams should be very good this year.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE

By Bob Ragsdale

At last!!! The last scene of Miss Mery's immortal dramatic masterpiece "Pride and Prejudice" is nearing completion, in spite of the fact that some noteworthy characters have been unable to master the first scene with their feeble intellects as yet.

Now we shall see all these slimy characters as they actually are and not as they seem to be. And what are they??? A good question—and I doubt if even Miss Merry actually knows by now. At any rate, her little playboys are earnestly learning lines, and, I might say, a few 19th century manners.

Since this is the last week before opening night, the question foremost in everyone's mind is, Shall I invest by hard-won money in a ticket for this so-called play, or Shall I be smart and save it for a couple of games of snooker? Well, I can hardly make such an important decision as this for anyone, but I can say that after weeks of intensive study, during which I have interviewed some of the most celebrated and notorious actors of the B.C.I. and you may quote me on this, that you probably have never seen anything like it. Who knows—it may even be good.

JUNIOR RED CROSS

The regular meeting of the Junior Red Cross was opened by the president, Lois Greenleaf, at 4.10, in room 218, Monday, November 18, 1946.

The roll was called and the minutes read by the secretary, Marion Conklin.

The president reported on the five possible points for gaining Purple B. It was decided that the executive draw up the points on Wednesday, November 20, 1946, and report its findings to the regular meeting.

A motion was passed, agreed that we send twenty-five dollars to Rex Frost c/o CFRB, for the Hospital for Incurable Children, Toronto, for a gift of books for the children.

Junior Red Cross magazines were given to each member to read and exchange.

The next box for Holland is to be completed and sent on Monday at 4 o'clock.

The meeting was adjourned by 4.40 p.m.

HIGH SCHOOL EDITORS' CONVENTION

Special by Boyd Upper

On Wednesday afternoon, November 20, nine members of the "Elevator" staff and the staff advisor, Miss Priest, left for Kingston to attend the second annual High School Editors' Convention. This conference embraced all the high schools between Trenton and Prescott that intend to publish a year book.

The delegation arrived at K.C.V.I. and was welcomed by members of the "Times" staff. Old acquaintances were renewed when we met Mr. Maybee, and some of the Belleville boys attending Queen's.

A tea dance, the "Times Tumble," was held so that the guests could become better acquainted with friends from Kingston and other schools. The gym was decorated with tennis raquets, football cleats and other paraphernalia. The music was recorded. At the dance Mr. Maybee had the pleasure of introducing Lorraine Lower to Boyd Upper.

Splendid Banquet.

At six o'clock the visitors assembled in the auditorium where a photographer from Canadian High News took pictures. Informal chatting was cut short at seven by the dinner bell, and everyone returned to the gym where a magnificent banquet was laid on tables decorated with K.C.V.I. colors and arranged to form a K. Everyone was seated next to a stranger in order that students from the various schools might better exchange ideas.

Mr. Pense, chairman of the Kingston School Board, and chairman of the meeting, opened the discussion period with a few remarks and introduced Mr. Fielding, a representative of Hi News, who outlined briefly the qualifications necessary in writing for a newspaper. Mr. Fiddler, manager of the Whig Standard Engraving Service, then outlined the work done by photoengravers. Mr. Arthur Davies, business manager of the Whig Standard, answered a number of questions pertaining to newspaper work in general.

Discussion Period.

A discussion period followed in which representatives of every school aired the problems which they encountered in the literary and business fields. Facts and figures were quoted freely by the various delegates to show how they solved their difficulties.

The meeting was adjourned at ten fifteen at which time Mr. Davies distributed to the delegates a large, beautifully-engraved scroll bearing the text, "The Freedom of the Press." This scroll is to be hung in each high school at the expense of the Whig Standard.

CUFF NOTES

While down at the High School Editors' Convention last Wednesday your reporter ran into some of our Belleville boys now at Queen's. Each admitted good health and a keen enjoyment of University life but with noses to the grindstone nevertheless. The entire crew, however, was in stitches over the following story.

It seems that Philosophy has its dull moments and to relieve the monotony one eager beaver tried for three weeks to get the swish dish in front of him to smile in his direction. Success seemed assured when a most disastrous event occurred.

It was Saturday night and, free from scholarly discipline our hero with his pals made whoopee. The lad in question, a comic of no mean ability, decided to portray his version of a skit entitled "To be or Not to be with the D.T.'s". After stumbling and staggering for two blocks he fell on a lawn and was being lifted, stiff as a slab of Kingston limestone, when who should appear but the swish dish.

After a hasty brush off (in more ways than one) he set out to prove himself the sober man he was; stepped briskly over the edge of the curb, stubbed his toe in a crack, stumbled and fell flat on his face.

He is now seeking "Advice to the Lovelorn".

ON USING BIG WORDS

Since my teacher at school does not wish me to fool
With words that are simple and airy,
He's going to contrive, by elim-
'nating jive,
To extend my vocabulary.

So I no longer say, in a juvenile way,
To my sweetheart, with infatu-
ation,
"Right after dark, shall we stroll through the park?"
But: "Will you indulge in a nocturnal perambulation?"

I no longer go to a movie or show,
It's the theatre or cinema now,
And when Maw and Paw fight, I say, knowing I'm right:
"They're disputing — not having a row!"

If I saw Emily Post, to her I would boast,
That I dine, I don't eat anymore.
I say balogna for baloney, artificial for phoney,
And use words never heard of before.

I'm no longer a fan of the great
Sally Rand,
She's banal, I'm finally convinced;
But when she starts quakin', and
shakin' the bacon,
Like a thesbian, she's Shake —
(ex) perienced.

It's a crude indiscretion to speak of "expression"
When you mean physiognomy,
To say I am tight would never be right,
For I'm parsimonious, you see.

If I say I'm berighted, please don't get excited,
I'm merely mis-pronouncing a verb;
If I say calamity when I mean
ignoramity,
What's the diff? A word is a word.

If I chance on a word I've n'er before heard (And there's many I've chanced upon),
I don't look in a dictionary, but on the contrary,
I consult my lexicon.

Mr. Webster, no doubt, would wonder about
The jive-talk I spread around town;
The word "hi-je-de-filly" may seem rather silly,
But it'll stand for any verb or noun.

I've thought it all out and I'm really about
To hasten back to my home;
I'll banish big words from sight,
then sit down and write
A 2-letter word language all my own.

Communists Seen Leading Party In French Voting

By ROBERT C. WILSON

Paris, Nov. 25 (AP)—French Communists appeared today to have strengthened their claim to leadership of the fourth Republic's first government by their showing in yesterday's parliamentary election.

Nearly complete returns from the balloting for 83,751 electors to help choose parliament's upper House, the council of the Republic, put the Communists slightly ahead of the Centrist Movement Republican Populaire (M.R.P.) in the number of electors named.

The tabulation gave the Communists 24,721 electors, M.R.P. 24,446, Socialists 14,280, Radical Socialists 8,381 and Rightist Bloc of the Partie Republicain De Liberte (P.R.L.) 11,742.

Interior ministry figures for 68 of the 91 departments showed that in popular votes, however, the M.R.P. was leading the Communists, 3,830,835 to 3,736,077.

The Communists have based their bid to name the premier on their victory in the Nov. 10 election, when they won 180 of the 618 seats in the National Assembly, the Lower House of parliament, to the M.R.P's 162 and the Socialists' 101.

The Socialists have not replied to a Communist invitation to join in forming a working-class-party government with a Communist premier. The M.R.P. has said it will not co-operate with the Communists in any government.

Electoral colleges will meet in France's Cantons Dec. 8 to choose 200 of the 315 deputies in the council of the Republic. The parties will be allotted 50 more seats on the basis of their assembly strength, and voters in overseas territories will choose another 65 Dec. 15.

The council, weak in legislative strength comparison to the assembly, will meet with the Lower House to elect a president of the Republic.

The incumbent President, M.R.P. leader Georges Bidault, and his cabinet will submit their resignations to the assembly Thursday.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Nov. 25—(CP) — The fact the northern frontier of Canada happens to be the northern frontier of the North American continent has become the primary problem facing the joint Canada-United States Defence Board, informed sources report.

Operating well within the provisions of the United Nations Charter on the rights of regional defence, it is giving its major consideration to the questions that arise from the threat of a new, ultra-modern war and the naked expanses of the Arctic wastes.

United States worries over that very question are no secret and one important Canadian viewpoint on it was expressed in New York recently by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton. He said:—

"We must realize not only that continents now are within aircraft and rocket missile range of one another, but that they have become the geographical units in which most questions of defence must be stated. Effective arrangements for the defence of the territory of one nation have become a matter of vital concern to all other nations of that continent."

The former commander of the 1st Canadian Army maintained that the first provision for the protection of North America lay in developing international co-operation. But until the United Nations "can effectively assume the task of maintaining world peace and security, the continued production and further improvement of all weapons is vital to the prevention of aggression against us by making impossible any likelihood of success."

Disputes: A revised draft of amendments to the Industrial Disputes Inquiry Act is nearing completion and is likely to go to the provinces shortly for their comments.

Amendment of the I.D.I.A. has been advanced by the Federal Labor Department as the answer to demands for a uniform Federal Labor code. The present code, introduced under the provision of wartime emergency power, will expire early next year. At a recent conference with provincial labor ministers the Dominion proposed that the pre-war I.D.I.A. should be amended and should stand as model legislation which the provinces might adopt if they saw fit.

As a result of those discussions the Dominion has revised ideas it had in mind for bringing the I.D.I.A. up to date and the opinion of the provinces — as well as of labor and management organizations — will be sought on these changes. The original I.D.I.A. provided a plan for dealing with disputes in such national industries as mining, transportation and communications.

The wartime labor code gave the Dominion authority over all war industries and provided for compulsory collective bargaining, requiring an employer to negotiate "in good faith" with unions which had the support of a majority of his employees

SILENT COCKATOO

Perth, Australia (CP) — 8 people tried in vain to make a white cockatoo talk in Perth Police Court, where two persons disputed the bird's ownership. The magistrate suggested the bird might speak to its rightful owner but dismissed the case when the two disputants and six witnesses failed to obtain the cockatoo's co-operation.

COBOURG WINS TITLE

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 25 — (CP) — The Cobourg Galloping Ghosts defeated the local Dynamos 9-0 here Saturday to win the O.R.F.U. intermediate title in two straight games by 23-2 and qualify to meet Montreal here next Saturday.

Anglo-Egyptian Treaty Revision Draft is Studied

Legislators Meet After New Riots Among Students

Cairo, Nov. 26 —(CP)— The Egyptian parliament went into secret session tonight to discuss the draft agreement of a revised Anglo-Egyptian treaty.

Only a few hours before, King Farouk had dissolved the Egyptian delegation negotiating revision of the 1936 Anglo-Egyptian treaty.

Thousands of police guarded the parliament buildings as the legislators convened following new riots among university students which cost several lives.

The King's royal decree dissolving the Egyptian delegation was taken on the advice of Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha and was a sequel to the rejection yesterday by seven of 12 members of the delegation of the draft drawn up by Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Sidky Pasha.

As the decree was announced, new outbursts of violence flared among Cairo university students demonstrating against reported British proposals for a new Egyptian treaty.

The students are demanding that British troops be withdrawn and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan be incorporated into Egypt. Three persons were reported killed in today's gun battles between students and steel-helmeted police and 400 students were reported arrested.

The Decree.

The royal decree said:

"In view of the fact that the majority of members of the delegation made publicly known by a signed statement delivered to the press their opinion on the present negotiations and their decision on the subject and considering that from that moment the mission of that delegation has become purposeless on the proposal of our Prime Minister and the Council of Ministers, the royal decree of March 7, 1946, constituting the official delegation to negotiate with Great Britain is abrogated."

Next move is expected to take place in the Egyptian parliament this afternoon when Premier Sidky Pasha, leader of the dissolved delegation, will press for approval of the draft treaty.

The negotiations have been under fire from several groups and Premier Sidky Pasha has been unable in months of negotiations to obtain agreement with his 11 fellow delegates.

The British delegation in the negotiations was first headed by Viscount Stansgate, former air secretary. Several weeks ago Premier Sidky Pasha visited London to confer with Mr. Bevin.

GOVT. ORDERS NEW CURBS TO SAVE SUPPLIES OF FUEL

All Hopes Pinned for Early End of Strike on Proceedings Against Lewis

Washington, Nov. 26 — (AP)— The United States government, racing against factory shutdowns and emptying coal bins, aimed today for swift trial of John L. Lewis and ordered new curbs to save the country's fast-ebbing supplies of fuel.

Government counsel said they will press for speed at every possible point when Mr. Lewis' trial on contempt charges begins tomorrow. Thursday — Thanksgiving Day — will be a holiday, but counsel said they will ask Judge T. Alan Goldsborough for a Friday session.

A high administration aide, talking with reporters on the understanding that he would not be quoted by name, said the government has pinned all its hopes for an early end to the strike on the legal proceedings. No other action is contemplated at present.

This official indicated the hope is that the legal tactics will "soften up" Mr. Lewis and push him toward making an agreement with the mines' private owners on a working contract for his 400,000 A.F.L. United Mine workers.

The hope is that Mr. Lewis — instead of pursuing a strike which the official said might prove disastrous to his miners as well as the country's economy — will seek a face-saving end to the controversy.

Government lawyers conceded the trial might last longer than the country's economy could possibly stand the strangulation of its basic fuel supply.

The contempt issue — which should result in jail for Mr. Lewis and stiff fines for him and the union — will be taken up first in the double action trial.

Then the court will explore the question of permanently restraining U.M.W.S. strike action which has halted coal digging in 28 states.

Ali Jinnah Proposes Exchange of Hindu, Moslem Populations

Bombay, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Mohammed Ali Jinnah, President of the Moslem League, urged at a Karachi Press conference today that India's central provincial governments discuss at once the question of an exchange of Moslem and Hindu populations to prevent further comunal butchery.

He urged the viceroy, Lord Wavell, to adopt every means to restore peace and order because under the present circumstances—in which majority populations are slaughtering minorities in Hindu-Moslem rioting—there is, Jinnah said, no room for reason, intelligence of fair play.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Nov. 26—(CP)—Synopsis: Cool air now covers Ontario, Quebec and the central states. Considerably warmer air covers the southeastern states and Nova Scotia. Interaction between these two air masses is causing a band of rain from New Brunswick southwestward extending northward a little past Trenton, Toronto, London and Windsor where it has been mixed with snow, snow pellets, and freezing rain. This area of precipitation is expected to extend northward somewhat during Tuesday. In Northern Ontario the weather has been cloudy and cool with some snow.

Workers Prepare For Long Siege At Noranda Mines

Noranda, Que., Nov. 26—(CP)—Thin wisps of curling smoke replaced the swirling clouds usually flowing from smoke stacks of the Noranda mine in this northwestern Quebec mining town today as striking workers entered the fifth day of their walkout amid waning hopes of an early settlement.

Members of local 688, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), the workers are seeking a 16 cents hourly wage increase retroactive to Feb. 8, shift wage differentials and a union checkoff.

The company, with headquarters in Toronto, has replied with an offer of a 10 cent hourly increase retroactive to Nov. 1, but no union checkoff.

Union spokesmen said no production was being carried out in the mine. The smoke was caused by smelter fires kept going by shift bosses and other maintenance men.

Union official Joe Rankin said the union was "good for six months or longer if necessary" and "we're going to win this strike for union security and higher wages."

In Toronto, company president James T. Murdoch said production would continue at the mine.

Workers received pay cheques for Nov. 1-15 period yesterday and had no difficulty passing through a 30-man picket line.

TORONTO COUNCIL ORDERS VOTE ON COCKTAIL BARS

Liquor-by-the-Glass Without Prior Vote Aroused Controversy In Past Weeks

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Legally it won't mean anything, but Toronto voters in the civic elections Jan. 1 will vote on the question whether they favor the introduction of cocktail lounges —of sale of liquor by the glass— in Toronto.

It does not mean anything legally because Provincial Legislation cannot be submitted to a municipal vote, and the provincial legislation already provides for introduction of cocktail lounges into Ontario's five cities of more than 50,000 population—Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London and Windsor.

What provokes the municipal vote is that the provincial bill sets forth that cocktail lounges may be introduced in smaller centres only on an affirmative vote of the residents in those places, whereas the provincial act contemplates no vote in the five larger centres.

In Toronto and Ottawa, and to a lesser extent in the other large cities, this feature of liquor by-the-glass without a prior vote has aroused controversy in past weeks. And the Toronto city council took note of the controversy when it authorized submission of question to Toronto voters on New Year's day.

Warm Debate

By a vote of 19 to 2 council decided that duly qualified municipal voters here may ballot on the question: "are you in favor of the issues of dining lounge licences and lounge licences in Toronto as provided in the Liquor Licence Act, 1946?"

In the warm debate which preceded the vote, council rejected an amendment supported by controller Stewart Smith and a few aldermen which would have changed the question. This group desired to halt all permits for construction of cocktail lounges until the Ontario Government had agreed to conduct a plebiscite in Toronto of those qualified to vote on provincial matters.

Controller D. A. Balfor told council "we know we haven't a particle of right to change a provincial act. However, the people have asked us to let them vote, and we should do so. We shouldn't interfere with federal or provincial matters but maybe the question will bring out a large vote and defeat the communists.

This was another angle in the complicated question: the argument of some factions that such a plebiscite would overcome the Toronto voters' traditional apathy toward municipal elections. Year after year only a fraction of those eligible have gone to the polls in civic elections.

Young Bandits Rob Storekeeper of $200

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Two youthful bandits, brandishing guns, entered Max Dacks' tobacco store in downtown Toronto late last night and robbed him of $200.

Dacks had completed counting the day's receipts when the youths entered.

One covered him with a gun while the other went to the cash register. Finding it empty, he said "Come on, give us the money."

Dacks gave them a roll of bills from his pockets and the bandits ran out of the store. A search by police failed to yield any trace of them.

MATERIAL SHORTAGE EASED

Welland, Nov. 26 (CP)—Demolition of a wartime housing staff house has eased the building material shortage in this city.

Demand for the material greatly exceeds the supply but many persons have been able to complete their homes before winter.

SIX SUITS ARE STOLEN $980 IN ONE OF THEM

Chicago, Nov. 26 —(AP)— Benjamin Kolkey told Fillmore police that a burglar broke into his home and stole six suits of clothes. He expressed the hope the officers would find one of them, which he described as especially valuable. In one of the pockets, he said was $980 in cash.

Patricia Newell, 12, Instantly Killed At St. Charles St. Crossing

Patricia Newell, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Newell, 90 East Moira Street, was instantly killed at 12:20 this afternoon when struck by eastbound Canadian National Railways train No. 14 at the St. Charles Street crossing.

It is believed that the girl was returning home from King George School when the tragedy occurred. A sister thought that she was alone at the time. She is one of a family of three boys and two girls. The father is an employee of the Shell Oil Company.

No other details were available at the time of going to press. County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan has ordered an inquest, the preliminary of which was held at 4 o'clock this afternoon. City Police Inspector Hayes is investigating.

The St. Charles Street crossing is an open one with lights and siren guards. Railway workmen tested the warning signals shortly after the accident occurred. The ground was partially covered with snow and the roads and pavements in the vicinity as in general with those in other parts of the city were slippery and treacherous.

Relatives stated that the girl usually went home by way of the overhead bridge on North Front Street and only on occasions when bringing home parcels from a store did she use the St. Charles Street crossing.

Reports from the scene of the accident indicate that the child might have slipped and fallen on the tracks in front of the approaching train. Other members of the family besides the parents are a sister Carmel and three brothers Don, John and Billy.

American Industrial Workers Face Loss Of Millions in Wages

(By The Associated Press)

Wage losses running into millions of dollars appeared the outlook today by industry spokesmen in event of a 10 to 30-day shut down of the United States' soft coal mines, with a steadily increasing number of workers in many industries forced into idleness.

With the 400,000 United Mine Workers (A.F.L.) away from their jobs for the sixth day—resulting in drastic government coal-saving orders—there already appeared a wave of unemployment in some sections of the country. Steel mills and industries dependent on coal were the first to feel the effects and a survey indicated that more than 30,000 were idle. At least 38 of the country's 227 blast furnaces were banked and steel companies announced further cuts in production appeared likely, resulting in large scale layoffs.

More than 3,250 rail workers were laid off as the railroads lopped schedules to conserve fuel. Also thrown out of work by the coal walkout were 1,200 truckers and 500 rivermen.

Other coal strike effects gave hundreds of grammar school and college students unscheduled vacations. All schools in the little town of Sibley in Iowa closed for a week because there was no coal with which to heat the school houses.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the government ordered new curbs on deliveries of coal to schools and all government buildings and ordered a rigid checkup on the coal-saving dimout which became effective in 21 States and the district of Columbia yesterday.

Also in Washington Government counsel said they will press for swift trial of John L. Lewis president of the U.M.W., when his case of contempt charges starts tomorrow. The government hopes the court action will result in an end of the miners' walkout. No other action is contemplated at present.

In other Labor disputes across the country, there was a renewal of fighting on the picket line at the huge Allis-Chalmers manufacturing plant in West Allis, Wis. Clashes between pickets and police occurred during a mass demonstration yesterday by more than 4,000 Milwaukee Area C.I.O. workers. Six persons were injured and 16 arrested.

In St. Paul, Minn., 77 public schools remained closed by a strike of teachers who went on picket duty yesterday while the city's 36,378 school children had an enforced holiday.

A strike also called for Monday in nearby Minneapolis by the men's local of the A.F.L. American Federation of Teachers was "held in abeyance".

Wage negotiations between A.F.L. American Federation of radio artists and the four major networks were to be resumed today. The radio actors, singers and other broadcast artists have threatened a strike.

World's First 'Airborne Blond' Keeps Aloft by Wriggling Wrists

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Stand well back, folks, and don't crowd the runway. The world's first airborne blond is coming in for a landing.

Sound silly? Mrs. Anne Golden doesn't think so. She's the blond and she says she can fly, self-propelled. All you have to do is wear Susie Q — and wriggle your wrists.

Mrs. Golden is a comely 33-year-old housewife from Virginiatown, just north of Kirkland Lake. Two years ago she started tinkering with parachute silk and plastics. The result was Susie Q, an aerial lifebuoy which she claims will keep the wearer off the ground indefinitely.

One day she tried on this flying housecoat, took off from a 12-foot platform — and zoom! Stayed in the air almost two minutes.

She filled the jacket with air that time. Next try it's going to be gas, she says, and then she'll stay aloft until she gets tired, just floating around like a human helicopter. The landing won't be any pancake, either.

Chic with her upswept hairdo, black evening dress and brown hat with jaunty green feather, Mrs. Golden described the device last night as she awaited a plane for Ottawa, en route to Virginiatown where husband Philip is a mining instructor.

No, she said, not looking a bit like a female Flying Fortress, she couldn't draw a picture. Susie Q was just a wing — a couple of wings, to be exact — fitted on a jacket to cover the wearer's arm. It was about 10 feet long and three feet wide, divided into vacuum compartments inflated with gas or air.

Then there was the tail. It didn't look like a tail, exactly, but it fitted where the tail would go, on the back of a pair of what might be described as slacks.

Initial cost? About $5, said Mrs. Golden, who got the silk free from Hamilton.

Mrs. Golden told about Susie Q on the air Sunday, on the "We the People" program, won her a free trip home via a Colonial Airlines plane — even though the script called for her to say she wouldn't ride in "one of those contraptions."

When she gets back to husband Phil, whom she married in Toronto in 1930, daughter Julien, 12, and son Phil Jr., 13, she's going to rest for a while and then go to Texas, where a company has offered to supply her with gas. After that it's onward and upward for Mrs. Golden, a native of Fort William, who lived in Toronto until seven years ago.

The reporter wasn't so sure about Susie Q. It sounded good, but he'll settle for a jet-propelled brunet. Anyway, keep 'em flying, Mrs. Golden.

THREE KILLED, 400 RIOTERS ARRESTED AFTER GUN DUEL

Police and University Students in Suburban Cairo Clash Over Details of Treaty

Cairo, Nov. 26 — (CP) — At least three persons were killed today, a number of police injured and 400 rioters arrested following a gun duel between university students in suburban Cairo.

The anti-British anti-government clashes again erupted here and in Alexandria as Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha's government prepared to open debate in parliament tonight on proposals for revision of the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty brought back by Premier Sidky Pasha from London after talks with Foreign Secretary Bevin.

The demonstrations broke out despite a stern government warning that "demonstrations of any kind are completely forbidden." Police said one group of demonstrators in Cairo tried to set fire to a school, while in Alexandria students at Farouk University went on strike, staying away from classes. Law students there clashed with police.

Seven members of the 12-man Egyptian delegation negotiating revision of the 10-year-old British-Egyptian Treaty of Alliance rejected revision proposals last night.

Unable to Accept Article

The seven delegates said they were unable to accept an article of the treaty revision proposals, recently discussed by Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha and Foreign Secretary Bevin, which they said provided that:

"In case of a war threat by any adjacent country, the two parties (Britain and Egypt) agree to discuss the situation in order to take measures necessary until the (United Nations) Security Council takes steps to restore peace."

This, the delegates said, would mean that "Egypt will become a military base and will be liable to British occupation once again."

Demonstrations in Cairo, which have cost at least one life and brought injury to 100 persons in the last three days, were reported spreading, meanwhile, to the Nile Delta cities of Zagazig, Mahalla El Kubra, Qalyub and Mansura.

The Wafdist (Nationalist) newspapers Sawt Al Umma said that students in Zagazig had burned hundreds of English books on a bonfire before police dispersed them with clubs.

An outburst of violence in Cairo last night saw demonstrators hurling hand grenades at police, overturning and smashing 30 street cars and tossing lighted torches at shops. Fifteen persons were hurt and 70 arrested.

Four Escape Injury As Turbo-Generator Explodes in Plant

Fort Frances, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Four men narrowly escaped injury when a 7,500 kilowatt turbo-generator blew up yesterday in the Minnesota and Ontario paper mill at International Falls, Minn., across the International Boundary from here.

The men, John Hartje, Joe Kantor, Leslie Parker and Rudy Caple, noticed the machine was vibrating, shut off the valves and made their way to the door of the turbine room before the explosion came. None suffered a scratch.

An investigation into the mishap, which temporarily affected power lines in both Fort Frances and International Falls, is being made.

UGLY AND LAZY

Jacksonville, N. C., Nov. 26— (AP) —Colonel, the bulldog mascot of the Second Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, was found several miles from the base yesterday after being missing for five days. "I know somebody took him there," said Lt.-Col. W. C. Kelly, "because in addition to being the ugliest dog in the world he was also the laziest dog and would never have walked anywhere except to chow."

SHOT 80th DEER

Kingston, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Enthusiastic hunter since 1903, Robert Bertrim, 73-year-old farmer of nearby Mountain Grove, this year shot his 80th — and largest deer — on his first day out. The bag — a 12-point buck, weighing 258 pounds.

Flying Food Cans Injure 10 British Soldiers at Haifa

3,370 Immigrants Protest Refusal to Permit Landing

Haifa, Palestine, Nov. 26—(CP) —Steel-helmeted British troops using tear-gas, fire hoses and clubs put down a riot of Jewish refugees aboard the immigrant ship Hameri Halvri (Lochita) today after an hour-long battle in which 10 soldiers were injured, 4 seriously.

The battle was touched off when troops boarded the ship — biggest yet to attempt the dash to Palestine — to begin the removal of the illegal immigrants to three British troopships, to await a legal decision on their future. It was reported that 3,370 refugees were aboard.

"The blighters were tossing full tins of UNRRA food at us," a police officer said. "It was ankle-deep on the dock."

At the height of the fight the passengers hung a huge banner over the side of the ship. It was signed:— "Commander-in-chief, Jewish Resistance Movement," and read: "For every Jew murdered or wounded aboard this ship you will pay in English blood. You have been warned."

Tear Gas Used

Soldiers were repulsed in their first attempt to board the ship, and returned shortly armed with tear-gas, hose and clubs. Four Sten-gun bursts were fired in the air, but the refugees would not be cowed.

About 50 of the immigrants leaped overboard and were picked up. Some 30 others jumped to the deck of a nearby tug, but were brought back.

Disembarkation began after the ship entered Haifa harbor. The immigrants were taken ashore in launches and transferred to the troopships.

At the same time, leaders of Haifa's Jewish community of 60,000 called for a 90-minute strike tonight in protest against the Palestine government's refusal to allow the 3,370 passengers aboard the Halvri to land.

Troops boarding the Halvri donned steel helmets and used tear-gas to quell the most violent resistance yet offered by visaless immigrants.

At least 10 British soldiers were injured by flying food cans as they attempted to board the ship.

A stern gang leaflet today threatened "extreme violent reprisals" if the latest immigrants were deported. The warning came as the Hameri Halvri, the largest immigrant ship ever to attempt the dash to Palestine's shores, stood off Haifa. Military authorities said the visaless refugees would be transferred to three British troopships.

Menawhile violence broke out again near Haifa last night. An official source said that a British army officer was seriously injured near Beith Dajan while travelling on a jeep from Sarafand to Haifa.

Automatic weapons fire also was directed against an army truck. In the same area but no casualties were reported in this incident.

Under Strict Curfew

The Haifa port was put under strict curfew at dawn as the 2,000-ton Hameri Halvri, accompanied by two British destroyers, was sighted by watchers on Mount Carmel. A military source said trans-shipment to the Ocean Vigour, Empire Beywood and Empire Rival would take about 12 hours.

In the port area, under strict curfew, a field regiment of Royal artillery and a battalion of Welsh Guards shielded preparations for the trans-shipment.

Meanwhile, Royal navy divers carried out underwater searches for limpet mines under the Empire Heywood, Empire Rival and Ocean Vigour.

As Haifa prepared for the entry of the Halvri, infantrymen of the Staffordshire regiment and the Sherwood Foresters unobstructively took u ppositions at strategic road junctions to isolate the Jewish quarter.

The passengers were expected to be kept aboard the vessels either in Haifa harbor or cruising in territorial waters pending settlement of a habeas corpus action filed yesterday in the Palestine supreme court at Jerusalem on behalf of the Hameri Halvi's passengers.

A writ granted Jewish lawyers yesterday requires the Palestine government to show cause by tomorrow why the refugees should be deported to detention chmps on Cyprus in pursuance of a British policy instituted in mid-summer.

U.S. IS PREPARED FOR U.N. ACTION ON ARMS LIMITATION

U. S. Delegation Said to be Anxious to Concentrate on Disarmament

By JOHN A. PARRIS, JR.

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 26 — (AP)— The United States prepared today to press for immediate United Nations action on a world arms limitation program, including international control of atomic energy.

Authoritative sources said the U. S. delegation was anxious to dispose of the world troop inventory question and concentrate on disarmament, which it considers the most important issue before the 54-member U. N. political and security committee.

Because of this position, these sources said, the U.S. was "likely" to vote against a British proposal for an "on-the-spot" double check of a troop census demanded by Russia.

The United States was understood to feel that if the troop inspection proposal were adopted the major problem of arms limitation would be indefinitely delayed.

There was a possibility that Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia would appear before the political committee today to oppose the new British proposal.

In submitting the inspection board proposal, Britain said it was prepared to abandon the demand by Foreign Secretary Bevin last week that the troop inventory and disarmament topics be merged and discussed immediately.

New Proposal.

This was considered a concession by Britain, but it was followed by a new proposal by British Delegate Philip Noel-Baker that:

1. The information on troops should be furnished as at Jan. 1, 1947, and on Jan. 1, 1947 the Russians had proposed that the information should be made available within 30 days after the adoption of the resolution and as at Nov. 1, 1946.

LIONEL BARRYMORE TO BE HEARD IN SKIT

Lionel Barrymore, famous stage and screen actor, will be heard in a fifteen minute skit over radio station CJBQ this evening from 7 to 7.15. The skit is written in aid of the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association for its Christmas Seal Campaign.

W.P.T.B. PROSECUTES RESTAURANT OWNER

Peter Tsourolis ,proprietor of Jim's Lunch, Dundas Street, was fined $20 plus costs in local magistrate's court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills, Tuesday morning when he was found guilty of serving meat with meals on meatless days.

Inspector with the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, told of going into the Dundas Street restaurant and of purchasing a steak dinner on a Friday. The charge had subsequently been laid.

In awarding penalty the magistrate noted that the accused had been found guilty of a similar offence some weeks previous. "Persons of foreign extraction should not plead this as an excuse for ignorance of Canadian law," commented Magistrate Wills as he assessed the $20 fine. E. E. Follwell acted as special prosecutor in the case.

LOCAL MAN HELD ON FORGERY CHARGES

Charged on eight counts of forgery and also on eight counts of uttering, Edward O'Shaughnessy of Belleville has been arrested by local police and has been remanded in custody for trial. Offences which police allege O'Shaughnessy has committed are in connection with the passing of bogus cheques amounting to a total of $518, the cheques having been passed within the past month.

Alleged Border Incidents Will Be Presented

Athens, Nov. 26 —(AP)— Col. Constantine Iatrou, intelligence director of the Greek general staff, was reported preparing to fly to New York today with files of evidence on alleged border incidents to present to the United Nations.

(The Greek government information office in London said yesterday Premier Constantin Tsaldaris would fly to New York probably this week to place charges before the U. N. Security Council that Greek insurgents on the northern frontier were getting aid from within Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania.

(Gen. John Spiliotopoulos, chief of the Greek general staff, talked in London with British officials, who still did not seem inclined to throw British troops into the fighting between Greek soldiers and leftist bands. Newspapers in both Britain and Greece said the United States had been asked to help the Greek government, but the reports were not confirmed.)

Athens press dispatches said 18 guerillas had been slain, two captured and 40 wounded three days ago when a force of 400 attacked a Greek battalion in the Kipouryo area six miles south of Grevena in the Pindus mountains, where leftist bands have been reported in control of 100 villages. Newspapers told of four other minor weekend skirmishes.

LOST HUNTER RETURNS

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 26 —(CP)—Lost for 2½ days 15 miles east of here, Cliff Gulley, 29-year-old member of a small hunting party, was back home today suffering from frost bitten feet and hands after two zero weather nights in the Algoma district bushland.

Gulley lost his direction Saturday and wandered in the bush without food attempting to find a trail back to his Lake Elizabeth camp.

Late yesterday he stumbled on a faint track and finally reached the hunting headquarters and medical aid.

His friends had not been concerned about him as they thought he was staying at another camp.

SMALLER TURKEY LOSS

London, Ont., Nov. 26 — (CP) — It has been a good luck year for turkey raisers in this district, with most farms reporting loss due to illness and weather well below average. One prominent raiser said he had lost only fifty birds out of 2,000.

City Motorist Seriously Injured In Accident

Sustaining a broken neck, broken shoulder and fractured right arm as his car went out of control and turned over in the ditch five miles west of Belleville, on the Trenton highway, Mr. D. McLuskie, 78½ Foster Ave., is in Belleville General Hospital in critical condition. The accident occurred Monday night when Mr. McLuskie was returning to Belleville from Trenton.

Two other occupants of the car, Mrs. I. Weese of Trenton and Mr. Fred Boyle, Foster Ave., suffered shock and were severely shaken up.

Dr. Richard Potter gave first aid at the scene of the accident and also at the hospital where the injured were taken in Martin's ambulance. According to reports from the scene of the accident, the car was badly damaged as it turned over on the north side of the highway.

Three Premises Entered And Articles Stolen

No less than three instances of breaking and entering with goods or merchandise being taken in each case have been reported to the local police within the past 24 hours.

Manager of York Trading reported their warehouse had been entered some time on Monday night with investigation by Inspector Hayes revealing that one-half carton of cigarettes had been taken.

Odorless Cleaners and Dyers on Front Street reported that an overcoat, suit of clothes and fedora hat had been taken from their premises, entry apparently having been effected through a window which had previously been broken out.

The third break-in was reported by George Gatcum, St. Charles Street, who complained his woodshed had been entered and an electric motor, wrenches and screw drivers missing.

Frightened Deer Jumps Over Car

Driving from Peterborough over the weekend, Harold Knapman, Picton resident had the somewhat unique experience of seeing a young deer run out of a mist-enveloped thicket near Bonarlaw and gracefully leap over an automobile that was driving ahead of his car.

Fog was settling down at the time and Knapman was following the car ahead quite closely Suddenly the deer emerged from out of the fog and suddenly terrified at the sight of the cars gave a frightened leap clearing the first automobile with inches to spare. It disappeared into the woods on the opposite side of the highway. Both cars came to an abrupt halt, but no damage was done.

Snow Falls Deep On Crashed Plane High in Alps

Vienna, Nov. 26 — (AP)—Alpine snows piled up today upon the crashed United States C-53 transport plane in which 12 persons were marooned for five days on Switzerland's lofty and treacherous Gauli Glacier. All now are safe in Vienna and six of them still in hospital were reported recovering rapidly.

"It will be next spring before we see the plane again and, if a crevasse opens up there, we will never see it again," a dispatch from Meiringen, Switzerland, quoted one of the Alpinists who took part in the dramatic rescue.

A score of climbers remained at a hut halfway up the icy slope, with the supplies and equipment brought there for the rescue, which finally had been effected Sunday with Swiss Fieseler Storch planes.

Attending physicians here said the six who were in hospital after their arrival from Interlaken last night all had a good night's rest, but none would be discharged before tomorrow.

Turning on of Colored Street Lights for Christmas Season Referred Back for Information

Mayor Ordered to Sign Agreement to Open the Armouries Laneway

The matter of turning on the colored Christmas lights in the downtown section of the city was the topic of some spirited discussion at the regular meeting of council Monday evening when in the absence of Mayor Frank Follwell, the mayor's chair was taken by Alderman H. J. Clarke.

Several of the councillors wanted to have the colored lights turned on for the entire month prior to Christmas but against this Alderman Glencoe Thompson, chairman of light, pointed out that there was a power shortage and turning on the colored lights would increase the peak load.

"I say turn the lights on for the entire month," stated Alderman E. E. Follwell. "The kids get a big kick out of the colored lights and we have to pay for the entire month anyway. In any event the peak load would be off before the lights would be turned on in the evening."

"That's the way I feel about it too," agreed Aldermen Woodley and Tice.

Matter Referred Back

"I'm entirely in favor of the lights, but according to our public utilities there is a power shortage and they are trying to hold down the peak load, and we have been asked to assist in keeping it down. It is the domestic use in the evening which causes the peak load, not the industries, and the colored lights would thus be turned on at a time when the load was the greatest," said Alderman Thompson.

"The merchants have recommended that the lights be turned on for ten days before Christmas," said Alderman Chamberlain. "The matter is a serious one and I suggest referring it back to the next council meeting."

Alderman Tice claimed there was no power shortage but that it was a matter of overload for the present equipment. He suggested turning the lights on after seven o'clock when the peak load was passed.

Wanted To Know Cost

Alderman Butler wanted to know the approximate cost of the colored lighting and was informed that it was between two and three hundred dollars.

An amendment to the original recommendation was passed in council, this calling for referring the matter of colored lights to the public utilities commission with a request for the commission to explain how turning on the lights would affect the power load.

The agreement between the city and the Department of National Defence regarding the opening of the Armouries laneway was passed in council and will become effective when signed by the mayor and received back in Ottawa.

According to the agreement the city assumes all responsibility in the matter of usage of the laneway and will bear the costs of placing the necessary lights to adequately light the laneway. Ald. Tice suggested and Ald. Thompson asked for and received authorization from council to take the matter up immediately with the public utilities commission to have the necessary lights placed.

Bill In Dispute

During the passing of accounts a bill of $45 for the Industrial Commission drew an inquiry from Alderman Allin as to what the bill had been for. He was informed that it was to defray expenses of a local delegation which went to Peterborough last week to attend the exhibition of the 30-year plan of that city and also for a dinner at Queens Hotel for the Industrial Commission.

According to city by-law the Industrial Commission can spend their money any way in which they please," stated Alderman Clarke. "If I am elected I will endeavor to have the Industrial Commission budget treated the same as that of any other department which must have expenditures approved by council.

It's high time that the people of the city knew how their money was being spent," returned Alderman Allin.

"Then you will have to amend the by-law," said Mr. Clarke.

Advertise for Tenders.

The city comptroller was authorized to advertise for tenders for the purchase of a three ton dual wheel truck with dump body. The present Reo truck would be traded in. Alderman Trudeau, Ald. Hyde and City Engineer Charles Mott will supply the specifications.

Council was in receipt of a letter from the city solicitor stating that before the name of Victoria Street could be changed to Oak Street, reasons for the change would have to be given. By way of explanation one of the aldermen replied the principal reason for the change of name was that the present name of the thoroughfare conflicted with the name "Victoria Ave."

Three city-owned lots were recommended sold, including the west half of lot 2 on Herchimer Street to Harry L. Clarke; part of lot 3 Benjamin Street to Ernest Archibald and part of lot A, corner Bettes and Emily streets, to Germain Wright.

Under inquiries Alderman Chamberlain asked if tenders had yet been called for the work of repairing the retaining wall at Victoria Park. He was informed by the city clerk that tenders had been called for by Parks Commissioner Maurice Callaghan.

Aerial Survey Completed.

Council was in receipt of a communication from the department of planning and development regarding progress on the Moira River Survey. The letter from the chief conservation engineer A. R. Richardson stated that the aerial survey had been completed and that during the past summer some work had been done with regard to flooding conditions. However, it was preferred to embody the report of this preliminary work in a complete report at a later date. Council had inquired of the department regarding the progress of the survey.

An inquiry from the Canadian National Railways regarding the Frank Street crossing was read in council with a request for information as to whether the road allowance at this point has ever been closed by by-law.

By way of reply City Engineer Charles Mott indicated that the street level at this point was such that a vehicular crossing was not at present possible, although there was a pedestrian crossing. The engineer asked if the council had given any further consideration to the matter of a subway at this point. He stated the Frank Street crossing had never been closed by by-law.

B.C.I. Dramatic Club to Present Austen Play

Jane Austen's outstanding British novel, "Pride and Prejudice" is being dramatized at the Collegiate Auditorium here on Thursday and Friday nights by a cast drawn from the BCI Dramatic Club. The play is set in three acts and is laid in the familiar atmosphere of the Austen novels, London, England.

The play will be definitely of the old English period between 1796 and 1797 and is written in the original Austen humor.

The play, under the careful supervision and direction of Miss N. P. Merry and featuring a cast the majority of which has more than passing histrionic ability, should prove delightful entertainment, for today the Austen novels are regarded as the best in the language and are probably as widely read as those of any first rate lady novelist."

Miss Austen has exceptional skill as a portrayer of character and a story-teller. On the whole her material is less startling than that of any English novelist, but the picture she gives is unsurpassed in the perfection of truth, and humor and vivacity As story-teller, she has, in points of technical construction, no superior. Her plots are not elaborate and there is no conspicuous wealth of invention. All her important characters are strongly individual.

"Pride and Prejudice" is usually regarded as the best of the Austen novels in point of liveliness of style neatness of structure and vigor. Its treatment by the BCI Dramatic Club should mark the Thursday and Friday entertainment here as one of the best efforts of the youthful actors and actresses.

Armenian Cleric Is Concerned Over Holy Land

St. Catharines, Nov. 26—(CP) — The Holy Land was once given back to the Christian world by the Crusaders, and it might happen that this would be necessary again if the land is given to the Jews or Arabs, Rev. Hmayak Intoyan, Archdeason of the Armenian Church in Canada, said in an interview today.

Bishop Intoyan came to Canada direct from Jerusalem. He will be Bishop of St. Gregory's Church here, the only Armenian Church in Canada.

Emphasizing that he was interested only in the spiritual welfare of his people, Bishop Intoyan said that if either Jews or Arabs were given the country, the very centre of the Christian religion would be lost to the Christian world and in the hands of those of another faith.

REVISE HOSPITAL PLANS

Peterboro, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Revised plans of the new civic hospital as recommended by the special hospital committee were approved by city council last night, involving an expenditure of $1,600,000.

Originally the committee had planned on a 265-bed hospital but estimated costs amounted to almost $3,000,000. Plans were revised and now call for a 198-bed hospital with sufficient services for the larger building.

BANCROFT

Ohio Man, Lost In Bush, Found By Large Party

Bancroft (Special)—Frank Nagody of Cleveland, Ohio, became lost in the woods of Cardiff Township, south of Paudash Lake on Sunday while scouting around. Having to put in the day Frank, and a couple of companions wandered out into the bush and came upon a bear track. Frank, eager to take a bear home with him at the end of the hunt, thought he would track the animal down and have a good idea where it would be the following day when the hunting gang went out, but he walked too far without giving any heed to his whereabouts.

When he didn't return last night at dark, Mr. Tomkins, who operates the lodge at which Nagody was staying, notified Mr. R. J. Stringer of Bancroft who is an experienced bushman, and together they organized a search party of 15 men and started combing the woods in the general direction in which they believed the lost man to be; by building fires, using flashlights, shouting and with the aid of five compasses they finally got an answer from the lost man. From then on the search party kept closing in, still shouting and getting a response until he was located, none the worse for his trip other than weary legs and an empty stomach. He was found about eleven o'clock Sunday night

W. A. SALE

The Evening Group of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Paul's United Church, Bancroft, under the convenership of Mrs. Margaret Follis held an afternoon bazaar and sale of home cooking in the basement of the church Saturday afternoon. The sale opened at 3 o'clock and in less than two hours the display of fancywork and homecooking had disappeared and the ladies were gratified to have cleared over seventy-five dollars in return for the efforts put forth.

Junior Board Of Trade Hosts To Civic Candidates

Aspirants who during the forthcoming municipal elections will seek office in the city council and board of education aired their respective platforms before members of the local Junior Board of Trade at their regular bi-monthly dinner meeting held at the Masonic Temple on Monday evening.

Although present council and board of education members as well as aspirants to office were invited to attend the meeting, there was a number absent but those who did attend were given a fine reception by the Junior Board of Trade members who listened attentively to platform planks expounded.

Chairman of the Board of Trade, Malcolm Robb presided over the fore part of the meeting, while Alderman Claude Tice capably introduced those aspiring to civic office.

Alderman Harold Woodley was the only mayoralty candidate present as Mayor Frank Follwell was unavoidably absent from the meeting. Aldermanic candidates who spoke were as follows: George C. Brown; Alderman H. J. Clarke; Angus Duffy Harry Hill; Thomas "Derby" Jeffrey; Arthur Keegan; Bruce Lattimer; James Lazenby; Clare Ridley and Ted Schwab.

Board of Education aspirants to speak were Enos David; Robert Hart; Alex Nathan and George Wishart.

Junior Board of Trade member William Edwards reported on their get-out-and-vote campaign, stating that it was the duty of every Belleville citizen to exercise his or her franchise. The meeting saw a fine attendance on the part of the Board of Trade members who heard their organization complimented by the speakers on the interest they are taking in civic matters of the city.

Time Loss From Strikes High Though October Drop Recorded

Ottawa, Nov. 26 (CP)—Time loss from strikes was cut by 260,000 man-days during October, but the 10-month total stood at a record of 4,462,730 man-days, it was reported in figures released today by Arthur MacNamara, Deputy Minister of Labor.

The October drop in time loss—the fourth consecutive month n which strike activity diminished—marked the end of most of the summer work stoppages. During October a total of 393,298 man-days were lost through 27 strikes involving 32,919 workers, as compared with 657,601 days lost in September through 33 strikes involving 33,030 workers.

Most of the reduction was due to settlement in October of 20 major strikes, some of which had been in effect for several months.

Preliminary figures for the first 10 months of the year showed 188 strikes involving 133,317 workers with a loss of 4,462,730 man-days. For the corresponding period of 1945 there were 169 strikes involving 72,490 workers with a loss of 773,128 man-days.

Of the 27 strikes in effect at one time or another in October, 17 started before Oct. 1 and 13 of these ended during the month. Seven of the 10 strikes which began during October were ended in the month.

More than 95 per cent of the October time loss was accounted for by nine major stoppages, most of which have since been settled. They were: Ontario Rubber Factory Workers, 113,000 man-days lost in October; Steel Mill Workers, Hamilton, Sydney, N.S., and Sault Ste. Marie, 75,000 days; Electrical Workers, Hamilton, 60,000 days; Logging and Lumber Camp Workers, Northern Ontario 40,000 days; Automobile Factory Workers, Windsor and Chatham, 2,250 days; Electrical Workers, Windsor and Chatham 2,250 days; Electrical Workers, Toronto 20,000 days; British Columbia Metal Miners 18,000 days; Metal Factory Workers, Welland, 2,000 days and Brass Factory Workers, New Toronto 8,000 days.

Teachers' Strike Closes 77 Schools

St. Paul, Min., Nov. 26 (AP)—An eight member negotiating committee adjourned last night without reaching settlement in strike of St. Paul teachers which closed 77 schools and left 36,578 pupils out of classes as the instructors paced picket lines Monday and prepared to resume them today.

George Sjoselius, assistant Minnesota Attorney General and spokesman for the negotiators, said Monday's session was "profitable and we hope to make similar progress at a meeting this afternoon."

In Minneapolis, where the men's local 238 of the American Federation of Teachers had also voted a Monday strike, Charles E. Boyer, president of the union said the 397 members had not yet accepted a board of education settlement offer made Sunday.

Minneapolis women teachers have not yet taken a strike vote but have gone on record to support the men by not crossing picket lines if they are set up.

The settlement proposal provided:

December payment of a $150 cost-of-living bonus for 1946; a $400 increase in 1947; a salary schedule effective January, 1948 giving $4,200 annual top salaries to teachers with bachelors' degrees; $4,400 to those with masters' degrees; and $4,600 for doctors' degrees, with non-degree instructors to receive $3,800 maximum. Present salary range is from $1,600 to $3,000.

Former Servicemen Draw Half Billion Credits, Gratuities

Ottawa, Nov. 26 —(CP)—Former members of Canada's fighting forces have drawn around a half-billion dollars in gratuities and re-establishment credit, a survey of the services showed today.

Nearly 1,000,000 men and women have obtained benefits, it was shown, with the army outnumbering the combined totals of the other two branches, both in numbers of beneficiaries and in the aggregate sum received.

The grand total involved to date — which includes applications already approved but not yet actually paid out — is approximately $576,700,000. This is made up of $492,850,000 on gratuities payable directly to discharged service personnel in cash and another $83,850,000 in re-establishment credits.

Besides the total for re-establishment credits, further large sums have been paid out in putting veterans through college or technical training and in aid under the Veterans' Land Act. The totals for these were not available today.

Biggest chunk of the gratuity total has gone to one-time army members, who have collected so far about $300,000,000. The total number of cases approved for payment by the army is 568,323. Of these, payment has been made to all but 76,431, and these are being paid off now.

In the navy, 1003,380 applicants—including some 6,000 Wrens—have qualified for a total of $42,850,000 in gratuities. A navy spokesman said it was expected all applications would be cleaned up by the end of the year except for those serving in the interim force, who would be finished by about next September.

Former air force personnel have made 226,232 gratuities applications with a total payment of around $150,000,000.

SCARED OF JEED DRIVERS

Meiringen, Switzerland, Nov. 26—(AP)— A grizzled Swiss mountain guide — one of 70 who risked life and limb to help rescue 12 persons stranded high in the snow-clad Alps following a plane crash — gravely averred yesterday that he "wanted no more of that."

The Swiss hastenel to explain, however, it wasn't the hazardous eight-hour climb and the equally hazardous descent that worried him.

"It was those jeep drivers they sent to meet us at the bottom," he said. "They almost scared the life out of me."

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT READ YFOR STORMS

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)—The Ontario Department of Highway is ready for the fiercest storms winter can unleash, J. D. Millar, deputy highways minister, said Saturday. It has 300 snow-removal units and an equal number of sanding trucks; worth $3,500,000 altogether, and can call between 1,800 and 2,000 men into action.

POINT TRAVERSE

Fishermen Lose Considerable Gear Due to Heavy Blow

Point Traverse, Nov. 26 — Sweeping down upon the Great Lakes, high south and southwest gales lashed peaceful waters into great seas, retarded shipping service and forced freighters to seek available shelter from one of the worst wind storms of the year.

Into the teeth of the gale seaworthy laden freighters wallowed, heaving hulls smashing into heavy, cold seas as gargantuan waves lashed against their bridges. Seasoned skippers brought their ships into ports many hours overdue, after keeping an anxious untiring vigil.

For five days commercial fishing craft lay at their quays, too wise to venture forth to pull in their fishing gear, out of spindrift combers that lashed the rocky shores with maniacal force.

A great loss is sustained by the fishermen owing to damage being done to their whitefish nets through the big blow. Very little fishing gear is expected to be salvaged from shoal waters, which will mean a large loss to fishermen.

Wild Geese.

Local hunters are predicting much colder weather. The reason? A large flock of Canada wild geese was seen on Friday flying over Lake Ontario in a southerly direction.

White-Tailed Deer.

Ernest Rorabeck of here, reports seeing a white-tailed deer on his farm last week.

Although conditions here no longer favor this species, occasionally individuals have drifted in from the mainland to the north, and during recent years have remained in the county.

A deer was shot near Cherry Valley during the winter of 1929-30. Deer were seen at Carrying Place and Rednersville in the autumn of 1938.

CLUB PRESIDENT RETIRES

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)— George Waring, president and guiding spark of the Toronto Ulster United Soccer team here, is retiring this season after a 10-year term. Waring had always hoped to see his team score a grand slam before he quit, and they did it this past season, taking the Dominion title, the Consols cup for the city championship, the Ontario Major League title, the Dunlop Cup and the Harris Trophy. The Red Handers played 50 games and won all but three, the losses being in exhibition matches.

SHIP OUT OF DANGER

New York, Nov. 26 — (AP) — The 7,176-ton Liberty ship Marie M. Meloney, reported sinking off coast of Portugal early Monday, radioed within an hour after sending a distress message that she was "out of danger" with another ship standing by, the United States Coast Guard here reported.

The name of the rescue ship was not learned immediately. The position of the Meloney, which left Downs, England, on its return voyage to Philadelphia, was given as 300 miles due west of Cape Finisterre, Spain.

TO SPEAK HERE

After having been trained in the Salvation Army College, these officers were commissioned in 1926. They occupied several appointments in Canada during ten years of service. Following this they were appointed to pioneer S. A. work in Egypt. Their efforts were confined to Port Said, which has been called "The Cross-Roads of the World." While in this appointment, they toured Palestine and had some very interesting experiences. Being transferred to Trinidad, British West Indies the Major was Chaplain to Prisons for four years. Prior to their return to Canada the Major had charge of all Salvation Army work in British Honduras, Central America. This included the management of a large training school for boys.

Before marriage Mrs. Underhill, who is a graduate of Grace Hospital, Ottawa, served on the staff of two S. A. hospitals in Canada.

For the past months Major and Mrs. Underhill have been engaged in full time evangelism in Ontario. They will conduct evangelistic services in Belleville from Nov. 29th. to Dec. 9th.

Seven-Year-Old Offers Solution Of Trieste Issue

New York, Nov. 26—(AP)—Seven-year-old Michelle Etcheverry awaited a reply today from State Secretary Byrnes to the letter she wrote Nov. 16 offering a solution to the Trieste problem which she believed would "get everything all settled and peaceful."

The girl, whose father, Pte. Alfred S. Etcheverry was killed near Luxembourg in January, 1945, wrote the following letter to Mr. Byrnes (her spelling has not kept pace with her interest in world affairs):

"I want to help you and Mr. Molotov settle the Trieste problem. The United Nations should chose up to slates of people who don't live in Trieste. The slates would be of people to run for government of Trieste. Then the Trieste people can vote for the slates they like best. Then this government would have full power and nobody else could have a say.

New Regulations For Oxygen Tents Urged by Jury

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 26—(CP)—Special recommendations regarding use of oxygen tents—familiar fixtures in most Canadian hospitals—were available today to hospital associations and municipal authorities from a coroner's jury that probed the death in hospital here of Aubrey Johnson 64.

Johnson's death Oct. 4 followed explosion of an oxygen tent and resulting fire. The coroner's jury, sitting yesterday with provincial experts and members of the Niagara Falls hospital trust present returned a verdict of accidental death but incorporated the suggested rules presented by Chief Coroner Smirle Lawson and Prof. Jocelyn Rogers, Provincial medico-legal expert.

An orderly from a local hospital, Leonard Morris, demonstrated use of the oxygen tent. Prof. Rogers said the tank was in good condition at the time of Johnson's death but some grease or oil probably had accumulated in the valve, causing the explosion and fire. Death of Johnson was due to inhaling irritant gaseous material and extensive burns.

Dr. Lorne Whittaker, Provincial pathologist, testified the man was in serious condition before the oxygen tent mishap and the burns he suffered were largely inflicted after death.

The jury's recommendations to hospital authorities were:

That lower pressure be used in the oxygen tanks and that equipment be given a blow-out test before actual use.

That synthetic or less inflammable tubing be used.

That the tent be constructed of non-inflammable material such as fibre glass.

That the sheet covering an oxygen tent patient be non-inflammable—of fibre glass, suitably sized and surfaced.

NEEDED MORE THAN THAT

Philadelphia, Nov. 26 — (AP) —Albert Culio, a 30-year-old war veteran, answered the doorbell, saw a gunman, handed over $2 and told the man he had no wallet. The thief tossed back the $2, said "I need more than that" and left.

Final Verification Canadian Graves Being Sent Out

National Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, has announced that final verification forms numbering 16,500 which presumably cover all known Canadian war graves, are being despatched to official next-of-kin as quickly as possible. As previously announced there are eleven all-Canadian cemeteries in Europe where Canada's dead of World War II lie buried. Four are in France; one in Belgium, three in Holland; one in Sicily and two in Italy.

Many other Canadian servicemen are interred in British plots and some, who flew in missions against the enemy and never returned, sleep in peace near the place where their planes crashed. All Canadian graves are registered, marked and cared for by a Dominion representative with the Imperial Graves Commission.

Saga of The Alps

Man's skill and daring and his ability to face whatever situation may arise and his readiness to take great chances to save those in peril are graphically exemplified in the scenes in the Bernese Alps during the past few days. The forced landing of a U. S. plane on a glacier was something that required the greatest presence of mind and mechanical skill. How the twelve people aboard, left by fate to their resourcefulness managed to preserve themselves in spite of the shortage of food and fuel and the extreme rigors of the climate on that pinnacle in the clouds is something that proves that human beings even when brought into the presence of death or grave danger and seemingly insurmountable conditions can preserve their alertness and take advantage of every opportunity to improve their situation. The two women of the party came through the gruelling ordeal as well as the men.

The rescuers showed the intrepid character of men who have been trained in aviation and mountain climbing and revealed their self-sacrificing nature in the risks they were ready to take to save the marooned party.

Man's engineering skill stands out in this saga of the bitter cold and icy world in which these scenes were unfolded.

The story is a triumph of the human spirit which is a very real fact in human experience. This event adds another story to the records of man's victory over circumstances and over the forces of nature. The situation might easily have ended in destruction of the party.

Man conquering adverse circumstances and natural conditions is a dramatic situation which inspires and will always hold a powerful appeal for the men and women, the boys and girls of the world, who believe in man's spirit and in his unselfishness in time of peril. The other appeal, the rescuer bringing back the lost, the injured and caring for them—that is another of the intriguing and appealing dramatic situations that appeal to men's hearts. There is no higher motive. It is such events as these which build a confidence in humanity. When a great crisis develops the spirit of humans rises with danger.

Agricultural Statistics

Agricultural statistics for the Province of Ontario in 1945 show that Hastings County had no fewer than 12,599 head of horses with a value of $1,108,712 and 77,556 head of cattle of a value of $4,125,979. There were 19,980 sheep and lambs on which a market value was placed of $159,840 and 52,385 swine worth $927,215. 426,971 poultry were worth $388,544. Of these 14,780 were turkeys, 6,121 geese and 2,549 ducks.

Assessed rural land in Hastings has an acreage of 1,041,844 of which 402,029 acres are cleared or 38.59 per cent. Oats production was 1,699,774 bushels, valued at $1,001,167. Tonnage of green corn for silo amounted to 43,592 with a value of $148,179. In potatoes there were 3,024 acres with a crop value of $377,395. The market value of alsike was $21,013, and of sweet clover $135,138. Alfalfa production amounted to 70,328 tons, markable at $833,387 and hay and clover amounting to 152,356 tons had a value of $1,668,298. Worth of mangels and all field crops was $4,850,352 of which $4,020 came from mangels.

Prince Edward County has 85.47 per cent of its assessed rural land cleared or 198,907 acres out of a total of 232,713. Last year's potato harvest was valued at $149,974 and turnips were grown to the amount of $2,404. The year's sweet clover production of 11,300 tons had a market value of $117,424 while alfalfa production reached 33,560 tons, worth $409,432 and hay and clover 66,823 tons, valued at $755,100. Cleared pasture had an acreage of 42,250. All field crops had a total value of $2,142,983.

The number of horses in the County of Prince Edward was 5,777 valued at $531,484. The cattle numbering 25,764 had a value of $1,629,831. Sheep and lambs totalled 6,724 worth $59,978 and swine, numbering 16,746 had a market figure of $300,691. The total value of poultry was $272,137 for 302,374 birds.

Their Good Deed

This is a true story with a moral, heard in the BBC's short-wave program "Calling East Africa."

An East African and his wife, visitors to England, faced with the problem of finding a house, a thing which is almost impossible in England today, saw just the thing they wanted one day while they were driving along the South Coast on holiday. It seemed to be a deserted house, at least the hedges and lawn obviously had not been cut for years, so they went into the garden and peered into the windows. To their confusion, there was an occupant, a dear old lady who explained that the reason why the house looked deserted was that she could not get any help in the garden and so it had become quite neglected. The East African couple, feeling rather conscience-stricken at having disturbed the old lady's privacy, insisted upon giving up a day of their holiday to mowing the old lady's lawn and clipping the hedge. The incident seemed closed—until about six months later when the East Africans heard from the old lady's son that she had died and that they could have the house. It was like being told that they had won first prize in a lottery.

The moral seems to be that good deeds are sometimes rewarded, and there is more than one way of getting a house.

The Nastiest Noise

Some little time ago the BBC in broadcasting animal noises from the zoo — and, incidentally, it was astonishing how like the lion the alligator sounded — asked the expert who was helping in the broadcast whether he could identify a noise, admittedly greatly magnified, which resembled something between the crunch of leaves and the ripple of water, says the London Times. The clue was that the noise was quite the nastiest known to nature, and the answer, given after both experts and listeners had time to think of the more horrific of beasts at their grisly work of killing and eating, was at once ingenious and unsatisfactory. It was "a moth gnawing a dinner-jacket."

Science in The Nursery

A manufacturer of toys has announced that he believes it will soon become practically and commercially possible to introduce radar into his products. Toy submarines and airplanes, guided by radar, may before long be added to the playthings of children.

If there is something intriguing, there is also something rather appalling to the idea. War's reflections in the nursery will have advanced far beyond the parade of the wooden soldiers. The weird wonders of military warfare will become the commonplaces of childhood's experiences.

Surely if this pace keeps up there may some day be a terrible reality to the cartoon recently published in Punch. It pictured a precocious child, big-browed and bespectacled, standing before a druggist's counter. The druggist, replying to his young customer's inquiry, is saying: "No, sorry, we have no uranium today."

THE FAR-AWAY GIRL

When I was young—so long ago—
And had no cash for hiring hacks,
The girls for whom I played the beau
Lived miles beyond the railroad tracks.

The girl next door was never mine.
I think she saw too much of me.
My undergarments on the line
On Monday mornings she could see.

She saw me ere I'd used a comb,
A veritable roustabout!
She saw me often coming home,
A youngster, with his shirt tail out.

The miles were truly miles back then,
And slow to come the trolley car.
All out of luck were escorts when
They drew the girls who lived afar.

I wondered why the girl next door
Turned up her pretty nose at me.
But life grows clearer, more and more.
She knew and saw too much of me.

'Safety Clause' In Agreements Nothing New

By SYDNEY CAMPBELL

London, Nov. 26 (Reuters) — British officials found nothing new in Washington's weekend disclosure that the United States will insist on a "safety clause" in any trade agreements it concludes, entitling it to withdraw any tariff concessions which prove harmful to United States economy.

British reaction also is known, namely that all reductions of tariffs and preferences must be and remain mutual. If the United States did take such action, Britain and the Dominions must be entitled to re-impose any cuts which they had compensatorily made in their tariffs or preferences. After all the talk at the London economic conference, that attitude has not weakened.

The point of hardening is significant. The London conferences decided that the concession for a cut in a high tariff may take the form of another country undertaking not to increase an existing low tariff

The reason is that countries with low tariffs fear that all-round percentage reductions would leave them practically defenceless while still leaving many United States tariffs prohibitive.

Thus in compensation for the United States cutting its tariff on say, textiles, Britain might agree not to increase her existing tariff on say, wheat. But the plain implication is that if the United States later re-imposed the cut in its textile tariff, on the ground that it was proving injurious to United States textile manufacturers, Britain would be entitled to raise her tariff on United States wheat above what it is now.

U.S. Truce Teams Are Withdrawn From Manchuria

Nanking, Nov. 26 — (AP) — Withdrawal of the United States truce teams from Manchuria because of the increasing tenseness of the military situation was reported today as the Chinese Communists scored gains in the area as well as in North China.

Reports from Peiping said the situation in Manchuria had grown so tense that the U. S. field team members were flown out Saturday in 12 planes.

In the Manchurian fighting several thousand Communists with artillery support were reported attacking positions around Nungan, 31 miles northeast of Changchun, the capital. Chinese press reports, unconfirmed, said a Communist force of 2,000 attempting to take Tientaishan, near Nungan, was repulsed in a five-hour battle.

MADE PLENTY OF MONEY

London, Ont., Nov. 26—(CP)—A 15-year-old from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., who smokes a corn cob pipe was one of two youths arrested by city police Sunday night in a wave of money thefts from milk bottles. The other is a 17-year-old Londoner, alleged to have told police that he made more money in the morning raids on milk bottles than he could at his job.

The young pipe smoker was first spotted by a housewife a couple of days ago as he fled her veranda — he will appear in juvenile court.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Farmers' Expenditures Run to Huge Figure

Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer

"That was a keen item on your editorial page the other day entitled "Revolution in Barns", in which your New York contemporary (The Times) indicates that: "Farmers are evincing great interest in one-storey fireproof barns divided into sections".

That seems to me to be a step in the right direction, and, who knows?, maybe in the direction of fire-proof rural dwellings, too!

The reference to the estimate of the experts "that farm construction expenditures may total $2,000,000,000 a year for the next ten years" is a constructive sign of the times—so-to-speak the reverse side of the depression coin, down on the farms?

While writing, I thought that the average busy urban reader would find the following list of the "Operating Expenditures of the Canadian Farmer" in the year 1945 as interesting as I did. The figures give a solid base to the assertion of one of your correspondents that "When Agriculture is prosperous, we all are!":

Taxes on all farm land	$ 68,248,000
Net farm rent	35,794,000
Wages to paid labor	122,801,000
Interest on mortgages and all debts	29,796,000
Feed and Seed (purchased)	173,414,000
Trucks (licences and operating costs)	16,564,000
Farm automobile costs	24,421,000
Blacksmith, Machine Shop, Binder Twine,	20,576,000
Fertilizer	21,622,000
Repairs to Buildings and Machinery ..	49,219,000
Miscellaneous (including veterinary expenses, fencing, hardware, rope, salt, etc.)	46,354,000
Depreciation on total farm plant	97,895,000
Total	$750,592,000

GOVT. ORDERS NEW

The contempt count is based on Mr. Lewis' disregard for Judge Goldsborough's order of last week that he rescind his termination of the miners' contract with the government. In yesterday's brief hearing, ending with setting of the trial for Wednesday, Mr. Lewis' counsel contended Judge Goldsborough had no authority in law to issue the order.

As the strike went into its sixth day, more than 28,000 workers in other industries already had been thrown off their jobs in direct repercussions.

Schools, steel mills, railroads and hundreds of communities began to feel the pinch acutely.

The government ordered new curbs on coal deliveries to schools and all government buildings, ruling that they must apply to the Washington office of the Solid Fuels Administration for permits.

Cut Passenger Service

Emergency coal stocks were ordered held strictly for public utilities and other essential services. Coal-burning railroads already had cut passenger service by 25 per cent yesterday.

A rigid check was ordered on the coal-saving dimout, which became effective at 6 p.m. E.S.T. yesterday in 21 states and the district of Columbia.

The C.P.A. also considered ending its allocation of steel to industry for the strike's duration, on grounds that there will be insufficient steel to ration once essential needs are met.

Two U.S. steel subsidiaries announced drastic curtailment of production, effective immediately, including a drop of 35 per cent of capacity by Carnegie-Illinois. Jones and Loughlin steel dropped to 63 per cent.

On the political side of the crisis, Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem.-Ark.) renewed his call for President Truman to resign, declaring in a broadcast that the chief executive cannot deal with Mr. Lewis supported by "the full authority of our nation."

Creation of a country-wide system of labor courts was proposed by Senator Homer Ferguson (Rep.-Mich.), as a solution for future strikes of equally dire consequence in industries affecting the public welfare.

TORONTO COUNCIL

Although the decision of council was overwhelming in favor of submitting the cocktail question, there was considerable reluctance when it came to expressions of opinion on actual operation of cocktail bars.

Mayor Robert Saunders took no part in the debate except to say in answer to one question that he was in favor of putting the question.

Aldeman Charles Sims opened the debate with an attack on the provincial government of Premier Drew and said the electors would "vote 'no', to show their disapproval of Drew."

Controller K. B. McKellar, who first brought the question up in board of control, failed to express an opinion yesterday. Controller H. E. McCallum likewise was silent.

The "plebiscite" will be restricted to property owners and tenants, a potential total of 350,000 The voting qualifications, laid down in the Ontario Municipal Act, limit such a ballot. Thus thousands of residents such as those living in single rooms, those living with relatives, will not vote.

Voters Will Be Busy

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Municipal voters here next New Year's Day, Toronto's traditional civic election date, are going to be busier than a one-armed paperhanger when they get to the polls.

They always vote for a mayor four board of control members two ward aldermen, two ward school trustees.

Now council has added three "plebiscites," as follows:

1. For or against introduction of cocktail bars.

2. For or against the city undertaking a clearance, re-planning and rehabilitation of the Regent Park area in east-central Toronto. The area is bounded by Parliament, River, Gerrard and Dundas Streets.

3. For or against construction of a civic square, at a cost of about $2,000,000, immediately west of the city hall in which a new police administration building might be erected in future years.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By, WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

NO DESSERT IN A HEALTHFUL DIET

This hurts me as much as it does you, old timers. But even if it hurts a little it is good for you to know that dessert seldom has a place in a health diet.

Even the diet of the growing child or 'teen age youth should include dessert only if or when the youngster is as active physically as a normal youngster should be.

The Food and Nutrition Board, National Research Council, whose edicts are as authoritative as those of the "czar" of baseball or the movies, now (1946) recommends the following minimum daily requirements:

Vitamin A.... 500 International Units, for adults.

For infants under one year of age 1500 units.

For children three years old 2000 units, and 500 more units daily for each three years in age thereafter till the adult level of 5000 units daily is reached.

For the expectant mother, 6000 units daily; and for the nursing mother 8000 units daily.

These allowances are based on the premise that carotene (plant the precursor of vitamin A) is the source of two-thirds of the vitamin A in the diet and that carotene has only half or less than half the value of natural vitamin A (from fish liver oil).

Thiamin..(vitamin B1(.... 1 to 2 milligrams.

Infants under one year of age need about 1 1-2 milligrams daily.

Riboflavin..(vitamin B2) .... 1.6 to 2.6 mgs. daily.

Infants under one year need 0.6 milligram daily.

Niacin.. (nicotinic acid).... 12 to 20 milligrams daily.

Infants under one year require 4 milligrams daily.

Other B complex factors will probably be sufficient if these three are supplied by the diet.

Ascorbic acid.. (vitamin C).. 75 to 100 milligrams.

For infants less than a year old, 30 milligrams.

Vitamin D... (sunshine vitamin)..500 to 800 units.

Adults have the least need for D, although the allowance mentioned is advisable if the individual is seldom exposed to sunlight.

Infants under one year require 400 to 800 units daily.

Expectant and nursing mothers require 400 to 800 units daily.

Elderly people probably need vitamin D too.

The board's report states that "a good diet with a variety of natural foods" will probably supply these minimum requirements. Such a diet should include these items:

At least four eggs weekly.

One serving daily of citrus fruit or tomato or their juices, or fresh uncooked salad greens.

One quart of milk daily for children, plus an extra source of vitamin D; one pint of milk daily for adults or its equivalent in cheese.

One serving daily of lean meat, fish, poultry or seafood. (Seafood is any fish or shellfish from the sea.)

One serving daily of a cooked leafy green or yellow vegetable or fruit.

One portion daily of whole grain bread or cereal.

You see, there is no dessert.

After all, dessert is superflous when and if you have just had a good square meal. It is downright gluttony to pack in six or eight hundred more calories on top of a thousand calories meal just because the sweet comes with the meal at no extra charge and is easy to eat even though your appetite is already satisfied.

Only those who do honest work muscular work, or play or exercise hard, may profitably take dessert. For such individuals, children, youths or adults after a meal is the right time to take sweets of any kind.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Are bumblebees essential to red clover?

Bumblebees, which have long tongues, can easily get nectar from even the largest red clover blossoms and a profitable partnership exists between them and this plant.

Some 200 species of bumblebees are known and they were indigenous to virtually all parts of the world where there is vegetation except Australian and New Zealand. Red clover was not grown successfully from domestic seed in those regions until bumblebees were introduced. Originally there were no bees or other insects in that part of the world that could successfully pollinate red clover.

About 1884 the British government offered one shilling apiece for hibernating female bumblebees for the purpose of sending them to Australia and New Zealand to pollinate red clover. The bumblebees became acclimated quickly and not only multiplied and spread rapidly but seemed to thrive better in their new home than in their old one. This experiment was successful and since then red clover has been produced in abundance in those regions from domestic seed.

Bumblebee honey, though delicious, is seldom eaten by man because it is produced only in small quantities and is hard to obtain. Unlike hive bees, bumblebees do not live in large colonies and they are uncontrolled.

Each colony of bumblebees is started in the spring by a female that has survived by hibernation and is broken up in the fall. These wild bees do not make honeycombs like those of hive bees but deposit their honey in a comparatively small number of more or less globular and irregularly arranged wax cells in nests on or a little below the surface of the soil.

Although red clover is their favorite it is not their only source of nectar.

Bumblebees are becoming scarcer with the extension of cultivation and the destruction of their nesting places, and scientists are trying to solve the problem of red clover fertilization by developing honeybees with longer tongues and red clover with shorter flowers.

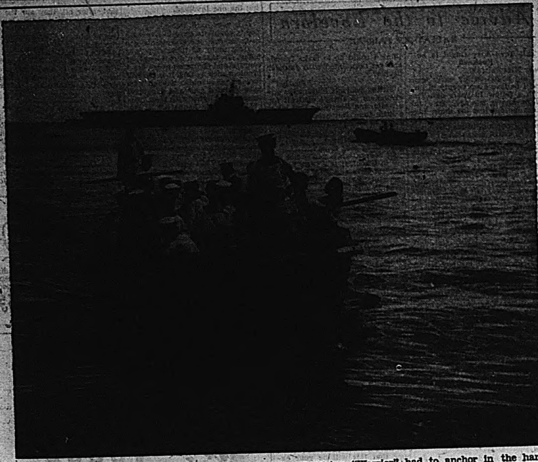
YES



Too large to come alongside the docks at Kingston, the 18,000-ton "Warrior" had to anchor in the harbor during her stay. Here one of the ship's motorboats is seen bringing "libertymen" ashore for leave. "Warrior" lies in the distance behind them.

Native handicraft—beads, baskets, straw hats—were popular souvenirs among the Canadian sailors visiting Kingston. Able Seaman J. W. Stimson, of Vancouver, an aircraft handler from "Warrior," is shown making a purchase while another Canadian sailor tries a gaudy straw hat for size.

Canadians Visit Tropical Island

By Lieutenant - Commander Frederick B. Watt On Board H.M.C.S. "Warrior" At Sea (By Mail):—The ancient colony of Jamaica and the Royal Canadian Navy are not strangers but their first important meeting since the end of the war, with the arrival of the aircraft carrier "Warrior," has been like nothing that ever preceded it.

The handful of R.C.N. destroyers who visited in pre-war days and the Canadian anti-submarine craft who performed creditably in the Caribbean during the war itself were of the "old" Navy. When the largest ship of the new peacetime R.C.N. steamed through the narrow channel into Kingston harbor on a recent morning, followed by her escorting destroyer, H.M.C.S. "Nootka," the impression created was an entirely fresh one.

"Nootka," larger than any of the Canadian destroyers which had previously been in Jamaica found a berth alongside a dock, but it was necessary for the 18,000-ton carrier to remain at anchor, her bulk dominating the entire harbor.

The first official function — on the day of arrival — was a reception given by the Canadian Trade Commissioner, M. H. Palmer, for the ship's officers. Attended by His Excellency the Governor, Sir John Huggins, and other leaders in the life of the island, the party was held in the exotic settle of the Myrtle Bank hotel garden.

During the day members of the crews of both Canadian warships scattered widely over the city of more than 90,000 people, some in parties that had been arranged beforehand, others exploring and shopping. A certain amount of souvenir collecting had begun when there was some supervised trading with a swarm of bumboats that surrounded the ship after she had come to anchor, but it was the returning leave boats in the evening that produced the real wave of native baskets, beads and other colorful West Indian articles.

Diving boys did pretty well at entertaining the sailors who remained on board, by recovering coins thrown into the sea. The sweltering Canadians envied the apparent immunity of the swimmers to the numerous sharks that patrol Kingston harbor and seriously discourage normal bathing.

On shore many of the Canadians escaped the heat in local swimming pools or by motor excursions into the cool mountains that rise to a height of 7,500 feet in the interior of the island.

The Suffolk Regiment and the Jamaica Battalion of the local garrison seized on the opportunity for outside competition in football and baseball. Water polo was a popular sport with the Canadians and special dances made it possible for all officers and men to share in Jamaican hospitality. All this was rounded out by the open doors of innumerable private homes.

Shore leave started at noon, but the cooler morning watches, starting at 5.30 a.m., saw no let-up in preparation for the resumption of flying once the ship left harbor. Full advantage was taken of the opportunity for serving the recently hard-worked aircraft and in readying the ship for further training exercises.

At the end of the three-day stay, as "Warrior" and "Nootka" said goodbye to the lovely island of Jamaica, the partially interrupted intensive training program was resumed.

That program and a final farewell to the old British colony were combined when "Warrior" shot off six of her aircraft within the harbor itself while weighing anchor. Whipped into the air by the accelerator gear on the flight deck, the planes climbed swiftly took up formation and roared over the city for half an hour as the carrier and her escort snaked their way through the winding channel to the Caribbean.

Jamaicans, informed by the newspapers that the launching would take place, crowded the waterfront for the show. Many came out from shore in small craft and, as the ships got under way, followed alongside to wave a last goodbye.

The 1,200 men of the R.C.N. had made a genuine hit with their hosts and it was a toss-up as to who felt the most regret as the visit came to an end — the Jamaicans or the Canadians.

To Canadians who had for the most part seen all their previous bananas, pineapples, coconuts and citrus fruits in store windows, their palm trees, cane fields and blue lagoons in the movies or story books, it had been the entrance to a new world — a world that was very hard to turn one's back on.

Ahead, however, lie new lands and a new ocean, and the commencement of close association with the cruiser "Uganda" and the destroyer "Crescent" in the thoroughgoing training program which has been embodied in "Warrior's" voyage from Halifax to her winter base as Esquimalt, B.C.

3,370 Immigrants Intercepted at Sea

Jerusalem, Nov. 26 — (AP) — Official sources announced Monday a ship loaded with 3,370 Jewish immigrants seeking to enter Palestine illegally had been intercepted at sea and was being escorted to Haifa by two destroyers.

The port area of Haifa was immediately closed to all civilians in anticipation of the arrival of the vessel.

The British transports Empire Keywood and Ocean Vigour, which previously have been used to deport illegal immigrants to Cyprus, were reported en route to Haifa.

Jewish lawyers in Jerusalem meanwhile went into court to file Habeas Corpus proceedings on behalf of 1,900 of the passengers aboard the refugee ship, whose names they were said to have obtained from unknown sources in the embarkation port.

The right of attorneys to file Habeas Corpus proceedings to prevent deportation of specific persons was affirmed by the Palestine Chief Justice three weeks ago in ruling out an attempt to institute blanket "John Doe" proceedings covering all passengers aboard the refugee ship San Dimitrios.

MARMORA

L. Williams Worshipful Master Of L.O.L. No 319

Marmora — Officers for the ensuing year were elected at the November meeting of Marmora L.O.L. 319 held on Thursday evening. For the election, County Master W. J. Johnston occupied the chair.

Following are the officers elect: W. M., L. Williams; D. M., G. Jones; Chaplain, W. J. Cottrell; Recording Secretary, C. Holland; Financial Secretary, G. Fluke; Treasurer, J. R. Hart; Director of Ceremonies, C. Gray; 1st Lecturer, R. J. Scott; 2nd Lecturer, S. Arnold; Committee, W. Smith, T. E. Potts, C. Tandy, H. Lowery and P. Wood; Sick Committee, T. E. Potts, J. R. Hart and S. Arnold; Trustees, J. R. Hart, R. J. Scott and S. Williams; Auditors, C. Holland and R. J. Scott.

Following the election speeches were heard from the County Master, District Master, Clare Tanner and Past Masters R. J. Hart and T. E. Potts.

Later in the session the presentation of a Life Membership Certificate was made by County Master Johnston to Past County Master W. J. Cottrell who has been a member of the lodge for the past thirty-two years. The recipient made appreciative reply. The installation of officers will be carried out at the December meeting.

Three Alarms Answered Over The Weekend

Three alarms were answered by the local fire department Monday morning, two of them being for minor blazes which caused little or no damage, while the third was believed by firemen to be a false chimney fire alarm.

First call was from the Consolidated Optical Plant on Coleman Street where a blaze similar to one reported a week ago was discovered. The blaze was stated by firemen to be in a partition in the main building of the plant.

Faulty electric wiring was believed to be responsible for a small blaze in an apartment on Water Street, while the third alarm supposedly originated in the Coleman Street district, but firemen could find no blazing chimney when they searched the district.

Asks Canadians to Help War-Torn Lands Thru Missionary Givings

St. Catharines, Nov. 26 (CP)—People of devastated Europe are looking today for aid from the small minority of nations which were not hit by bombs and shells during the recent war. "They will not ask for help, but they will judge us by the help which we send," said Dr. Robert (Bob) McClure, medical missionary to South China, speaking last night at a United Church rally.

Dr. McClure, who served with the Red Cross on the Burma Road during the war, asked Canadians to aid war-torn lands through missionary givings. He criticized "red tape" and said U. N. R. R. A. except in a few cases, was unsatisfactory.

Gold Coast Children Help Hungry Europe

Accra, Gold Coast, Nov. 25 — (CP) — School children in the Gold Coast are helping to relieve the oil shortage in Europe. Between February and July pupils of the Oda government school collected 4,006 pounds of palm kernels—1,502 pounds in July alone—and children of the Tutu infant and junior schools at Koforidua gathered 1,543 pounds in April, May and June.

All the money from the sale of these kernels goes to the children who know their efforts will help to relieve hunger conditions among school children in Europe.

Dublin (CP) — The government plans provision of 100 new vocational training schools to bring one within five miles of every person.

Dairy Industry Enriches County By $2,000,000

Picton, Nov. 26—The important place the dairy industry holds in Prince Edward County was stressed by Agricultural Representative F. J. Webster at the annual meeting of Prince Edward Concentrated Milk Producers at their banquet Friday night. Returns from this industry will amount to more than two million dollars, making it the most important in the county he said. More than 3,000 head of holsteins will be shipped from Prince Edward to the United States this year, he said. This is an increase of 600 head over last year, and means a total revenue from this source alone of $400,000.

Harry Scott, president of the Ontario Association referred to the Royal Commission on milk and stated that unless satisfactory results are secured, producers would have to use plainer talk. He stressed the need of a strong agricultural condition in the nation's economy, and felt that unless agriculture received a fair deal it would mean a depression. He urged farmers to look ahead, to produce higher quality milk and for producers to aim at owning their own plants.

Burton Baxter, president of the County Association, believed that all milk should be pooled and one price paid as is the case in England. Zoning would mean cheaper transportation to factories. He also felt factories should be owned by producers.

Mrs. Gordon Bell sang two solos and S. Lockyer led in a sing-song. A. K. Leonard showed two films. Frank Huff gave the secretary's report. Officers elected were — President, Burton Baxter; vice-president, Sam Dodds; secretary-treasurer, Frank Huff; Directors, M. Wallbridge, Ameliasburgh; Milton Brooks, Athol; Herb Taylor, Hillier; Barton Cronk, Hallowell; Harold Noxon, Sophiasburgh; Herbert Kerr, North Marysburgh; auditors, Hilton McCartney and Arthur Davis.

Door prizes were won by Mrs. S. P. Dodds, B. Shannon, A. K. Leonard, Oscar Parks and E. Shannon.

SHARP DROP PREDICTED

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—A sharp drop of 20.9 points in anticipated steel production this week, due to the coal shutdown, has been forecast by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Production was expected to plummet from 91.4 per cent of capacity last week to 70.5 per cent this week, the institute said.

Only rarely has production slid off so sharply in a single week. The drop would mean a decrease from 1,610,800 tons of ingots last week to 1,242,500 tons this week. The institute said shortages of coal was the sole reason.

London (CP) — Motor Manufacturer Lord Nuffield told a meeting of automobile dealers there is "no chance today of the £100 ($400) car."

Douglas, Isle of Man (CP) — The air service between Belfast and Isle of Man, suspended in 1940, is being restored.

WEDDINGS

BROWN—FENN

The wedding of Dorothy Mae, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Fenn, to Reynold John Brown, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Young, of Richmond Hill, Ontario, took place at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. E. W. Fenn, on Saturday, November 16th., at four o'clock.

The beautiful candlelight ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Flatt before the fireplace banked with ferns and white 'mums, in the presence of immediate relatives only.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length gown of fuchsia crepe, with fitted bodice and draped skirt, black sequin hat with shoulder-length veil and black accessories. Her corsage was of Rapture roses.

Miss Mildred Bertrim attended the bride as maid of honor, wearing a gray crepe gown with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

The groom was attended by Mr. John Gibson, of Toronto.

Wedding music was played by the bride's aunt, Mrs. G. M. Miller.

At the reception immediately following the ceremony, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a gown of powder blue lace with black accessories and corsage of Rapture roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing a gown of delphinium blue crepe trimmed with gold sequins, with black accessories and corsage of Rapture roses.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Brown left for a trip to Ottawa and eastern points. For travelling, the bride wore a black and pink gown of French wool trimmed with gold sequins, Persian Lamb coat and black accessories.

Prior to her marriage the bride was entertained at two miscellaneous showers, the hostesses being Mrs. G. M. Miller and Miss Mildred Bertrim, and employees of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation, of which the bride has been an employees, made a presentation.

Mrs. Geo. L. Fenn entertained at a trousseau tea in honor of her daughter, on Thursday, when Miss Mary Elizabeth Miller, cousin of the bride-to-be, opened the door for the guests.

Miss Mildred Bertrim displayed the trousseau, and Miss Ruth Doig showed the gifts, while Mrs. G. M. Miller invited the guests to the tea room, where the table was most attractively arranged with its snowy linen cloth centred with a crystal bowl of pink carnations and white baby 'mums, on either side of which stood crystal candelabra holding tall white tapers.

Presiding over silver services were Mrs. Howard A. Bertrim and Mrs. A. J. Dilts; the Misses Jean Sills and Marian Bertrim assisting with the serving of the delectable refreshments.

McKEOWN—DONOHUE

The Church of Assumption, Erinsville, was the setting for a very pretty wedding on November 12, at 9.30 a.m., when Loretta Agnes, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Donohue, became the bride of William James McKeown, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McKeown. Rev. Father Powell officiated and celebrated the Nuptial Mass. Gerald and Edward Gaffney acted as acolytes. Mr. Ambrose Kidd as organist was assisted by the choir rendering appropriate hymns.

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus" looked lovely in a floor-length gown of white slipper satin with net and satin inserts. It was fashioned with a fitted basque cowl neckline and tightly fitting long sleeves. Her finger-tip veil was held in place by a headdress of matching white satin calot. She carried a bouquet of red roses and maidenhair fern.

Miss Audrey Gillen, of Toronto, was equally attractive, as bridesmaid, gowned in ice blue taffeta with a net skirt, the bodice fashioned in long torso style with sweetheart neckline. She wore matching taffeta hat and carried a bouquet of yellow and white 'mums.

Little Miss Mary Finn, of Peterborough, niece of the groom, was flower girl, making a quaint picture in a floor-length gown of pink brocaded taffeta. Her matching shirred bonnet was tied with streamers of pink satin, and she carried a nosegay of assorted flowers.

Mr. Joseph McKeown of Kingston, assisted the groom, while Mr. Edward McKeown, Toronto, and Mr. P. J. Donohue, brother of the bride, acted as ushers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Hotel Paisley, in Napanee, dinner being served to forty-five of the immediate relatives. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a dress of black crepe trimmed with lime green, and a corsage of roses. The groom's mother assisted, in a black crepe dress with a corsage of roses. The bride's table, beautiful with a lace cloth, and decorations in pink and white, with small flowers, was centred with a three-tier wedding cake. Mr. Edmund Dowling, of Deseronto, performed the duties of toastmaster; the groom ably responding

For travelling to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride donned a grey suit with cuffs of brown Beaver, fuchsia blouse and matching accessories with a corsage of roses. On their return Mr. and Mrs. McKeown will reside at 338 Dublin St., Peterborough.

HAMILTON—SLAVEN

Picton, Nov. 26.—A wedding of wide interest was solemnized in St. Gregory's church, Picton, Monday morning, when E. Joan Slaven, daughter of Harry Slaven, and the late Mrs. Slaven, Picton, became the bride of James Vincent Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hamilton, of Elgin. Rev. R. J. Coyle officiated and Miss Mary Joan Hensman was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long gown of white lace, made with sweetheart neckline, tight bodice and finger-tip sleeves. She carried red roses.

Miss Catharine Hamilton, Osgoode, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. She wore a gown of pale green net and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Anne Vanderwater, in blue organdy, was flower girl.

Joseph Slaven, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's aunt, Miss Edith Heffernan, who received wearing black crepe. The groom's mother also received, wearing black crepe. The assistants were Mrs. A. R. Vanderwater, Mrs. Rodney Rundle, Miss Rita Heffernan, Mrs. T. Heffernan.

For travelling to New York City, the bride wore a brown gabardine suit with green accessories.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. Hamilton and Arthur Hamilton, Elgin; William Hamilton, Brockville; Mrs. L. Roach, Montreal; Edward Hamilton, Ottawa; William Slaven, Toronto.

GILES—COOK

At one-thirty on the afternoon of November 16th., a very pretty marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, when Rev. E. W. Todd, of Carrying Place, united Hester Amelia, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Cook, of Massassaga, with Ronald Malcolm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Giles, of Mountain View.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made a charming picture in a gown of white slipper satin with three-quarter length sleeves and circular train, her finger-tip veil of white misty tulle falling from a halo headdress edged in pearls. She carried a Colonial bouquet of pink Delight roses, bouvardia and baby 'mums. Her only ornament was a gold locket, the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid, Miss June Gray, wore a floor-length gown of silver net over blue chiffon, a matching shoulder length veil, caught with a pink floral headdress; and she carried a bouquet similar to that of the bride.

Mr. Arthur Adams ably performed the duties of groomsman.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. W. Gray for the ceremony and during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mrs. Cook received wearing a moss green dress and a corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother wearing an ensemble of black crepe with sequin trimming, and a corsage of Better Time roses.

For a motor trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and points in the U.S., the bride donned a tailored brown suit with matching accessories.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Picton, Napanee, Paris, Ont., and Belleville.

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

WELLMAN'S W. I.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Matthews on November 20, the President, Mrs. Victor Taylor, presiding. The meeting opened with the Institute Ode and The Lord's Prayer in unison. Plans were made to hold a home cooking sale in Belleville Market on November 30. Reports of the Women's Institute convention held in Belleville last month, were given by Miss Emma Rainie and Mrs. Taylor. Mrs. F. Beckett led in community singing. The topic on agriculture was well given by Mrs. Lindsay Pollock. Piano solo, Mrs. F. Beckett and a humorous reading by Mrs. Carl Clancy concluded the program. The hostess served refreshments assisted by Miss Hazel McKenzie and Mrs. Chas. Dunham.

Conduct Unseemly At Some Weddings Says Clergyman

Sunderland, England, Nov. 26. (CP)—Rev. Robert Burt, disturbed by "unseemly conduct" at weddings, wrote in his parish magazine that "many couples ought to go elsewhere than church to be married."

These are some of his own experiences, he said:

". . . . I was just in time to stop the bridegroom lighting a cigaret already in his mouth."

"There was a very charming young lady who saw no reason why selections from 'The Chocolate Soldier' shouldn't be played on the organ at her wedding."

". . . . I had to stand waiting in the middle of the service while the happy couple embraced in a long, lingering kiss."

"I have had to stop a hymn to ask the bride and groom to cease whispering."

"There have been times when the smell of alcohol from the wedding party has been enough to knock one down."

"All this, of course, is most unseemly,' he wrote.

"Sometimes after a wedding I have had the awful feeling that the bride and groom would have done much better to have married at the registry office."

ALLAN MILLS

Honor War Brides At Tea With Gifts

Allan Mills—The Springbrook W. A. and Junior Adult Bible Class held a tea at the home of Mrs G. Meiklejohn on Wednesday afternoon in honor of three war brides who recently came to Canada namely, Mrs. Geo. Bateman, Mrs. Fred Hodge, Springbrook and Mrs. Ralph McKeown of Allan Mills. The program consisted of community singing and contests.

Mrs. Hiram Mumby read an address to the brides and they were presented with silver casseroles for which each thanked the ladies.

During the afternoon Mrs. J.R. Holden was also presented with a wool blanket from the W. A. prior to her departure at the end of the month to her new home in Coldwater.

Mrs. Holden thanked the W. A. and dainty refreshments were served, tea being poured by Mrs. Walter Heath and Mrs. Emerson Reid.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This Teen-Ager Ought to be Spanked

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl in my early teens and I believe I am deeply in love with a fellow 19 years old. This fellow knows my age, but the takes me out just the same. Like any other fellow, he tries to act smart. I put him in his place, and he then asked me to forgive him, saying he wanted to find out for himself what type of girl I am. This fellow says he loves me very much, yet at other times he seems to have no interest in me.

As I go out with an older crowd, I stay out very late, but I can assure you I do nothing I should be ashamed of. I got drunk at a party not so long ago. My boy friend was at this party, but I ignored him completely. His best friend took me home, and now my boy friend keeps saying I like his friend better than I like him. How can I tell if my boy friend really loves me?

"In Love. With an Ex-Sailor."

You have some very strange standards of conduct, haven't you, Teen-Ager? One minute you're telling me you do nothing to be ashamed of, and the next you're boasting about getting drunk at a party. I suppose you think that was a very sophisticated thing to do. It wasn't, though. It only makes you appear a very silly little girl who isn't old enough to know how to behave, and who ought to be in bed at nine o'clock every night instead of being alloyed to run around with older boys and girls and stay out late—and who is spoiling for a spanking, into the bargain. I can't imagine what your parents can be thinking about not to take you in hand.

As for being "deeply in love," that's also very silly. You don't know any more about love than you do about how to behave. You don't even know enough to refuse to have anything further to do with a young man who gets fresh with you just to find out if you're fair game. Instead, you fancy you're in love with him! What nonsense!

My advice to you, only you won't take it, is to quit trying to act out some half-baked ideas of what it means to be grown up and put your mind on the things that normally interest girls your age.

The Problem of Making New Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a boy of 17, and am puzzled about making friends.

We moved East, from the West, and I have lived in this new place about two months. I am working, and plan to go to night school a few nights a week. I have no way of making friends, since I don't go to High School or belong to any clubs. The few friends I have made are much older, and, also, are all men.

For entertainment I go to movies, or take in a ball game, but have to go alone and don't enjoy this too much. What do you think I could do to make friends and get acquainted with younger people?

"Puzzled"

Fitting yourself into a new environment is always difficult for a while, and something that takes a little time. But people who are eager to make new friends rarely have much trouble in making such an adjustment. And you seem to be that type.

Of course, when you're not going to school, it is a little harder to meet boys and girls your own age. But, possibly, there may be some in night school who will give you a start. You say you don't belong to any clubs. I think you should look around at once to find one that you can join. If you go to church, there should be young people's groups there. And how about the Y.M.C.A.? It has clubs and other groups among which, I am sure, you would find one that would interest you. And once you have made friends among the boys, you will almost certainly receive invitations that will bring you into contact with sisters, girl friends, and others.

Many large cities have youth centres today and it may be there is one in your city that would be a fine place to go for new friends.

If there are any girls at all in the place where you work, I would suggest that you invite one of them to go to a movie or a ball game with you, even if she is not someone you want to see a great deal of. You always have to start somewhere in making new friends and sometimes it's easier to begin close at hand. Once you have made a beginning, one friend leads to another and, before you know it, you have a wide circle of them. I hope that this will be your experience and that you will soon find yourself a real place in the social life of your community.

In-Law Trouble Regarding Children

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 23 and my husband is three years my senior. We get along fine, except where our youngster is concerned.

Owing to the housing situation, we have had to move in with his folks which, as you know, practically ruins any marriage. My problem is that the baby is over two years old and is just as spoiled as can be. He is so sweet when I have him alone, but when grandmother steps in, everything goes up in smoke and he just plain ignores me. At first, my husband blamed me and said I was a poor mother, but now the baby is acting the same way toward him. When I try to correct him for little things he does wrong, grandmother runs to the rescue immediately. We aren't allowed to care for him ourselves. There is always far too much interference.

I love my mother-in-law and hate to hurt her, but right now we are hurt far more than she can possibly realize. What can we do about this situation without hurting the one involved.

"Broken-Hearted Parents"

It is very hard, indeed, for any young couple to have to live with in-laws. And there certainly are a great many of these situations today. It takes a great deal of courage and character to handle a problem such as this. It is too bad that so many older women who have married sons and daughters temporarily living with them cannot keep their hands off the young people's affairs, especially in the matter of bringing up their children.

If the parents writing the letter above can find a home for themselves before too long they will undoubtedly be able to correct whatever harm may have been done and get their child started off again in the right direction. As far as their fear that the child will grow away from them is concerned, I believe this to be groundless. I discussed this point with a child psychologist and the opinion given was that, as soon as the child is removed from his grandmother's house, he will certainly turn to the ones who would be most with him then; that is, the parents.

In the meantime, I think this father and mother will have to take a firm stand with the grandmother and let her understand that, after all, they are the parents of the child and they must be the ones to have the major control of him. The grandmother may resent it at first, but, if the parents proceed tactfully, she will probably get over it. I hope they will be able to find their own home soon and remove themselves from this disturbing environment.

Housing and Lumbering Discussed by Rotarian Bert Houston at Luncheon

Startling changes in the lumber and building supplies business were predicted for the near future by Rotarian Bert Houston in a classification address given to the service club here on Monday.

"In the past," he said, "lumber yards have been established in some more or less difficult to approach corner down by the railroad tracks. Their offices were dingy and often dirty. Contractors and builders eventually got to them, but they were sadly lacking in the fine art of merchandizing.

"That is going to be changed," the speaker said. "The dealer is going to wash his dirty face, put on his best clothes, and come up the main street and hobnob with the rest of the white-collar merchants.

"He will build modern display rooms, will sell houses by the package whether custom-built or fabricated, key in the lock. He will sell and contract all types of building maintenance and repair. He will sell complete building and maintenance service, also home comfort catering to style and ideas rather than squares, board-feet sacks and become more of a department store for everything for the building of the home."

Entering on Great Period

Rotarian Houston also predicted that the wood products industry is entering upon one of the greatest periods in advancement in its history, with wartime developments and techniques developing new products, materials and methods.

"Canadian wood," he said, "is proving one of the most versatile of raw materials known to man. From it modern science is developing hundreds of new products which promise to place wood in the front rank of the raw materials in the world of tomorrow."

"While most of us associate cordwood and pulpwood with the term few of us think of rayon dress goods, gun powder, cellophane, ink, sugar, alcohol, plastics which are only a few examples of thousands of wood products."

Not Limitless

Canada's forest natural resources are not limitless as was supposed some years ago, the speaker pointed out. Over a period of years Canadian forests have been exploited. Trees have been cut for commercial gain only with no thought as to the future. Also during the war years, it was necessary to concentrate cutting operations in the best and easily reached timber stands because it was essential to obtain the highest possible output per man-day from the limited supply of labor available. Heavy losses were suffered from fires and insects partly due to the depletion of experienced staffs by enlistment.

Investigation by forest engineers has indicated that the productive capacity of Canadian forest soil may enable her eventually to support forest industries greater than ever before. But this can only come about if the forests are properly managed as crops and adequately protected from fires, insect pests and tree diseases. If through better forest management forests can be placed on a perpetual crop basis and rotate to crop as a farmer does his grain then prospects for the forest future are excellent.

On Crop Basis

He compared the Swedish forest and crops to those of Canada. "The Swedish forests," he said, "have been on a perpetual crop basis for years, and the country has been on a high standard of living. Its forest area is only one-tenth that of Canada yet they employ 4,000 forest engineers to our 400."

The key to progress, Rotarian Houston felt, lies in the co-operation of the three parties most interested—the industry, and the Dominion and Provincial governments. The interest of the industry lies in a permanent source of raw materials. The provincial government expects a valuable source of revenue while the Dominion government is interested because of its concern with the maintenance of a high level of economic activity throughout the country, with the support of foreign trade.

Speaks on Housing

Referring to the housing situation and the industry, the speaker reminded the clubmen that "you can't pull a house out of a hat like a magician does a rabbit. It all comes back to the basic fact that raw materials have to be obtained, processed and fitted together into a building, no matter whether you prefabricate or use standard methods."

The immediate need in most crowded centres appears to be low rental housing. In Belleville Wartime Housing has caused considerable discussion in the low rental field. Wartime Housing has been given highest priorities on materials and has the power to requisition building materials from any manufacturer regardless of whether these materials are scheduled for industrial projects or other essential construction.

Reviewing the Wartime Housing plan, Rotarian Houston pointed out that the city is required to furnish sewer and water installations free. Cost of service installations depends on the nature of soil on the proposed site. On Belleville's flat rock the estimated cost is $1,000. In lieu of taxes Wartime Housing offers a sum of $26 per year causing loss of revenue to the amount of $70 per house. On the proposed 100 house project here it would mean a loss to the city of well over $100,000.

Approach With Caution

The speaker felt that the matter of low rental houses should be approached with caution because there is always the possibility of this type of construction being overdone and when the saturation point arrives someone may be left "holding the bag."

Business building now accounts for 29 per cent of all construction; factory construction is over 20 per cent and engineering 18 per cent. From these figures it would appear that the available materials are going into projects other than housing. Unless this condition is righted the housing picture for 1947 will not be good.

Speaking of the scarcity of dry lumber, the speaker stated that his company has under construction one of the latest types of cross circulation dry kilns capable of seasoning 40,000 feet of lumber per week. By this process lumber can be put into excellent condition in a short space of time. The company hopes to have the kiln in operation by the end of December.

He was introduced and thanked by Rotarian Newt Thompson, chairman of the Rotary Community Service Committee of the club. President Bert Howard was in the chair.

Bodies Recovered From Waters Of Loughborough L.

Kingston, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Hours after their bodies had been recovered from a motorcar in 25 feet of water at Loughborough Lake near here, two victims of a weekend traffic mishap were identified as Theron Turney, 38, and his 18-year-old son George, both of Kingston.

First word of the accident reached Provincial Police yesterday, although it apparently occurred some time Saturday night. Passers-by on the Loughborough bridge found the guard rails smashed and saw the outlines of a car lying in the water.

Provincial Police after three hours' effort raised the car to the surface and extricated the bodies. Both side windows of the car were open.

No reports had been received of the men being missing and there were apparently no witnesses of the crash. Loughborough Lake is a long, narrow strip of water running north from Keplar, 10 miles northeast of Kingston.

Danny Webb Wins Decision Over Toronto's L'il Art King Before 9,000 Fans at Gardens

Fight Perhaps Inauguration of Elimination Scramble for Featherweight Crown

By GORDON PEPPER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Canadian boxing goes in cycles, and a new cycle was apparent today —a barnstorming revival featuring the lighter-weight maulers.

The new trend got a smashing start last night when Montreal's Danny Webb at 127 1-2, Canadian lightweight champion, won the decision over Toronto's favorite L'il Arthur King, 128, in a bruising eight-round bout topping promoter Frank Tunney's professional boxing card that brought 9,000 fans into Maple Leaf Gardens.

The fight was perhaps the inauguration of an elimination scramble for the now-vacant featherweight throne. Webb's experience, gained in some 50 professional fights—many of them in Britain—was too much for King's youth, and it was only King's dangerous left jab that made the fight a battle most of the route.

The fighters—both negroes—opened up cautiously with Webb taking no chances during the first three rounds. In the third, however, Webb let loose and had King worried with his straight right and left hooks.

Good Left Jab

King showed to advantage with his left jab in the fourth but he tired in the sixth and from there to the last of the eighth Webb was doing most of the leading. Webb accomplished some punishing work in the infighting of the last rounds and King was a weary battler when it ended.

HOCKEY RULES

By BILL GRIMM

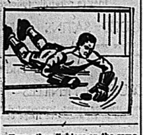
FALLING ON THE PUCK

(a) A minor penalty shall be imposed on a player who deliberately falls on or gathers a loose puck into his body by any means other than playing the puck with his stick to gain possession.

(b) This does not apply to a goalkeeper.

(c) No defending player, except the goalkeeper, will be permitted to fall on the puck when the puck in—within the goal crease.

(d) For infringement of this rule, play shall immediately be stopped and a penalty shot shall be ordered against the offending team, but no other penalty shall be given.



Four other fighters on the same card were more than somewhat interested in featherweight title prospects. Teddy Swain of Toronto and Quebec City's Johnny Bouffard raked each other in the semi-final with Swain getting the verdict.

Raymond Daoust of Montreal took a decision over Katsumi Morioka of Vancouver after a strong comeback.

The last such revival in Canadian boxing probably was the flyweight uproar back in the 1920's when such stalwarts as Frenchy Belanger and Steve Rocco attracted crowds. In the late 30's it was the bantams with Baby Yack and his cohorts. Now it looks like the featherweights' turn.

EGGS HARD TO GET

Clara City, Minn., Nov. 26 — (AP) — A salesman walked into William Donner's jewelry store, set down his grips, and immediately rushed out again. He returned a short time later carrying a box of eggs, then opened the grips to display $60,000 worth of jewelry. "You left those valuable jewels here unattended while you went chasing eggs?" asked Donner. "Sure," answered the salesman. "Eggs are hard to get where I come from."

BILLY TAYLOR STILL HEADING SCORING RACE

Maurice Richard and Roy Conacher Deadlocked in Second Spot

Montreal, Nov. 26—(CP)—National Hockey League statistics released today showed Detroit Red Wings' Billy Taylor top man in the individual scoring race for the fifth consecutive week.

Taylor has accumulated 22 points made up of seven goals and 15 assists. Maurice Richard and Roy Conacher are deadlocked in the second spot with 17 points apiece. Richard has sniped 11 goals and garnered six assists while Conacher has bagged eight goals and earned nine assists.

Syd Abel of Detroit and Ted Kennedy of Toronto Maple Leafs are tied for the third slot with 16 points each. Abel has netted 10 goals and picked up six assists and Kennedy has notched eight counters and helped on eight more.

Richard with 11 goals leads the league's goal-getters while Abel of Detroit and Tony Leswick of New York Rangers have sunk 10 goals each and share the runner-up spot. Taylor with 15 assists is the loop's leading playmaker.

Toronto's Turk Broda and Boston Bruins' Frankie Brimsek are tied for the league's goalkeeping honors. Both net custodians have allowed 34 goals to slip past them in 14 games and both have registered two shutouts apiece to head that department too.

Kenny Reardon, Canadiens' aggressive defenceman, heads the cooler customers with 31 minutes spent in the penalty box.

Toronto's hustling Maple Leafs are perched atop the league standings with 19 points as a result of eight wins, three ties and three losses. Canadiens are in second place with 17 points and Detroit third with 16.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Sports Writer)

New York, Nov. 26 —(CP)— As the bright afternoon sun slanted across the Polo Grounds, Elmer Kenneth (The Toe) Strong stood in the shadow of the goalposts that had been an easy target through his 24 football seasons and celebrated a United States Thanksgiving Day come four days early . . . It was Sunday, Nov. 24, and to him admirers brought a glossy new $2,000 automobile, $2,000 in war bonds, a wrist watch, luggage and silverware, tokens of appreciation for the man who had scored 303 points with his accurate foot, 11 behind ex-teammate Ward Cuff's all-time mark . . . He remembered that he was 40, as old as any man should be in football, and he made a taut little speech of thanks on this "Ken Strong Day" at the Polo Grounds, this premature Thanksgiving.

Tie This, Annis Stukus.

Later that day he kicked the only point-after-touchdown as his New York Giants beat Pittsburgh Steelers 7-0 in a National Professional League game, his 25th consecutive point this season, and in the dressing-room afterwards he recalled only the bright things in a career that started in an open field with a telephone wire for a crossbar . . . He remembered his senior year at New York University, when he could still haul his 205 pounds across a gridiron in 10 seconds, fast enough to gain 2,200 yards rushing in that one season . . . He recalled the Eastern Division titles with the Giants in '33, '35, '39, and '44 and epic national championship game in 1934 when the Giants crushed Chicago Bears 34-13.

Diamond Dust.

The hard things he didn't remember were down in the books too, along with his record of only one point-after-touchdown missed in three seasons starting in 1944 . . . How during his baseball days he was sold to Detroit Tigers in 1931 for $40,000 and five players, but didn't make the big leagues because of a wrist injury suffered in Buffalo with Steve Owen's Toronto Maple Leafs . . . He hit .342 that season, good enough to make the International League's first five . . . After that wrist injury in Buffalo, he went back to the same ball park with the Leafs, hit a home run first time up, struck out, homered again, struck out, hit a third homer, and then went down on strikes a third time, all in the same game . . . In the second game that day he hammered the first pitch to the centrefield scoreboard for a double . . . Twenty feet either way, and Ken, who could use only one arm effectively then, would have had his fourth home run.

Beginner's Luck.

He went to Detroit to have his wrist fixed, but the doctor operated on the wrong bone and Ken sued for $250,000, was awarded $75,000, and then settled privately when the trial was thrown out for a technicality . . . He quit baseball, but still remembers a fishing trip in Ontario's Georgian Bay, with the old Leafs, Bill Rogell, Curly Ogden, Guy Cantrell, Art Mills and Joe Rabbitt . . . All were serious fishermen but Ken, who loafed in a small boat near shore with some ale and sandwiches while the others went trolling . . .

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

The question is, who's got the mug?

In some club room mayhap or on someone's shelf; in an attic perhaps, or a garage, there languishes a tarnished trophy that was quite one of the smartest of its kind in its heyday. The question is. Where is the mug?

Quite beyond the memory of this desk, the trophy was presented to a hockey league either in the city or the county by Dr. J. J. Robertson of this village. No one appears to be able to recall which league finally achieved the silverware nor which team won it the last time.

Now, the donor would like to see the trophy back in circulation, so if anyone has any knowledge of its whereabouts, the info would be greatly appreciated by this desk. The amiable doctor, however, is willing to put up another trophy if the original cannot be found. This trophy, he says, would be for minor hockey competition, junior, juvenile or perhaps midget.

Andy O'Brien, writing in the Montreal Standard, comes forth with the prediction that National Hockey League fans might see a brand new forward line in action up front for Les Canadiens. This, of course, is when the great Toe Blake decides to call it a day. "You'll likely see," writes Andy, "the Rocket Richard move over to his natural wing, leftwing, and the spectacular rookie, Leo Gravelle, assigned to right wing with Elmer Lach in the playmaking slot at centre."

But Blake is apparently far from through. The big smoothie fired three goals for the hat trick against the rugged Boston Bruins a few days ago and any Joe who can do that is a far cry from the hockey thirty.

Hockey in the local igloo is patiently awaiting the arrival of the cold weather, but it is reported that some sort of organization is getting under way in Intermediate ranks. The grapevine operator has it that Frank Butler, one of the master-minds of last year's Redmen will manage the new Army - Navy Veterans Intermediate squad with Rex Young, keeper of the royal purse.

Rex, who was one of the hurling staff of the Sedore Flashes softball team, is chairman of the Veterans Athletic Committee and seems to know what he is talking about. Players are being rounded up so don't be surprised to see some new - old faces when the big team trots out for the first practice.

Don Barrett, former Belleville junior star who is making good with the Stratford Kroehlers junior "A" entry got his first tally the other night. The youngster who has been doing a utility job is doing a fine job with the lads up west, and appears to be headed for a good season, in his first try-out with the speed-boys.

• • •

Walt. Gerow, Jr. is at present domiciling at Napanee but no word as yet of his forthcoming hockey activities, if any. Speedy St. Louis and Vern Geyer teamed up on the Gananoque senior team defence the other night in a Kingston City League fixture with "Jumbo" getting a goal and an assist.

Sergeant "Hub" Smith, one of the better workmen in the slug trade, and Flying Officer "Doc" Lyon, both R.C.A.F.'ers, and now connected with sports out Mountain View way, are coming up with a fistic card that looks like a honey.

The boys have lined up Don Mogard, Vic Bagnato's heavyweight ace who will take on Keith "Dynamite" Prosser, of London, in the main heavyweight bout on an offering that fairly scintillates with class. The show is scheduled for December 11 in the Sports Hangar at the station and John Phineas Phan will be doubly welcome. Buses will be run from the "four corners" but more about that later.

Vic Bagnato will bring down the cream of his Diamond Athletic Club stable to match leather with some classy local lads, included in which are some topnotch R.C.A.F. boys now stationed sports officer out yonder, are starting off on the right foot and present indications at Mountain View. "Hub" and the "Doc" the latter is point to some neat leather slinging this winter.

Incidentally, the "Doc" informed us that there is plenty of hockey and basketball talent at the station and he expects to field teams along these lines of sport that should compare favorably with any in the district.

As much an institution in San Francisco as the Bushwicks are in Brooklyn, the Jeffersons, a semi-professional baseball team, have been the first point of departure for many a major-league figure, including the late Tony Lazzeri, Lou Fonseca and Del Webb. For thirty years they have been managed by the same man. Tony Marvier, who spends his weekdays working in a local bank.

Friends of Tony are always sending him aspiring ball-players. One of them brought out to a Jefferson practice an apple-checked Irish youth, just graduated from one of San Francisco's parochial schools. The youngster said shyly that he was a shortstop.

Marvier sent him out to the short patch, watched him fight ground balls for a half hour and shook his head.

"You're no baseball player, son," he said, in kindly tones. "You're too slow and too awkward. Don't waste your time and break your heart at the wrong game. Learn a good trade."

So Joe Cronin, now manager of the Boston Red Sox, whose owner paid Washington the record price of $250,000 for him, never did play for the Jeffersons. There are some Red Sox fans who wish he had taken Tony's advice, but then you can't please everyone.

CANADA ABROAD

Many American universities now include prints of Canadian films on a variety of subjects.

Vic Christie, streamlined glamor boy of the wrestling world who takes on Kruel Karl Davis in one of the main bouts at the Hume Arena Friday night. The other half will see those smoothies, the Sharpe brothers in team action against Olaf Olsen and Strangler Bob Wagner, truly a sight for the faithful. Pat Flanagan and Al. Korman provide the curtain raiser.

HOCKEY TEAMS MUST LIVE UP TO THE RULES

Boarding, High-Sticking and Holding Must be Eliminated

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Under the leadership of Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president and former Ontario Hockey Association referee, the O.H.A. sub-committee held a general rules discussion and issued instruction to the referees during the weekend.

Chairman of the discussion group, O.H.A. President George Panter, of Gravenhurst, said "We are going to live up to the letter of our playing rules. Warning is hereby issued to all clubs."

Warning that boarding, high-sticking and holding would be eliminated from all future O.H.A. games, he said "Our referees have been given orders to stamp out any unnecessary roughness."

Panter also announced that players running into an unusual number of major misconducts and match penalties, and those players who persist in rough play will hold themselves liable to suspension.

President Panter and Vice-President McFayden, of Galt, were authorized by the sub-committee to seek an adjustment in the Kitchener-Waterloo player tangle.

Two decisions were handed down by the meeting, affecting four junior players.

Dino Narducci and Robert Bragmolo were given 10 days to return to their Hamilton Junior "A" club or be suspended, and players Ernest Cameron and Dillon McNally, claimed by Oakville, cannot play for any other club but Oakville, the committee ruled.

Another resolution of the meeting made provision for altering the O.H.A. scholarship at the University of Toronto to make those who served in the Second Great War eligible to apply as well as veterans of the First Great War.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Nov. 26—(CP)—The youngsters who pounded Joe Krol's back when he trudged off the field and a majority of the close to 23,000 fans who saw him almost single-handed knock Montreal Alouettes out of the 1946 football picture may not agree, but Alouette coach Lew Hayman says there's no place for the classy Toronto Argonaut halfback on the Montreal team.

Hayman made this known in an interview with Andy (Montreal Standard) O'Brien and gave as his reason the fact that "Krol is not a team man."

"I have the greatest respect for Joe Krol as a rugby player — he rates among the truly all-time tops," Hayman told O'Brien. "We have the financial resources to woo him, we feel, from Argos because all of us who invested in Alouettes are leaving the money in the till . . .

"But there will be no place for Krol on the 1947 Alouettes because he just would not fit in.

"Krol is not a team man. He has to be a little better than anybody else on the team. In building an Alouette tradition I am building a team spirit without glamor boys to detract from same. There were no cliques with our 1946 team — all were in it together with no privileged few. One player of the Krol type might wreck what I'm trying to build."

Hayman said in the same interview, however, that he would be interested in Royal Copeland, big Joe's running mate on the Argos backfield and received for many of his touchdown passes. In fact, said Lew, Copeland was the only Argos' player he tried to "kidnap" at the start of the season.

Close to 100,000 Montrealers turned out to see the Alouettes' six regular and one playoff game.

Hayman's gamble that French-speaking fans would roll through the turnstiles paid off and the result was that the team's backers, including Lew, made money.

And now Hayman says: "Not one cent comes out — the profits go back into building a bigger and better team next year."

Curtain Call.

At 40, his handsome dark head streaked with grey, Ken admits he's slowing up — "Pappy can't stand the rough stuff any more" —but the man with N.Y.U. and West Haven, Conn., hopes he may last one more season, good for an even quarter of a century in football.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Many have waded through chapter after chapter to learn about a no-trump raise. But not in my book. There you read it is one line; a sentence no longer than the width of the page.

Much is packed into the few words you see there. It takes all of only nine words to tell the story. Here is the sentence: Each voluntary raise in no-trump shows another high card.

A high card is an ace or a king or a queen. A raise is simply an increase in the last partnership number. Voluntary refers to a bid that is made by a player who is not forced to bid.

Suppose you open with a bid of one in a suit. You show, among other things, four high cards. Each high card is counted as a no-trump trick. So, your suit opening guarantees four no-trump tricks.

Suppose your partner responds with a non-jump assist in your suit or a non-jump to no-trump. It is not forcing. If your second bid is no-trump, it is voluntary. You show another (a fifth) high card.

When you are not forced to bid, you may pass. If you did not have the fifth high card, you could have passed. So, by making the voluntary no-trump bid, you admit having a fifth high card.

Take this hand:

♠ A 7 3
♥ K Q 4
♦ A J 9 8
♣ K J 2

Open this hand with one diamond. Besides a biddable diamond suit, it will promise five tricks with four high cards among them. Two of these high cards must be sure tricks, of course.

Your fifth trick in this hand happens to be a high card. This fifth high card entitles you to a voluntary raise in no-trump. So, what happens when your partner responds with one no-trump?

It does not force you to bid again. But you will come back in with a bid of two no-trump. It will show your fifth high card (no-trump trick). Showing it is not showing off.

"Y" Basketball

Two hard fought, close scoring games were played in the "Y" Junior House League on Friday night. The first game saw Button's Bums take McBurney's Mugs by 21-19, and the second game went to Galbraith's Goons by 19-16 over Spiegel's Saps.

In the opener, the two teams fought on an even basis right from the starting whistle, and it was a ding dong battle all the way. The score was 7-6 for the winners at the end of the first quarter, 15-12 at the half, 19-15 at the three quarter mark, and 21-19 at the close. It came close to being a tie, for, just as the final whistle sounded, McBurney was fouled in the act of shooting, but missed both his free throws. The checking was close by both sides, making for rather spotty play, although the pace was fast. Both teams had their turns at taking the lead, but in the end, Button's team produced a little better combination to win. Button for the winners and Scott for the losers each scored 7 points, with the rest of the scoring well distributed, only one player on either team failing to score, and they were youngsters who are just beginning to play the game.

The second game was just about a ringer for the first as far as speed and close checking was concerned, and the score went first to one team and then to the other. The winners took a lead of two points in the first quarter, and held that lead at the half way mark. The losers tied the game up at the end of three quarters, but the Goons ran in 8 points to the Saps 5 in the final quarter to sew the game up. Muirhead with 8 and Jeffrey with 7 got most of the winners' points, while Spiegel scored 8 for the losers.

The teams:

Bums: Button 7, Buchanan 3, Rose 2, Dudley 2, Trumpour 5, Soule, Taylor 2.—Total 21.

Mugs: Scott 7, McBurney 2, Leslie 2, Batchelor, Dolan 2, Button 2, Creeggan 4.—Total 19.

Goons: Galbraith 2, Jeffrey 7, Lepore 2, Muirhead 8, Lazenby, Temple, Burshaw.—Total 19.

Saps: Spiegel 8, Ketcheson 2, Scrymgeour 2, Strachan 2, Croll 2, Walmsley.—Total 16.

Referees: Austin and Gordon Watkin.

Games this week: Friday night—6.30 Goons vs. Saps. 7.15 Mugs vs Bums.

STRATFORD WINS FROM HAMILTON BY 6-5 COUNT

Team in Three-Way Tie With Oshawa and Barrie in Second Place

(By The Canadian Press)

Stratford Midgets climbed into a three-way tie with Barrie and Oshawa for second place in the Junior O.H.A. race by downing Hamilton Juniors last night 6-5 in a bruising game at Hamilton. The three teams each have 14 points, eight behind the leading St. Michael's College team.

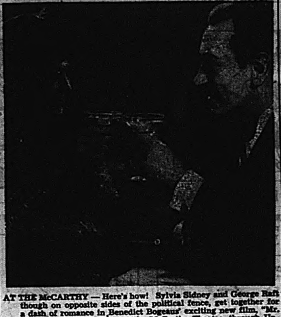
Only game scheduled for tonight fill bring together St. Catharines Falcons and Galt Red Wings at Galt.

Kullman led the Stratford drive in last night's game with four goals. He was also a tower of strength defensively. He opened the scoring in the first period, beating Decourcey in the Hamilton nets cleanly from close in.

Each team scored two goals in the second period, Kullman collecting two more for Stratford and Cadieux and Delory scoring for the losers.

Stratford scorers in the final stanza were Wharton, with two, and Kullman again. Hamilton matched the winners in this period with scores by Barnes, Difillipo and Bain.

A total of 11 penalties were handed out during the game.



AT THE McCARTHY — Here's how! Sylvia Sidney and George Raft though on opposite sides of the political fence, get together for a dash of romance in Benedict Bogeaus' exciting new film, "Mr. Ace," currently showing at the McCarthy Theatre, through United Artists release. Sylvia Sidney plays the role of a Congresswoman who has set her cap for a Governorship. Raft is the political boss in her opposing camp. Sara Haden and Jerome Cowan are in the supporting roles of this tense drama.

Leo Durocher Signs as Manager Of the Dodgers

(By The Canadian Press)

Leo Durocher, probably the highest-priced manager in baseball, yesterday signed a one-year contract to manage the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947 at a salary representing a substantial increase over the reported basic $42,000 plus a $20,000 attendance bonus he received in 1946. Details of Durocher's financial pact with Brooklyn president Branch Rickey were not disclosed but the above figures were said to be fairly accurate.

There had been reports Durocher was considering other attractive offers and that Rickey was becoming impatient. The Brooklyn president stated flatly several days ago he would sign someone else for the post of Durocher didn't come to terms by Nov. 25.

Billy Conn, former heavyweight boxing contender, told a reporter yesterday at Hagerstown, Md., that "I've gone to the track and traded the gloves for the nags." He was enroute to Bowie, Md., where he has a string of horses racing.

First race in a series of five being held this week at Havana, for the World Star Class championship was taken yesterday by E. W. Etchell's Shillalah of the Western Long Island Sound Yacht Club (Conn.) Etchell's craft sailed the 10-mile windward-leeward course in 1 hour and 44.06 minutes.

As a result of Notre Dame's 41-0 victory over Tulane Saturday sports writers boosted the Irish to within 29 points of the Army football team in the semi-final Associated Press poll of the season on the country's ranking teams.

First of the major Bowls to announce its teams for the New Year's Day football classics, the Orange Bowl of Miami, Fla., signed Rice Institute of Houston, Tex., to meet Tennessee Volunteers.

Ortello, the Italian wonder horse, "nationalized" by Mussolini to prevent its being sold outside Italy, arrived at New Orleans by ship yesterday en route to Vallego, Cal., where he will be put to stud. The horse was purchased by Maj. Rickard Hamilton for $60,000.

University of Southern California grid fans, disgruntled over a defeat handed their favorites by U.C.L.A. at Los Angeles on Saturday, halted twenty carloads of Uclans, fresh from a victory celebration, dunked them in fish ponds, shaved their heads and started a riot that brought four police cars to the scene before order was restored.

CO-EDS CALL OFF FOOTBALL GAME

London, Ont., Nov. 26—(CP)—The lipstick lillies and the powder puff pansies will have to stick to their knitting — they aren't going to play rugby under men's rules.

The co-eds of the University of Western Ontario had been booming the "powder puff bowl" game for next Saturday until some parents started asking questions. The University authorities got interested and Dr. G. E. Hall, Dean of the Medical School and President-Elect of the University, let it be known that he did not like the idea at all. Chief opposition was expressed on the grounds the girls were going to play under men's rules, with possibilities of injuries — major or minor.

The girls had previously made one concession — it would be touch rugby with no tackling. Members of the senior champion Western Mustangs had been acting as coaches and Johnny Metras, who coached Western to the senior intercollegiate title, had been slated for water-boy.

Last night the co-eds announced that by mutual consent with the university authorities the game had been abandoned.

Boxers Suspended For Rest of Year

Miami, Fla., Nov. 26 —(AP)— The Miami Boxing Commission fined Eddie (Red) Cameron, Miami, and Jerry Berthiaume of Montreal, both heavyweights $100 each last night and suspended them for the rest of 1946 for "unsportsmanlike action in the ring."

Referee Eddie Coachman stopped their scheduled 10-round fight midway the fifth round and ruled it "no contest." Coachman said butting and kicking by both fighters caused him to take such action.

After six policeman had cleared the ring and escorted both fighters to their dressing rooms, Coachman said.

"Berthiaume butted Red over the ye and Red started using his head. I broke them and said I'd throw them both out if they didn't stop it. They started all over again, so I stopped it."

In Manhattan

By FRANK HINDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 23 —(CP)— A miracle happened on the stage of the Alvin theatre this week—just as the director of a play-within-a-play foretold it would. "Joan of Lorraine" the peasant saint of Dromremy came to life under the ministrations of a screen actress and a playwright.

Ingrid Bergman, The first lady of the screen, served notice that the various "First Ladies" of the stage had better look to their lightning. And playwright Maxwell Anderson deserves applause as warm as the critical shoulder was cold to his "Truckline Cafe" last season.

The action of the play takes place during a day's rehearsal of the play-within-the-play. Miss Bergman, in the role of actress Mary Grey, quarrels with her director over his and the playwright's interpretation of the Maid of Orleans.

The story of Joan is interrupted onstage by repeated arguments between actress and director over Joan's conflict in supporting the vacillating Dauphin and his corrupt court, her wavering faith in her voices and her final decision to end all compromise and suffer martyrdom.

By this technique, the discursiveness of so many stage Joans of the past is kept from infringing on the simple story of the saint. The miracle of Joan stands unmarred by confining dialectic to the provocative rehearsal discussions.

Sam Wanamaker is excellent as the director who finally convinces his star that even Joan unwittingly compromised with the world for the sake of her mission until compromise no longer was possible. Veteran Romney Brent, until recently a Canadian Army officer is a wryly amusing dauphin.

But Miss Bergman scores a personal triumph as the spellbinding saint and the radiant young actress. She fairly lights up the bare stage with her sincerity. And for cynics who may think her luminous beauty something born of klieg lights, it must be said that in the boy-costumes of medieval Joan, in the severe frocks of the conscientious young actress, in the spotlight and in the bald electric glare of the prop lights.. she's..oh, trot out your own adjectives!

Lee Simonson's deceptively simple stage..littered ever-so-artfully with props and scenery flats and subtly lighted for every inch of hits magic..is just right.

Local girl makes good is old stuff to Dora Sayers of Clarkson, who learned stagecraft in the University of Toronto productions at Hart House Theatre and will appear at Toronto's Royal Alexandra the week of Nov. 25 in support of Gertrude Lawrence in "Pygmalion." Miss Sayers has shown her stuff to the stay-at-homes on several road tours, first of which was with Joan Bennett some seasons ago in "Stage Door."

Later she trooped with Ruth Chatterton, starring opposite Miss Chatterton's former husband, Ralph Forbes, in Noel Coward's "Private Lives." Miss Sayers subsequently married Mr. Forbes.

Miss Sayers was appearing on Broadway in Elizabeth Bergner's vehicle "The Two Mrs. Carrols" ..which co-starred Victor Jory of Vancouver..three seasons ago when she left for the Pacific with a U. S. O. unit, island-hopping with the Moss Hart production of "The Man Who Came To Dinner." Since then she played the Boston company of "Ten Little Indians" before entering "Pygmalion's" cast.

BURNED FINGERS

When the children had left for school she hastily scrambled the breakast dishes into the sink, made her bed by catching all the covers together, ballooning them once, flapping them down into position, and snatching up the pillow to give it one blow before dropping it into place. Betty made the girls' and her own bed in the same fashion if she made them at all. Often she met Elna and Faddy when they returned weary,grimy, glazed of eye and fuzzy of intellect, from school with a request to put their room in order at once. Elna and Faddy usually set up a great lamentation at this, and limped and dragged about the apartment as if herculean labors had been allotted to them.

Every drawer in the apartment was bursting with odorous old garments; the floors of the two shallow closets were littered with old shoes that got kicked about and shuffled around in the thick dust, year after year. The kitchen cabinets were stuffed with bags and papers, magazines, string, candles, food containers whose contents had decayed or grown stale beyond use. Rummaging there, Jennifer would come across the tin of stove blacking that Betty had been using months earlier, with its clotted black rag and pink saucer, the saucepan with the broken handle, the long-lost key for Elna's skates, the sash of Faddy's party dress, the smoked kettle still smelling of benzoin that had once been hlepful to croupy babies, rags and rope, clothespins and darning thread, empty jam jars and tissue-paper flowers, all to be crammed back into smelly obscurity again, once she had found the paint-box, the glue, the slippers, the victrol record, the box or vase or colored paper, the bottle of vaseline that she wanted. There was room for only about half their possessions in the flat; the rest had to be stacked or thrown or bundled into whatever crevices offered themselves. Poverty was too close to Betty to make throwing away an easy process—even the throwing away of worn and useless clutter. Winter meant that ventilation and baths were extravagances; better to do without them. The atmosphere in he house was close and foul; nobody noticed it; they were all used to it.

It was from this environment that Jennifer emerged daily to go down to her office day. If the weather was cold she wore the brown sweater and the plaid skirt; both were old and thick with wear but both were warm.

On pleasanter days she wore a navy silk with an embroidered collar. This had cost three dollars and eighty-five cents and was a trifle too big for her. Or she wore, for a third change, a rather delicate gray cloth trimmed with red glass buttons. This had once belonged to a quite elderly woman who had given the dress to Betty, who had given it to Jennifer. Jennifer rather disliked it, but now and then she wore it for variety. She had no other clothes, among the jumbled sweaters and blouses and odds and ends that had once been hers and that were still preserved in one place or another about the house, that were fit to wear to the office. She had a thick green coat with black velvet cuffs that a trained nurse had given her, and she had several hats, not all bought for her or by her and none costing more than ninety-eight cents, but gathered in Betty's house as things did gather there, gifts from friends who had all but worn them out before parting with them or bought for a few cents at rummage and salvage sales.

To attempt to match the advantages of anyone like Sidney Borrows with nothing more than these materials and with all the fears and diffidence and shyness of her eighteen years as an additional handicap was an undertaking far beyond Jennifer's powers if she had but known it. But she did not fully appreciate it. She had been flattered by Sid into a knowledge of her own beauty or potential beauty; he had kissed and praised her; she could not think her home handicap a serious one while the memory of his adoration was still fresh in her heart, still the very mainspring of her life.

And while she was vaguely deciding that she would study, would buy a new dress and have a hair-do, would learn to say and do the smart, sophisticated things that would bring her nearer his world, she had lost him. It was too late. She never could catch up with him now.

She had to accept that. Night after night she lay awake until the moonlight was gone and the Dunnings' cuckoo clock on the floor below had struck two, and three, and four. She, Jennifer Richie, was lying here thinking about it, thinking about being one of the girls people wrote books about—Tess and Hetty and all the rest. Girls who gave away everything they had, who believed and trusted and cried. And in the stillness of the night and the darkness of the shabby, close little room she would speak half aloud the words of poor Eda: "Fool! Fool! Fool!"

Fool or no fool, she had to drag through the days, carrying her secret, starting up at the sound of every bell, every unexpected footstep, seeing in the streets figures that wore coats that reminded her of Sid's coat, following this tall, swift-moving man or that, watching with a sudden quickening of heart some low-hung cream-colored car as it approached.

Always disappointment; always emptiness; always the devouring ache of the need to see him, just for five minutes, to hear his voice again, even though what it said might crush her afresh.

"Notice that it's all off between Grace and Mr. Peters?" Mollie Evans asked guardedly one day of an office love affair.

"I noticed she was crying." Jennifer, at the adjoining desk, made a little pretense of looking at papers, ruffling envelopes. Mollie, similarly anxious to avoid Miss Griggs' notice, ran a fresh sheet into her typewriter.

"Yep. He's leaving; he's got a better job over at Davidson's," said Mollie. "She's just about crazy. Last night, after everyone had left, I was here finishing off a letter, and she was in his office, crying and carrying on. Doris Smith says he promised to get a divorce and marry her and everything..Wait a minute."

Mollie typed busily for a few seconds, jerked the sheet from the machine, inserted another.

"But, Mollie, she knew he was married?"

"Oh, sure she did. But in the beginning girls always think they can get away with it," Mollie said carelessly. "His wife's kind of homely; they've been married ten years or more. And of course poor Grace Varney believed him when he said she"d never be sorry if she was kind to him. He took a little flat up, here on Clay Street—"

"Oh, Mollie, he didn't!"

"Sure he did. That's what Nancy says. Says he made passes at her when she first came here — his wife didn't understand him — all that tripe!....Miss Griggs," said Mollie virtuously as the office gorgon paused near her desk, "this is what puzzles me. Do you see that this address is 'Allesandro, L. A.'? But the way they've written it here it could be Los Angeles or Louisiana. There's an Allesandro Avenue in Los Angeles. So I wondered if anyone.. I see Mr. Bates carries this account—"

"Give it to me." Miss Griggs swept magnificently away and Mollie resumed her confidences. "It gets me the way girls believe what men say," she said. "They just let themselves in for that sort of thing. All he's got to say is, "I'm sorry, darling, but I'm tired of the whole thing, and I think I'll go back to Mama'."

Jennifer considered this darkly for a few minutes.

"That's all he's got to say anyway, Mollie, married or not," she said presently.

Mollie looked up from a letter. "All who's got to say? I don't get you."

"A man. When he gets tired of a woman. Just, 'I'm sorry; darling. I've had enough.' Isn't it?" Jennifer ended wistfully, hopeful of Mollie's vigorous denial.

"Well, of course," Mollie conceded. "But if you've just been flirting," she added, "who cares? Here's the thing: once a girl does what Grace did, a man can do anything he pleases. He can be mean or he can be kind. Lew Peters never cared much about her, except just at first, but she fell for him like a ton of Coos Bay coal....Oh, thank you, Miss Griggs, I can go right ahead on that now," Mollie diverged to say gratefully, accepting the disputed letter as the office superintendent passed again. "I'll just finish this letter....No, looky," she added in a low tone, leaning once again toward Jennifer's desk, "Grace made a fool of herself, crying and writing him letters, and he got bored. If she'd held out—you don't know, he might have got a divorce. Now she won't ever want to marry anyone, and she's thirty if she's a minute; she's old enough to have better sense. My mother's a terror on the way girls act with boys," Mollie went on with an admiring laugh. "Look out for them the minute they get fresh,' she says, 'and give them the brush-off right then and there!"

"But some men must love girls," Jennifer offered faintly, from the depths of infinite forlornness.

"Not when the girls go the limit," Mollie pronounced sternly. She swept a sheet from the typewriter, replaced it, typed away noisily.

"But when people get married," the younger girl argued desperately, "they—they live together then, and sometimes they go on loving each other for years and years!"

"Ah well, that's different," Mollie conceded. "You have a different feeling then. It's right. It's dignified. It's a sacrament. It's this way, Jen," she added. "If a girl gives in to a man she's the one to blame and everyone blames her, and if he lets her down hard nobody blames him; perhaps his mother is perfectly delighted. But if they're married and he breaks away or is unfaithful to her, then he's wrong and he gets all the blame."

"It's not fair," Jennifer said hoarsely.

"No, of, course it's not! And the worst of it is," Mollie said after another interval of apparent devotion to her desk work, "the worst of it is that you want to—I don't mean you want to do anything specially wrong, but I mean—you know what I mean."

She floundered, laughed, opened a desk drawer, and lifted out her carbon paper package.

"Listen," she said then. "I'm practically engaged to Dan Moore, but years ago I used to have lots of suitors—the Harrigan boys and a fellow named Thomas and my cousin Jim Reilly and a lot of them. I know how it is! You like them and you like them to kiss you and think you're wonderful and—oh, I don't know, we used to go up for winter sports to Sun Valley; and we'd all sit around a fire at night..Boys' arms around you..There was a crowd of us of course. It was all right. Sometimes my mother went along..

"But I mean," Mollie floundered on, "it's awfully hard, times like that, not just to—oh well, be friendly and not be always saying, 'I don't let boys kiss me and hold my hand,' and all that. Get what I mean?"

"Yes, I—I get what you mean." Two red spots burned in Jennifer's cheeks. She looked at Mollie fixedly.

"You don't need to stare like that," Mollie said laughing. "I'm not talking to you: You're nothing but a kid. How old are you anyway?"

"Eighteen."

"Lord. I'm twenty-three. And your mother doesn't let you go off on winter parties, does she?"

"Betty? No. No, she doesn't. At least," said Jennifer with a shadow of a smile, "I've never been asked, really."

"Oh, well, you'll get in with some kind of a crowd, and you'll all go together—you've got time," Mollie said. "And you're such a baby," she added, "that I'd trust you in a bathing suit in a lumber camp, as my brother Joe says But mind you, if you ever go off on those trips," she added warningly, "you look out for those cold nights when everyone gets around the fire in slippers and slacks and gets sleepier and sleepier—and lovinger and lovinger," Mollie interpolated with a laugh. "That's the time you just want to be affectionate and cozy and have everyone like you."

After a while, when an idle interval came, she turned to Jennifer and as if for the first time she saw the shabby little figure, the small square hands, the tawny mop of untidy hair, and the deep, dark blue eyes.

"You have little sisters, haven't you?"

"Not really. My stepmother's children. But they're like sisters. Two girls, seven and six."

"Okay, and tell me, what do you do? Does your stepmother get dinner?"

"No, not always. There's a lot to do. The girls come home to lunch. Betty leaves the dishes sometimes and goes to market, or they all go to a movie. Faddy hates movies unless they're all Disneys; we all used to hate them. But Betty says that that was because she used to take us all rainy afternoons when we were really too young to appreciate them. She's divorced, Betty is."

"Divorced your father?"

"Oh no. My mother died, and she married my father, and then he died. Then she married Clinton Slade, and they were divorced a few years ago."

"Oh." Mollie mused on this. "So who have you got?" she presently began. "Cousins? Aunts?"

"No one."

"Oh. And there's lots of housework to do for those kids," Mollie suggested.

"I'll say."

"But you get out to movies?"

"Not often. I help Faddy and Elna and tell them stories or read them books and we clean up and get the girls' clothes sort of in order for the next day. I suppose I've washed a few pairs of socks or stockings every night for the past five years," Jennifer said with a philosophical laugh.

"You poor kid; what a rat race you got into!" Mollie said. But Jennifer did not hear it, for it was uttered only in Mollie's heart.

Some days later Mollie gave her some advice.

2. The information "should be immediately subjected to an effective United Nations system of verification on the spot by a committee to be established by the Security Council" before Jan. 1, 1947.

While the U. S. is prepared to dismiss the troop inspection proposal put forward by Britain, the American delegation is insistent that complete inspections in atomic energy control be provided for in the disarmament plan.

Russia has stoutly fought against the American proposals for atomic energy control inspections.

Meanwhile, the small nations prepared to resume the battle on the veto in the United Nations.

FARMER BURNS TO DEATH IN TRACTOR ACCIDENT

Embro, Nov. 26 — (CP)—While two would-be rescuers were held back by flames, 61-year-old John W. Munroe, West Zorra farmer, was burned to death yesterday under a tractor which had overturned. The tractor's gasoline tank burst into flames.

W. Finnegan and John Whitaker drove past the Munroe farm near this Oxford county town a few minutes after the accident but both were burned as they endeavored to aid the farmer. Finnegan suffered facial burns from the gasoline and Whitaker's clothing was set afire.

Maritime Miners Cast Ballots On Strike Action

Glace Bay N. S., Nov. 26 (CP) —Thousands of coal miners in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick cast ballots in pit head polls today on the question of empowering United Mine Workers of America (C. C. L.) officers to call a strike if necessary to obtain the union's demands for increased wages.

The question placed before 13,000 members of the union's district 26 was: "are you in favor of a strike if in the opinion of your district officers a satisfactory settlement of wage demands cannot be made?"

In a radio address broadcast by two Nova Scotia stations on the eve of balloting district president Freeman Jenkins said the union was asking for a basic rate approximately $1 an hour compared with the present 73-cent rate.

He estimated the wage demands would add $7,000,000 to the annual payroll industry in the two provinces.

"It is the earnest hope of every officer of the union and every miner that those who now have authority over such questions, will not force us into a strike."

Results of the polling will be brought to U. M. W. headquarters here before the decision is announced.

Should the majority of the miners vote "yes," it would be the first time in history of the union in Nova Scotia, where it attained recognition in 1917, that its officers entered wage talks armed with a strike mandate.

The negotiations, aimed at renewal of a contract expiring Jan. 31, were scheduled to begin Thursday at meetings with officials of Dominion Coal Company, Old Sydney Collieries and Acadia Coal Company, all subsidiaries of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

It has not been announced when talks would begin with operators of smaller pits.

BAG WITH SECURITIES AND CLOTHING RETURNED

Niagara Falls, Nov. 26 —(CP) —Lady Luck smiled on W. E. Kelsey, Buffalo motorist, who left a bag with securities and clothing valued at $300 lying on the Niagara River Parkway after he changed a tire yesterday.

The bag, with contents intact, was returned to him by Harry Saylor, local bus driver, who received a reward. The bag was turned over to Saylor by an unidentified person who thought it had dropped off the bus.

CHARGED WITH ESCAPE

Kingston, Nov. 26 — (CP) — Charged with escaping from penitentiary, William O'Sullivan, Toronto, yesterday elected trial by jury when he appeared for preliminary hearing.

O'Sullivan escaped in a mail bag from the institution Oct. 5. He was serving a 10-year term for manslaughter and a four-year term for robbery.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)—The mining groups and industrials registered a substantial rally in the second hour of Toronto Stock exchange to chalk up index gains of .57 to 1.09. Western oils held steady in dull action. Volume continued light at 327,000 shares for the first three hours.

A gain of three points or more came through for International Paper. The papers were strong generally along with the liquors, Utilities and the miscellaneous industrials. The food and building stocks lost ground.

Quemont firmed 5-8, Mining Corporation gained 35 cents and Sherritt, Normetal and Golden Manitou added 7 to 10 cents. Louvicourt, Dickenson, Heva, Lingman Lake, Diversified, Donalda and Duquesne were strong issues in the gold group. Western Oils held steady.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Nov. 26 — (AP) — Stocks swung upward in today's market behind steels, motors, rubbers, selected rails and industrials.

Buying was credited partly to the idea that the coal dispute could be settled and that the list had been oversold. Short covering was a factor in the forenoon bulge. Many skeptics held aloof to await labor developments. Tax selling was fairly well absorbed.

Canadian issues swung upward at midday. Canadian Pacific gained ½ and Hiram Walker 1/4. Dome Mines rose 1/8 but Distillers Seagram lost as much.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Veal calves were 50 cents to $1 hundredweight higher in trade on the livestock market here up to midsession today. Lambs were 25 cents higher. Sheep were firm, cattle and hogs steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 800, calves 150, hogs 600, sheep and lambs 800. Unsold from yesterday were 2,200 head of cattle, 1,300 stockers.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: Weighty steers $12-$13.75, butcher steers $10.50-$12.50 heifers mostly $12.25 down, a few boners $9-$10.60, fed yearlings $12.50-$14.50, stockers slow $10-$12.

Calves: $16-$17 choice vealers, grassers $9-$10.

Lambs: $15.25 good ewes and wethers, $14.25 bucks, culls $11-$12.

Sheep $4-$9.

Hogs: Dressed, Grade A $20.65, Grade B1 $20.25, cows $18.25.

HOGS

Toronto, Nov. 26 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Hull $20.50 delivered, unchanged at Barrie $20.35 delivered, in markets reporting early today.

Eskimo Girl, 10, Has First Car Ride, Telephone Talk and Store Visit

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—A 10-year-old Eskimo child, Maggie Hatuk, today took her first car ride, used the telephone for the first time and visited her first store.

Cured of spinal tuberculosis following treatments in a sanitorium at nearby Weston, she is ready to return home to Baffin Island and hospital officials are wondering if she can re-adjust herself to the Arctic way of life.

For although Maggie did not see big city sights until today, she mastered most of the complexities of civilization. In a department store restaurant today she said:

"I'll have butterscotch ice cream, sandwiches, cake 'n' chocolate milk"

With crow-black pigtails sticking out, Maggie does errands for everyone in her section of the sanitorium.

"I won't want to go back," she says. "It's nicer here."

Henry LaFortune Given Two Years Additional for Escape

Kingston, Nov. 26. (CP) — Henry Lafortune, sought throughout Eastern Ontario following his escape from Kingston Penitentiary, two months ago, yesterday was sentenced to two years consecutive to the seven-year term he was serving for breaking and entering and theft. Crown Attorney T. J. Rigney showed Lafortune a waiver of appeal he signed at North Bay after he was recaptured. Lafortune admitted the signature was his but said he did not understand the document.

CATAPULTED TO ROOF

New York, Nov. 26 —(CP)— An automobile spring and a piece of rope almost catapulted Lawrence E. Christian out of the hands of Federal Bureau of Investigation agents yesterday.

When the F.B.I. men rapped at his door, Christian grabbed the rope attached to the automobile spring at the sky-light of his window-less room and was tossed onto the roof. But he left his door unlocked and the agents soon caught him.

He had been A.W.L. from the United States navy for six months.

Chaplain Urges Prison Reform

Winnipeg, Nov. 25 (CP) — Manitoba's Stony Mountain penitentiary and similar institutions across Canada breed criminal minds and pay little attention to the need for segregation of inmates, Rev. W. R. Wood, former Presbyterian prison chaplain and member of the Manitoba legislature, charged in a series of articles appearing in The Winnipeg Tribune.

"I have seen young men of excellent potentialities subjected to an environment that is in no way constructive but has all the elements of destructiveness. I have watched, in scores of cases, the reaction of these young fellows to the environment, and have seen its deteriorating influence gripping them as the weeks passed."

Mr. Wood cites cases of what he regards as needless mingling of novices and repeaters.

One is Stan, who got "what four out of five of the inmates get—a thorough acquaintance with all that could be learned from bank robbers, cheque artists, fraud experts, hold-up men, sex perverts and drug addicts."

Stan learned most of the tricks, the mysteries of invisible inks, explosives, safes and how to escape from police. Coming to Stony Mountain after a juvenile record was like entering the university."

"Here he began to learn. Endless hours were spent listening to criminal yarns. The experienced criminals were ready to purr their tales into his waiting ears. Real or imaginary, they were at least superbly interesting."

He is out again and has a job, but society is doubtful of such cases and the going is uphill. If his past record is any measure, Stan may be returned to Stony Mountain by the things which he learned there.

Some From Good Families

Cunningham, another youth, was an Albertan of United States parents who gave him a good home, education and more money than was good for him. After serving several brief sentences in west coast American jails, he landed at Stony Mountain with a fairly heavy term to serve.

He had a flair for journalism, and managed to secure a correspondence course. The sections arrived and he started to work.

"They constituted a real course, carefully planned, practical and progressive. He responded admirably and got fine training for professional work.

"There the story ends. What will happen? Will honest ambition to make good win out? Or will the insidious teachings of the penitentiary's old hands leave their mark?"

A report that two out of 10 offenders release from Canadian penitentiaries were recovered would be "amazing", Mr. Wood says.

"Under the Borstal system operating in England, and providing for diagnosis, understanding, scientific classification and segregation of offenders, seven out of ten go back into civil life and make successes of themselves."

Senator Proposes U.S. Congress Outlaw Strikes

By JACK BELL

Washington, Nov. 26—(AP)—Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem.-Ark.) proposed Monday that the United States Congress outlaw strikes and compel arbitration of labor disputes in basic industries such as coal mining directly affecting the general welfare of the country.

Such machinery could be made applicable to future coal work stoppages if not the present walkout, Mr. Fulbright said. He said it might be applied also to enterprises such as oil, steel, transportation and public utilities.

His idea would be to ban strikes altogether in these industries and force arbitration of disputes either through a new agency set up on the pattern of the Interstate Commerce Commission or through a special court, or both.

He added that the government might have to exercise regulatory powers over the industries, just as it now does over some utilities, and might have to control prices of the industries' products in order to adjust wage disputes equitably.

While he said he could think of no legislative solution to the present dispute between John L. Lewis and the government, Mr. Fulbright insisted that some action must be taken to remove the threat of strikes in industries affecting the economy of the whole country.

"We cannot let one man or one group of men stop the whole economic machinery of the country by the power they exercise in any one basic industry," he said. "I have no quarrel with the workers' right to strike in industries where a stoppage has only a local effect or which merely inconveniences the public. But the very life of the nation is at stake here.

"The only alternative I see is to move under the Anti-Trust Act to break up the over-all industry unions into smaller unions, just as the great monopolies of capital were broken up years ago. I prefer the other way."

FOOD FOR ALASKA

Seward, Alaska, Nov. 26 (CP)—A critical food shortage in Seward, listed by the Red Cross as a disaster area, was relieved partially Saturday as 10,000 pounds of meat, butter, eggs and other staples were sold at cost by the Seward Veterans of Foreign Wars Post. The food, shipped here by air and rail from Los Angeles, arrived Friday. A Maritime strike had halted shipments by sea.

TWO MEN DROWNED

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 26—(AP)—While rescuers vainly tugged at jammed automobile doors, two men were drowned in three feet of water Sunday near here. A car carrying William H. Hill, 36, Port Penn., Del., and Harry J. Roache, 32, Elmhurst, Del., went through a wooden barrier on the crest of a river bank and plunged down a 12-foot embankment. Rescuers could not force the doors.

Mount Pleasant W.M.S. Observes 45th Anniversary

Rawdon, (Special.)—On the evening of Nov. 20, approximately 150 people gathered at Mount Pleasant (Rawdon) United Church hall in honor of the 45th anniversary of the W.M.S. inception.

The speaker, Mr. Kenneth Stewart of West Huntingdon, gave a splendid address on "Missions". He said in part—"God calls us to go forth to Mission fields. The vast need of the people living in foreign countries calls us to greater effort, and the result of what has already been done on the mission field is a challenge to Christians to do even better."

Guests were present from Bethel W.A., Seymour W.M.S., at Hoards; Eggleton W.M.S., West Huntingdon United W.M.S., Wellman's W.M.S., West Huntingdon St. Andrew's W.M.S. Among the guests were Rev. and Mrs. R. F. Townsend, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Clarke, Deseronto; and Rev. and Mrs. W. H. V. Walker of Stirling.

Letters Of Greeting

Letters of greeting from Mrs. A. V. Empey, president of the W.M.S., Belleville Presbyterial; from Rev. and Mrs. F. G. Joblin, Pickering; from Mrs. J. Honeywell, Castleton; from Mrs. Earl Ruttan, Kingston, from Mrs. B. Reid, Ivanhoe; from Mrs. Jas. Batstone, Toronto, from Mrs. J. E. Beckel, Elgin and from Mrs. Arthur McAdam, Toronto; were read by Mrs. P. MacMullen.

Among the decorations in the hall was a special evergreen wreath with bittersweet berries, bearing the word "Welcome". The wreath was made by Miss Audrey Robson and the pupils of Allan School. A table on the platform held a large birthday cake with 45 candles, and beside it stood a plant of white 'mums placed there by a circle life member in tribute to a former leader, (1912-1917) the late Mrs. Robert Pounder.

Welcome Extended

Mrs. P. MacMullen, vice-president of the Auxiliary, presided and used a poem entitled "A Missionary Plea" as a call to worship. The poem was written in memory of Dr. G. Campbell's fifty years of service in India. Rev. N. Cole offered prayer.

Mrs. MacMullen extended a cordial welcome to all the guests. She said this auxiliary included five Life-members and twenty-two annual, who are all trying to be worthy of the work which the pioneers began so faithfully forty-five years ago.

A history of the Mount Pleasant Auxiliary, prepared in 1938 by Mrs. Allan Bailey, under the heading 'From Small Beginnings' was read by Mrs. Roy Trasher, as follows: :

"On September 30, 1897, Mrs. Levi Massey met the ladies of Rawdon circuit for the purpose of organizing a Woman's Missionary Society; meetings to be held at the three appointments alternately. This meeting was held at that point for a few Church and all meetings were held at that point for a few months.

The first president was Mrs. W. D. P. Wilson.

Several meetings were held but it was very hard to carry on with members so far apart and the ladies from Mount Pleasant could seldom attend. Once yearly several ladies were appointed to collect the membership fee of one dollar each.

Founded In 1901

Finally the Mount Pleasant women decided to have their own organization and in June 1901, Mrs. Massey organized Mount Pleasant W.M.S. with ten members:

President, Mrs. James Williams; Secretary, Mrs. Frank Potts; Treasurer, Mrs. Frank Williams; Charter members, Mrs. Daniel Johnson, Mrs. Nancy McConnell, Mrs. Rueben Hoard, Mrs. Allan Bailey, Miss Phronia McDonald, Mrs. Will Johnson, Miss Lottie Johnston.

The meetings were held at the church and different plans to raise money were tried. Mrs. James Williams was most faithful, and often at the end of the year she canvassed the community from house to house and collected fees and gifts of money. Very soon more members joined the Society and more work was accomplished. Each Autumn a concert was staged with a program of missionary numbers, which created interest; and the givings increased so that the cause of missions flourished. Money was raised in various ways and mite boxes were used.

In 1912 the W.M.S. offered their prayers that a mission circle might be formed and for six years Mrs. Robert Pounder gave capable leadership to a group of nine girls.

Systematic Givings

Several years ago the Society adopted systematic giving by envelope and all agree this is the better plan.

In June 1940 an "At Home" was held at the home of Mrs. Percy Hubble and over one hundred guests were entertained.

In June, 1941, the 40th anniversary was celebrated at the church with friends from Wellman's and Bethel in attendance.

At that meeting a special Memorial Service was held for 22 deceased members. The society is most grateful that there have been no deaths in the past five years.

A gift of $25.00 at any one time constitutes a Life member and the society is happy to have five life members, Mrs. Allan Bailey, Mrs. John Holmes, Mrs. George Weaver, Mrs. Frank Jeffs and Mrs. Ross Hoard.

Last year the society entertained the rally of Belleville section with a large attendance.

Members are proud of their society and its achievements throughout the years but the aim is to do much better work in the years ahead. Ideals will never be reached until every women in the church is a W.M.S. member.

Eleven Presidents

There were eleven presidents in the 45 years and the secretary read the list as follows:—1901-1911—Mrs. James Williams; 1912-1916—Mrs. Allan Bailey; 1917-1921—Mrs. John Reid; 1922-1923 Mrs. Thos. McKeown; 1924-1925 Mrs. John Holmes; 1926-1928, Mrs. George Weaver; 1929, Mrs. Ross Hoard; 1930, Mrs. Thos. McKeown; 1931-1932, Mrs. F. G. Joblin; 1933-1934, Mrs. Ross Hoard; 1935, Mrs. Arthur Phillips; 1936-1942, Mrs. P. MacMullen; 1943-June 1942, Mrs. T. Townsend, 3 1-2 years.

Following this interesting story, Mrs. Sidmer Demorest gave a short outline of the organization of a Baby Band, which will soon be five years old, and Mrs. Bert Jeffs, leader of the Sunbeam Mission Band, gave a brief review of that department.

A duet by Misses Ruth Sharp and Ruth Dunham, with Mrs. K. Weaver as accompanist, was much enjoyed.

Three Charter Members Living

Three charter members of the original organization are still living, two of whom, Mrs. Allan Bailey and Mrs. Frank Williams were present, while Mrs. Honeywell had chosen the hymns and scripture lessons. Mrs. C. Summers read the lessons and an appropriate poem entitled, "Remember".

Miss Marguerite MacMullen rendered a vocal solo, and Mrs. S. Elliott, of Bethel, gave a reading. Brief messages were brought by Rev. Mr. Townsend and Rev. Mr. Clarke former pastors; by Rev. Mr. Walker of Stirling and by Rev. N. Cole, the present pastor. Vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Milton Shaw of Ivanhoe, with Mrs. Mac Sharp as accompanist, and by Mrs. C. Clancey of Wellman's Auxiliary, with Mrs. Carl Clancey as accompanist.

The offering was accepted and dedicated by Rev. T. F. Townsend.

Mrs. George Weaver and Mrs. Ross Hoard lit the candles on the birthday cake. Mr. Frank Williams gave a message, Mrs. T. F. Townsend read a poem, Mrs. J. Holmes and Mrs. W. H. Clarke blew out the candles and Mrs. Allen Bailey cut the first piece of cake, each guest receiving a serving later.

Mrs. Bert Jeffs expressed appreciation to all who had assisted with the program. The meeting closed with a hymn, and prayer by Rev. W. H. Clarke, after which delicious refreshments were served.

Former members attending this function were Mrs. Edgar McKeown and Mrs. Will Heath of Bethel; Mrs. H. David, of Stirling; Mrs. T. F. Townsend, and Mrs. W. H. Clarke.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw (Special) — On Thursday evening of this week the Hastings County Holstein club held their annual banquet in St. Mark's Church Parish Hall with approximately 180 in attendance.

The ladies of St. Mark's Church provided a sumptious repast and the tables were very attractively decorated with flowers and lighted candles.

After all had heartily partaken of the viands provided and the toast to "The King" had been given, the tables were cleared and the following program presented with Mr. Herb Watt, President of the Club, acting as chairman.

Address of Welcome, Rev. J. M. Brownlie, Rector of St. Mark's Church; Violin Solo, Mr. Delbert McComb, accompanied by Mr. J. F. Baker; Vocal Solo, Mrs. Leslie Rundle of Marmora; Address, Mr. Roy Ormiston, Holstein Fieldman; Reading, Mrs. A. B. McComb; Vocal Duet and encore, Rev. J. M. Brownlie and Mr. J. F. Baker; Address, Mr. G. M. Clemons, Secretary Treasurer Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada; Violin and piano, Messrs. McComb and J. F. Baker.

The guest speaker, Mr. Clemons who travels to various continents in connection with his work, explained two reels of moving pictures taken on his recent trip to South America. The pictures which were in technicolor, were mostly taken in Argentina and Chili and proved most interesting and instructive.

Mr. H. L. Fair, secretary treasurer of the Hastings Club addressed the gathering also and contributed cheques to various members of the audience as prize money won at Peterborough Agricultural Fair on Holstein Live Stock exhibited there this year.

Madoc

St. Peter's Congregational Supper

Madoc.—Following very successful anniversary and thankoffering services held on Nov. 17, the members of St. Peter's congregation, with their families, enjoyed a pleasant "get-to-gether" supper on Wednesday evening. About one hundred and sixty were in attendance. During the supper hour the organist, Mr. Stanley Hawthorne, contributed several piano selections. A short program followed with community singing; addresses given by the minister, Rev. J. Murdock and church officials. A vote of thanks was tendered the members of the choir who had charge of the supper and provided for the enjoyable program.

Mrs. Chas. Muffit and Mrs. C. S. Rollins of Coe Hill, spent a day visiting relatives in Madoc recently.

Mrs. Chas. Thompson, Miss Hazel Thompson, of Belleville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Ashley.

Mrs. Irvin of Alliston, spent the weekend with her cousin, Mrs. Jennie Morrison.

Jarrow, England (CP) — First of four test bore holes for the Tyne tunnel between here and Howdon has been completed.

Slightly Reduced Majority Given 11-Year-Old Govt.

Fine Weather Prevailed And Large Turnout Noted

Auckland, N. Z., Nov. 27—(Reuters)—New Zealand's labor government which has been in power for the last 11 years, was returned in today's general election with a slightly reduced majority.

With only two ridings still in doubt, Labor had 41 seats, compared with 45 in the last parliament, and the National Party had 37 against 34 in the previous House.

The two remaining seats were expected to go to Labor, giving Prime Minister Peter Fraser's party 43 seats in the House and a majority of six.

Fine weather prevailed throughout the country and a heavy turnout of the electorate was noted.

Prime Minister Returned

Prime Minister Fraser and National Leader Sydney Holland retained their seats as did most of Mr. Fraser's cabinet.

The Communist party, with 3 candidates, apparently made no showing of any importance. The Communists were the only minority group with more than one candidate.

Only 172 candidates entered the field for the 80 seats in the House of Representatives.

The voting in general followed the traditional New Zealand pattern with Labor string in urban areas and the National Party holding its own in agricultural ridings. There was on Independent in the last House.

Health Minister A. H. Nordmeyer went down to defeat in the early results, as did Speaker S. W. Schramm. Two of four women candidates seemed certain of election.

Voting Quiet

Voting was quiet throughout the country. All business stopped from noon until poll closing time to facilitate electors getting to the polls.

Labor's campaign generally stressed increased socialization while the Nationalists advocated encouragement of private enterprise.

Balloting started Tuesday when the government won all four Maori seats. Polling for the other 76 seats started today and was to end at 6 p.m., with first results expected to be available about 3 hours later. Neither side has expressed any real confidence, despite the earnest campaign.

Nationalize Banks

One of the pre-election sensations occurred when John Thompson, New Zealand Workers' delegate to the International Labor Organization, addressing a meeting of the Toronto District Labor Council, was reported to have said that nationalization of all banks in New Zealand would be a fatt in the near future and that it was the objective of the union to bring all utilities under state control.

Prime Minister Peter Fraser described as "nonsense" the bogey raised by the National Party that Labor intended to socialize everybody and everything. But the main issue of the election remains the government's Socialist party.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Nov. 27—(CP)—Synopsis: The disturbance that caused snow in Southern Ontario on Tuesday is moving rapidly northeastward and now is giving snow over Newfoundland and Southern Quebec. A fresh outbreak of cold air has swept southeastward from the prairie provinces to central Lake Huron. It is expected to continue southeastward, covering Ontario by early afternoon Wednesday. In Southern Ontario temperatures are expected to drop gradually, but in Central Ontario more rapidly. Some snow has occurred in the Kirkland Lake region during the night. A few snowflurries are expected in the lee of Lake Huron and Georgian Bay in the afternoon. The weather is mostly clear and cold over Northwestern Ontario.

THREE ARRESTS MADE IN $4,000 INN ROBBERY

Police Working on Case Refuse to Make Any Announcements

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 27—(CP)—Three arrests have been made in connection with the $4,000 robbery early Monday of Mrs. Bertha Thomas, owner of Thomas' Edgewater Inn, it was reported reliably today, although police working on the case would make no announcement.

Three masked gunmen entered Mrs. Thomas' bedroom in the hotel, struck her and forced her to hand over the money in an office safe.

One of the arrests is said to have been made by Windsor police but no information could be obtained from police officials.

It also is reliably reported that the trio held is being questioned in connection with the robbery last spring of a "bookie" in the Sandwich East section who reported three masked men followed him home in a taxi and robbed him of $8,000 in banknotes and silver.

However, Chief Dennis Mahoney of the suburban Riverside Police Department — the force in charge of the investigation—and Inspector W. A. Scott of the Ontario Provincial Police detachment here both declined any comment.

Husband Dies In Hospital After Taking Poison

Hamilton, Nov. 27. (CP) — John Parker, 39-year-old carpenter, died in hospital today and police said the death was caused by a dose of rat poison. His wife is also in the hospital, a poison victim. Authorities describe her condition as serious but expect her to recover.

Police said Mr. Parker was admitted to the hospital on Monday when he told doctors he had taken poison and had given some to his wife, November 20.

(It was learned that rat poison, although usually fatal, does not produce untoward effects for seven or eight days.)

An investigation is underway but no date for an inquest has been set.

Hunt 'Missing Link' in Missouri To Bridge 7,000 Years' 'Blank'

Washington, Nov. 27 —(AP)—Archaeologists are racing to uncover a "missing link" in the human race before a large scale dam building program inundates much of their best hunting grounds.

When the dams are started, they may be prevented for all time from digging at those sites for traces of human culture they believe may have existed on this continent before the Folsom man, 10,000 years ago, and for additional pieces of the Indian-Folsom man jig-saw puzzle. These might identify the Folsom man as ancestor of the Indian.

Smithsonian Institution scientists now are surveying areas near 105 proposed dams mostly in the Missouri River Valley. Digging will get underway next spring as soon as frost is out of the ground.

Dr. Frank H. M. Roberts, Jr., assistant director of the Smithsonian's Bureau of American Ethnology, said there is an archaelogical "blank" of about 7,000 years in North America. This is the period between the Folsom man, who lived 10,000 years ago at the end of the Ice Age, and the ancestors of the modern American Indian, about 3,000 years ago.

But scientists believe the Folsom man and Indian are related and they hope to find evidence of this link in the debris of old camp sites. Scientists also hope to find more evidence that man lived on this continent before the Folsom man.

NAZI PLOT TO KILL KING, QUEEN IN U.S. BARED

Concocted by Pro-Nazi Germans; There Was No Attempt to Carry It Out Says F.B.I.

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Nov. 27 —(CP)— A bizarre, unexecuted plot to assassinate King George and Queen Elizabeth during the royal visit to the United States seven years ago was out in the open today.

Terse facts of the attempt, concocted by two pro-Nazi Germans, were disclosed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington but officials turned aside all efforts to pry detailed information on the attempt which was planned in 1939.

An F.B.I. spokesman said that Fritz Wiedemann, then German consul-general in San Francisco, and Herman Schwinn, a member of the German-American Bund, discussed a plan for the assassination in May, 1939, a month before the King and Queen entered the United States for a four-day visit during the course of their coast-to-coast tour of Canada that year.

He added that no attempt was made to carry out the plot, which Wiedemann and Schwinn hatched in San Francisco.

Schwinn subsequently was deported to Germany as a dangerous alien and Wiedemann also was expelled when the United States closed up all German consulates in June, 1941.

Beyond that, the F.B.I. both in Washington and in San Francisco refused to give out any information.

The belated official version of the pre-war plot came only after the San Francisco Call-Bulletin in a copyrighted story from Washington had disclosed the abortive plan.

In London, a Scotland Yard spokesman said he had no information about the plot.

Many Questions Unanswered.

Left unanswered were these questions:

Why was the plot kept secret for seven years?

What was the proposed method of assassination?

Did the King and Queen ever learn of the plot?

However, the Call-Bulletin story, by Fred J. Walker, writing for Hearst Publications, Inc., said the F.B.I. received information on the plot in May, 1939, by undisclosed means.

The story said that as a result, during the 29-day royal visit to North America, "one of the greatest protective nets ever assembled in modern times was immediately thrown about the King and Queen."

The Royal Couple landed at Quebec on May 17, 1939, after a 12-day fog-delayed Atlantic crossing aboard the Empress of Australia and sailed from Halifax aboard the Empress of Britain on June 15. Their four days in the United States, June 7-11, included visits to Washington, New York and Hyde Park, N.J., where the late President Roosevelt was their host at a picnic.

Agatha Chapman Acquitted On Conspiracy Charge

Ottawa, Nov. 27 — (CP)— Miss Agatha Chapman, 39-year-old Bank of Canada economist, was acquitted today by County Court Judge A. G. McDougall of a charge of conspiring to communicate secret and confidential information to the Soviet Union.

It was the fourth acquittal so far among the 18 persons detained in the far-reaching spy inquiry.

Judge McDougall, in giving his decision at the end of the two-day trial, agreed with Defence Counsel A. W. Beament of Ottawa that there was no evidence on which a jury — had there been a jury — could possibly have convicted.

There was no evidence that Eric Adams, with whom Miss Chapman was alleged to have conspired, was a Russian agent and even if he had been proved to have been one there was no evidence that Miss Chapman had any knowledge that he was getting information wrongly from Miss Kathleen Willsher, a convicted agent, in any meeting she might have arranged between them.

Miss Chapman, descendant of one of the Fathers of Confederation, said after her acquittal: "I am very, very glad that my name has been cleared." There are no other charges against her.

Although she has been under suspension from the Bank of Canada since she was named in the final report of the royal commission on espionage in July, she has been receiving her salary and she said "the bank has treated me very fairly." She hopes to return to work there.

WAR LABOR BOARD ORDERS INCREASES FOR DOSCO MEN

Given Up to Five Cents an Hour to Make Up for Differential Pay

Ottawa, Nov. 27 (CP) — The National War Labor Board today ordered wage increases of from one-half cent to five cents for a majority of employees of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation's Sydney, N.S., steel plant.

The direction was given on an application by the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) in a move to wipe out the differential under which the Sydney production workers received five cents an hour less than production workers in Ontario steel mills. The increase announced today will supplement the 13-cent increase which was the basis of settlement for the recent 81-day steel strike.

The board's order provides that workers whose hourly rate is less than 61 cents will receive a five cent increase. The increase tapers off to one-half cents for workers in the 80 to 89 1-2 cent-an-hour category. Workers receiving 90 cents or more will not be increased. The increase is effective with the next pay period.

The five-cent differential was an issue in the recent steel strike. The union made several applications to the Nova Scotia War Labor Board for its removal and on rejection by that body appealed to the National Board which, in the past had upheld the Nova Scotia Board.

Most recent decision by the Provincial Board was in January when the application was rejected on a tie vote among the four members. The National Board upheld the rejection on a majority decision May 30, 1946. The union asked for reconsideration of the case but action by the National Board was suspended during the strike.

At the hearing, held earlier this month ,the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation opposed the application and argued that the board lacked authority to change its previous decision. The board did not accept this view.

Today's decision reviewed in detail wartime changes in basic wage rates at the Dosco plant as well as at the Algoma Steel Corp., Sault Ste. Marie, and the Steel Company of Canada, Hamilton. At the outbreak of war the unskilled labor rate at Sydney was 43 1-2 cents; Sault Ste. Marie, 41 1-2 and Hamilton 46 1-2.

EXPECT PROPOSAL WORLD INVENTORY OF ARMS TO PASS

British and American Spokesmen Expect To See Vote on Issue Within 24 Hours

By JOHN A. PARIS Jr.

Lake Success, N.Y., Nov. 27. (AP)—A survey of delegates today indicated that the 54-member United Nations political and security committee will adopt a proposal for an immediate world inventory of troops at home as well as abroad.

Confident that the proposal will be approved, spokesmen for both the British and United States delegations said they hoped the committee would be able to vote on the issue within the next 24 hours and clear the way for resumption of discussion on the veto.

Both Britain and the U.S. have insisted that all members of the United Nations report on the number and disposition of their troops at home and abroad by Jan. 1, 1947. Russia has agreed to report on troops abroad but not at home.

A survey of delegates, however, indicated a majority of the powerful political and security committee would support British and U.S. views on the census, although the British proposal for an inspection board to verify the troop data was expected to be defeated.

Most delegates doubted a vote would be taken on the issue today, since Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia and possibly British delegate Philip Noel-Baker and U. S. Senator Tom Connally might speak again.

Molotov To Speak Again

M. Molotov was expected to speak again in view of his latest proposal yesterday asking Britain and the United States if they were ready to report immediately on atomic and jet-propelled weapons in their peace-time military machine.

The three great powers—Britain, Russia and the United States—agree fundamentally that a group census should be undertaken, but they disagree on how and what territory it should embrace.

Meanwhile, debate over the Indian complaint of discrimination by South Africa of Indian Nations continued bogged down in lengthy discussion.

Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko charged yesterday in the political-legal committee that the union of South Africa had violated the U.N. Charter "by racial discrimination".

He contended the charter was being violated because it guaranteed equal rights to all persons.

'Big Four' Seek To Complete Pact on Trieste

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Working in secret, the Big Four foreign ministers sought today to complete agreement on the Trieste problem and other issues delaying final draft on the European satellite peace treaties.

The policy of secretary was imposed in the course of a lengthy discussion yesterday among Foreign Secretary Bevin, State Secretary Byrnes, Foreign Minister Molotov and Deputy Foreign Minister Couve De Murville. The policy meant that press officers of the three western powers would no longer discuss in detail with correspondents the work of each day's session.

All that was made public on yesterday's meeting, which started at a luncheon given by Mr. Byrnes and lasted until early evening, was that the Big Four discussed the Trieste issue and others of the 30-odd questions in the Italian treaty.

Before yesterday's luncheon session, Mr. Byrnes called on Mr. Bevin for a lengthy talk. These preliminary get-togethers evidently cleared the way for a return to secret diplomacy so that final differences of opinion and misunderstandings can be quickly cleared away. Diplomats say the secrecy is limited and temporary.

Soft Coal Miners Should Have Waited for Court Ruling Says Goldsborough

Lewis Counsel Says Govt. Responsible For Walkout

Washington, Nov. 27—(AP) —Judge T. Alan Goldsborough told John L. Lewis' 400,000 United Mine Workers today they made "a very great mistake" in walking out before the courts ruled on a contract dispute with the government.

Interrupting opening arguments for dismissal of a contempt of court citation against Mr. Lewis, Judge Goldsborough said:

"The court feels that your action in not waiting for a judicial determination was a very great mistake on your part."

Judge Goldsborough said the real issue which the court hoped to settle was whether Mr. Lewis had the right to break off his contract with the government, or whether under the Smith-Conally Labor Disputes Act he was impelled to keep his miners on the job for the duration of government operation.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough said John L. Lewis and his mine workers "are guilty of contempt of court" if it is proved legally they disregarded his order against a coal mine walkout.

In those words, Judge Goldsborough indicated that his decision in the contempt case against Mr. Lewis and his miners would not be influenced by the union's claim that the stop-strike order violated the Norris-La Guardia Anti-Injunction Act.

Regardless of whether or not the Norris-La Guardia Act applies in the soft coal case, Judge Goldsborough said, no one can disobey a restraining order.

"If that could be done we would have anarchy," the Judge commented.

Not Sovereign Function

Lawyers for Mr. Lewis argued that operation of the coal mines is not a "sovereign" function of the government, and that the government itself does not regard the miners as government employees. Therefore, they contended, the Smith-Connally Act, which outlaws the instigation of strikes against the government, does not apply.

Mr. Lewis' counsel contended the government was directly responsible for the soft coal walkout.

"There need not have been any cessation of employment—there would not be today," counsel for Mr. Lewis said, "if the government had complied with the terms of the contract."

Joseph Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor, heading Mr. Lewis's legal corps at the opening of his contempt of court hearing, referred to the Government-United Mine Workers' agreement which Mr. Lewis cancelled last Wednesday.

Mr. Padway challenged the government's contention that it is not subject to laws restricting the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

Government officials have contended that the Norris-La Guardia Act limiting the use of labor injunctions applies only to private management, not to the government. The mines which have been shut since last week, despite a federal injunction against a stoppage, were under government seizure.

Mr. Padway described the injunction which Mr. Lewis refused to heed as "a command to go back to work."

Had Voted for Act.

It developed during opening argument for dismissal of the contempt citation that the presiding federal district court judge, T. Alan Goldsborough, had voted for the Norris-La Guardia Act when he was a member of the House of Representatives from Maryland.

At one point during a general discussion of the mine shutdown

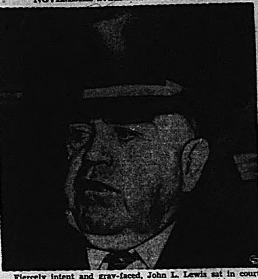
NOVEMBER 27TH HIS DAY IN COURT



Fiercely intent and gray-faced, John L. Lewis sat in court in Washington and watched the starting of the legal machinery put in motion to make him answer for the strike of 400,000 soft coal miners. Lewis denied that he is guilty of contempt of court for his refusal to withdraw his termination of contract notice that precipitated the walkout of miners. This striking study of Lewis was made as he sat in his auto after the hearing.

Farmer Faces Legal Tangle As 'Dead' Wife Returns From 17-Year Absence

Vulcan, Alta., Nov. 27 —(CP)— Legal tangles today faced a farmer of this district whose wife, officially presumed dead more than a year ago, returned to Alberta from Australia after a 17-year absence.

The farmer, Lacey James Hollister, obtained a court decree in May, 1945, presuming the death of his wife, Mrs. Sylvia Cuban Gertrude Hollister, after a fruitless 16-year quest for her in Canada, New Zealand and Australia. He married again in June, 1945.

Sunday night the first Mrs. Hollister arrived in Calgary, about 58 miles northwest of here, with a party of former Australian airmen and their wives and other travellers from "Down Under."

Now Mr. Hollister may have to make application to have the decree presuming his first wife's death annulled. That would leave him legally married to his first wife. To remain lawfully married to the second Mrs. Hollister, he must go through divorce procedures with Wife No. 1, then marry Wife No. 2 again.

In an interview yesterday, Mr. Hollister said he knew nothing of his former wife's re-appearance. He said he was happily married and felt he had done everything possible to find his wife after her departure 17 years ago.

Mr. Justice C. J. Ford, who presided at the sessions when the decree was granted, said such an roder only presumed a person dead until it was proved to the contrary. If he or she re-appeared, the decree would automatically be annulled, or an application would be made by the person to have it annulled.

Should one party re-marry, he would not be held on bigamy charges, Mr. Justice Ford said. But he could go through divorce procedures with his former wife and then marry again to make the marriage to his second wife lawful.

Adding to the general confusion were a number of unanswered questions regarding the first Mrs. Hollister's disappearance here in September, 1929, leaving her husband after living with him continually for eight years.

As far as is known here, Mrs. Hollister has not yet made any statement as to how and where she vanished, why she left her husband and two children — now both in their early 20's, and why she returned.

When she disappeared it was believed Mrs. Hollister went to New Zealand with her mother, Mrs. Ranby, after the death of her father.

At that time Mr. Hollister said he understood his wife had been born and raised in New Zealand.

Two Persons Badly Burned In Ormsby Fire

Bancroft (Special) — Suffering from first degree burns with their condition today being reported as only "fair," Charley Malloy, age 76, and his housekeeper Miss Gertrude Batchelor, 61, are in Bancroft Red Cross Hospital as result of fire which Tuesday evening swept through the Malloy home at Ormsby.

The two storey frame dwelling was partially destroyed by the blaze with the fire being brought under control through the efforts of a bucket brigade.

Explosion of coal oil which was being used by Miss Batchelor to start the fire to cook the evening meal was given as the cause of the fire. As the kerosene exploded the entire room was ignited, but thinking first of her blind employer who was in his room, Miss Batchelor rushed upstairs to assist Malloy. Before they could get back down the stairs the flames were beginning to cut off their escape and Mr. Malloy was burned about the hands and face as his beard caught fire and Miss Batchelor was burned about the lower limbs as the flames caught n her skirt.

Again thinking first of her employer the housekeeper assisted Malloy to the home of a neighbor, Mrs. McGinn, then she returned to help fight the blaze. The two were attended at Bancroft hospital by Dr. F. S. Lumb.
